There is a big difference between the legal rights of a natural person and an artificial person and the distinction is never explained or clarified anywhere in the U.S. Code or Internal Revenue Code. The latter are subject to the Uniform Commercial Code (U.C.C.) and have no constitutional rights under the Bill of Rights. Instead, their rights are defined and circumscribed by the privileges granted to them solely by the government within the laws written and enforced by that government. Natural born persons, on the other hand, have fundamental constitutional rights that "legal fictions" don't. For instance, a natural born person cannot, under the 5th Amendment, be compelled to testify against himself in a court of law, but a "legal fiction", such as a corporation can be compelled because it depends on privileges and recognition granted by the government for its existence and therefore falls under the jurisdiction of that government. That is why the constitution permits income taxes as indirect, excises placed upon "legal fictions", such as corporations, businesses, partnerships, trusts, etc., while it does not permit direct taxes on "natural born persons", which are not "legal fictions" but instead creations of God with inalienable rights, and whose creation and existence precedes and supersedes that of government. You could say that the obligation to pay taxes on the part of a "legal fiction" like a corporation is part of the price paid for the right to exist and have the entity recognized and protected by the government and the courts. For instance, one benefit that corporations have that natural born persons don't have is limited liability, where individuals within the corporation aren't personally liable for the financial obligations of the company. This privilege or right of a corporation, which is recognized in the law and by the courts, comes with a price. That price is the obligation of the corporation to pay income taxes as excises to the government.

The legal term "person" has an even more restricted definition when used in IRC Chapter 75, which contains all the criminal penalties in the Code. In Section 7343 of that Chapter, a "person" subject to criminal penalties is defined as: ...

An officer or employee of a corporation, or a member or employee of a partnership, who, as such officer, employee or member, is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

An individual who is not in such a fiduciary capacity is not defined as a "person" subject to criminal penalties. Unprivileged natural persons, who do not impose the income (excise) tax upon themselves by volunteering to file returns and be liable, are not subject by law to the tax and they are not "persons" who can lawfully be subjected to criminal charges for not filing a return or not paying income tax. Sections of the Code relating to the requirements for filing returns, keeping records, and disclosing information state that those sections apply to "every person liable" or "any person made liable". These descriptions mean "any person who is liable for the tax". They do not state or mean that all persons liable are those "persons" (legal entities such as corporations or employees or corporations) who owe an income (excise) tax, and are therefore subject to the requirements of the IRC. If you substitute the word "corporation" for the term "person" (a corporation is a person at law) when reading the Code or other articles and publications relating to income tax, the true meaning of the Code becomes more apparent.

For further information about what the court’s think about this section, read some of the cites in section 5.7 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, which talks about “not a person” and read the court cases that are cited. Note that all the cases cited by Mr. Becraft in that section are at the circuit court level and none are at the U.S. Supreme Court level. The only authoritative cites, according to the Internal Revenue Manual, are those that come from the Supreme Court.

3.9.1.16 “Personal services” (not defined)

The term “personal services” is nowhere defined in the Internal Revenue Code and is defined only once in the entire 26 CFR. That definition is indicated below:

26 CFR Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.

(b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.

Personal services means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business. However, personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual’s capacity as an investor as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).
Note that the term “personal services” is used in conjunction with “trade or business”, which we will learn later in section 3.9.1.23 means an activity connected with the holding of public office. Why a public office? Because Subtitle A income taxes are excise taxes on federal corporate privileges. The U.S. government is a federal corporation and the officers of the corporation are in receipt of excise taxable privileges. We clarify this further in section 5.6.5, where we prove that “income” means profit from a corporation involved in foreign (overseas) commerce.

Why must “personal services” always be connected with a “trade or business”? Because Subtitle A income taxes are actually salary taxes on elected or appointed officials of the United States Government as enacted into law in the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939, 76th Congress, 1st Session, Chap. 59, pgs 574-579! The “public” in the title of that act means public office:

Public Salary Act of 1939, TITLE I—“Section 1.§22(a) of the Internal Revenue Code relating to the definition of ‘gross income’, is amended after the words ‘compensation for personal service’ the following: ‘including personal service as an officer or employee of a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing.”

The word “required” does not necessarily mean “liable”. To give you an example of how tricky the use of the above section 6012 of the Internal Revenue Code is, consider the following:

1. The title of 26 U.S.C. §6012 says “Persons required to make returns of income“ BUT, the title of a code section cannot be interpreted as law by the following statute:

   United States Code
   TITLE 26 - INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

2. If you look inside the section, the section does not state who is “required” or “liable” to file returns, only who is not “required” to file. It instead uses the term “shall be made” in 6012(a), which we will learn in the following section can mean “may be made”.

The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one who resides or abides. [Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240] [Underlines added] Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. <td></td>

In all tax laws throughout the world that we have seen, “resident” universally means an alien. This is consistent with the definition of “resident” found in the Law of Nations which was used by the Founding Fathers to write the Constitution.

Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizens of a less privileged character, and are subject of the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.

The above definition is also consistent with that found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) , which is the only definition of “resident” in the Internal Revenue Code:

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) Resident alien

(b) Definition of resident alien and nonresident alien

(1) In general

For purposes of this title (other than subtitle B) -

(A) Resident alien
An alien individual shall be treated as a resident of the United States with respect to any calendar year if (and only if) such individual meets the requirements of clause (i), (ii), or (iii):

(i) Lawfully admitted for permanent residence

Such individual is a lawful permanent resident of the United States at any time during such calendar year.

(ii) Substantial presence test

Such individual meets the substantial presence test of paragraph (3).

(iii) First year election

Such individual makes the election provided in paragraph (4).

To put it even more succinctly, a resident is an alien with a domicile or "residence" in the “United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) as the District of Columbia ONLY. If you don’t maintain a domicile there, then you aren’t a “resident” even if you are an alien and live there. This is more carefully thoroughly explained later in section 5.4.7 through 5.4.7.14. An alien who is present somewhere but does not have a domicile there is called a “transient foreigner”.

"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."

A “transient foreigner” is someone who chooses not to obtain his protection from the government in the place where he lives. If he has no domicile in any country on earth, such as in heaven, then he is a nontaxpayer everywhere on earth. Taxes pay for protection and those who provide their own protection and choose no earthly domicile essentially have fired all governments on earth and taken responsibility to provide their own protection. It is their natural right to do so pursuant to the First Amendment, which guarantees us a right of freedom from compelled association.

In general use, the word "shall" is a word of command with a mandatory meaning. In the IRC, "shall" is a directory word that has a mandatory meaning when applied to corporations. The IRC contains a series of directory statutes using the word "shall" in describing the actions called for in those sections of the law. The provisions of these directory statutes are requirements for corporations, because corporations are created by government and, consequently, are subject to government direction and control. Since corporations are granted the privilege to exist and operate by government-issued... charters, they do not have the constitutionally guaranteed rights of individuals. This government-granted privilege legally obligates corporations to make a "return" of profits and gains earned in the exercise of their privileged operations when directed to do so by law. This is why the tax form is called a "return".

However, directory words in the Code merely imply that individuals are required to perform certain acts, but directory words are not requirements for individuals when a mandatory interpretation of the directory words would conflict with the constitutionally guaranteed rights of natural persons/individuals. Courts have repeatedly ruled that in statutes, when a mandatory meaning of the word "shall" would create a constitutional conflict, "shall" must be defined as meaning "may". The following are quotes from a few of these decisions. In the decision of Cairo & Fulton R.R. Co. v. Hecht, 95 U.S. 170, the U.S. Supreme Court stated:

As against the government the word "shall" when used in statutes, is to be construed as "may," unless a contrary intention is manifest.

In the decision of George Williams College v. Village of Williams Bay, 7 N.W.2d. 891, the Supreme Court of Wisconsin stated:

"Shall" in a statute may be construed to mean "may" in order to avoid constitutional doubt.

In the decision of Gow v. Consolidated Coppermines Corp., 165 Atlantic 136, the court stated:

If necessary to avoid unconstitutionality of a statute, "shall" will be deemed equivalent to "may" ....

Sections 6001 and 6011 of the IRC are cited in the Privacy Act notice in the IRS 1040 instruction booklet in order to lead individuals to believe they are required to perform services for tax collectors. Note the use of the word "shall" in the following sections of the Code:

Section 6001 states:

Every person liable for any tax imposed by this title, or for the collection thereof, shall keep such records, render such statements, make such returns, and comply with such rules and requirements as the Secretary may from time to time prescribe.

Section 6011 states:

When required by regulations prescribed by the Secretary any person made liable for any tax imposed by this title, or for the collection thereof, shall make a return or statement according to the forms and regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

Note that Sections 6001 and 6011 apply to "every person liable" and "any person made liable", but not to natural persons (people like you and I). However, THERE IS NO SECTION IN SUBTITLE A OF THE IRC THAT MAKES INDIVIDUALS LIABLE FOR PAYMENT OF INCOME TAX because any law imposing a federal tax on individuals would be unconstitutional, for it would violate the taxing limitations in the U.S. Constitution which prohibit direct taxation of individuals by the federal government. People are often confused when reading the Code because, under Subtitle A, Chapter 1, which covers income taxes, Part 1 of Subchapter A has the misleading title of "Tax on Individuals". The title is misleading because Part 1 imposes the tax on "income", but contains no requirement for individuals to pay it. But an individual becomes a "person liable" for the tax when he files an income tax form, thereby swearing that he is liable for (owes) the tax, even if he technically didn’t owe anything!

The Privacy Act notice in the instruction booklet for IRS Form 1040 also shows that disclosure of information by individuals is not required. The notice states:

Our legal right to ask for information is Internal Revenue Code sections 6001 and 6011 and their regulations.

The IRS does not say that those sections require individuals to submit the information; those sections only give the IRS the authority to ask for it.
Returns with respect to income taxes under Subtitle A shall be made by the following: (1)(A) Every individual having for the taxable year gross income which equals or exceeds the exemption amount ....

Subsections (2) through (6) list corporations, estates, trusts, partnerships, and certain political organizations as also being subject to this section.

Any requirements compelling unprivileged individuals to keep records, make returns and statements, or to involuntarily perform any other services for tax collectors, would be violations of constitutionally guaranteed rights.

The Thirteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution forbids compelling individuals to perform services involuntarily. The Amendment states:

Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crimes whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

The Fourth Amendment in the Bill of Rights of the United States Constitution states that the people's right to privacy of their papers shall not be violated by government. To compel individuals to disclose information taken from their papers would violate this right.

The Fifth Amendment in the Bill of Rights protects the right of individuals not to be required to be witnesses against themselves. To compel individuals to disclose information by submitting statements or information on a tax return form, all of which could be used against them in criminal prosecutions, would violate their Fifth Amendment right.

These examples show some constitutional conflicts that would result from defining the word "shall" as meaning "is required to". Thus, "shall" in the above mentioned statutes must be interpreted as meaning "may". Consequently, for individuals, keeping records, making statements, and making returns are clearly voluntary actions that are not required by law.

3.9.1.20 ''State'' (in 26 U.S.C. §7701 (a)(10))

State

The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

After reading this, do you live in a “State”. I don’t! Can Congress write clear laws? Some people look at this and say: “This must be a mistake. Why would they write this?” Below is a Supreme Court Cite that might help explain why:

“The law of Congress in respect to those matters do not extend into the territorial limits of the states, but have force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government.”

Caha v. United States, 152 U.S. 211 (March 5, 1894)

Another confirmation of the meaning of “State” can be found in the Buck Act of 1940, which is contained in 4 U.S.C. Sections 105-113. Section 110(d) defines “State” as follows:

TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
(d) The term “State” includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

While we can’t use this definition within the context of the IRC, it does help explain why Congress didn’t define the meaning of “State” better in the IRC...because they would have to admit that they have no jurisdiction to impose income taxes! You will find out in detail in later sections that the definition of “State” in the IRC above actually means federal possessions and territories, to include the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, etc. We refer to this area as “the federal zone”. The federal zone DOES NOT include the 50 Union states. We refer you to section 5.6.12.2 entitled “The definition of the word ‘state’, key to understanding Congress’ limited jurisdiction to tax personal income” for a fascinating and complete discussion of why we reach this startling conclusion.
Finally, the District of Columbia qualifies as a “State”, which is part of the federal zone or federal United States:

4 U.S.C.S. §113

“(2) the term ‘State’ includes the District of Columbia.”

However, the District of Columbia does not qualify as a “state”, all of which are outside the federal United States:

“I. The District of Columbia and the territories are not states within the judicial clause of the Constitution giving jurisdiction in cases between citizens of different states.” O’Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516, 53 S.Ct. 740 (1933)

3.9.1.21 “Tax” (not defined)

After reading all the laws referenced in this section, it is quite reasonable for one to ask why what is described in the Internal Revenue Code is called a “tax” at all insofar as most Americans living in the states with only earnings from within the 50 Union states are concerned. Aren’t taxes something we have to pay? In the case of federal income taxes on citizens living and working in the 50 Union states, they aren’t! In reality, the contributions to the federal government described by the Internal Revenue Code amount to a “charitable donation” to the U.S. Government for American nationals living and working in the 50 Union states who do not have foreign income!

In the case of all other types of gifts that we give to friends and loved ones, people thank you for your donation. But in the case of the U.S. Government, they wrongfully prosecute, intimidate, harass, and even imprison you for “failure to file”, or in this case “failure to volunteer to gift your income” to the government. Now isn’t that nice of them? In every other walk of life, this kind of treatment is called extortion and people are sent to prison for it. In the case of the U.S. Government, a judicial conspiracy founded on the complete disregard for the petition clause of the constitution (see section 5.1.2 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 on How the Federal Judiciary Stole the Right to Petition), stealth, complex legalese in the tax code, and intimidation tactics by the IRS in ignoring our legal questions, and violation of our 5th and 14th Amendment due process rights by taking of property without a trial by jury, is what continues to feed the socialist U.S. Government beast that oppresses us with this kind of tyranny. If we “stole” property from people the way the government does to us, however, we would go to jail. That is clearly a pernicious evil that we must surely rid ourself of as a country.

3.9.1.22 "Taxpayer" (in 26 U.S.C. §7701 (a)(14))

Taxpayer

The term "taxpayer" means any person subject to any internal revenue tax.

This same definition is repeated in 26 U.S.C. §1313(b):

26 U.S.C. §1313(b)

(b) Taxpayer

Notwithstanding section 7701(a)(14), the term "taxpayer" means any person subject to a tax under the applicable revenue law.

The deceptive term "taxpayer" is a legal term created by combining the words "tax" and "payer". The general understanding of the term's meaning is different from its legal definition in the I.R.C. Section 7701(a)(14) gives the legal definition of the term "taxpayer" in relation to income tax. It states: “The term 'taxpayer' means any person subject to any internal revenue tax.” (All internal revenue taxes are excise taxes.) Note that the section does not say that all persons are "taxpayers" subject to internal revenue tax. Corporations are "taxpayers", for they are "persons" subject to an internal revenue (excise) tax.

The term "taxpayer" is used extensively throughout the IRC, in IRS publications, news articles, and instructional literature as a verbal trap to make uninformed Citizens believe that all individuals are subject to federal income tax and to the requirements of the IRC. These materials state that "taxpayers" are required to file returns, keep records, supply information, etc. Such statements are technically correct, because "taxpayers" are those legal "persons" previously described that are subject to an excise tax, but unprivileged individuals are not "taxpayers" within the meaning of the IRC. The confusion about the meaning of the term leads most people to mistakenly assume that they are "taxpayers" because they pay other taxes such as sales taxes and real estate taxes. Those people are tax payers, not "taxpayers" as defined in the IRC. When they read articles and publications related to income tax, describing the legal requirements for "taxpayers", they erroneously believe that the term applies to them as individuals. It is very important to understand that the IRC requirements apply to IRC-defined "taxpayers" only, and not to unprivileged individuals. Corporations and other government-privileged legal entities are "taxpayers under the Internal Revenue Code": unprivileged individuals are not, unless they voluntarily file income tax returns showing they owe taxes, thus legally placing themselves in the classification of "taxpayers". Because of its legal definition, the term "taxpayer" should never be used in relation to income tax, except to describe those legal entities subject to a federal excise tax.

Why does Congress and the IRS want to refer to us as "taxpayers" instead of "Citizens" in the Internal Revenue Code, the Code of Federal Regulations, and the IRS Publications? Because then you as a Citizen would start looking in the index for the U.S. Codes and find out that there are no references to liability for taxes as Citizens! They would also have to start talking about your constitutional rights as an American, and the fact is that you have no constitutional rights as a statutory "U.S. Citizen" (see Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)), but you do as a Citizen of the United States of America, or the [u]nited States! The words you use in describing yourself make all the difference in the world! So instead of calling you a Citizen and then having to justify what makes you a taxpayer, they try to fool you by calling everyone taxpayers and then never defining anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code who specifically is and is not personally liable for paying income taxes, and by arrogantly and petulantly refusing to discuss such issues with you when you call the IRS 800 help number so they can claim "plausible deniability" of the fraud that is going on! They leave the risk entirely up to you in deciding if you are a taxpayer and give you no help whatsoever in deciding what to believe. In effect, they make it so complicated, expensive (hiring lawyers), and so bothersome to keep your money and have your constitutional rights to privacy and property respected, that you just give up in laziness, apathy, disorganization, disgust, and ignorance and surrender 50% of your income to the various taxes that we all pay! That, in a nutshell, describes how the personal income tax game works. Leave it up to the devious lawyers in Washington to devise such a game and shame on us for electing people like that to public office! We owe it as a patriotic duty to our children and our fellow Americans to ensure that this kind of racketeering, chicanery, and extortion be stopped immediately! We must take out this kind of trash from office immediately!

3.9.1.23 “Trade or business” (in 26 U.S.C. §7701 (a)(26))

The term “trade or business” includes the performance of the functions of a public office.

All income that derives from sources “within” the United States (the District of Columbia and other federal territories but not the nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states) requires receipt of privileges and respects the fact that the income tax is an excise tax on “privileges” as ruled many different times by the u.S. supreme Court. Holding public office is a government “privilege”, just as existing as a corporation is a privilege, and therefore both are subject to the income tax because both occur in federal territories over which the U.S. has exclusive legislative jurisdiction.

Even if we aren’t an elected U.S. public official, millions, if not most people, ignorantly claim they are involved in a “trade or business” and thereby make themselves liable for the income tax. For instance, when we file an IRS Form 1040, this is exactly what we do. We in effect make an “Election to treat our income and property as effectively connected with a trade or business in the U.S.” as described in 26 CFR §1.871-10 and IRS Publication 54 (called a “Choice” in that publication). That makes us liable for the graduated income tax found in 26 U.S.C. §871. The reason people don’t realize what they are doing when they commit this error is because they haven’t read the law for themselves and have relied exclusively on IRS publications that are a fraud (see IRM 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)) and on hearsay from friends and family members, as well as ignorant IRS employees and employers who have never read the law for themselves.

When we file as a nonresident alien, 26 U.S.C. §871(b) makes our income derived from a “trade or business in the United States” taxable, which as shown above is a code word for saying that we have income derived from holding elected or appointed federal public office. Most of us don’t have this type of income, but the IRS publications never define the meaning of “trade or business” and that is how we are deceived into volunteering into the income tax system by the IRS. Juries in federal courts are deceived about this because judges don’t allow the law to be discussed in the courtroom, thus perpetuating the fraud and abuse of citizens rights. After we make our initial “election” by filing our first 1040 form, we have a year to revoke the election and thereafter, according to 26 CFR §1.871-10, we must ask the IRS for permission to revoke the election, or we must file an IRS form 1040NR and include certain information with our return, as indicated in IRS publication 54 under “Ending your choice”. If we never bother to revoke our election, then we will continue to be subject to the jurisdiction of the federal courts to force us to pay graduated income taxes as a public official. Isn’t that sneaky?

3.9.1.24 "United States" (in 26 U.S.C. §7701 (a)(9))

United States

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia.

The above phrase “the States” ought to look familiar because it is a federal State. Remember the title of the Buck Act found in 4 U.S.C. §110(d)?

You will also note that "States" is the plural for State, which was defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701 as the District of Columbia. Under this definition, California, for instance, is NOT a State because it is not a territory or possession of the United States. It is, instead, a sovereign entity of its own. See section 5.2.8 later for further details on this important subject. Rewriting the above definition with the definition for State found in section 3.9.1.20 above (26 U.S.C. §7701), we have the following definition for “United States”:

United States

The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia.

The tricky IRS lawyers who wrote the tax code knew they couldn’t explicitly define “States” as all of the geographical 50 states in the union, because these states are sovereign, which is why Britain had to sign 13 separate treaties after the War of Independence instead of just one. The sovereign 50 Union states are also outside the territorial jurisdiction of the United States Government. Therefore, they tried to fool readers of the tax code above into thinking that United States refers geographically to the 50 Union states, but they would have stated this directly if that is indeed what they meant. See sections 4.6 and especially 5.2.7 for further details on the meaning of the term “United States” found in the Internal Revenue Code.

Are you a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes and “acts of Congress”? YES or NO? Here’s the definition of “citizen of the United States” directly from the Treasury Regulations:

26 CFR 31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen.

(b)...The term 'citizen of the United States' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

The answer to the question asked above, "Are you a United States citizen?" (in most cases), is emphatically:

NO!

Incidentally, you can be a “citizen of the United States” under Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment without being a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401. Why? Because the term “United States” has a completely different meaning in the U.S. Constitution than it has in most federal statutes. In federal statutes, the term “United States” means the federal zone or federal “United States” while in the Constitution, it means the collective states of the Union. The federal government exploits this confusion over definitions to their advantage in order to illegally expand their jurisdiction. In fact, the only people who are “citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 are those persons who are born in the District of Columbia, Guam, Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico, according to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), and 8 CFR §215.1(f). Watch out!
Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

Now if you are stupid enough and gullible enough to file a form 1040 and assess yourself with an unrealistic and mistaken income tax liability, amazingly, the only way the IRS agent can then process your form is to identify you in most cases as a resident of the Virgin Islands! No kidding! People like Dan Meador (http://www.lawresearch-registry.org) have studied the Individual Master File (IMF) of hundreds of individuals and determined that this indeed is exactly what the IRS agents do to process your 1040 form! Agents in fact have to lie to the AIMS computer and tell it you live in the Virgin Islands to get it to accept your 1040 return and your tax liability!

Barron’s Law Dictionary indicates that in the United States, there are TWO types of citizenship:

"Citizenship is the status of being a citizen. In the United States there is usually a double citizenship, that is, citizenship in the nation and citizenship in the state in which one resides."

Generally in the United States one may acquire citizenship by birth in the United States or by naturalization therein. 59 S.Ct. 884...58

Here again, you have been tricked! The "United States" is the legal, proper, formal name, created by our founding fathers, for the home or seat of the "federal government" and its “territory!” In nearly all “acts of Congress” and federal statutes, it is the Proper Name for Federal Land (the District of Columbia and federal territories, including Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, etc.). Refer again to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) above for a definition of "United States".

The individual States, which joined forces and formed the "united States of America," should not be confused with the title of "United States," or "States", which is reserved for the District of Columbia and the territories controlled by the federal government. Obviously, in the light of what we have always thought we knew, this sounds a little bizarre.

However, the united States supreme Court (Editors Note: This is the CORRECT capitalization of this name) addressed the question of the meaning of the term "United States" in the case of Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt (1945).

The court ruled that the term "United States" has three uses:

1. "...either as the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations, or
2. "...as designating the territory over which the sovereignty of the United States (Federal government) extends, or
3. "...as the collective name for the states which are united by and under the Constitution."

In other words, the term "United States" means:

1. "These united States', or
2. "the District of Columbia and all other federal lands such as Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, Marianas Islands, American Samoa, etc. or,
3. "The union of states which is the 'united States of America'."

So, assuming you were born in one of the 50 freely associated sovereign states of the Union, you are a Citizen (note Capitalization) and a national of the state in which you were born, and as a result are a Citizen of the Union of states known as the "united States of America," but you are not now, and never have been, a "citizen of the United States" under any federal statute or “act of Congress”. If you have an American Passport, look at it. Notice that it is from the "United States of America" (NOT the "United States"), and that it does not contain a Social Security Number!

You will note that people who are “citizens of the United States” instead of the united States, who are living in the District of Columbia and federal territories, are not citizens of individual states and therefore they have no constitutionally-protected rights. This is what makes it legal to assess income taxes on them and to deprive them of their property without due process of law in violation of the constitutional rights that the rest of us enjoy. Please refer to section 4.5 for details on this important subject.

Another way to verify this is to read that marvelous founding document, the Constitution. Remember that the writers of this remarkable document were extremely well educated and articulate men. They knew the meaning of the words they used.

Please turn to Article 10, which is the Tenth Amendment:

Article [X]
The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

Obviously, the "United States" and the "States" used here CAN NOT be the same thing, or the sentence is redundant. The framers of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights knew exactly what they were writing -- that the powers not designated to the "federal" government were reserved to the several freely associated States and the people!

Remember that, under the Constitution, ALL power originated with the PEOPLE -- who delegated some of it to the States, which in turn delegated some of their power to the "federal" government to do those things for the Union that the individual states could not do well for themselves (foreign embassies, etc.).

The Constitution is designed to LIMIT the power of the "central" government, not expand it. The founding fathers had, after all, just fought the Revolutionary War to make sure that the new "central" government did not have the power, such as King George III exercised, to usurp the "unalienable rights" they had proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence ten years earlier.

Probably all your life, you've been told that you are a citizen of the United States. You were even intentionally taught this falsehood in school (which, no doubt was federally funded -- and had its curriculum in large measure dictated by Washington).

Well, Congratulations! NOW you know who you really are. And you know just a little bit of the freedom and power bequeathed to you by the architects of this incredible land.

What you have just learned about is an unprecedented GRAB for power by the "federal" government! (We do NOT have a "national" government.) In fact, Agents of the "federal" government have NO jurisdiction within the borders of these separate and sovereign united States -- unless you give it to them!

That includes agents of ANY federal government agency: EPA, IRS, any agency! They are foreign to the sovereign States!

Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

3.9.1.27 "Wages" (in 26 U.S.C. §3401 (a))

For the purposes of collection of income taxes at the source by employers, the following definition of wages applies, as derived from 26 U.S.C. §3401(a):

(a) Wages

For purposes of this chapter, the term "wages" means all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee for his employer, including the cash value of all remuneration (including benefits) paid in any medium other than cash; except that such term shall not include remuneration paid -

(1) for active service performed in a month for which such employee is entitled to the benefits of section 112 (relating to certain combat zone compensation of members of the Armed Forces of the United States) to the extent remuneration for such service is excludable from gross income under such section; or

(2) for agricultural labor (as defined in section 3121(g)) unless the remuneration paid for such labor is wages (as defined in section 3121(a)); or

(3) for domestic service in a private home, local college club, or local chapter of a college fraternity or sorority; or

(4) for service not in the course of the employer's trade or business performed in any calendar quarter by an employee, unless the cash remuneration paid for such service is $50 or more and such service is performed by an individual who is regularly employed by such employer to perform such service. For purposes of this paragraph, an individual shall be deemed to be regularly employed by an employer during a calendar quarter only if -

(A) on each of some 24 days during such quarter such individual performs for such employer for some portion of the day service not in the course of the employer's trade or business; or

(B) such individual was regularly employed (as determined under subparagraph (A)) by such employer in the performance of such service during the preceding calendar quarter; or

(5) for services by a citizen or resident of the United States for a foreign government or an international organization; or

(6) for services, performed by a nonresident alien individual, as may be designated by regulations prescribed by the Secretary; or

(A) for services for an employer (other than the United States or any agency thereof) -

(i) performed by a citizen of the United States if, at the time of the payment of such remuneration, it is reasonable to believe that such remuneration will be excluded from gross income under section 911; or

(ii) performed in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by such a citizen if, at the time of the payment of such remuneration, the employer is required by the law of any foreign country or possession of the United States to withhold income tax upon such remuneration; or

(B) for services for an employer (other than the United States or any agency thereof) performed by a citizen of the United States within a possession of the United States (other than Puerto Rico), if it is reasonable to believe that at least 80 percent of the remuneration to be paid to the employee during the calendar year will be for such services; or

(C) for services for an employer (other than the United States or any agency thereof) performed by a citizen of the United States within Puerto Rico, if it is reasonable to believe that during the entire calendar year the employee will be a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico; or

(D) for services for the United States (or any agency thereof) performed by a citizen of the United States within a possession of the United States to the extent the United States (or such agency) withholds taxes on such remuneration pursuant to an agreement with such possession; or

(9) for services performed by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his minstry or by a member of a religious order in the exercise of duties required by such order; or

(A) for services performed by an individual under the age of 18 in the delivery or distribution of newspapers or shopping news, not including delivery or distribution to any point for subsequent delivery or distribution; or

(B) for services performed by an individual in, and at the time of, the sale of newspapers or magazines to ultimate consumers, under an arrangement under which the newspapers or magazines are to be sold by him at a fixed price, his compensation being based on the retention of the excess of such price over the amount at which the newspapers or magazines are charged to him, whether or not he is guaranteed a minimum amount of compensation for such services, or is entitled to be credited with... the unsold newspapers or magazines turned back; or (11) for services not in the course of the employer's trade or business, to the extent paid in any medium other than cash; or
(12) to, or on behalf of, an employee or his beneficiary -
(A) from or to a trust described in section 401(a) which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) at the time of such payment unless such payment is made to an employee of the trust as remuneration for services rendered as such employee and not as a beneficiary of the trust; or
(B) under or to an annuity plan which, at the time of such payment, is a plan described in section 403(a); or
(C) for a payment described in section 402(h)(1) and (2) if at the time of such payment, it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be entitled to an exclusion under such section for payment; or
(D) under an arrangement to which section 408(p) applies; or
(13) pursuant to any provision of law other than section 5(c) or 6(1) of the Peace Corps Act, for service performed as a volunteer or volunteer leader within the meaning of such Act; or
(14) in the form of group-term life insurance on the life of an employee; or
(15) to or on behalf of an employee if (and to the extent that) at the time of the payment of such remuneration it is reasonable to believe that a corresponding deduction is allowable under section 217 (determined without regard to section 274(n)); or (16) -
(A) as tips in any medium other than cash;
(B) as cash tips to an employee in any calendar month in the course of his employment by an employer unless the amount of such cash tips is $20 or more; [1]
(17) for service described in section 3121(b)(20); [1]
(18) for any payment made, or benefit furnished, to or for the benefit of an employee if at the time of such payment or such furnishing it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be able to exclude such payment or benefit from income under section 127 or 129; [1]
(19) for any benefit provided to or on behalf of an employee if at the time such benefit is provided it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be able to exclude such benefit from income under section 74(c), 117, or 123; [1] (20) for any medical care reimbursement made to or for the benefit of an employee under a self-insured medical reimbursement plan (within the meaning of section 105(h)(6)); or
(21) for any payment made to or for the benefit of an employee if at the time of such payment it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be able to exclude such payment from income under section 106(b).

Notice that the above legal definition of "wages above excludes "public officials", and that Subtitle A of the I.R.C. describes a tax primarily upon "public offices", which is what a "trade or business" is. Therefore, without looking elsewhere, we must conclude no one so far can earn "wages" as legally defined. So how do our corrupt feds turn compensation for labor into something that fits the legal definition "wages" above so it can be taxed? Once again, you have to dig deep into the regulations to find the secret:

26 CFR Sec. 31.3401(a)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) IN GENERAL. Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p).
References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (Section 31.3401(a)-3).

(b) REMUNERATION FOR SERVICES.

(1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the amounts referred to in paragraph (a) of this section include any remuneration for services performed by an employee for an employer which, without regard to this section, does not constitute wages under section 3401(a). For example, remuneration for services performed by an agricultural worker or a domestic worker in a private home (amounts which are specifically excluded from the definition of wages by section 3401(a)(2) and (3), respectively) are amounts with respect to which a voluntary withholding agreement may be entered into under section 3402(p). See Sections 31.3401(c)-1 and 31.3401(d)-1 for the definitions of "employee" and "employer".

So the bottom line is, if you fill out a W-4 and request voluntary withholding:

1. Even though you aren’t a “taxpayer” or “public official” engaged in a “trade or business”, then you begin earning "wages" as legally defined pursuant to 26 CFR §31.3401(a)-3(a) above. The same scam is again repeated in 26 CFR

Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

$31.3402(p)-1, which also creates a “presumption” that all amounts withheld constitute “gross income” that is therefore taxable pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §61.

26 CFR §31.3402(p)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

(a) In general. An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)–3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includable in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)–1. Q&A–3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

2. The receipt of “wages” is reported on the IRS form W-2. 26 U.S.C. §6041 says this is an information return that connects you with a “trade or business”, which is legally defined as “the functions of a public office” in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). Therefore, your earnings, after submitting an IRS form W-4, become “trade or business” earnings that are excise taxable and prima facie “gross income” within the meaning of the I.R.C.

3. You have essentially been recruited into working for the Federal Government and your private employer is now hiring you as the equivalent of a Kelly Girl for the government.

4. If you started as a “nontaxpayer”, you have transformed your status into that of a “taxpayer”, unless and until you rebut the false IRS form W-2 that will surely result from submitting the IRS. For W-4 to your private employer.

The above ruse is why we don’t recommend filling out W-4 Exempts and instead prefer to use the W-8 form. Note that we do not intend to convey the mistaken belief that “wages” are not taxable or are not “income”. They absolutely are. The issue is not whether they are taxable, but under what circumstances a person can earn them. A person who doesn’t submit a W-4 voluntary withholding form does not earn “wages” as legally defined in this section and no one can do any of the following without violating the law:

1. Force you to sign or submit this form as a condition of being hired or not fired.

2. Report anything but ZERO for “Wages, tips, and other compensation” on an IRS form W-2 if you do not voluntarily sign and submit an IRS form W-4. Even if the IRS commands the private employer to withhold at single zero, that withholding STILL can only be on the amount of “wages” earned, which are ZERO for a person who does not voluntarily sign a W-4 withholding agreement.

3. Put an SSN or TIN on any government form or report and send it in to the government without your voluntary consent. This is a violation of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. §552a.

3.9.1.28 "Withholding agent" (in 26 U.S.C. §7701 (a)(16))

Withholding agent

The term “withholding agent” means any person required to deduct and withhold any tax under the provisions of section 1441, 1442, 1443, or 1461.

Section 1441 is entitled “Withholding of tax on nonresident aliens”. Section 1442 is entitled “Withholding tax on foreign corporations”. Section 1443 is entitled “Foreign tax-exempt organizations”. Section 1461 is entitled “Liability for withheld tax” and provides that:

3.9.2 26 U.S.C. §1: Tax Imposed

This section of law is rather long and not worth repeating here. However, you download it from:

http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/

To summarize what this section specifies:

A tax is imposed on the following:

1. Married individuals filing joint returns and surviving spouses.
2. Heads of households.
3. Unmarried individuals (other than surviving spouses and heads of households)
4. Married individuals filing separate returns.
5. Estates and trusts.
6. Adjustments in tax tables so that inflation will not result in tax increases.
7. Unearned income of minor children taxes as if parent's income.

It sets the maximum capital gains rate and defines how taxes on each of the above are to be computed. You will note, however, that the section does NOT indicate that such individuals are “liable” for paying the tax, and you have to be liable before you are obligated to file a return.

This section of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC) defines "gross income". Gross income is the income that is listed on your W-2 form in block 10, called “Wages, tips, and other compensation". This definition is used by all tax professionals.

"Sec. 61. Gross income defined

(a) General definition - ... gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:
(1) Compensation for services...;
(2) Gross income derived from business;
(3) Gains derived from dealings in property;
(4) Interest;
(5) Rents;
(6) Royalties;
(7) Dividends;... [more items listed]” [26 U.S.C. §61]

Good, we know about these 'items'... we grew up hearing these 'items' repeated through the years as they are components of gross income, right? These above items have been indicated by amateurs and tax professionals alike to be 'sources'... yet it is argued by many that they are NOT 'sources'. That there is a difference between 'items' and 'sources'. It gets easier...

Take NOTICE: The IRS has claimed in a case in South Carolina that § 861 has nothing to do with gross income in § 61. This did not last long as the Department of Justice was quickly reaching for things within § 861, without regarding the full effect of the attached regulations, to try to support their frail position. This seems to open up the application of the statute and regulations into the argument of gross income before the court and the public. If that were not enough, they also have to try to defeat this:

26 U.S.C. §63 Taxable income defined

(a) In general
Except as provided in subsection (b), for purposes of this subtitle, the term "taxable income" means gross income minus the deductions allowed by this chapter (other than the standard deduction).

(b) Individuals who do not itemize their deductions

In the case of an individual who does not elect to itemize his deductions for the taxable year, for purposes of this subtitle, the term "taxable income" means adjusted gross income, minus-

(1) the standard deduction, and

(2) the deduction for personal exemptions provided in section 151.

(g) Marital status

For purposes of this section, marital status shall be determined under section 7703.

This section defines how to compute taxable income. The above quote does not include the entire section, but shows the important part of the section. This section clearly shows that taxable income is gross income minus deductions. Implicit in this statement is the idea that the gross income must derive from a taxable “source”, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §861, as we will see in the next section.

3.9.5 26 U.S.C. §861: Source Rules and Other Rules Relating to FOREIGN INCOME

A taxable “source” ties a tax to a geographical boundary and/or some commercial activity or event within that boundary, in the case of excise taxes. 26 U.S.C. §61 defines that the federal tax is on “income from whatever source derived”. This section defines the meaning of the word “source” used in section 61 and it is only section in Title 26 and the primary section that ties the U.S. federal income tax to any kind of geographical boundary. If it weren’t for this section, then the Internal Revenue Code would be so general and non-specific (in talking only about taxes on types of income and not relating these taxes to geographical boundaries) that it would apply to everyone in the world! The authority for what is stated in this section derives mainly from the Constitution of the United States, in article I, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3, which we discussed in section 3.8.7 and will repeat here:

Article I, Section 8, Clause 1: “The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States; “

Article I, Section 8, Clause 3: “To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes;”

The meaning of “among”, as defined the Supreme Court, dictates that Congress can tax only “interstate” or “foreign” commerce, but NOT “intra-state” commerce. Hence, the only thing that can legitimately be taxed within the geographical boundaries of the 50 Union states, per the U.S. Constitution, is foreign income, as this code section shows. Note that income from the 50 Union states (which is not foreign) going to U.S. citizens (who are not nonresident aliens or citizens living overseas, which would then define the income as foreign) is never listed as a taxable “source”, and therefore this income is not subject to tax. This also helps explain why citizens have to fill out a W-4 to have taxes deducted from their income.. because they have to volunteer since taxes can’t legally be imposed on them against their will.

Many people, when or if they look at this very important section of the Internal Revenue Code, just skim by it or don’t read it at all, because it falls 800 sections after the discussion of taxable types of “income” appearing in I.R.C. section 61. Upon first glance, they look at this section and think it doesn’t apply to them, which is exactly what the I.R.S. wants them to do! One would think that sections 61 and 861 are so closely related that they deserve to be together, but the clever lawyers in the I.R.S. didn’t want citizens paying attention to this section, so they have obfuscated the tax code over the years deliberately by separating these two sections so as not to draw attention to this section, because they know that it represents the biggest tax loophole ever!

Another method the IRS and the Congress have exploited used over the years to obfuscate the tax code is to confuse or deceive us about the meaning and significance of the term “source”. In I.R.C. section 861, they use the term “from whatever source derived”, which is the very language used in the 16th Amendment:
Some naïve readers perceive the term “whatever source derived” to mean that the source doesn’t matter at all! This, by the way, is precisely what the IRS and Congress wants you to believe! It takes a person with more legal background and education than the common man has from our deficient public education system to understand that this is simply not the case. In point of fact, there is no way to define a tax without associating it to a geographical boundary, because otherwise, it would be unenforceable in court. Not defining the geographical boundaries also would completely remove any constitutional constraints on the power of the federal government and completely invalidate the constitution! This was made clear in the case of Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co. (259 U.S. 20). See section 5.6.11.4 for more details on this. If the federal government could tax any kind of income it wanted, within and between any of the states, it could completely usurp the taxing authority of the states. That is why we will say once again, that a tax is not valid unless it identifies the object of the tax, which in this case is “income”, and the geographical boundaries and limitation that apply to it, which is the “source”. If Congress and the IRS had any decency, they would write the U.S. Codes to make this point very clear, but of course if they did this, then people would immediately quit paying income taxes, so they deliberately look the other way to create an opportunity to tax your ignorance of the law. That is why we say that federal income taxes are “stupidity taxes”.

For more background on the subject of taxable sources, refer to 26 CFR §1.861-1.863, which we talk about later in sections 3.12.6-3.12.10. These sections are the implementing regulations of the commissioner of the IRS’. They define the IRS’ own interpretation of the meaning of the U.S. Codes on the “source” issue. 26 CFR Sections 1.861-1.863 deal with income from “specific sources”, which simply reinforces the idea presented above that “from whatever source derived” doesn’t mean that “source” is irrelevant.

With this background behind us, we will now reveal the content of this code section so you can read it for yourself.

TITLE 26 - INTERNAL REVENUE CODE
Subtitle A - Income Taxes
CHAPTER I - NORMAL TAXES AND SURTAXES Subchapter N - Tax Based on Income From Sources Within or Without the United States
PART I - SOURCE RULES AND OTHER GENERAL RULES RELATING TO FOREIGN INCOME

-HEAD-

Section 61(a) Gross income from sources within United States
The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:
(1) Interest
   Interest from the United States or the District of Columbia, and interest on bonds, notes, or other interest-bearing obligations of noncorporate residents or domestic corporations not including –
   (A) interest from a resident alien individual or domestic corporation, if such individual or corporation meets the 80-percent foreign business requirements of subsection (c)(1), and
   (B) interest –
      (i) on deposits with a foreign branch of a domestic corporation or a domestic partnership if such branch is engaged in the commercial banking business, and (ii) on amounts satisfying the requirements of subparagraph(B) of section 871(i)(3) which are paid by a foreign branch of a domestic corporation or a domestic partnership.
(2) Dividends
   The amount received as dividends –
   (A) from a domestic corporation other than a corporation which has an election in effect under section
   936, or
   (B) from a foreign corporation unless less than 25 percent of the gross income from all sources of such foreign corporation for the 3-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) would be effectively connected (or treated as effectively connected other than income described in section 884(d)(2)) with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States; but only in an amount which bears the same ratio to such dividends as the gross income of the corporation for such period which was effectively connected (or treated as effectively connected other than income described in section 884(d)(2)) with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States bears to its gross income from all sources; but dividends (other than dividends for which a deduction is allowable under section 245(b)) from a foreign corporation shall, for purposes of subpart A of part III (relating to foreign tax credit), be treated as income from sources without the United States to the Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)

For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term “active foreign business income” means gross income from all sources of such individual or corporation that constitutes 80 percent foreign business requirements of this chapter, and to such extent subparagraph (B) shall not apply.

For purposes of subparagraph (B) as a result of any arrangement whereby another corporation receives a substantially equal amount of premiums or other consideration in respect to issuing (or reinsuring) any insurance or annuity contract in connection with property in, liability arising out of activity in, or in connection with the lives or health of residents of the United States.

Any social security benefit (as defined in section 86(d)).

(a) Taxable income from sources within United States From the items of gross income specified in subsection (a) as being income from sources within the United States there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be included in full as taxable income from sources within the United States. In the case of an individual who does not itemize deductions, an amount equal to the standard deduction shall be considered a deduction which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income.

(c) Foreign business requirements

(1) Foreign business requirements

(A) In general

An individual or corporation meets the 80-percent foreign business requirements of this paragraph if it is shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary that at least 80 percent of the gross income from all sources of such individual or corporation for the testing period is active foreign business income.

(B) Active foreign business income

For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term “active foreign business income” means gross income which—

1. Amounts received as underwriting income (as defined in section 832(b)(3)) derived from the issuing (or reinsuring) of any insurance or annuity contract—

(A) in connection with property in, liability arising out of an activity in, or in connection with the lives or health of residents of the United States, or

(B) in connection with risks not described in subparagraph (A) as a result of any arrangement whereby another corporation receives a substantially equal amount of premiums or other consideration in respect to issuing (or reinsuring) any insurance or annuity contract in connection with property in, liability arising out of activity in, or in connection with the lives or health of residents of the United States.

2. Social security benefits

Any social security benefit (as defined in section 86(d)).

3. Rental or exchange of property rights

Rents or royalties from property located in the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using in the United States patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property.

4. Disposition of United States real property interest

Gains, profits, and income from the disposition of a United States real property interest (as defined in section 897(c)).

5. Sale or exchange of inventory property

Gains, profits, and income derived from the purchase of inventory property (within the meaning of section 865(i)(1)) without the United States (other than within a possession of the United States) and its sale or exchange within the United States.

6. Amounts received as underwriting income (as defined in section 832(b)(3)) derived from the issuing (or reinsuring) of any insurance or annuity contract—

(A) in connection with property in, liability arising out of an activity in, or in connection with the lives or health of residents of the United States, or

(B) in connection with risks not described in subparagraph (A) as a result of any arrangement whereby another corporation receives a substantially equal amount of premiums or other consideration in respect to issuing (or reinsuring) any insurance or annuity contract in connection with property in, liability arising out of activity in, or in connection with the lives or health of residents of the United States.

7. Social security benefits

Any social security benefit (as defined in section 86(d)).

8. Foreign business requirements

(1) Foreign business requirements

(A) In general

An individual or corporation meets the 80-percent foreign business requirements of this paragraph if it is shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary that at least 80 percent of the gross income from all sources of such individual or corporation for the testing period is active foreign business income.

(B) Active foreign business income

For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term “active foreign business income” means gross income which—
(i) is derived from sources outside the United States (as determined under this subchapter) or, in the case of a corporation, is attributable to income so derived by a subsidiary of such corporation, and
(ii) is attributable to the active conduct of a trade or business in a foreign country or possession of the United States by the individual or corporation (or by a subsidiary.) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "subsidiary" means any corporation in which the corporation referred to in this subparagraph owns (directly or indirectly) stock meeting the requirements of section 1504(a)(2) (determined by substituting "50 percent" for "80 percent" each place it appears).

(C) Testing period
For purposes of this subsection, the term "testing period" means the 3-year period ending with the close of the taxable year of the individual or corporation preceding the payment (or such part of such period as may be applicable). If the individual or corporation has no gross income for such 3-year period (or part thereof), the testing period shall be the taxable year in which the payment is made.

(2) Look-thru where related person receives interest
(A) In general
In the case of interest received by a related person from a resident alien individual or domestic corporation meeting the 80-percent foreign business requirements of paragraph (1), subsection (a)(1)(A) shall apply only to a percentage of such interest equal to the percentage which –
(i) the gross income of such individual or corporation for the testing period from sources outside the United States (as determined under this subchapter), is of
(ii) the total gross income of such individual or corporation for the testing period.

(B) Related person
For purposes of this paragraph, the term "related person" has the meaning given such term by section 954(d)(3), except that – (i) such section shall be applied by substituting "the individual or corporation making the payment" for "controlled foreign corporation" each place it appears, and (ii) such section shall be applied by substituting "10 percent or more" for "more than 50 percent" each place it appears.

(d) Special rule for application of subsection (a)(2)(B)
For purposes of subsection (a)(2)(B), if the foreign corporation has no gross income from any source for the 3-year period (or part thereof) specified, the requirements of such subsection shall be applied with respect to the taxable year of such corporation in which the payment of the dividend is made.

(e) Income from certain railroad rolling stock treated as income from sources within the United States

(1) General rule
For purposes of subsection (a) and section 862(a), if –
(A) a taxpayer leases railroad rolling stock which is section 1245 property (as defined in section 1245(a)(3)) to a domestic common carrier by railroad or a corporation which is controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more such common carriers, and
(B) the use under such lease is expected to be use within the United States, all amounts includible in gross income by the taxpayer with respect to such railroad rolling stock (including gain from sale or other disposition of such railroad rolling stock) shall be treated as income from sources within the United States. The requirements of subparagraph (B) of the preceding sentence shall be -treated as satisfied if the only expected use outside the United States is use by a person (whether or not a United States person) in Canada or Mexico on a temporary basis which is not expected to exceed a total of 90 days in any taxable year.

(2) Paragraph (1) not to apply where lessor is a member of controlled group which includes a railroad Paragraph (1) shall not apply to a lease between two members of the same controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 1563) if any member of such group is a domestic common carrier by railroad or a switching or terminal company all of whose stock is owned by one or more domestic common carriers by railroad.

(3) Denial of foreign tax credit
No credit shall be allowed under section 901 for any payments to foreign countries with respect to any amount received by the taxpayer with respect to railroad rolling stock which is subject to paragraph (1).

(f) Cross reference
For treatment of interest paid by the branch of a foreign corporation, see section 884(f).

3.9.6 26 U.S.C. §871: Tax on nonresident alien individuals

This section is too long to list in its entirety, but you can read it yourself at the address below:

http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/26/871.html

§871(a) imposes a tax of 30% on nonresident aliens for amounts received only from sources within the United States/federal zone. §871(b) imposes a “graduated” tax only on income which is effectively connected with trade or business [as privileged federal government employees who are elected or appointed to political office] within the U.S./federal zone.
You will note the definition of “trade or business” in the IRC:

26 U.S.C. §7701(26)

(26) TRADE OR BUSINESS—The term “trade or business” includes [only] the performance of functions of public [government] office.

26 U.S.C. §864 DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES... (c) EFFECTIVELY CONNECTED INCOME.

(4) INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHOUT* the United States.

(A) “Except as provided in subparagraphs (B) or (C)*...no income, gain or loss from sources without the United States [in the 50 Union states] shall be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.”

Subparagraph B and C defines the income liabilities of nonresident aliens and foreign corporations who have offices WITHIN the United States/Federal zone s[for example in the District of Columbia]. Certain income received from “without” the United States is taxable if received “within” the United States.

26 CFR § 1.871-7(4) “…a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business in the [federal zone] United States during the taxable year has no income gain or loss... which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States.”

Taxable income on nonresident aliens is determined as follows:

26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2) Determination of Taxable Income

In determining taxable income...gross income includes only gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/26/872.html

The only definition of gross income for the nonresident alien is found in 26 U.S.C. §872:

26 U.S.C. §872 Gross income

(a) General rule

In the case of a nonresident alien individual, except where the context clearly indicates otherwise, gross income includes only -

(1) gross income which is derived from sources within the United States [ the federal zone] and which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States [ federal zone], and

(2) gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States [ federal zone].

Note that a nonresident alien who has no income from sources within the federal zone/U.S. has no tax liability under IRC section A, §871(a)!

3.9.8 26 U.S.C. §3405: Employer withholding

Discusses employer withholding and exempt W-4’ s. See the following to look up this section of code:

http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/

Below is the text of this statute:

26 U.S.C. §6702 Frivolous Income Tax Return

(a) Civil penalty

If -

(1) any individual files what purports to be a return of the tax imposed by subtitle A but which -

(A) does not contain information on which the substantial correctness of the self-assessment may be judged, or

(B) contains information that on its face indicates that the self-assessment is substantially incorrect; and

(2) the conduct referred to in paragraph (1) is due to -

(A) a position which is frivolous, or

(B) a desire (which appears on the purported return) to delay or impede the administration of Federal income tax laws, then such individual shall pay a penalty of $50.

(b) Penalty in addition to other penalties

The penalty imposed by subsection (a) shall be in addition to any other penalty provided by law.

Based on the above statute, some courts have imposed sanctions against citizens who file such returns. Below is an excerpt from the case of Lovell v. United States, 755 F.2d. 517:

This court recently warned taxpayers who put forth frivolous arguments in bad faith that we would not hesitate to impose sanctions pursuant to Fed. R. App. P. 38. Granzow v. Commissioner, 739 F.2d. 265, 269-70 (7th Cir. 1984). See also Edgar v. Inland Steel Co., 744 F.2d. 1276, 1278 (7th Cir. 1984); United States v. Eklund, 732 F.2d. 562 (7th Cir. 1984). Other circuits have imposed sanctions in § 6702 cases, see Martinez v. IRS, 744 F.2d. 71 (10th Cir. 1984) (per curiam); Davis, 742 F.2d. at 173; Baskin v. United States, 738 F.2d. 975, 977 (8th Cir. 1984) (per curiam); Crain v. Commissioner, 737 F.2d. 1417, 1418 (5th Cir. 1984), and we believe sanctions are appropriate in this case. Accordingly, the United States shall recover, from plaintiffs, reasonable attorneys' fees and costs incurred in defending this appeal. The government shall file with this court, within 15 days of the date of this order, a submission as to the fees and costs it has incurred on appeal. The judgment of the district court is AFFIRMED.

3.9.10 26 U.S.C. §7201: Attempt to evade or defeat tax

26 U.S.C. §7201 Attempt to Evade or Defeat Tax

Any person who willfully attempts in any manner to evade or defeat any tax imposed by this title or the payment thereof shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $100,000 ($500,000 in the case of a corporation), or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

When a case of tax evasion is prosecuted by the IRS, the elements required to be proved are:

1) willfulness.

2) existence of a tax deficiency.

3) an affirmative act constituting an evasion or attempted evasion of the tax.

See the following cases for more information: Sansone v. United States, 380 U.S. 343, 351, 13 L.Ed.2d. 882, 85 S.Ct. 1004 (1965); United States v. Samara, 643 F.2d. 701, 703 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 829, 102 S.Ct. 122, 70 L.Ed.2d. 104 (1981).

Interestingly, this section of code dealing with tax evasion directly contradicts the Supreme Court case of Gregory v. Helvering, 293 U.S. 465 (1935), which said in plain words:

"The legal right of the taxpayer to decrease the amount of what otherwise would be his taxes or altogether avoid them by means which the law permits, cannot be doubted."

Do you think this code section is really just a catch-all to scare people? Sure looks that way to us, especially when you consider the 861/source. Could this be the reason why citizens who aren’t liable for tax continue to “volunteer” to pay it anyway--FEAR?
3.9.11 26 U.S.C. §7203: Willful failure to file return, supply information, or pay tax

26 U.S.C. §7203 Willful Failure to file return, supply information, or pay tax

Any person required under this title to pay any estimated tax or tax, or required by this title or by regulations made under authority thereof to make a return, keep any records, or supply any information, who willfully fails to pay such estimated tax or tax, make [not file, but make] such return, keep such records, or supply such information [to whom?... to oneself?]; at the time or times required by law or regulations, shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $25,000 ($100,000 in the case of a corporation), or imprisoned not more than 4 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution. In the case of any person with respect to whom there is a failure to pay any estimated tax, this section shall not apply to such person with respect to such failure if there is no addition to tax under section 6654 or 6655 with respect to such failure. In the case of a willful violation of any provision of section 6050I, the first sentence of this section shall be applied by substituting "felony" for "misdemeanor" and "3 years" for "1 year".

Interestingly, the statute doesn’t define the meaning of “making a return”. Why didn’t they say “submit” a return and tell us to where? Because under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, parties have a right not to incriminate themselves, which means they have the right not to submit a return! The 1040 instruction booklet contains a Privacy Act statement which confirms this. Don’t let the title above fool you! It says “file” but the title is editorially supplied and is NOT law. Only the content of the section is law, and it DOES NOT impose a requirement to file, but only to make the return, because if it did, it would violate the Fifth Amendment for natural persons. Here is the basis for that belief:

(b) Arrangement and classification

No inference, implication, or presumption of legislative construction shall be drawn or made by reason of the location or grouping of any particular section or provision or portion of this title, nor shall any table of contents, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect. The preceding sentence also applies to the sidenotes and ancillary tables contained in the various prints of this Act before its enactment into law.

make: 1. b: to seem to begin (an action) 2: a: to cause to happen to or be experienced by someone b: to cause to exist, occur, or appear c: to favor the growth or occurrence of 5: to put together from components: CONSTITUTE 6 a: to compute or estimate to be b: to form and hold in the mind."

So according to common usage, and because there is not definition of the term “make”, we have to use the above definition. The tax form is called a “return” but nowhere does it say that it must be “returned” to anyone, nor could requiring such a form ever be mandated mandatory because of the privilege by natural persons under the Fifth Amendment to not be compelled to incriminate themselves. As long as you “make” (create) a return, which process is never defined, you can always claim that you made it and that you filed it, but that you just didn’t file it with the Internal Revenue Service because they never specifically required you to do so ANYWHERE, nor could the IRS require you to do so under the Fifth Amendment, or punish you for failure to do so! Because “taxpayer” includes fictions like corporations who can be made liable for income taxes, the statement below is accurate, but is misleading for natural persons, to whom the section does not apply. The passage below confirms this. If they wanted to REQUIRE natural persons to file the return, they would have put it in part (a) below:

26 CFR 1.6011-1 General requirements of return, statement, or list

(a) General rule. Every person subject to any tax, or required to collect any tax, under Subtitle A of the Code, shall make [but not necessarily file] such returns or statements as are required by the regulations in this chapter. The return or statement shall include therein the information required by the applicable regulations or forms."

b) Use of prescribed forms. Copies of the prescribed return forms will so far as possible be furnished taxpayers by district directors. A taxpayer will not be excused from making a return, however, by the fact that no return form has been furnished to him. Taxpayers not supplied with the proper forms should [not must] make application therefore to the district director in ample time to have their returns prepared, verified, and filed on.

or before the due date with the internal revenue office where such returns are required to be filed [by whom?].
The REVENUE AGENTS who receive them? or "persons"? ONLY by corporations or elected or appointed officers of the U.S. government liable for the tax, but not other "natural persons" in the 50 Union states not occupying federal territories]. Each taxpayer should carefully prepare his return and set forth fully and clearly the information required to be included therein. Returns which have not been so prepared will not be accepted as meeting the requirements of the Code. In the absence of a prescribed form, a statement made by a taxpayer disclosing his gross income and the deductions therefrom may be accepted as a tentative return, and, if filed within the prescribed time, the statement so made will relieve the taxpayer from liability for the addition to tax imposed for the delinquent filing of the return, provided that without unnecessary delay such a tentative return is supplemented by a return made on the proper form.

[comments added for clarification]

Do you see any definition above of WHO can be required to file a return? All they are saying above is that the revenue agents are required to file the returns upon receipt, but no liability on the part of persons is established from the above.
There can be no liability to file because the IRS doesn’t want you to know that as a natural person who isn’t an elected or appointed political officer of the United States or an officer of a U.S. corporation and who lives in nonfederal areas of the 50 Union states, you aren’t liable for filing returns or paying tax. This tactic of making but not filing a return was very successfully used by Gaylon Harrell, who was acquitted of state charges of Willful Failure to File under 26 U.S.C. §7203, and who we talk about later in section 9.2.2 and who appears in our movie. There are also NO implementing regulations for I.R.C. §7203, which means that you cannot be criminally punished or civilly fined for violating it according to the following cites:

"...we think it important to note that the Act's civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of regulations promulgated by the Secretary: if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no

"An individual cannot be prosecuted for violating the act unless he violates the implementing regulations.”
United States v. Reinis, 794 F. 2d 506 (9th Cir. 1986), United States v. Murphy, 809 F.2d. 1427 (9th Cir. 1987)

"Criminal penalties...can attach only upon violation of regulations promulgated by the Secretary." U.S. v.
Reinis, 794 F.2d. 506.

"Individual cannot be prosecuted for violating Currency Reporting Act unless he violates the implementing

We know that there are no “Willful Failure to File” implementing regulations so there can’t be a crime of “Willful Failure to File” resulting from Subtitle A income taxes. So how does the government legally charge people with “Willful Failure to File”? Here is how one of our readers describes it:

You may know that a “willful failure to file” case is NEVER about a 1040 Form. As bizarre as it may seem, fradulent narcotics smuggling charges, along with the Title 26 charges, are added to the Form 9131, which is used to convene a grand jury for indictment.

However, nothing about smuggling is ever told to the jury. Most people savvy enough to obtain the Form 9131 used in their case, have received it with the charges BLACKED OUT. a few unredacted copies were leaked. however. That's how we know about this particular fraud on the court. This Form is signed, by the way, by 5 different agents at the IRS, including CID Special agents and the district director.

Without seeing an unredacted Form 9131, defendants make a "leap of presumptions" that the charges must relate to the 1040 Form we didn't file. Wrong. But people can't wait to argue the wrong issues. The question is not "am I liable" or anything else, really.

The ONLY issue is, "what evidence does the government have that I smuggled drugs, and how does that act give rise to a tax, anyway?" Should you care, there is a flip side of this. Real drug smugglers are also charged with Title 21, and ALSO a Title 26 violation- but THAT charge (Title 26) is never brought before the grand jury.
This government is so sneaky.

If you are in contact with Wayne Bentson (not Bill BENSON- different guy), and/or Richard Standring, they can explain this to you. So can Dan Meador. I can send you their contact numbers, if you want to know about their excellent research.

3.9.12 26 U.S.C. §7206: Fraud and false statements
This section establishes that one should never lie or commit fraud on their tax return or aid in committing fraud against the United States:

Sec. 7206. Fraud and false statements

Any person who -

(1) Declaration under penalties of perjury Willfully makes and subscribes any return, statement, or other document, which contains or is verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury, and which he does not believe to be true and correct as to every material matter; or

(2) Aid or assistance

Willfully aids or assists in, or procures, counsels, or advises the preparation or presentation under, or in connection with any matter arising under, the internal revenue laws, of a return, affidavit, claim, or other document, which is fraudulent or false as to any material matter, whether or not such falsity or fraud is with the knowledge or consent of the person authorized or required to present such return, affidavit, claim, or document; or

(3) Fraudulent bonds, permits, and entries

Simulates or falsely or fraudulently executes or signs any bond, permit, entry, or other document required by the provisions of the internal revenue laws, or by any regulation made in pursuance thereof, or procures the same to be falsely or fraudulently executed, or advises, aids in, or connives at such execution thereof; or

(4) Removal or concealment with intent to defraud

Removes, deposits, or conceals, or is concerned in removing, depositing, or concealing, any goods or commodities for in respect whereof any tax is or shall be imposed, or any property upon which levy is authorized by section 6331, with intent to evade or defeat the assessment or collection of any tax imposed by this title; or

(5) Compromises and closing agreements

In connection with any compromise under section 7122, or offer of such compromise, or in connection with any closing agreement under section 7121, or offer to enter into any such agreement, willfully -

(A) Concealment of property

Conceals from any officer or employee of the United States any property belonging to the estate of a taxpayer or other person liable in respect of the tax, or

(B) Withholding, falsifying, and destroying records

 Receives, withholds, destroys, mutilates, or falsifies any book, document, or record, or makes any false statement, relating to the estate or financial condition of the taxpayer or other person liable in respect of the tax; shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $100,000 ($500,000 in the case of a corporation), or imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

The implications of this section are far-reaching. Below is a list of some of the things that might be punishable under this statute:

1. Employers encouraging their employees to misrepresent their tax status on their W-4. For instance, they could be prosecuted for coercing or intimidating an employee who wants to claim exempt status on his W-4 into claiming one exemption instead.

2. Citizens with domestic (not foreign) income filing tax returns who transcribe “wages, tips, and other compensation” from block 10 of their W-2 onto the income portion of their tax return are committing fraud that could be prosecuted because their income is not indeed taxable.

3. Citizens who have income that is taxable who do not declare it on their tax returns are committing fraud against the United States.
3.10  U.S. Code Title 18: Crimes and Criminal Procedure

18 U.S.C. Sec. 6002. Immunity generally

Whenever a witness refuses, on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or provide other information in a proceeding before or ancillary to -

(1) a court or grand jury of the United States,

(2) an agency of the United States, or

(3) either House of Congress, a joint committee of the two Houses, or a committee or a subcommittee of either House, and the person presiding over the proceeding communicates to the witness an order issued under this title, the witness may not refuse to comply with the order on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination; but no testimony or other information compelled under the order (or any information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony or other information) may be used against the witness in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury, giving a false statement, or otherwise failing to comply with the order.

Sec. 6003. Court and grand jury proceedings

(a) In the case of any individual who has been or may be called to testify or provide other information at any proceeding before or ancillary to a court of the United States or a grand jury of the United States, the United States district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding is or may be held shall issue, in accordance with subsection (b) of this section, upon the request of the United States attorney for such district, an order requiring such individual to give testimony or provide other information which he refuses to give or provide on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination, such order to become effective as provided in section 6002 of this title.

(b) A United States attorney may, with the approval of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, the Associate Attorney General, or any designated Assistant Attorney General or Deputy Assistant Attorney General, request an order under subsection (a) of this section when in his judgment -

(1) the testimony or other information from such individual may be necessary to the public interest; and

(2) such individual has refused or is likely to refuse to testify or provide other information on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination.

This statute is frequently used by “natural persons” or people other than corporations, partnerships, and trusts, to gain immunity from prosecution for any information they provide to the court or congress that might be incriminating against themselves. It also applies to tax records! If the IRS asks you to produce business records and you are a “natural person”, you can ask them for immunity from criminal prosecution related to all information that you might provide to them or anything that might derive from that information.

3.11  U.S. Code Title 5, Sections 551 through 559: Administrative Procedures Act

This section of the U.S. Codes is called the Administrative Procedures Act and it governs all the administrative dealings you might have with the IRS. It talks about the forms, procedures, and rules they must use to determine your tax liability and collect taxes, and the burden of proof they must use to reach conclusions about your status. This section is VERY IMPORTANT because it establishes the authority they have to conduct tax examinations with you. It’s too long to repeat here, but we encourage you to read it for yourself on the web:

3.12  Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) Title 26

Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

The Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) is a codification of the general and permanent rules published in the Federal Register by the Executive departments and agencies of the Federal Government. The CFR online is a joint project authorized by the publisher, the National Archives and Records Administration's Office of the Federal Register, and the Government Printing Office (GPO) to provide the public with enhanced access to Government information. GPO will continue to make the paper editions of the CFR and Federal Register available through its Superintendent of Documents Sales service.

The CFR is divided into 50 titles which represent broad areas subject to Federal regulation. The titles correspond to the 50 titles of the U.S. Codes, since the titles are intended to administratively implement the 50 titles of the U.S. Code. If you want to look up regulations for taxes, for instance, which are covered in Title 26 of the U.S. Codes, then you would refer to Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations. Each title is divided into chapters which usually bear the name of the issuing agency. (See: Alphabetic List of Agencies Appearing in the CFR -- extracted from the January 1, 1998, revision of the CFR Index and Finding Aids -- pp. 1001-1009.) Each chapter is further subdivided into parts covering specific regulatory areas. Large parts may be subdivided into subparts. All parts are organized in sections, and most citations to the CFR will be provided at the section level.

Regulations under Title 26 of the United States Code are written primarily by the Secretary of the Treasury under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §7805(a). This section says the following:

(a) Authorization

Except where such authority is expressly given by this title to any person other than an officer or employee of the Treasury Department, the Secretary shall prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this title, including all rules and regulations as may be necessary by reason of any alteration of law in relation to internal revenue.

The most important thing to understand is the requirement for regulations in the enforcement of income taxes under Subtitle A. 44 U.S.C. §1505(a) requires that every law written by Congress that will have “general applicability and legal effect” must have an implementing regulation published in the Federal Register. Below is a definition of “general applicability and legal effect” from 1 CFR §1.1:

“Document having general applicability and legal effect means any document issued under proper authority prescribing a penalty or course of conduct, conferring a right, privilege, authority, or immunity, or imposing an obligation, and relevant or applicable to the general public, members of a class, or persons in a locality, as distinguished from named individuals or organizations;”

Regulations relating only to officers, employees or agents of the government need not be published in the Federal Register, according to 44 U.S.C. §1505(a).

Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship

http://famguardian.org/
Note that only a handful of groups are specifically exempted from the requirement for publication in the Federal Register of all enforcement provisions within all laws, which are:

2. “A matter relating to agency management or personnel or to public property, loans, grants, benefits, or contracts.” 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2).
3. “Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof”. 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1).

There is a very good reason why implementing regulations that only affect federal employees, contracts, and benefits need not be published in the Federal Register to be enforceable in court. The reason relates to the nature of the Separation of Powers within our Republican government. The Legislature writes all laws, and most of these laws direct the activities of the Executive Branch. Laws passed by Congress in the Legislative Branch essentially amount to a direct and immediate command to its “employees” in the Executive Branch to do certain things. If these commands had to be interpreted by the Executive Branch itself and published as Implementing Regulations in the Federal Register before they would be enforceable against federal workers, then the servant, which is the Executive Branch, could simply go on strike by refusing to write implementing regulations. This would allow the servant, which is the Executive Branch, to routinely disobey its Master, the Legislative Branch, with impunity, resulting in chaos and a dysfunctional government.

Typically, agents will cite you a statute for liability or penalties but cannot give you the implementing regulation, because there aren’t any, and this definitely does not satisfy the burden of proof on the agent! The reason there aren’t any implementing regulations is because as we say throughout this book, Subtitle A income taxes ONLY apply to elected or appointed officers of the United States government, and 44 U.S.C. §1505(a) says that implementing regulations aren’t required for these people.

In fact, the only people who can be prosecuted for “failure to file” under 26 U.S.C. §7201 are officers and employees of the United States when acting in their official capacity as an agent of the government. The federal courts have indirectly confirmed this fact. For instance, here is what one of them said about the fact that there are no implementing regulations for federal tax crimes:

“Federal income tax regulations governing filing of income tax returns do not require Office of Management and Budget control numbers because requirement to file tax return is mandated by statute, not by regulation.” 507 U.S. 1010, 123 S.Ct. 1659, 507 U.S. 1010, 123 L.Ed.2d. 278

What the above court just admitted is that only federal employees, officers, contractors, and benefits recipients, for whom implementing regulations are not required, can be the proper subject of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. You see how sneaky this is?

All enforcement actions under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code must be authorized by an implementing regulation written by the Secretary and published in the Federal Register. Enforcement actions include: 1. Requirement to keep records; 2. Authority to make an assessment of liability; 3. Authority to institute collection actions; 4. Authority to assess penalties. If the IRS attempts an enforcement action that is not specifically authorized by an implementing regulation, then they are acting illegally, and if that unlawful act results in an injury to a private citizen, the IRS agent who did the act can be held personally liable for his tort, is not protected for his wrongdoing by any law, and may not assert sovereign or official immunity as a defense. The act by the Secretary of writing an implementing regulation accomplishes the following:

1. Makes a specific agency in the Executive Branch of the government responsible for enforcing and/or executing a specific statute.
2. Makes a specific person or role within an agency responsible for a specific function in the execution of the statute.
3. Provides detailed instructions that implement the intent of the statute and which ensure that the statute is carried out in a manner that is consistent with the law and prevailing agency directives and rulings.
4. Gives all persons in the general public who could be adversely affected by the proposed regulation due notice and opportunity to intervene or influence its passage.

The affect of failure to publish implementing regulations authorizing specific enforcement actions is identified in 26 CFR §601.702(a)(2)(ii), and it indicates that the rights of no member of the public at large may be adversely affected by the actions of an agency.
Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

26 CFR §601.702 Publication and public inspection

(a)(2)(ii) Effect of failure to publish. Except to the extent that a person has actual and timely notice of the terms of any matter referred to in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph which is required to be published in the Federal Register, such person is not required in any manner to resort to, or be adversely affected by, such matter if it is not so published or is not incorporated by reference therein pursuant to subdivision (i) of this subparagraph. Thus, for example, any such matter which imposes an obligation and which is not so published or incorporated by reference will not adversely change or affect a person's rights.

To identify whether a specific regulation has been published in the federal register, a citation is required at the bottom of the regulation in accordance with 1 CFR §21.43. Such a citation might look like the following, which is from 26 CFR §601.702. We have bold-faced the Federal Register citation:

All regulations written by the Secretary of the Treasury may not exceed the scope or authority of the statute, because the Secretary is not authorized to write law or legislate:

“When enacting §7206(1) Congress undoubtedly knew that the Secretary of the Treasury is empowered to prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of the internal revenue laws, so long as they carry into effect the will of Congress as expressed by the statutes. Such regulations have the force of law. The Secretary, however, does not have the power to make law. Dixon v. United States, supra.” [United States v. Levy, 333 F.2d 969 (1976)]

The Secretary is only authorized under 26 U.S.C. §7805(a) to interpret and apply the law as written by Congress in the statutes because that is the limit of his delegated authority. The Federal Register Act, 44 U.S.C. Chapter 15, requires that all regulations that will affect the public at large must be published in the Federal Register. If the Secretary has written a regulation but not bothered to publish it in the Federal register, then it may not be applied against the public at large. Every statute or regulation that has been published in the Federal Register will have an authority citation at the end stating so, as required by 1 CFR §21.40 of a form like the following:

The citation above refers to volume 50 of the Federal Register, page 12469. Most of the definitions for income taxes come from 26 U.S.C Sections 3401 and 7701, to be precise, but guess what, you won't find pointers in the CFR's or IRS publications back to these original and "foundational" definitions in the U.S. Code. The terms "employer" and "employee" have a much more restrictive meaning in 26 U.S.C. Secs. 3401 and 7701 than they do in the CFR's or the IRS publications. Some definitions, like that for "withholding agent" only appear in the 26 U.S.C Code and not in the 26 CFR. We assume this is the case in order to make the CFR's more confusing for IRS personnel as a way to encourage them to misinterpret the tax code in a manner that advantages the government financially. Also, if the IRS doesn't define their terms, then the concept of "willfulness" as it relates to violating Citizen's rights by wrongfully taking more taxes than is owed becomes less threatening for IRS agents. They can just "claim ignorance" when prosecuted for malfeasance, which is something we citizens could never do as it relates to paying our taxes! This devious tactic is called “plausible deniability”.

The Code of Federal Regulations is derived from the Federal Register and began its existence in 1938. The Federal Register began existence in the year 1935 with the passage of the Federal Register Act, now codified at 44 U.S.C. Chapter 15. There were no C.F.R.’s before that: only intra-agency procedures that were not made public in many cases. All regulations which will affect the general public must be published in the Federal Register at least 30 days before they become effective. Those regulations which do not affect the general public need not be published in the Federal Register. An example of such a regulation might be regulations that only impact federal employees. These need not be published in the Federal Register to be legitimate. This is important because most of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code in the context of natural persons only applies to elected or appointed officers of the United States government and there are no enforcement regulations for these statutes in the CFR’s.

3.12.1 How to Read the Income Tax Regulations

Title 26 contains 799 Parts, or particular subject matters of taxes. Obviously every Section in the Internal Revenue Code and every Regulation cannot be applicable to every particular type of tax. Therefore, the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) is essential for defining, specifically, which Sections of the Code are applicable to which particular type of taxes.

CFR 1.21.9(a) states:

PARTS: “The normal division of a chapter are PARTS consisting of regulations applying to a specific subject matter under the control of the agency.”

The subject matter or Part applicable to the “Individual Income Taxes” is Part 1. Following are examples of a few different types of taxes in the Internal Revenue Code and its implementing Regulations. All Regulations having general applicability to Income taxes must begin with (1.) followed by the corresponding IRC Section number.

Title 26, the Internal Revenue Code, is divided into Sections. For example, §6001 is “Returns and Records”. Now we need to find out “specifically” what particular type of taxes this Section is applicable to, so we go to the Code of Federal Regulations, 26 CFR Volume 5. Here we find the Code Sections in numerical order after a number and a period. For example, §1.6001 should be read as follows:

1. The (1) before the period refers to the Particular type of tax that regulation is applicable to.
2. The number after the period is the Section of the Code that regulation is referring to.

The following Regulations should be read as follows:

Note that if there is no ‘1.’ In front of the Code Section of the Regulation, that Regulation has NO applicability to any type of Individual Income Taxes! However, just because there is a Part 1 Income Tax Regulation does not necessarily mean the particular regulation is applicable to you. Remember, just as there are many particular types of taxes, there are also many types of “Income Taxes,” ie. For the U.S. (federal zone) citizen, the nonresident alien American, and the Corporate Officer under a duty to withhold. Each type of Income Tax has different tax, record keeping, and recording requirements.

3.12.2 Types of Federal Tax Regulations

3.12.2.1 Treasury Regulations

There are three types or classes of regulations governing federal tax matters: legislative, interpretive, and procedural. The first two types are promulgated by the Treasury Department, and are binding on the Treasury and the IRS, while procedural regulations are issued by the IRS and are not always binding on the agency. The source of authority for a regulation determines its precedential value and the formality with which it must be adopted.

Section 553 of the Administrative Procedures Act (codified 5 U.S.C. §553) requires that all "substantive" or legislative regulations be published in final form in the Federal Register at least 30 days prior to their effective date. The purpose of this requirement is to give the public notice of the proposed rule and an opportunity to comment on it. Although neither interpretive regulations nor procedural regulations are subject to these notice provisions, the Treasury Department follows the section 553 requirements when it promulgates interpretive regulations. Regulations that have been proposed by the Treasury Department but not yet adopted as final are known as "proposed regulations". For reasons such as substantial adverse public comment or internal disagreement within the Treasury about the wisdom of a particular proposed regulation, proposed regulations can languish for years in the status of merely proposed and not final rules.

An exception to the notice and comment procedures of 5 U.S.C. section 553 exists for cases in which the agency believes the procedures are "impracticable, unnecessary, or contrary to the public interest." Particularly in the recent past, the Treasury Department has frequently invoked this exception in promulgating temporary regulations for prompt guidance following significant tax legislation. Temporary regulations are often issued in “question-and-answer” form, reflecting the Treasury Department's positions on the most obvious and frequently noted issues generated by the legislation. Temporary regulations must also be issued as proposed regulations, but they expire if not finally adopted within three years of the date they are issued.

3.12.2.2 "Legislative" and "Interpretive" Regulations

Section 7805(a) [of the Internal Revenue Code] directs the Treasury Secretary "or his delegate" to "prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement" of the Code. Regulations promulgated under this grant of authority are known as "interpretive" (or "interpretative") regulations. Regulations are formulated by the IRS and approved by Treasury Department personnel. See Procedural Rules of the IRS, 26 CFR §601.601(a)(1).

In addition to the blanket authority of I.R.C. Section 7805(a), authority to issue regulations is often contained in specific sections of the Code. When regulations are issued pursuant to such specific authorization or direction, they are "legislative" or "substantive" regulations that have the force and effect of law, unless they exceed the scope of the legislation or are unreasonable or were not issued according to prescribed procedures. "legislative" or “substantive” regulations are issued by IRS experts to write rules for highly technical areas.

As an example of a “legislative” regulation, 26 U.S.C. §7872(h)(1) says:

"In General—the Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, including —(A) regulations providing that where, by reason of varying rates of interest, conditional interest payments, waivers of interest, disposition of the lender’s or borrower’s interest in the loan, or other circumstances, the provisions of this section do not carry out the purposes of this section, adjustments to the provisions of this section will be made to the extent necessary to carry out the purposes of this section..."

How can you legally tell the difference between “interpretive” and “legislative” regulations? When a regulation is issued or proposed, the transmittal includes a paragraph indicating the Treasury’s authority for issuing the regulation, either a specific Code section (legislative) or Code section 7805 (interpretive). Courts generally uphold interpretive regulations unless they clearly contravene congressional intent; legislative regulations are virtually unassailable.

3.12.2.3 Procedural Regulations

Regulations describing the organization of the IRS and its "housekeeping" rules are set forth in the IRS Statement of Procedural Rules, which is contained in 26 CFR Part 601. These regulations are preceded by "601" and are cited, for example, as "26 CFR § 601.509," to distinguish them from regulations issued by the Treasury Department. Legislative and interpretive regulations, issued by the Treasury Department, are cited differently, and the number immediately following the § symbol identifies the type of tax provision they implement. Income tax regulations, for example, are preceded by a "1," and are cited as follows: "Reg. §1.61" (which indicates a regulation under section 61 of the Code). Procedural regulations are promulgated by the IRS, not the Treasury Department, and are not subject to the notice-and-comment requirements of the APA [Administrative Procedures Act]. Unlike legislative and interpretive regulations, procedural regulations may have retroactive effect. I.R.C. §7805(b)(6). Procedural regulations are written by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for administrative purposes and do not have the force and effect of law. You may not therefore cite them as a basis for a claim in court because they confer no rights upon you, even if you claim to be a "taxpayer." See:

- Einhorn v. Dewitt, 618 F.2d. 347 (5th Cir. 06/04/1980)
- Luhring v. Glotzbach, 304 F.2d. 560 (4th Cir. 05/25/1962)

Some regulations address matters of procedure, but are not "procedural regulations," as that term is defined above. For example, rules establishing "taxpayer" obligations to file certain forms or furnish certain information are often included in interpretive regulations. When such procedural matters are included in an interpretive or legislative regulation, the Treasury Department follows the APA notice-and-comment rules and the regulations are not "procedural," although they cover matters of procedure. Similarly, regulations interpreting the administrative and procedural sections of the Code, which are cited as "Reg. §§ 301.6001 et seq., are treated as interpretive regulations.

While legislative and interpretive regulations are binding authority for both the Service and taxpayers, the Service will not always be bound by its procedural rules. The Internal Revenue Manual is a lengthy volume of procedures prescribed by the IRS as procedural regulations to be followed by IRS personnel. Generally, procedural rules that affect individuals' rights will be binding on an agency, even if the rules are stricter than the law otherwise requires. Morton v. Ruiz (S.Ct.1974). However, where the procedural regulation was not relied on by the individual, and it had no effect on his conduct, failure by the IRS to comply with the procedural rule does not require that the evidence obtained in violation of the rule be suppressed. United States v. Caceres (S.Ct.1979) (failure to follow procedures in Internal Revenue Manual). Generally, it appears that if the right granted under the procedure is relatively unimportant, and if the relief necessary to correct the failure by the IRS to comply is relatively harsh, there is little likelihood that the taxpayer's challenge to the IRS action will be sustained.

3.12.3 You Cannot Be Prosecuted for Violating an Act Unless You Violate It's Implementing Regulations

"...we think it important to note that the Act's civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of regulations promulgated by the Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone." [California Bankers Ass'n v. Shultz, 416 U.S. 21 (1974)]

"An individual cannot be prosecuted for violating the act unless he violates the implementing regulations." [United States v. Reinis, 794 F. 2d 506 (9th Cir. 1986), United States v. Murphy, 809 F.2d. 1427 (9th Cir. 1987)]

"Criminal penalties...can attach only upon violation of regulations promulgated by the Secretary." [U.S. v. Reinis, 794 F.2d. 506]

"Individual cannot be prosecuted for violating Currency Reporting Act unless he violates the implementing regulations." [31 U.S.C.A. §5311 et. seq.]

CONSPIRACY: "Where regulations...did not impose duty to disclose information, failure to disclose was not conspiracy to defraud government." 18 USCA, 31 U.S.C.A. §5311

"Because Congress has delegated to the Commissioner the power to promulgate 'all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of (the Internal Revenue Code) 26 U.S.C. §7805(a), we must defer to his regulatory interpretations of the Code so long as they are reasonable." [National Muffler Dealers Assn., Inc. v. United States, 440 U.S. 472, 476-477, 99 S.Ct. 1304, 1306-1307, 59 L.Ed.2d. 519.]

"Due process requires that penal statutes define criminal offense with sufficient clarity that the ordinary person can understand what conduct is prohibited." U.S.C.A Const. Amend 5
Without the statute there is no authority for implementing a regulation and without the regulation, no civil or criminal penalties can be imposed. Further regulations cannot change or enlarge the operation of the statute but only clarify it.

“To the extent that the regulations implement the statute, they have the force and effect of law. The regulation implements the statute and cannot vitiate or change the statute…”

[Spreckles v. C.I.R., 119 F.2d. 667]

Under Curley v. U.S., 791 F.Supp. 52 (E.D.N.Y. 1992), at 55, we read:

(7) However, failure to adhere to agency regulations may amount to a denial of due process if the regulations are required by the constitution or statute.” Arzanipour v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 866 F.2d. 743, 746 (5th Cir. 1989).

The type of regulation that must be violated to incur civil or criminal penalties must be either a legislative or interpretive regulation written by the Department of the Treasury. That means it must either be a Part 1 (26 CFR § 1.XXXX) or a Part 301 (26 CFR §301.XXXX) regulation. Part 601 regulations, which apply to Subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code, do NOT qualify as legislative or interpretive regulations for law enforcement because they are procedural in nature and don’t necessarily even apply to the agency (IRS in this case) they are written for in all cases!

The table below provides a list of the ONLY enforcing regulations for Title 26, mostly under Subtitle F, which is Procedures and Administration:

Most noteworthy of the above is that ALL of the implementing and enforcement regulations identified in Subtitle F are associated with Title 27, Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, and NOT Subtitle A Income taxes! There simply are no implementing regulations under the tax imposed in I.R.C. Section 1 that authorize the use of distraint by the Internal Revenue Service. Distrain, also called enforcement, includes the use of levy, assessment, penalties, summons, or collection to enforce a tax. Why? Because there is no statute making anyone liable for the tax! Since the income tax is a
The statute and the enforcement regulations must together form a pair that constitutes the law. If either of the two don’t exist, then the law cannot be enforced!

> Here the statute is not complete by itself, since it merely declares the range of its operation and leaves to its progeny the means to be utilized in the effectuation of its command. But it is the statute which creates the offense of the willful removal of the labels of origin and provides the punishment for violations. The regulations, on the other hand, prescribe the identifying language of the label itself, and assign the resulting tags to their respective geographical areas. Once promulgated, [361 U.S. 431, 438] these regulations, called for by the statute itself, have the force of law, and violations thereof incur criminal prosecutions, just as if all the details had been incorporated into the congressional language. The result is that neither the statute nor the regulations are complete without the other, and only together do they have any force. In effect, therefore, the construction of one necessarily involves the construction of the other.”

> "...the Act’s civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of the regulation promulgated by the Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone...The Government urges that since only those who violate these regulations [not the Code] may incur civil or criminal penalties, it is the actual regulations issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the broad authorizing language of the statute, which are to be tested against the standards of the Fourth Amendment; and that when so tested they are valid.”

> Failure to adhere to agency regulations [by the IRS or other agency] may amount to denial of due process if regulations are required by constitution or statute..."

[Curley v. United States, 791 F.Supp. 52]

> "Although the relevant statute authorized the Secretary to impose such a duty, his implementing regulations did not do so. Therefore we held that there was no duty to disclose..."

[United States v. Murphy, 809 F.2d. 142, 1431]

Based on the foregoing, a government official attempting an enforcement action against those domiciled in states of the Union who are protected by the Constitution has the burden of providing one of the following two forms of legal evidence or the government employee loses its authority to enforce against him and is engaging in a constitutional tort which results in a surrender of official and sovereign immunity on the part of the employee:

1. The government employee produces an implementing regulation published in the Federal Register which authorizes the enforcement action.
2. The government produces legally admissible evidence conforming with the Federal Rules of Evidence which proves that the person who is the subject of the enforcement action is a member of one of the three groups that are specifically exempted from the requirement for publication in the Federal Register, which are:
   2.2. “A matter relating to agency management or personnel or to public property, loans, grants, benefits, or contracts.” 5 U.S.C. §553(a)(2).
   2.3. “Federal agencies or persons in their capacity as officers, agents, or employees thereof”. 5 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1).

Usually, only evidence in the possession of the government which might link a person to membership in any one of the above exempted groups is

1. Information Returns such as IRS Forms W-2, W-4, 1042, 1098, and 1099
2. A tax return filled out by the subject and signed under penalty of perjury. This is legally admissible evidence that you are a “public official”, because EVERYTHING that goes on an IRS form 1040 is “trade or business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”. See the following for proof:
Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

3. An SS-5 form. This proves that the party is a federal benefit recipient who is an “individual” as defined in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2) and “federal personnel” entitled to receive federal retirement benefits as defined in 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(13). Both of these entitled “federal personnel” and “individuals” are government employees or agents, as exhaustively proven in the memorandum of law below:

The Trade or Business Scam, Form #05.001

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3.12.4 Regulations cannot exceed the scope of the statute they are based on

It is very important to realize that a regulation which implements a section of the Internal Revenue Code found in 26 U.S.C. may NOT enlarge or expand the operation of that code section. Executive departments within the federal government only have the authority delegated to them to implement the laws passed by Congress in the I.R.C., but not to expand or enlarge them. In practice, however, this unlawful tactic is commonly done, most notably in the use of definitions found in 26 U.S.C. §7701 and the distraint provisions found in 26 CFR §301.6331. Be on the lookout for illegal regulations, because it almost certainly will be your downfall in any litigation! Being aware of this scam is the key to challenging jurisdiction of the IRS to enforce income taxes. An example of where this trick is used is in 26 CFR §1.1-1, where the Secretary of the Treasury used the word “liable to tax” even though the corresponding section of the Internal Revenue Code in 26 U.S.C. §1 doesn’t make anyone “liable”.

3.12.6 26 CFR §1.861-8(a): Taxable Income

"...The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources and activities under other sections of the Code referred to in this section as operative sections. See paragraph (f)(1) of this section for a list and description of operative sections." (Emphasis added)

26 CFR Sections 1.861 through 1.863 are the implementing regulations that derive from 26 U.S.C. Section 861 discussed earlier in section 3.9.5. You should read 26 U.S.C. §861 and section 3.12.6 before you attempt to understand 26 CFR §1.861, which is the implementing regulation for 26 U.S.C. §861. 26 CFR §1.861 defines the meaning of “source” within 26 U.S.C. §61 and 861. The regulation under discussion, 26 CFR §1.861-8(a), makes reference to 'sources' within, as well as without, the United States. Below are the only sources that we could find listed, from which income must derive, in order for income to be taxable for the purpose of the Federal Income Tax.

Code of Federal Regulations 1.861-8(f)(1)

(i) Overall limitation to the foreign tax credit.

(ii) [Reserved]

(iii) DISC and FSC taxable income. (note: DISC is Direct International Sales Corp, and FSC is a Foreign Sales Corp)

(iv) Effectively connected taxable income. Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States,...

(v) Foreign base company income.

(vi) Other operative sections.
(A) "...foreign source items of tax..."
(B) "...foreign mineral income..."
(C) [Reserved]
(D) "...foreign oil and gas extraction income..."
(E) "...citizens entitled to the benefits of section 931 and the section 936 tax credit..."
(F) "...residents of Puerto Rico..."
(G) "...income tax liability incurred to the Virgin Islands..."
(H) "...income derived from Guam..."
(I) "...China Trade Act corporations..."
(J) "...income of a controlled foreign corporation..."
(K) "...income from the insurance of U.S. risks..."
(L) "...international boycott factor...attributable taxes and income under section 999..."
(M) "...income attributable to the operation of an agreement vessel under section 607 of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936..."

Which of the above 'sources' does your employees' (and/or your) 'income', 'items' or 'wages' derive from?... Interesting... isn't it?  This section shows quite clearly that the average U.S. Citizen with income from the 50 Union states doesn’t owe tax because the income does not come from a taxable source.

Take NOTICE: The IRS has claimed in a case in South Carolina that § 861 has nothing to do with gross income in § 61. This did not last long as the Department of Justice was quickly reaching for things within § 861, without regarding the full effect of the attached regulations, to try to support their frail position. This seems to open up the application of the statute and regulations into the argument of gross income before the court and the public. If that were not enough, they also have to try to defeat this:

26 CFR §1.861-8T(d)(2)(ii)(A)

"In general. For purposes of this section, the term "exempt income" means any income that is in whole or in part, exempt, excluded, or eliminated for federal income tax purposes." (Emphasis added)

3.12.8 26 CFR §1.861-8T(d)(2)(iii): Income Not Exempt from Taxation
This section shows quite clearly that the only income that is not exempt from federal taxes (income for which citizens are liable for tax) is foreign income. Notice that they don’t explicitly mention that income of citizens from domestic sources is NOT taxable? The reason they don’t make this clear is because they don’t want you to know! Below is the regulation:

(iii) Income that is not considered tax exempt.

The following items are not considered to be exempt, eliminated, or excluded income and, thus, may have expenses, losses, or other deductions allocated and apportioned to them:

(A) In the case of a foreign taxpayer (including a foreign sales corporation (FSC)) computing its effectively connected income, gross income (whether domestic or foreign source) which is not effectively connected to the conduct of a United States trade or business;

(B) In computing the combined taxable income of a DISC or FSC and its related supplier, the gross income of a DISC or a FSC;

(C) For all purposes under subchapter N of the Code, including the computation of combined taxable income of a possessions corporation and its affiliates under section 936(b), the gross income of a possessions corporation for which a credit is allowed under section 936(a); and

(D) Foreign earned income as defined in section 911 and the regulations thereunder (however, the rules of section 1.911-6 do not require the allocation and apportionment of certain deductions, including home mortgage interest, to foreign earned income for purposes of determining the deductions disallowed under section 911(d)(6)).

This is of further importance as the definition of "wages" in §3401(a) to be withheld from in accordance with §3402, excludes all remuneration paid to U.S. Citizens by employers, except income which is deemed to be gross income under §911, or other income related to foreign and U.S. possession sources.

This law confirms our viewpoint, in simple terms according to Black’s Law Dictionary, that if the income in question comes from a source ‘excluded' from the law, and thus not mentioned within the law as being taxable, it cannot then meet the source requirements of § 861, its regulations, and thus section 61(a) to be "Gross income", and is by definition EXEMPT.

3.12.9 26 CFR §1.861-8(f)1 Taxable sources

This extremely important section of code identifies taxable sources for ALL other subsections, including:

- Income from sources "within the U.S." under 26 U.S.C. §861
- Income from sources without the U.S. under 26 U.S.C. §862.
- Income "effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States" under 26 U.S.C. §871(b)(1) and 882(a)(1).

This section is the lynchpin of all arguments about taxable sources no matter where you live, and is the mother of all tax loopholes. The section provides examples of how to compute taxable income as well.
(i) [Reserved]

(iii) DISC and FSC taxable income. Sections 925 and 994 provide rules for determining the taxable income of a FSC and DISC, respectively, with respect to qualified sales and leases of export property and qualified services. The combined taxable income method available for determining a DISC’s taxable income provides, without consideration of export promotion expenses, that the taxable income of the DISC shall be 50 percent of the combined taxable income of the DISC and the related supplier derived from sales and leases of export property and from services. In the FSC context, the taxable income of the FSC equals 23 percent of the combined taxable income of the FSC and the related supplier. Pursuant to regulations under section 925 and 994, this section provides rules for determining the deductions to be taken into account in determining combined taxable income, except to the extent modified by the marginal costing rules set forth in the regulations under sections 925(b)(2) and 994(b)(2) if used by the taxpayer. See Examples (22) and (23) of paragraph (g) of this section. In addition, the computation of combined taxable income is necessary to determine the applicability of the section 925(d) limitation and the “no loss” rules of the regulations under sections 925 and 994.

(iv) Effectively connected taxable income. Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, under sections 871(b)(1) and 882(a)(1), on taxable income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. Such taxable income is determined in most instances by initially determining, under section 864(c), the amount of gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. Pursuant to sections 873 and 882(c), this section is applicable for purposes of determining the deductions from such gross income (other than the deduction for interest expense allowed to foreign corporations (see Sec. 1.882-5)) which are to be taken into account in determining taxable income. See example 21 of paragraph (g) of this section.

(v) Foreign base company income. Section 954 defines the term “foreign base company income” with respect to controlled foreign corporations. Section 954(b)(5) provides that in determining foreign base company income the gross income shall be reduced by the deductions of the controlled foreign corporation “properly allocable to such income”. This section provides rules for identifying which deductions are properly allocable to foreign base company income.

(vi) Other operative sections. The rules provided in this section also apply in determining—

(A) The amount of foreign source items of tax preference under section 58(g) determined for purposes of the minimum tax;

(B) The amount of foreign mineral income under section 901(e);

(C) [Reserved]

(D) The amount of foreign oil and gas extraction income and the amount of foreign oil related income under section 907;

(E) The tax base for citizens entitled to the benefits of section 931 and the section 936 tax credit of a domestic corporation which has an election in effect under section 936;

(F) The exclusion for income from Puerto Rico for residents of Puerto Rico under section 933;

(G) The limitation under section 934 on the maximum reduction in income tax liability incurred to the Virgin Islands;

(H) The income derived from Guam by an individual who is subject to section 935;

(I) The special deduction granted to China Trade Act corporations under section 941;

(J) The amount of certain U.S. source income excluded from the subpart F income of a controlled foreign corporation under section 952(b);

(K) The amount of income from the insurance of U.S. risks under section 953(b)(5);

(L) The international boycott factor and the specifically attributable taxes and income under section 999; and

(2) Application to more than one operative section. (i) Where more than one operative section applies, it may be necessary for the taxpayer to apply this section separately for each applicable operative section. In such a case, the taxpayer is required to use the same method of allocation and the same principles of apportionment for all operative sections.

(ii) When expenses, losses, and other deductions that have been properly allocated and apportioned between combined gross income of a related supplier and a DISC or former DISC and residual gross income, regardless of which of the administrative pricing methods of section 994 has been applied, such deductions are not also allocated and apportioned to gross income consisting of distributions from the DISC or former DISC attributable to income of the DISC or former DISC as determined under the administrative pricing methods with respect to DISC or former DISC taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. Accordingly, Example (22) of paragraph (g) of this section does not apply to distributions from a DISC or former DISC with respect to DISC or former DISC taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. This rule does not apply to the extent that the taxable income of the DISC or former DISC is determined under the section 994(a)(3) transfer pricing method thereunder which require separate treatment of certain types of income. See example 3 of paragraph (g) of this section for one example of the application of this section to the overall limitation.
method. In addition, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, in the case of expenses, losses, and other deductions that have been properly allocated and apportioned between combined gross income of a related supplier and a FSC and residual gross income, regardless of which of the administrative pricing methods of section 925 has been applied, such deductions are not also allocated and apportioned to gross income consisting of distributions from the FSC or former FSC which are attributable to the foreign trade income of the FSC or former FSC as determined under the administrative pricing methods. This rule does not apply to the extent that the foreign trade income of the FSC or former FSC is determined under the section 925(a)(3) transfer pricing method. See Example (23) of paragraph (g) of this section.

(3) Special rules of section 863(b)---(i) In general. Special rules under section 863(b) provide for the application of rules of general apportionment provided in Secs. 1.863-3 to 1.863-5, to worldwide taxable income in order to attribute part of such worldwide taxable income to U.S. sources and the remainder of such worldwide taxable income to foreign sources. The activities specified in section 863(b) are---

(A) Transportation or other services rendered partly within and partly without the United States,

(B) Sales of personal property produced by the taxpayer within and sold without the United States, or produced by the taxpayer without and sold within the United States, and

(C) Sales within the United States of personal property purchased within a possession of the United States. In the instances provided in Secs. 1.863-3 and 1.863-4 with respect to the activities described in (A), (B), and (C) of this subdivision, this section is applicable only in determining worldwide taxable income attributable to these activities.

(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources. Each of these four provisions applies independently. Where a deduction has been allocated and apportioned to income under one of these four provisions, the deduction shall not again be allocated and apportioned to gross income under any of the other three provisions. However, two or more of these provisions may have to be applied at the same time to determine the proper allocation and apportionment of a deduction. The special rules under section 863(b) take precedence over the general rules of Code sections 861, 862 and 863(a). For example, where a deduction is allocable in whole or in part to gross income to which section 863(b) applies, such deduction or part thereof shall not otherwise be allocated under section 861, 862, or 863(a). However, where the gross income to which the deduction is allocable includes both gross income to which section 863(b) applies and gross income to which section 861, 862, or 863(a) applies, more than one section must be applied at the same time in order to determine the proper allocation and apportionment of the deduction.

(4) Adjustments made under other provisions of the Code--(i) In general. If an adjustment which affects the taxpayer is made under section 482 or any other provision of the Code, it may be necessary to recompute the allocations and apportionments required by this section in order to reflect changes resulting from the adjustment. The recomputation made by the District Director shall be made using the same method of allocation and apportionment as was originally used by the taxpayer, provided such method as originally used conforms with paragraph (c)(5) of this section and, in light of the adjustment, such method does not result in a material distortion. In addition to adjustments which would be made aside from this section, adjustments to the taxpayer's income and deductions which would not otherwise be made may be required before applying this section in order to prevent a distortion in determining taxable income from a particular source of activity. For example, if an item included as a part of the cost of goods sold has been improperly attributed to specific sales, and, as a result, gross income under one of the operative sections referred to in paragraph (f)(1) of this section is improperly determined, it may be necessary for the District Director to make an adjustment to the cost of goods sold, consistent with the principles of this section, before applying this section. Similarly, if a domestic corporation transfers the stock in its foreign subsidiaries to a domestic subsidiary and the parent continues to incur expenses in connection with the supervision of the foreign subsidiaries (see paragraph (e)(4) of this section), it may be necessary for the District Director to make an allocation under section 482 with respect to such expenses before making allocations and apportionments required by this section, even though the section 482 allocation might not otherwise be made.

c) Determination of taxable income. The taxpayer’s taxable income from sources within or without the United States will be determined under the rules of Secs. 1.861-8 through 1.861-14T for determining taxable income from sources within the United States. (Emphasis added)

Any argument that 861 has nothing to do with section 61 appears to be quite ridiculous, as §1.861-8(a)(3) displays the same list of items as § 61(a), and § 861 uses the same word "source" as used in both the 16th Amendment and section 61. In review of 1.863-1(c) we can ask the question to the search engine, is there another provision of law that is used for determining taxable or gross income from sources within the U.S.?

3.12.11 26 CFR §1.6661-6 (b): Waiver of Penalty

26 CFR §1.6661-6(b)

(a) In general.

The Commissioner may waive all or part of the penalty imposed by section 6661 on a showing by the taxpayer that there was reasonable cause for the understatement (or part thereof) and that the taxpayer acted in good faith. The circumstances taken into account in determining whether to waive the penalty are described in paragraph (b) of this section. In addition, paragraph (c) of this section describes circumstances in which the penalty will always be waived.

(b) Reasonable cause and good faith.

In making a determination regarding waiver of the penalty under section 6661, the most important factor in all cases not described in paragraph (c) of this section will be the extent of the taxpayer’s effort to assess the taxpayer’s proper tax liability under the law. For example, reliance on a position contained in a proposed regulation would ordinarily constitute reasonable cause and good faith. In addition, circumstances that may indicate reasonable cause and good faith include an honest misunderstanding of fact or law that is reasonable in light of the experience, knowledge, and education of the taxpayer. Moreover, a computational or transcriptional error would, in general, indicate reasonable cause and good faith. Reliance on an information return or on the advice of a professional (such as an appraiser, an attorney, or an accountant) would not necessarily constitute a showing of reasonable cause and good faith. Similarly, reliance on facts that, unknown to the taxpayer, are incorrect would not necessarily constitute a showing of reasonable cause and good faith. Reliance on an information return, professional advice, or other facts, however, would constitute a showing of reasonable cause and good faith if, under all the circumstances, such reliance was reasonable and the taxpayer acted in good faith. For example, reliance on erroneous information, (such as an error relating to the cost of property, the date property was placed in service, or the amount of opening or closing inventory) inadvertently included in data compiled by the various divisions of a multidivisional corporation or in financial books and records prepared by those divisions would, in general, indicate reasonable cause and good faith, provided the corporation had internal controls and procedures, reasonable under the circumstances, that were designed to identify factual errors. Accordingly, waiver of the section 6661 penalty attributable to an understatement caused by such an error would be appropriate. Similarly, a taxpayer’s reliance on erroneous information reported on a Form 1099 would indicate reasonable cause and good faith, and waiver would be appropriate, if the taxpayer did not know or have reason to know that the information was incorrect. Generally, a taxpayer would know or have reason to know that the information on a Form 1099 is incorrect only if such information is inconsistent with other information reported to the taxpayer or is inconsistent with the taxpayer’s knowledge concerning the amount and rate of return of the payor’s obligation. In the case of an understatement that is related to an item on the return of a pass-through entity (as defined in section 1.6661-4(e)), the good faith or lack of good faith of the entity generally will be imputed to the taxpayer that has the understatement.
Any good faith imputed to the taxpayer under the preceding sentence, however, may be refuted by other factors indicating lack of good faith on the part of the taxpayer.

This section of the Treasury Regulations defines the methods, forms, and terms used for implementing employment taxes. It is based on 26 U.S.C. §3405. What the code doesn't emphasize anywhere is that this section ONLY APPLIES to the following defined entities. Note the definitions from the code sections are in italics, and my comments are in regular font:

<td>Employee status under common law. Generally, a worker who performs services for you is your employee if you can control what will be done and how it will be done. This is so even when you give the employee freedom of action. What matters is that you have the right to control the details of how the services are performed. See Pub. 5-A, Employer's Supplemental Tax Guide, for more information on how to determine whether an individual providing services is an independent contractor or an employee. Generally, people in business for themselves are not employees. For example, doctors, lawyers, veterinarians, construction contractors, and others in an independent trade in which they offer their services to the public are usually not employees. However, if the business is incorporated, corporate officers who work in the business are employees. If an employer-employee relationship exists, it does not matter what it is called. The employee may be called an agent or independent contractor. It also does not matter how payments are measured or paid, what they are called, or if the employee works full or part time.</td>

<td>are paid in order that the status of employer exist. Thus, for purposes of withholding, a person for whom an individual has performed past services for which he is still receiving wages from such person is an employer. (c) An employer may be an individual, a corporation, a partnership, a trust, an estate, a joint-stock company, an association, or an syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or other unincorporated organization, group or entity. A trust or estate, rather than the fiduciary acting for or on behalf of the trust or estate, is generally the employer. (d) The term employer embraces not only individuals and organizations engaged in trade or business, but organizations exempt from income tax, such as religious and charitable organizations, educational institutions, clubs, social organizations and societies, as well as the governments of the United States, the States, Territories, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia, including their agencies, instrumentalities, and political subdivisions. (e) The term employer also means (except for the purpose of the definition of wages) any person paying wages on behalf of a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States (including Puerto Rico as if a part of the United States). (f) If the person for whom the services are or were performed does not have legal control of the payment of the wages for such services, the term employer means (except for the purpose of the definition of wages) the person having such control. For example, where wages, such as certain types of pensions or retired pay, are paid by a trust and the person for whom the services were performed has no legal control over the payment of such wages, the trust is the employer. (g) The term employer also means a person making a payment of a supplemental unemployment compensation benefit which is treated under paragraph (b)(14) of Sec. 31.3401(a)-1 as if it were wages. For example, if supplemental unemployment compensation benefits are paid from a trust which was created under the terms of a collective bargaining agreement, the trust shall generally be deemed to be the employer. However, if the person making such payment is acting solely as an agent for another person, the term employer shall mean such other person and not the person actually making the payment. (h) It is a basic purpose to centralize in the employer the responsibility for withholding, returning, and paying the tax, and for furnishing the statements required under section 6051 and Sec. 31.6051-1. The special definitions of the term employer in paragraphs (e), (f), and (g) of this section are designed solely to meet special or unusual situations. They are not intended as a departure from the basic purpose.</td>

Did you notice that this code does NOT say that the district director may "order" the agent to withhold? If they put these unambiguous definitions from the U.S. Code at the beginning of the section, do you think most people would read and heed it? Instead, they put the definitions of "withholding agent" NOT in the CFR's but deep at the end of the U.S.C, where people aren't likely to look at it. Most other titles of the U.S. Code put the definitions at the beginning of the title. In implementing the U.S. Code through the CFR, you will note that the Treasury department left the definition of employee intact but considerably broadened the definition of employer. By what legal authority did the Law Revision Counsel of the House of Representatives, who writes and updates the Internal Revenue Code, expand the applicability of the Internal Revenue Code by redefining these terms? There is none! The Treasury and the IRS have no constitutional or statutory authority to broaden the definition of any term used in the U.S. Code when applying it in the CFR’s. Instead, they had to rely on a trick with the definition of the word “include” documented in section 3.9.1.8 as their justification. Basically, they had to say: “The U.S. Codes don’t define everything that is taxable and are not restrictive, and we can add whatever we want.”

It’s obvious that the Treasury and the IRS want you to believe that their authority is unlimited and unquestionable, starting with how they choose to define the word “includes” in the I.R.C. We believe they simply wanted to have more leverage in the use of scare and F.U.D. tactics against employers so they could prevent a Citizen revolt in the process of refusing to sign W-4’s that authorize the collection of taxes. After all, why would an employee want to argue with their employer (look a gift horse in the mouth) and risk their job by dragging their employer into court to litigate the improper application of the tax code by their employer and the wrongful taking of taxes. An old Chinese proverb sums this situation up very wisely:

Note, however, that the term "employer" at 26 CFR §31.3401(d)-1 in the CFR still depends on and is derived from the definition of employee in the U.S. Code, and therefore it can be no more expansive than the original definition of employer found in the U.S.C. This kind of devious legal chicanery is the reason why even to this day employers still incorrectly report "gross income" in their tax withholdings reported to the IRS, and the IRS wants to keep it that way!.

(c) Generally, physicians, lawyers, dentists, veterinarians, contractors, subcontractors, public stenographers, auctioneers, and others who follow an independent trade, business, or profession, in which they offer their services to the public, are not employees.

Now isn’t that interesting? You’re not an employee after all! So why does your “employer” withhold taxes on you? They don’t have the legal authority to do it, if you aren’t an employee as defined by the Internal Revenue Code!

3.13 Treasury Decisions and Orders

3.13.1 Treasury Delegation of Authority Order 150-37: Always Question Authority!

What is a Treasury Department Delegation of Authority Order (also called a TDO)? In America, we have a system of law and order. The People delegate powers to the appropriate branch of government, through the Constitution of the United States, and that power is then delegated down to the officer or employee actually exercising the power. Otherwise, there is no authority. Without a valid, properly executed, Delegation of Authority Order, applicable to you, anyone with a badge from a security guard supply house could steal your property and violate your rights.

Billie Murdock of Salt Lake City, a brave female Patriot, has learned to always question authority. She has done a tremendous amount of valuable research on Delegation of Authority.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
Billie received a Summons from the IRS. She went to the interview but before she would provide any information she asked, "Before I give you these books and records I would like to see a copy of the Delegation of Authority Order from the Secretary of the Treasury that authorized you to summon me with my books and records.

The meeting was over almost immediately. The IRS stated that they needed to contact their District Counsel. Their Counsel advised the IRS to re-issue the summons, without acknowledging the existence of a Delegation of Authority Order.

Although there is a legal requirement to maintain all Delegation of Authority Order at the local District IRS office the agents would not provide Billie with a copy of one. The Commerce Clearinghouse Internal Revenue Manuel, Volume 1, states as follows:

"Each regional and district office and service center should maintain at least one complete and annotated file of all Delegations of Authority(s) [DOA] made to such office and by such office."

"Billie Murdock would not be ignored. After not obtaining a copy of the Delegation of Authority Order from her local office, she decided to fly directly to the Department of the Treasury in Washington D.C.. Billie knew the number of the alleged Delegation Order for Summons, which the local IRS would not provide for her, was Treasury Delegation Order No. 150-37 When Billie landed in Washington D.C., she went directly to the Department of the Treasury who sent her to the National IRS office. She told the clerk, "Hi, I'm here to get a copy of Treasury Delegation Order 150-37." The clerk responded by saying, "No problem, I'll have it for you in a minute." Twenty five minutes later the same clerk returned with no Delegation Order and stated, "Mrs. Murdock, I'm authorized to tell you that the Order does exist but I can't give you a copy or tell you why." Unbelievable but true!

Further, this order has never been published in the Federal Register, pursuant to 44 U.S.C. Sec. 1501. While there is no lawful requirement to publish DOAs for inhabitants of U.S. Territories, all Laws and delegation orders, which are binding upon the Citizens of the 50 Republic states, must be published in the Federal Register and no such Citizen can be adversely affected or bound by an unpublished order. The IRS doesn't want Citizens of the 50 Republic states to see the collection of Delegation Orders because they are only applicable in U.S. Territories and tax treaty countries. They provide absolutely zero authority in the 50 Republic states!

Treasury Department Order 150-42, dated 7/27/56, 21 Fed. Reg. 5852 delegated the following limited authority to the Commissioner:

"The Commissioner shall, to the extent of the authority vested in him, proved for the administration of United States internal revenue laws in the Panama Canal Zone Puerto Rico the Virgin Islands."

On Feb. 27, 1986 the Federal Register (51 Fed. Reg. 9571) published the following Treasury Department Order No. 150-01:

"The commissioner shall, to the extent of authority otherwise vested in him, provide for the administration of the United States internal revenue laws in the U.S. Territories and insular possessions and other authorized areas of the world." [These areas include countries with which the U.S. has Tax Treaties in force and DO NOT include the 50 Republic states.]

Billie Murdock then returned home and wrote up an Affidavit about her meeting with the Clerk at the National IRS Office.

With this ammunition, Billie began to smell fraud and returned to her local IRS office to meet with the same Revenue Agent and his Group Manager. This time she brought a Court Reporter. Again she asked the loaded question, "Do you have the authority to summon me here?" The Revenue agent aggressively responded in a threatening manner, "We sure do!" The Group Manager, however, was cowering and reached over and touched the agent on the shoulder and said, "No we don't." The agent lost his composure and stuttered, "What do you mean, we don't?" "She's right," the manager interrupted, "We don't have the authority to summon her...pardon us for interrupting you Mrs. Murdock, this meeting is over."

The IRS was still not ready to completely give up and the U.S. Attorney tried his luck at intimidating Mrs. Murdock by filing a Petition in District Court in Salt Lake City. Billie filed a Response Brief with supporting evidence that no Delegation of Authority Order, applicable to her, existed. In less than 36 hours the Government withdrew their Petition and closed the case. Billie had the education and courage to call the bluff of the IRS!

Following is the source for Paul Harvey's nation-wide announcement that filing a 1040 Form was voluntary.
Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

Conklin v. U.S.A.
FILING A 1040 IS VOLUNTARY
by William T. Conklin, Denver, Colorado

The tenth Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled in Conklin v. U.S.A. (94-1213) that the filing of tax returns is not compelled or required. Their decision is unpublished.

I discovered about fifteen years ago that a mandatory requirement to file a 1040 Return would be unconstitutional to the extent that it would require a Citizen to waive their Fifth Amendment rights.

About ten years ago I started offering a $50,000 reward to anyone who could show me: (1) What statute in the Internal Revenue Code makes me liable to pay the income tax? (2) How I can file a 1040 Return without waiving my Fifth Amendment Rights?

Although many people have applied for the reward; no one has answered the question. The famous Attorney Melvin Belli applied for the reward and backed down when I explained the law to him. Another man sued me in Federal Court for the reward and I won and got costs against him!

About eight years ago I raised this issue and filed suit in Federal Court. The judge sat on the case for five years before ruling against me. He told me in open court that if he ruled in my favor he would overturn the income tax system.

He ruled that the Fifth Amendment does not apply because filing 1040 returns is not required or compelled! (The opposite of compelled is voluntary.) The Tenth Circuit upheld his decision. I have won four published cases against the IRS. The cites are:

- U.S. v. Church of World Peace, 878 F.2d. 1281
- Tavery v. United States, 897 F. 2d 1032.
- Church of World Peace, Inc. v. IRS’ 715 F. 2d 492
- Conklin v. United States, 812 F.2d. 1318

3.13.2 Treasury Decision Number 2313: March 21, 1916

This document was published following the Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad and was meant to clarify the basis for assessing income taxes on all individuals. Here are a few excerpted quotes from T.D. 2313 in reference to the Brushaber decision:

"...it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest...and dividends is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913. The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens...shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on...Form 1040..."

[Treasury Decision 2313]

So there you have it. The Treasury Department stated that you are to file Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal". So don't forget to do that next April 15th! Of course, since you'll be signing Form 1040 under penalties of perjury and stating that every material fact is 100% correct to the best of your knowledge, and since the commission of perjury is a felony that attaches criminal fines and penalties, be sure you really are filing Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal"!

By reading Internal Revenue Code section 871(a) [also called 26 U.S.C. §871(a) ], we see that it imposes a tax of 30% on the amount received by non-resident aliens from sources within the United States.

Code section 871(b) states that the nonresident alien shall be taxable under code section 1, thus authorizing the use of the charts in section 1 to compute and reduce his tax, so he can get a tax refund from the 30% which is withheld under the provisions of section 1441.
Also, under section 874(a), the nonresident alien is entitled to the benefit of deductions and credits by filing or having his agent file, a 1040, as stated in T.D. 2313. Of course, this has nothing to do with a Citizen!

This case involved a federal prosecution for a murder committed on board the Warship, Independence, anchored in the harbor of Boston, Massachusetts. The defense complained that only the state had jurisdiction to prosecute and argued that the federal Circuit Courts had no jurisdiction of this crime supposedly committed within the federal government’s admiralty jurisdiction. In argument before the Supreme Court, counsel for the United States admitted as follows:

> "The exclusive jurisdiction which the United States have in forts and dock-yards ceded to them, is derived from the express assent of the states by whom the cessions are made. It could be derived in no other manner; because without it, the authority of the state would be supreme and exclusive therein.”
> [3 Wheat., at 350, 351]

In holding that the State of Massachusetts had jurisdiction over the crime, the Court held:

> "What, then, is the extent of jurisdiction which a state possesses?"

> "We answer, without hesitation, the jurisdiction of a state is co-extensive with its territory; co-extensive with its legislative power," 3 Wheat., at 386, 387.

> "The article which describes the judicial power of the United States is not intended for the cession of territory or of general jurisdiction. ... Congress has power to exercise exclusive jurisdiction over this district, and over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards, and other needful buildings.

> "It is observable that the power of exclusive legislation (which is jurisdiction) is united with cession of territory, which is to be the free act of the states. It is difficult to compare the two sections together, without feeling a conviction, not to be strengthened by any commentary on them, that, in describing the judicial power, the framers of our constitution had not in view any cession of territory; or, which is essentially the same, of general jurisdiction.” 3 Wheat., at 388.

Thus in Bevans, the Court established a principle that federal jurisdiction extends only over the areas wherein it possesses the power of exclusive legislation under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution, and this is a principle incorporated into all subsequent decisions regarding the extent of federal jurisdiction. To hold otherwise would destroy the purpose, intent and meaning of the entire U.S. Constitution. This ruling was also significant, because it divides the United States into what we call the “federal zone”, which includes the District of Columbia, U.S. Possessions, and Territories on the one hand, and the 50 Union states on the other hand. This issue is very important and explains the definitions of “State” and “United States” found in sections 3.9.1.20-3.9.1.24.

When Congress is operating in its exclusive jurisdiction over the District of Columbia, the territories, and enclaves, it is important to remember that it has full authority to enact legislation as private acts pertaining to its boundaries, and it is not a state of the union of states because it exists solely by virtue of the compact/constitution that created it. The constitution does not say that the District of Columbia must guarantee a Republic form of Government to its own subject citizens within its territories. (See Hepburn & Dundas v. Ellzey, 6 U.S. 445(1805); Glaeser v. Acacia Mut. Life Ass’n., 55 F.Supp., 925 (1944); Long v. District of Columbia, 820 F.2d. 409 (D.C. Cir. 1987); Americana of Puerto Rico, Inc. v. Kaplus, 368 F.2d. 431 (1966), among others).
"The idea prevails with some -- indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar -- that we have in this country substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution, with all its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise."

The Constitution provides limited powers to federal government over the state Citizens. The federal government has unlimited powers over federal citizens because it is acting outside of the Constitution. Administrative laws are private acts and are not applicable to state Citizens. The Internal Revenue Code is administrative law.

3.14.2 1883: Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746

"Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document [the Declaration of Independence] is the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant, the right any lawful business or profession, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their faculties, so as to give them their highest enjoyment. It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND INVIOABLE..."

[Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884)]

Authors notes: A privilege is taxable, a RIGHT is not, that’s why they had to take off the POLL TAX. A tax on property is DIRECT TAX, and constitutionally MUST BE APPORTIONED. The Corporate Excise Tax of 1909 was a 2% tax on PROFITS OF CORPORATIONS. The Supreme Court had, in Pollock v. Farmers Loan and Trust, in 1894, ruled as UNCONSTITUTIONAL the EXACT SAME KIND OF TAX MOST AMERICANS ARE NOW PAYING! [A direct tax without apportionment.] This decision has NEVER been overturned!

Both BEFORE and AFTER the sixteenth amendment passed?, THE COURTS SAID INCOME WAS CORPORATE PROFIT! The Separation of powers doctrine says only CONGRESS can collect a tax! This is part of the message that the PATRIOTS of this country have been trying to tell you for the last 30 years!! The predicted income tax rate of 80-90% early next century is SLAVERY!! and IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL!!!! No one believes us, they think we’re a bunch of gun toting, beer drinking rednecks!!

"The laws of Congress in respect to those matters do not extend into the territorial limits of the states, but have force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government."

[Caha v. United States, 152 U.S. 211 (1894)]

This case established that the Congress has a right to make laws only to those places within its jurisdiction. The only places it has exclusive jurisdiction over are:

1. U.S. territories, such as Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.
2. The District of Columbia.

This means that they can’t write laws that extend into the territorial limits of the states. This issue is very significant when we talk about the need to identify “sources” for taxation. A “source” applies a tax to a geographical location. This case also explains why there must be a section in the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C. Section 861) that identifies taxable “sources”.

This case was about a man named Charles Pollock, a Citizen of Massachusetts, who owned stock in Farmer’s Loan and Trust Company. He was upset with the fiduciaries of the company because they were paying DIRECT a tax of 2 percent levied on them by the U.S. government, and that reduced his dividends. He thought it was unconstitutional that the U.S. Government could assess a direct tax on the corporation, and took the case to court in prevent the U.S. Government from assessing income taxes on the corporation. The attorney who challenged the Income Tax Act of 1894 in this lawsuit, Joseph H. Choate, told the supreme Court about the income tax in question:
“The act of Congress which we are impugning [challenging as false] before you is Communist* in its purposes and tendencies.”

*NOTE: A progressive “graduated” tax system is one of the planks of the Communist Manifesto. The American direct taxing system is based upon “equal apportionment.

Below are excerpts from the judges findings relative to the law that imposed the tax:

“Nothing can be clearer than that what the constitution intended to guard against was the exercise by the general government of the power of directly taxing persons and property within any state through a majority made up from the other states. It is true that the effect of requiring direct taxes to be apportioned among the states in proportion to their population is necessarily that the amount of taxes on the individual [157 U.S. 429, 583] taxpayer in a state having the taxable subject-matter to a larger extent in proportion to its population than another state has, would be less than in such other state; but this inequality must be held to have been contemplated, and was manifestly designed to operate to restrain the exercise of the power of direct taxation to extraordinary emergencies, and to prevent an attack upon accumulated property by mere force of numbers.

... It is the duty of the court in this case simply to determine whether the income tax now before it does or does not belong to the class of direct taxes, and if it does, to decide the constitutional question which follows . . .

First. That the law in question, in imposing a tax on the income or rents of real estate, imposes a tax upon the real estate itself, and in imposing a tax on the interest or other income of bonds or other personal property, held for the purposes of income or ordinarily yielding income, imposes a tax upon the personal estate itself; that such tax is a direct tax, and void because imposed without regard to the rule of apportionment: and that by reason thereof the whole law is invalidated.

Second. That the law is invalid, because imposing indirect taxes in violation of the constitutional requirement of uniformity, and therein also in violation of the implied limitation upon taxation that all tax laws must apply equally, impartially, and uniformly to all similarly situated. Under the second head, it is contended that the rule of uniformity is violated, in that the taxe taxes the income of certain corporations, companies, and associations, no matter how created or organized, at a higher rate than the incomes of individuals or partnerships derived from precisely similar property or business; in that it exempts from the operation of the act and from the burden of taxation numerous corporations, companies, and associations having similar property and carrying on similar business to those expressly taxed; in that it denies to individuals deriving their income from shares in certain corporations, companies, and associations the benefit of the exemption of $ 4,000 granted to other persons interested in similar property and business; in the exemption of $4,000; in the exemption of building and loan associations, savings banks, mutual life, fire, marine, and accident insurance companies, existing solely for the pecuniary profit of their members, these and other exemptions being alleged to be purely arbitrary and capricious, justified by no public purpose, and of such magnitude as to invalidate the entire enactment; and in other particulars. “

The supreme Court opinion written by Justice Field, for this historic decision, concluded with the following extremely prophetic words:

“Here I close my opinion. I could not say less in view of questions of such gravity that they go down to the very foundations of the government. If the provisions of the Constitution can be set aside by an act of Congress, where is the course of usurpation to end?

The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger and more sweeping, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing intensity and bitterness. “

This case was significant because it eliminated the U.S. Government’s right to assess DIRECT corporate and individual taxes based on rents, real estate, or incomes. In the Brushaber v. Union Pacific R.R., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), the Supreme Court analyzed the findings in this case, and stated:

Moreover in addition the Conclusion reached in the Pollock Case did not in any degree involve holding that income taxes generically and necessarily came within the class of direct taxes on property, but on the contrary recognized the fact that taxation on income was in its nature an excise entitled to be enforced as such unless and until it was concluded that to enforce it would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard form and consider substance alone and hence subject the tax to the regulation as to apportionment which otherwise as an excise would not apply to it.
3.14.5  1900: Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41

The U.S. Supreme Court in Knowlton v. Moore ruled that:

“Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange.”

3.14.6  1901: Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244

In 1901 there was a case that came up in front of the Supreme Court. It is called Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244. It was a case about exports from Puerto Rico, which was a territory, and part of the area congress had exclusive legislative authority over. The Court said:

“Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to ‘guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government’ (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of Webster, ‘a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them,’ Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President. It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi, Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights.”

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

Note that they are not talking here about Constitutional protections for the land. The Constitution protects PEOPLE!

This was confirmed by another case called Hooven v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 674.

SO, IF YOU LIVE IN THE "UNITED STATES", OR ARE A "citizen" OF THE "UNITED STATES" AND a “resident” (by election/choice or by actual presence), THE CONSTITUTION AND BILL OF RIGHTS DO NOT APPLY TO YOU!

The outcome of this case is precisely the reason why the federal government has no jurisdiction over employers to force them to tax people they are paying wages to in the United States of America (more specifically, the District of Columbia or Puerto Rico, but not the 50 Union states). That is where the requirements listed in 26 U.S.C. §861 come from, which specify that the only thing that qualifies as "gross income" from a taxable source is foreign income from a taxable “source” indicated in Part I of 26 CFR or income from the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and other parts of the “federal zone”. Keep in mind that the 50 Union states are also considered “foreign” with respect to the U.S. Government, because they are not part of the same political unit as the federal unit.

You might be tempted to think at this point:

“Well, it sounds from the above case like there is some kind of federal conspiracy here to deprive people of their rights!”

Some of that may be true, but there may actually also be legitimate and good reasons for not applying constitutional protections to territories and possessions of the United States and other parts of the “federal zone”. Let’s list a few of these reasons here:

1. The United States is responsible for military action against other countries and our military. If they win a war and take over some territory, then that area stays a territory until they elect to be a new “State”, just like Hawaii and Alaska did.
2. Before an area becomes a U.S. territory or possession, it was a foreign country. Chances are good that when it was a foreign country, the citizens used to have their own laws and culture, and that culture may neither respect nor be used to the constitutional protections we have in the United States. The citizens may revolt if we try to impose our full legal system upon them. Therefore, territories and possessions can be and often are under martial or military rule. Martial law cannot be maintained unless constitutional protections are suspended, because there is anarchy and a state of emergency that needs to be eliminated and prevented.
3. Most federal possessions and territories are actually military reservations and bases. The Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) applies on these military reservations and bases. If you read it, you will find out that the members of our military who are subject to it have to surrender some of their constitutional rights. Therefore, it would be impossible to impose constitutional protections on such areas because it would undermine good order and discipline in our military!

4. The great irony of our military is that our servicemen take a pledge or oath to “support and defend the Constitution from all enemies, foreign and domestic”, and yet these very same people don’t have constitutional protections for themselves while they are in the military! One of the most important constitutional protections they lose the right to not pay direct income taxes, which are not allowed under Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the Constitution!

You can read this case for yourself at:

This case addressed the distinction between individuals and corporations as it pertains to the Fifth Amendment. It said that corporations and other legal fictions do not have Fifth Amendment rights to not incriminate themselves but individuals do:

“...we are of the opinion that there is a clear distinction in this particular between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the state. The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no duty to the state or to his neighbors to divulge his business, or to open his doors to an investigation, so far as it may tend to criminate him. He owes no such duty to the state, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the state, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.

Upon the other hand, the corporation is a creature of the state. It is presumed to be incorporated for the benefit of the public. It receives certain special privileges and franchises, and holds them subject to the laws of the state and the limitations of its charter. Its powers are limited by law. It can make no contract not authorized by its charter. Its rights to [201 U.S. 43, 75] act as a corporation are only preserved to it so long as it obeys the laws of its creation. There is a reserved right in the legislature to investigate its contracts and find out whether it has exceeded its powers. It would be a strange anomaly to hold that a state, having chartered a corporation to make use of certain franchises, could not, in the exercise of its sovereignty, inquire how these franchises had been employed, and whether they had been abused, and demand the production of the corporate books and papers for that purpose. The defense amounts to this: That an officer of a corporation which is charged with a criminal violation of the statute, may plead the criminality of such corporation as a refusal to produce its books. To state this proposition is to answer it. While an individual may lawfully refuse to answer incriminating questions unless protected by an immunity statute, it does not follow that a corporation, vested with special privileges and franchises, may refuse to show its hands when charged with an abuse of such privileges."

The U.S. Supreme Court in Flint vs. Stone Tracy Co., defined excises as:

"Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale or consumption of commodities within the country, upon licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges...the requirement to pay such taxes involves the exercise of [220 U.S. 107, 152] privileges, and the element of absolute and unavoidable demand is lacking...Conceding the power of Congress to tax the business activities of private corporations...the tax must be measured by some standard...It is therefore well settled by the decisions of this court that when the sovereign authority has exercised the right to tax a legitimate subject of taxation as an exercise of a franchise or privilege, it is no objection that the measure of taxation is found in the income produced in part from property which of itself considered is nontaxable." [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

Individuals can be subject to an income (excise) tax on their activities if they depend upon a government granted privilege. So where are the privileges you are in receipt of?
You can read about this case yourself at the following location on the web:

This case is very significant because the supreme Court ruled that illegally obtained evidence may not be used or admitted in a public trial, as it would violate Fourth Amendment privacy protections. Defendant Weeks was selling lottery tickets by mail. Police arrested him at his workplace and simultaneously illegally entered his home without a warrant to search for and seize evidence, which was then used to convict him. He appealed and reversed his conviction. Here is what the court said:

The effect of the 4th Amendment is to put the courts [232 U.S. 383, 392] of the United States and Federal officials, in the exercise of their power and authority, under limitations and restraints as to the exercise of such power and authority, and to forever secure the people, their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against all unreasonable searches and seizures under the guise of law. This protection reaches all alike, whether accused of crime or not, and the duty of giving to it force and effect is obligatory upon all intrusted under our Federal system with the enforcement of the laws. The tendency of those who execute the criminal laws of the country to obtain conviction by means of unlawful seizures and enforced confessions, the latter often obtained after submitting accused persons to unwarranted practices destructive of rights secured by the Federal Constitution, should find no sanction in the judgments of the courts, which are charged at all times with the support of the Constitution, and to which people of all conditions have a right to appeal for the maintenance of such fundamental rights.

The case in the aspect in which we are dealing with it involves the right of the court in a criminal prosecution to retain for the purposes of evidence the letters and correspondence of the accused, seized in his house in his absence and without his authority, by a United States marshal holding no warrant for his arrest and none for the search of his premises. The accused, without awaiting his trial, made timely application to the court for an order for the return of these letters, as well or other property. This application was denied, the letters retained and put in evidence, after a further application at the beginning of the trial, both applications asserting the rights of the accused under the 4th and 5th Amendments to the Constitution. If letters and private documents can thus be seized and held and used in evidence against a citizen accused of an offense, the protection of the 4th Amendment, declaring his right to be secure against such searches and seizures, is of no value, and, so far as those thus placed are concerned, might as well be stricken from the Constitution. The efforts of the courts and their officials to bring the guilty to punishment, praiseworthy as they are, are not to be aided by the sacrifice of those great principles established by years of endeavor and suffering which have resulted in their embodiment in the fundamental law of the land. The United States marshal could only have invaded the house of the accused when armed with a warrant issued as required by the Constitution, upon sworn information, and describing with reasonable particularity the thing for which the search was to be made. Instead, he acted without sanction of law, doubtless prompted by the desire to bring further proof to the aid of the government, and under color of his office undertook to make a seizure of private papers in direct violation of the constitutional prohibition against such action. Under such circumstances, without sworn information and particular description, not even an order of court would [232 U.S. 383, 394] have justified such procedure; much less was it within the authority of the United States marshal to thus invade the house and privacy of the accused. In Adams v. New York, 192 U.S. 585, 48 L.Ed. 575, 24 Sup.Ct.Rep. 372, this court said that the 4th Amendment was intended to secure the citizen in person and property against unlawful invasion of the sanctity of his home by officers of the law, acting under legislative or judicial sanction. This protection is equally extended to the action of the government and officers of the law would be to affirm by judicial decision a manifest neglect, if not an open defiance, of the prohibitions of the Constitution, intended for the protection of the people against such unauthorized action.

[Emphasis added]

This case is significant because coercing Americans to submit self-incriminating tax returns is a violation of their rights, and using these returns as evidence in court to prosecute individuals is a further violation of their rights. Therefore, the IRS and the Department of Justice are not authorized by the precedent established in the above case, to use tax returns or any of the information on them to prosecute tax payers who have provided 1040 forms involuntarily. That means, that provided that you put the phrase somewhere on your tax return “Submitted involuntarily and under coercion”, then you are protecting yourself from anything on the tax return being used against you, even if you sign it as required. Section 2.4.9 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual. Form #10.005 discusses how to use this case to create, in effect, a Mexican standoff with the IRS in the submission of income tax returns. This technique is also used in section 2.5.4.15 or the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual. Form #10.005 entitled “Submit IRS Form 4868 Annually by 15AUG If You Aren’t Filing”. It’s a very effective weapon against the IRS.

3.14.10 1916: Brushaber vs. Union Pacific Railroad, 240 U.S. 1

This case is one of the most frequently cited cases by the U.S. government in supporting its position that Subtitle A income taxes are constitutional. It occurred just after the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1916 and became a popular case for the government to cite because it is written in such a confusing way. There is also a large amount of misinformation about this case promoted by the patriot community that we would like to eliminate. Because of this fact, we will spend an unusual degree of attention analyzing the case to remove all doubt about its true significance.

The Brushaber case was about a French Immigrant, Frank Brushaber, who lived in New York in the Borough of Brooklyn and who claimed to be a citizen of the State of New York but never claimed to be a U.S. federal citizen, which made him a “nonresident alien” for all intents and purposes. Mr. Brushaber owned stock in the Union Pacific Railroad, a corporation chartered in the federal Territory of Utah before it became a State. As a territory, Utah was part of the federal United States, and as such, was a “domestic corporation” or “federal corporation” at the time it was formed. Mr. Brushaber filed suit in federal District Court in New York to enjoin the Union Pacific Railroad from volunteering to pay federal income tax on its profits because he didn’t want his stock dividends correspondingly reduced as a result of the tax. Note that the issue was not him personally paying income taxes on the stock, but the reduction of his dividends by the amount of taxes the corporation insisted on volunteering to pay prior to distributing the remaining profits to its shareholders.

Justice Edward D. White was the author of the opinion of the court in this case. This was the same justice who wrote the dissenting opinion in the Pollock Decision back in 1895, which incidentally declared the income tax unconstitutional. It was clear then, that he had an axe to grind and wanted to reverse the damage done by the Pollock decision. You might want to go back and review Pollock v. Farmer’s Loan and Trust Company, 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895) again to refresh your memory on this monumental case. In the Brushaber case, it would appear that Justice White’s method for reversing the damage done by the Pollock decision was to obfuscate the issues by writing a very confusing opinion. The Brushaber decision is, without a doubt, one of the most confusing and difficult Supreme Court decisions of all to read and understand, and this is no accident, we believe.

The Brushaber decision ruled that the 16th Amendment did not amend or change the U.S. Constitution. It decided that the federal corporation could not be stopped from volunteering to pay the federal income tax, even though this damaged the interests of its stockholders by reducing their dividends. But don't take our word for it. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court, in Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad, said in the majority opinion:

That is, they would result in bringing the provisions of the Amendment exempting a direct tax from apportionment into irreconcilable conflict with the general requirement that all direct taxes be apportioned;

This result, instead of simplifying the situation and making clear the limitations of the taxing power, which obviously the Amendment must have intended to accomplish, would create radical and destructive changes in our constitutional system and multiply confusion...
...Moreover in addition the Conclusion reached in the Pollock Case did not in any degree involve holding that income taxes generically and necessarily came within the class of direct taxes on property, but on the contrary recognized the fact that taxation on income was in its nature an excise entitled to be enforced as such unless and until it was concluded that to enforce it would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard form and consider substance alone and hence subject the tax to the regulation as to apportionment which otherwise as an excise would not apply to it.

...the Amendment demonstrates that no such purpose was intended and on the contrary shows that it was drawn with the object of maintaining the limitations of the Constitution and harmonizing their operation."

...the [16th] Amendment contains nothing repudiating or challenging the ruling in the Pollock Case that the word direct had a broader significance since it embraced also taxes levied directly on personal property because of its ownership, and therefore the Amendment at least impliedly makes such wider significance a part of the Constitution -- a condition which clearly demonstrates that the purpose was not to change the existing interpretation except to the extent necessary to accomplish the result intended, that is, the prevention of the resort to the sources from which a taxed income was derived in order to cause a direct tax on the income to be a direct tax on the source itself and thereby to take an income tax out of the class of excises, duties and imposts and place it in the class of direct taxes...

Indeed in the light of the history which we have given and of the decision in the Pollock Case and the ground upon which the ruling in that case was based, there is no escape from the Conclusion that the Amendment was drawn for the purpose of doing away for the future with the principle upon which the Pollock Case was decided, that is, of determining whether a tax on income was direct not by a consideration of the burden placed on the taxed income upon which it directly operated, but by taking into view the burden which resulted on the property from which the income was derived, since in express terms the Amendment provides that income taxes, from whatever source the income may be derived, shall not be subject to the regulation of apportionment...

And it further stated that taxes on income had been "sustained as excises in the past." The ruling established that income tax is constitutional as an excise tax on federal corporations, but not as a direct tax. The measure of whether it is a direct or an indirect/excise tax is determined by the burden the tax on income places on the property that is its object. Who or what then is subject to an excise tax? In most cases it is usually corporations involved in foreign (outside the country) commerce. You can see that by rereading section 3.8.11.1, which talks about the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment as described by President Taft in his speech to Congress on June 16, 1909.

The IRS relies on the Brushaber decision to prove the constitutionality of the income tax on natural persons, but ignores the Court's ruling in that case that the income tax is an excise tax and that the “person” paying the tax in this case was a federal corporation rather than a natural person. The government and the IRS like to cite this case because the case was written in an especially confusing way.

In the Brushaber decision the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that a federal corporation may volunteer to pay the income tax on its profits, even though its stock dividends paid to nonresident alien stockholders living outside the federal zone were correspondingly reduced by the amount of income tax. Shortly after the ruling in this case, the U.S. department of the Treasury issued Treasury Decision 2313 interpreting this case. For those of you who have trouble interpreting the impact of this case, you can read the clear language of this decision below:

Treasury Decision Under Internal Revenue Laws of the United States
Vol. 18 January-December 1916
W. G. McAdoo
Secretary of the Treasury
Washington Government Printing Office 1917
T.D. 2313 Income Tax

Taxability of interest from bonds and dividends on stock of domestic corporations owned by nonresident aliens, and the liabilities of nonresident aliens under section 2 of the act of October 3, 1913.

Treasury Department
Office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue
Washington, D.C., March 21, 1916

To collectors of internal revenue:

Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railways [sic] Co., decided January 24, 1916, it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest from the bonds and dividends on the stock of domestic corporations is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913.

Nonresident aliens are not entitled to the specific exemption designated in paragraph C of the income-tax law, but are liable for the normal and additional tax upon the entire net income “from all property owned, and of every business, trade, or profession carried on in the [federal] United States,” computed upon the basis prescribed in the law.

The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens, who are in charge of the property owned or business carried on within the [federal] United States, shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on Form 1040, revised, and shall pay any and all tax, normal and additional, assessed upon the income received by them in behalf of their nonresident alien principals.

The person, firm, company, copartnership, corporation, joint-stock company, or association, and insurance company in the [federal] United States, citizen or resident alien, in whatever capacity acting, having the control, receipt, disposal, or payment of fixed or determinable annual or periodic gains, profits, and income of whatever kind, to a nonresident alien, under any contract or otherwise, which payment shall represent income of a nonresident alien from the exercise of any trade or profession within the [federal] United States, shall deduct and withhold from such annual or periodic gains, profits, and income, regardless of amount, and pay to the officer of the United States Government authorized to receive the same such sum as will be sufficient to pay the normal tax of 1 per cent imposed by law, and shall make an annual return on Form 1042.

The normal tax shall be withheld at the source from income accrued to nonresident aliens from corporate obligations and shall be returned and paid to the Government by debtor corporations and withholding agents as in the case of citizens and resident aliens, but without benefit of the specific exemption designated in paragraph C of the law.

Form 1008, revised, claiming the benefit of such deductions as may be applicable to income arising within the United States and for refund of excess tax withheld, as provided by paragraphs B and P of the income-tax law, may be filed by nonresident aliens, their agents or representatives, with the debtor corporation, withholding agent, or collector of internal revenue for the district in which the withholding return is required to be made.

That part of paragraph E of the law which provides that "if such person...is absent from the United States...the return and application may be made for him or her by the person required to withhold and pay the tax..." is held to be applicable to the return and application on Form 1008, revised, of nonresident aliens.

A fiduciary acting in the capacity of trustee, executor, or administrator, when there is only one beneficiary and that beneficiary a nonresident alien, shall render a return on Form 1040, revised; but when there are two or more beneficiaries, one or all of whom are nonresident aliens, the fiduciary shall render a return on Form 1041, revised, and a personal return on Form 1040, revised, for each nonresident alien beneficiary.

The liability, under the provisions of the law, to render personal returns, on or before March 1 next succeeding the tax year, of annual net income accrued to them from sources within the United States during the preceding calendar year, attaches to nonresident aliens as in the case of returns required from citizens and resident aliens. Therefore, a return on Form 1040, revised, is required except in cases where the total tax liability has been or is to be satisfied at the source by withholding or has been or is to be satisfied by personal return on Form 1040, revised, rendered in their behalf. Returns shall be rendered to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which a nonresident alien carries on his principal business within the United States or, in the absence of a principal business within the United States and in all cases of doubt, the collector of internal revenue at Baltimore, Md., in whose district Washington is situated.

Nonresident aliens are held to be subject to the liabilities and requirements of all administrative, special, and general provisions of law in relation to the assessment, remission, collection, and refund of the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913, and collectors of internal revenue will make collection of the tax by distraint, garnishment, execution, or other appropriate process provided by law.

So much of T.D. 1976 as relates to ownership certificate 1004, T.D. 1977 (certificate Form 1060), 1988 (certificate Form 1060), T.D. 2017 (nontaxability of interest from bonds and dividends on stock), T.D. 2030 (nontaxability of interest from bonds and dividends on stock) and all rulings heretofore made which are in conflict herewith are hereby superseded and repealed.

This decision will be held effective as of January 1, 1916.

W. H. Osborn
Commissioner of Internal Revenue

Approved, March 30, 1916:

Byron R. Newton,

See the definition of “trade or business” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) found in section 3.9.1.23, which indicates that “trade of business” are synonymous with holding of a political office in the federal United States.
Notice that Treasury Decision 2313 explained that the Brushaber decision ruled the tax to be constitutional on receipts of nonresident aliens only who were involved in a “trade or profession” in the United States and that the taxes must be declared on a 1040 form. It is crucial to understand the meaning of “trade or profession”, which we describe in section 3.9.1.23 to mean the holding of a public office in the federal United States. In effect what the Treasury was saying above is that the only persons who complete the 1040 form are those who have elected to have their income treated as effectively connected with a “trade or business” in the federal United States, which means these people elected to be treated as elected or appointed U.S. officials for U.S. tax purposes. This means at some point that these persons filed a 1040 form and made an election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and never bothered to revoke that election. It is extremely important that they revoke the election under that section to eliminate the taxability of this income.

Another important historical note about the Brushaber case was that the tax Act of 1913 contained a section creating a duty or liability to pay the income tax which was later removed starting with the 1954 code. Therefore the above TD 2313 could talk about the liability to withhold taxes on income “effectively connected with a trade or business” in the federal United States, which was equivalent to saying that those who had volunteered to pay the tax by making the election under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) must include income from federal corporations. Notice that the court never bothered to explain whether or not Frank Brushaber had made such an election, and if they had they would have given away the government’s biggest secret. Based on the outcome of the case, however, we assume that Brushaber must have made the election.

We must remember that because of later Supreme Court Rulings, most notably Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916), the Sixteenth Amendment was ruled to be irrelevant and gave no new taxing powers to the U.S. government.

“...by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed.”

For the average American the Brushaber case should be, beyond contention, the most momentous, and consequential Supreme Court case ever tried...together, of course, with the beautifully lucid TD 2313, which implements it. For, they nail down two major points: the unambiguous and unarguable definition of the ‘United States,’ and the income tax obligations of most Americans—due to their relationship to this particular ‘United States’—namely, NONE.

It seems almost beyond belief that these two precious documents were ignored by the American taxpayer, at the time. Reading them today, it is indeed unfathomable that they did not become a watershed event, completely precluding the events that have ensued. As it happened, however, not much happened until over half a century later. But, since then, many thousands of previous taxpayers have elected out of the system. We mention in section 5.3.4 that the Internal Revenue Code permits this, at 26 U.S.C. §6013 (g) Election to treat nonresident alien individual as resident of the United States (4) Termination of election (A) Revocation by taxpayers, which allows a nonresident alien to re-establish his/her previous status (one time only—see subsection 5), after having knowingly or unknowingly elected to “be treated as a resident of the United States.” (6013(g)(1).) In other words, this is an escape hatch to get out of the system that one almost always inadvertently entered, when filing his/her first Form 1040 in order to get a refund, at the age of 14. One thereby declared oneself a resident of the District United States, as well as a U.S. citizen, for tax purposes. But, Section 6013 allows one to revoke this uninformed choice. I won’t go into why such relief must be written into statutory law, but believe me, they wouldn’t do it if they didn’t need to.

The Sixteenth Amendment, although referred to in argument, has no real bearing and may be put out of view.
As pointed out in recent decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects, but merely removes all occasion, which otherwise might exist, for an apportionment among the States of taxes laid on income, whether it be derived from one source or another. Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 17-19; Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103, 112-113.

This was an action to recover a tax paid under protest and alleged to have been imposed contrary to the constitutional [247 U.S. 165, 172] provision (article 1, 9, cl. 5) that 'no tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state.' The judgment below was for the defendant. 234 Fed. 125.

The plaintiff is a domestic corporation chiefly engaged in buying goods in the several states, shipping them to foreign countries and there selling them. In 1914 its net income from this business was $30,173.66, and from other sources $12,436.24. An income tax for that year, computed on the aggregate of these sums, was assessed against it and paid under compulsion. It is conceded that so much of the tax as was based on the income from other sources was valid, and the controversy is over so much of it as was attributable to the income from shipping goods to foreign countries and there selling them.

The tax was levied under the Act of October 3, 1913, c. 16, 11, 38 Stat. 166, 172, which provided for annually subjecting every domestic corporation to the payment of a tax of a specified per centum of its 'entire net income arising or accruing from all sources during the preceding calendar year.' Certain fraternal and other corporations, as also income from certain enumerated sources, were specifically excepted, but none of the exceptions included the plaintiff or any part of its income. So, tested merely by the terms of the act, the tax collected from the plaintiff was rightly computed on its total net income. But as the act obviously could not impose a tax forbidden by the Constitution, we proceed to consider whether the tax, or rather the part in question, was forbidden by the constitutional provision on which the plaintiff relies.

The Sixteenth Amendment, although referred to in argument, has no real bearing and may be put out of view. As pointed out in recent decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects, but merely removes all occasion, which otherwise might exist, for an apportionment among the states of taxes [247 U.S. 165, 173] laid on income, whether it be derived from one source or another. Brushaber v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 240 U.S. 171, 36 Sup.Ct. 236, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 713, L.R.A. 1917D, 414; Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103, 112-113, 36 Sup.Ct. 278.

The judgment reaffirmed in effect that taxes on corporate income were OK, but didn't rule on the issue of income taxes on individuals.

In this case, the Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether a tax on salary was authorized:

"After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does not authorize or support the tax in question. " [A direct tax on salary income of a federal judge]

[Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]
This case has a very thorough treatment of the 16th Amendment taxing issues, and discusses nearly all of the issues critical to the income tax, and by the way, fully supports the entire position advocated in this document with regards to the 26 U.S.C. §861 issues and taxable source issues.

This case was overturned in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939). However, the supreme court in that case declined to address whether the tax on income of federal judges was a "direct" or an "indirect" tax, and therefore skirted the issue of whether it could or should be included in "gross income". Instead, by fiat, they simply said without any real legal analysis of facts, that the tax was constitutional. This, of course was a cop-out and there was a long dissenting opinion that advocated a more rational view that is more consistent with this document.

The court stated in the case Eisner v. Macomber that:

> The Sixteenth Amendment must be construed in connection with the taxing clauses of the original Constitution and the effect attributed to them before the amendment was adopted. In Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 158 U.S. 601, 15 Sup.Ct. 912, under the Act of August 27, 1894 (28 Stat. 509, 553, c. 349, 27), it was held that taxes upon rents and profits of real estate and upon returns from investments of personal property were in effect direct taxes upon the property from which such income arose, imposed by reason of ownership; and that Congress could not impose such taxes without apportioning them among the states according to population, as required by article 1, 2, cl. 3, and section 9, cl. 4, of the original Constitution.

> Afterwards, and evidently in recognition of the limitation upon the taxing power of Congress thus determined, the Sixteenth Amendment was adopted, in words lucidly expressing the object to be accomplished:

> The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among [252 U.S. 189, 206] the several states, and without regard to any census or enumeration.

A proper regard for its genesis, as well as its very clear language, requires also that this amendment shall not be extended by loose construction, so as to repeal or modify, except as applied to income, those provisions of the Constitution that require an apportionment according to population for direct taxes upon property, real and personal. This limitation still has an appropriate and important function, and is not to be overridden by Congress or disregarded by the courts.

After examining dictionaries in common use (Bouv. L. D.; Standard Dict.; Webster's Internat. Dict.; Century Dict.), we find little to add to the succinct definition adopted in two cases arising under the Corporation Tax Act of 1909 (Straton's Independence v. Howbert, 231 U.S. 399, 415, 34 S.Sup.Ct. 136, 140 [58 L.Ed. 285]; Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467, 469 [62 L.Ed. 1054]). Income may be defined as the gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined, provided it be understood to include profit gained through a sale or conversion of capital assets, to which it was applied in the Doyle Case, 247 U.S. 183, 185, 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467, 469 [62 L.Ed. 1054].

Brief as it is, it indicates the characteristic and distinguishing attribute of income essential for a correct solution of the present controversy, The government, although basing its argument upon the definition as quoted, placed chief emphasis upon the word 'gain,' which was extended to include a variety of meanings; while the significance of the next three words was either overlooked or misconceived. 'Derived-from- capital'; 'the gain-derived-from-capital,' etc. Here we have the essential matter: not a gain accruing to capital; not a growth or increment of value in the investment; but a gain, a profit, something of exchangeable value, proceeding from the property, severed from the capital, however invested or employed, and coming in, being 'derived'-that is, received or drawn by the recipient (the taxpayer) for his separate use, benefit and disposal- that is income derived from property. Nothing else answers the description.

Thus, from every point of view we are brought irresistibly to the conclusion that neither under the Sixteenth Amendment nor otherwise has Congress power to tax without apportionment a true stock dividend made

This case was about the validity of Child Labor Tax law imposed by Congress. The Drexel Furniture Company filed suit because it didn’t want to be forced to pay the Child Labor Tax to the IRS. The Supreme Court ruled that the Child Labor Tax Law was unconstitutional because it amounted to social engineering and exceeded the powers conferred by the Constitution on the federal government. In effect, they called socialism and unconstitutional abuse of the taxing power of Congress and amounted to legislating socialism by compelling (plundering) employers to provide a specified level of benefits to their employees. The findings in this case are similar to the case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935). The arguments used here apply equally well to the federal income tax, as we pointed out in the preface to this document.

“Out of a proper respect for the acts of a co-ordinate branch of the government, this court has gone far to sustain taxing acts as such, even though there has been ground for suspecting, from the weight of the tax, it was intended to destroy its subject. But in the act before [259 U.S. 20, 38] as the presumption of validity cannot prevail, because the proof of the contrary is found on the very face of its provisions. Grant the validity of this law, and all that Congress would need to do, hereafter, in seeking to take over to its control any one of the great number of subjects of public interest, jurisdiction of which the states have never parted with, and which are reserved to them by the Tenth Amendment, would be to enact a detailed measure of complete regulation of the subject and enforce it by a so-called tax upon departures from it. To give such magic to the word 'tax' would be to break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the sovereignty of the states.”

3.14.16 1924: Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47

The Supreme Court ruled that Congress has the power to tax the income received by a native Citizen of the United States domiciled abroad from property situated abroad and that the constitutional prohibition of unapportioned direct taxes within the states of the union does not apply in foreign countries.

You can read about this case yourself at the following location on the web:

In this case, the supreme Court ruled that income derived from wages and labor are not taxable, and that taxable “income” only includes profit:

“'The claim that salaries, wages and compensation for personal services are to be taxed as an entirety and therefore must be returned by the individual who has performed the services which produced the gain is without support either in the language of the Act or in the decisions of the courts construing it. Not only this, but it is directly opposed to provisions of the Act and to regulations of the U.S. Treasury Dept, which either prescribe or permit that compensation for personal services be not taxed as an entirety and be not returned by the individual performing the services. It is to be noted that by the language of the Act it is not salaries, wages or compensation for personal services that are to be included in gross income. That which is to be included is gains, profits and income DERIVED from salaries, wages or compensation for personal service.'”

[Lucas v. Earl, 281 U.S. 111 (1930) [Emphasis added]]

The above cite was argued by the counsel and did not appear in the court’s ruling, but does underscore the nature of the income tax. Be cautious when you are looking up this case, because the Findlaw website doesn’t include the whole verdict.
You have to go to Versus Law (http://www.versuslaw.com) to view the whole case. We suggest that the reason for this is clear: there is a conspiracy within the legal profession and the courts to protect the income tax.

After the Great Wall Street Crash in 1929, daily newspaper photographs of mile-long soup and bread lines persuaded a frightened public to eagerly embrace the introduction of the European style socialism in the form of Social Security, written and contrived in smoke-filled rooms by the same politician-puppets of the bankers who had engineered both the crash and the depression.

A public eager to exchange liberty for benefits would vote for those politicians who would promise to provide them with the greatest “fair share” of the public trough. Congress made its first attempt at socialist wealth redistribution when it passed legislation in 1934 to provide for the retirement of railroad workers. Here’s what the Supreme Court had to say when they shot this act down as unconstitutional in their decision in Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Company decided May 6, 1935:

The catalog of means and actions which might be imposed upon an employer in any business, tending to the comfort and satisfaction of his employees, seems endless.

Provisions for free medical attendance and nursing, for clothing, for food, for housing, for the education of children, and a hundred other matters might with equal propriety be proposed as tending to relieve the employee of mental strain and worry.

Can it fairly be said that the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce extends to the prescription of any or all of these things?

Is it not apparent that they are really and essentially related solely to social welfare of the worker, and therefore remote from any regulation of commerce as such? We think the answer is plain. These matters obviously lie outside the orbit of Congressional power.”

There you have it—the high court informing Congress that it has no constitutional authority whatsoever to legislate for the social welfare of the worker. The result was that when Social Security was instituted, it had to be treated as strictly voluntary.

“In view of other settled rules of statutory construction, which teach that... if doubt exists as to the construction of a taxing statute, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the taxpayer…”

[Hassett v. Welch, 303 U.S. 303 (1938)]

The term ‘United States’ may be used in any one of several senses. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations. It may designate the territory over which the sovereignty of the United States extends, or it may be the collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution.

[Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)]

This case is very important, since it establishes THREE separate definitions for the term “United States”. It also establishes the areas over which the U.S. is sovereign. Of the three definitions, the only areas where federal income taxes apply are in the areas over which the U.S. is sovereign, which is the District of Columbia, federal territories and possessions.

“Our system of taxation is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint.”

The principle that our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment, has been emphasized and relied upon in subsequent appellate court cases as well. The reason the courts and the IRS advise that it is voluntary is that if it were mandatory, there would be a violation of your rights under the Bill of Rights—i.e., under the First, Fourth, and Fifth Amendments.
Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

The First Amendment involves your freedom to speak to your government. It also includes your right not to speak to your government (on a Form 1040). Forcing you to speak on a 1040 would violate your First Amendment rights.

The Fourth Amendment is your right to privacy—your right to be secure in your person and papers. Compelling you to produce your personal financial information and records, etc., without a lawful court order would violate your Fourth Amendment rights.

The Fifth Amendment states that “No person…shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.” This simply means that you cannot be compelled to give information (on a Form 1040) because that act is equivalent to being a witness against yourself. The IRS can take any information you provide and turn around and use it against you under any circumstances, both civilly and criminally. In an instant, the IRS can have you under criminal investigation and potential indictment. Therefore, compelling you to give information (evidence) against yourself would violate your Fifth Amendment rights.

This case is very important, because it reveals that a statute has no force and effect unless there is an implementing and enforcing regulation behind it. Statutes without implementing regulations are unenforceable and create no obligation on the part of the Citizen. All of the enforcement provisions of the Internal Revenue Code found in Subtitle F, Procedures and Administration, therefore, must have implementing regulations applying the enforcement provision to the particular tax in question. In all cases for the Income tax in Subtitle A, they simply do not have such regulations, making the income tax entirely voluntary.

"An administrative regulation, of course, is not a "statute." While in practical effect regulations may be called "little laws," they are at most but offspring of statutes. Congress alone may pass a statute, and the Criminal Appeals Act calls for direct appeals if the District Court's dismissal is based upon the invalidity or construction of a statute. See United States v. Jones, 345 U.S. 377 (1953). This Court has always construed the Criminal Appeals Act narrowly, limiting it strictly "to the instances specified." United States v. Borden Co., 308 U.S. 188, 192 (1939). See also United States v. Swift & Co., 318 U.S. 442 (1943). Here the statute is not complete by itself, since it merely declares the range of its operation and leaves to its progeny the means to be utilized in the effectuation of its command. But it is the statute which creates the offense of the willful removal of the labels of origin and provides the punishment for violations. The regulations, on the other hand, prescribe the identifying language of the label itself, and assign the resulting tags to their respective geographical areas. Once promulgated, [361 U.S. 431, 438] these regulations, called for by the statute itself, have the force of law, and violations thereof incur criminal prosecutions, just as if all the details had been incorporated into the congressional language. The result is that neither the statute nor the regulations are complete without the other, and only together do they have any force. In effect, therefore, the construction of one necessarily involves the construction of the other." [U.S. v. Mersky, 361 U.S. 431 (1960)]

The companion to this case is Calif. Bankers Assoc. v. Shultz, 416 U.S. 25, found later in section 3.14.25. This case focuses on the same issues and reaches the same conclusions, but states them differently.

This U.S. Supreme Court case reveals that the income which is taxed under federal law must come from a "source" as defined under the law, as the law means exactly what is said,

"...the Sixteenth Amendment, which grants Congress the power "to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived..." Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331, 334; Douglas v. Willcuts, 296 U.S. 1, 9. It has long been settled that Congress' broad statutory definitions of taxable income were intended "to use the full measure of taxing power." The Sixteenth Amendment is to be taken as written and is not to be extended beyond the meaning clearly indicated by the language used." Edwards v. Cuba R. Co. 268 U.S. 628, 631 [From separate opinion by Whitaker, Black, and Douglas, JJ.] (Emphasis added) [James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213 (1961), p. 213, 6 L.Ed.2d. 246, pp.2 449495/564515]

"Waivers of Constitutional Rights not only must be voluntary, they must be knowingly intelligent acts, done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and consequences."

This case has far reaching implications. It says basically that a person must be aware of the agreement he is making to surrender his constitutional rights. It is relevant to the idea that if a person claims they are a U.S. citizen (that is, a resident of the District of Columbia who surrenders their Constitutional rights as indicated by Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)), then they must be made fully aware of that they are waiving their rights in order for the waiver to be valid.

This case is significant because it reveals that without implementing regulations that enforce penalties for a particular tax, no civil or criminal penalties for noncompliance can be imposed.

"...the Act’s civil and criminal penalties attach only upon violation of the regulation promulgated by the Secretary; if the Secretary were to do nothing, the Act itself would impose no penalties on anyone... The Government urges that since only those who violate these regulations [not the Code] may incur civil or criminal penalties, it is the actual regulations issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the broad authorizing language of the statute, which are to be tested against the standards of the Fourth Amendment; and that when so tested they are valid."

The implication of this is that absent an implementing regulation imposing a penalty for nonpayment or noncompliance with a particular tax in question, the tax cannot be enforced! The income tax found in Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is the best example of this. The tax is imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1 but:

- Unlike all other taxes, there is no statute making anyone liable to pay it.
- There are general enforcement statutes found in Subtitle F, but unlike other types of taxes, there are no implementing regulations permitting enforcement. For instance, there is no 26 CFR §1.6201 authorizing assessment by other than the taxpayer (because the system is based on voluntary assessment), no 26CFR §1.6331 authorizing levy, no 26 CFR §1.6672 authorizing imposition of penalties for nonpayment. Therefore, the tax is truly voluntary! All other types of taxes have enforcement regulations.
- The regulations found in 26 CFR §601 are procedural and general in nature and do NOT apply enforcement provisions to income taxes in Subtitle A (personal income taxes are in Section 1 of Subtitle A). These regulations are directory in nature and are not binding on Citizens, because they are never published in the federal register.

For more information on this subject of the importance of implementing regulations, refer to the following sections:

- Section 2.5.4.17 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005, which contains a table showing the lack of implementing regulations for enforcement of personal income taxes.
- Section 5.4.10: IRS Has NO Legal Authority to Assess Penalties on Subtitles A and C Income Taxes on Natural Persons
- Section 5.4.11: No Implementing Regulations Authorizing Collection of Subtitles A and C Income Taxes
- Section 5.4.12: No Implementing Regulations for “Tax Evasion” or “Willful Failure to File” Under 26 U.S.C. §7201 or 7203

"The information revealed in the preparation and filing of an income tax return is, for the purposes of Fifth Amendment analysis, the testimony of a witness."

"Government compels the filing of a return much as it compels, for example, the appearance of a 'witness' before a grand jury."
[Garner v. United States, 424 U.S. 648 (1976)]

This ruling was significant as it in effect defined federal tax returns as testimony of a witness, because they are a written declaration signed under penalty of perjury. In effect, they are a written record of oral testimony. As it pertains to 5th Amendment protections, this ruling has been repeatedly ignored by the federal circuit courts, who, like the IRS, have historically relied on a trick of language to coax citizens into incriminating themselves in violation of their 5th Amendment rights. We talk about the trick in section 3.8.3.4 “Non Self Incrimination Right”, where we say that some of the circuit courts and the IRS have said that:

1. The 5th Amendment only protects “testimony” and not writings signed under penalty of perjury, such as tax returns.
2. The 5th Amendment only protects one from criminal prosecution and not civil prosecution.
3. Since tax returns are completed and submitted “voluntarily”, then their preparation is not compelled, and therefore, they can be used to incriminate the person submitting them.

What does it mean to be compelled? Below is a definition from the Random House Dictionary:

1. To force, drive, esp. to a course of action. 2. To secure or bring about by force. 3. To force to submit; subdue. 5. To overpower.

The “trick” above of compelling a Citizen to testify against themselves in violation of their Fifth Amendment right was used, for instance, by the Tenth Circuit in the case of William T. Conklin v. IRS, No. 89N 1514. It was clear from that case that the circuit court knew they were going against the Supreme Court, which is why they made that case “unpublished”, which is to say that they didn’t permit it to go into the record and sealed the record so other people couldn’t look at it unless they contact the court directly. That means it supposedly won’t be entered into any of the national case databases to be used by others for research. Is this also a violation of the First Amendment prohibition against censorship?
We think so! William Conklin, by way of background, is a famous tax honesty and 5th Amendment advocate. This kind of hypocrisy on the part of the U.S. Government is scandalous, and needs to be remedied immediately. As we said at the beginning of this document, “the love of money [your money, by the federal government] is the root of all evil”.

Instead, we all know that no one likes completing income tax returns and wouldn’t do it if they weren’t compelled. How are they compelled?:

- The threat of a 26 U.S.C. §7203 “Willful Failure to File” criminal prosecution and jail time for not submitting a tax return.
- The threat of a 26 U.S.C. §6702 “Frivolous Income Tax Return” penalty of $500 if the tax return is not complete and accurate.
- The threat of a 26 U.S.C. §7201 “Attempt to evade or defeat tax” criminal prosecution if the tax return is not completed and submitted to the IRS.

These statutes clearly compel us to prepare the return and sign it under penalty of perjury, and without these statutes, most people wouldn’t prepare or submit returns, or “volunteer” as the IRS likes to say. However, this approach is clearly at odds with Garner, which has never been overruled, and our Fifth Amendment rights, because the return is identified as the testimony of a witness.

“A subpoena served on a taxpayer requiring him to produce an accountant's workpapers in his possession without doubt involves substantial compulsion. But it does not compel oral testimony; nor would it ordinarily compel the taxpayer to restate, repeat, or affirm the truth of the contents of the documents sought. Therefore, the Fifth Amendment would not be violated by the fact alone that the papers on their face might incriminate the taxpayer, for the privilege protects a person only against being incriminated by his own compelled testimonial communications. Schmerber v. California, supra; United States v. Wade, supra; and Gilbert v. California, supra”

[Fisher v. United States, 425 U.S. 391 (1976)]

This case ruled that the documents in the possession of a taxpayer that are subpoena’d by the government are not privileged or protected under the Fifth Amendment. The Fifth Amendment only applies to “compelled testimonial communications”. This case forms the basis for why we say that you are not obligated to admit to the existence of any records if the IRS asks, such that if they subpoena you for nondescript records you have not admitted to having, then you aren’t obligated to provide anything at all.

We’d also like to emphasize that there are two aspects of one’s Fifth Amendment rights: 1. The act of producing the documents in response to a subpoena, which cannot be compelled and is privileged if it is (protected under 18 U.S.C. 6002-6003). 2. The contents of the documents themselves, the production of which, if compelled is privileged, and if not compelled is not privileged. The documents themselves might not be privileged, but if the production of the documents in response to a subpoena is compelled, then the person who is the object of the subpoena, if the information would incriminate him and he is a “natural person”, then his disclosure must protect him from incrimination as per 18 U.S.C. 6002-6003 before he can be compelled to provide the information.

This case was about an employee who was receiving reimbursement for lunch expenses from his employer. The government claimed that this reimbursement counted as “wages” that should have been subject to withholding within the provisions of 26 U.S.C. §3401 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Here is the Supreme Court’s Ruling:

Decided cases have made the distinction between wages and income and have refused to equate the two in withholding or similar controversies. Peoples Life Ins. Co. v. United States, 179 Ct.Cl. 318, 332, 373 F.2d. 924, 932 (1967); Humble Pipe Line Co. v. United States, 194 Ct.Cl. 944, 959, 442 F.2d. 1353, 1356 (1971); Humble Oil & Refining Co. v. United States, 194 Ct.Cl. 920, 442 F.2d. 1362 (1971); Stubbs, Overbeck & Associates v. United States, 445 F.2d. 1142 (CA5 1971); Royster Co. v. United States, 479 F.2d. at 590; Acacia Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. United States, 272 F.Sup. 188 (Md. 1967).

This case reaffirmed that wages are not necessarily considered income for the purposes of income taxation.

"We conclude that the Court of Appeals erred in holding that the contents of the subpoenaed documents were privileged under the Fifth Amendment. The act of producing the documents at issue in this case is privileged and cannot be compelled without a statutory grant of use immunity pursuant to 18 U.S.C. 6002 and 6003."

This was a case of a man who had several sole proprietorship businesses, and who had been subpoena’d by the government four separate times for records regarding his business. The District and Appellate court both ruled that he did not have to turn over the records because they were privileged and subject to the 5th Amendment protections of the sole proprietor. The Supreme court ruled that the act of producing subpoenaed documents would involve testimonial self-incrimination. Therefore “testimonial” does not exclude everything except oral testimony. The holding in this case supports the statement in Garner v. United States (424 U.S. 648) that the privilege against self-incrimination guaranteed by the 5th Amendment to the constitution applies to both written as well as oral compelled testimony that may have testimonial aspects and an incriminating effect.

Did you know that several landmark “Not Guilty!” verdicts in cast of "Willful Failure to File" income tax returns are due in large part to the 1991 U.S. Supreme Court decision, Cheek v. United States, 498 U.S. 192 (1991) which involved an American Airlines pilot named John L. Cheek? Believe it or not, until the Cheek decision, a defendant in a criminal tax trial could not even take the Internal Revenue Code into the courtroom in his own defense!

Cheek changed all that by holding that if the defendant has a subjective good faith belief no matter how unreasonable, that he or she was not required to file a tax return, the government cannot establish that the defendant acted willfully in not filing an income tax return. In other words, that the defendant shirked a known legal duty.

Now, the trial judge cannot prevent the jury from being shown any material evidence—books, videos, or otherwise—that guided one's thoughts and actions.

In writing the Cheek decision, the New York Times stated:

"The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that taxpayers who sincerely believe the federal income tax laws do not apply to them cannot be convicted of criminal tax violations even if there is no rational basis for their belief."

Justice Byron White in writing the majority opinion of the high court, stated that the jury, and not the judge, should decide the sincerity of the defendant's belief. Since the statutes and regulations involving the income tax so obviously pertain to foreign activity only, it is our position to stay with the written Law since it can be clearly shown to be the truth to even the most unsympathetic jury.

The bottom line is that the Cheek decision has made it almost impossible for the IRS to convict a well-prepared individual for "Willful Failure to File" on an income tax return. The Cheek case is also important because, among other things, it stands for the proposition that individuals who rely on attorneys and other professionals in making their decisions about the complex tax system are entitled to inform the jury as to the extent of their reliance. It also stands for the proposition that the jury must be instructed to view the defendant's actions subjectively, not objectively. In other words, the juror has to put his own pre-conceived notions aside of whether or not the juror believes everyone must file, and instead get inside the defendant's head and try to determine if he really believed, based on the defendant's own research and advice of the attorneys he consulted, that he acted in good faith, and truly believed that his research in toto indicated that he was not required to file. When it can be shown that one's actions were based on a good faith reliance on professional advice, the element of "a willful violation of the law," essential for a conviction, is conclusively eliminated.

This is a landmark case that firmly establishes the limits on Congressional power and the balance of power between the States and the Federal Government. Interestingly, it was not published like and numbered like the rest of the court cases, probably because the Supreme Court didn’t want people to find out about it. We include a copy of it on our website. You can also read the case at the website below:

Below are some of the important findings of the court as they related to income taxes:

We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v.
The Constitution delegates to Congress the power "[t]o regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes." U.S. Const., Art. I, 8, cl. 3. The Court, through Chief Justice Marshall, first defined the nature of Congress' commerce power in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 189-190 (1824):

"Commerce, undoubtedly, is traffic, but it is something more: it is intercourse. It describes the commercial intercourse between nations, and parts of nations, in all its branches, and is regulated by prescribing rules for carrying on that intercourse."

The commerce power "is the power to regulate; that is, to prescribe the rule by which commerce is to be governed. This power, like all others vested in Congress, is complete in itself, may be exercised to its utmost extent, and acknowledges no limitations, other than are prescribed in the constitution." Id., at 196. The Gibbons Court, however, acknowledged that limitations on the commerce power are inherent in the very language of the Commerce Clause.

"It is not intended to say that these words comprehend that commerce, which is completely internal, which is carried on between man and man in a State, or between different parts of the same State, and which does not extend to or affect other States. Such a power would be inconvenient, and is certainly unnecessary."

"Comprehensive as the word 'among' is, it may very properly be restricted to that commerce which concerns more States than one. . . . The enumeration presupposes something not enumerated; and that something, if we regard the language or the subject of the sentence, must be the exclusively internal commerce of a State." Id., at 194-195.

For nearly a century thereafter, the Court's Commerce Clause decisions dealt but rarely with the extent of Congress' power, and almost entirely with the Commerce Clause as a limit on state legislation that discriminated against interstate commerce. See, e.g., Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. 568, 573-575 (1853) (upholding a state-created steamboat monopoly because it involved regulation of wholly internal commerce); Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U.S. 1, 17, 20-22 (1888) (upholding a state prohibition on the manufacture of intoxicating liquor because the commerce power "does not comprehend the purely domestic commerce of a State which is carried on between man and man within a State or between different parts of the same State"); see also L. Tribe, American Constitutional Law 306 (2d ed. 1988). Under this line of precedent, the Court held that certain categories of activity such as "production," "manufacturing," and "mining" were within the province of state governments, and thus were beyond the power of Congress under the Commerce Clause. See Wickard v. Filburn, 317 U.S. 111, 121 (1942) (describing development of Commerce Clause jurisprudence).

Consistent with this structure, we have identified three broad categories of activity that Congress may regulate under its commerce power. See, e.g., Darby, 312 U.S. at 114; Heart of Atlanta Motel, supra, at 256 ("The authority of Congress to keep the channels of interstate commerce free from immoral and injurious uses has been frequently sustained, and is no longer open to question." (quoting Caminetti v. United States, 242 U.S. 470, 491 (1917))). Second, Congress is empowered to regulate and protect the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce, even though the threat may come only from intrastate activities. See, e.g., Shreveport Rate Cases, 234 U.S. 342 (1914); Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U.S. 20 (1911) (upholding amendments to Safety Appliance Act as applied to vehicles used in intrastate commerce); Perez, supra, at 150 ("[F]or example, the destruction of an aircraft (18 U.S.C. 32), or . . . thefts from interstate shipments (18 U.S.C. 659)"). Finally, Congress' commerce authority includes the power to regulate those activities having a substantial relation to interstate commerce, Jones & Laughlin Steel, 301 U.S. at 37, i.e., those activities that substantially affect interstate commerce. Wirtz, supra, at 196, n. 27. [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995)]

The significant aspect of this case is that it defines and constrains the jurisdiction and the power of the federal/U.S. government over the 50 State governments. In particular, it establishes that the only legitimate reason for the federal government to reach inside of the boundary of a state and regulate anything is in pursuit of the regulation of commerce between states or with foreign countries. This authority is granted as part of Article I, Section 8, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution. Note that this authority does not extend to regulating commerce within the 50 Union states, but rather between the states and with other nations. It also clearly establishes the three types of commerce activity that may be regulated within the states based on the Commerce Clause.

Other areas of the Constitution are also consistent with this clear division of jurisdiction and powers between the federal government and the States, most notably Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4, which prohibits direct taxation of Citizens within the 50 Union states without apportionment. The sovereignty of the States must be respected by the federal government under the Constitution or the balance of powers would be broken down and tyranny would be the result, as explained above by the Supreme Court. It should be clear that direct taxes on income of individuals derived from commerce within a state and not either crossing state boundaries or connected with trade with foreign countries would clearly violate the authority of the federal government under the Commerce Clause (1:8:3). Therefore, the income tax as currently enforced by the IRS as a direct tax on the income of individuals within a state and derived from intra (not inter) state commerce should have been declared unconstitutional and illegal by all the federal courts long ago.

3.15 Federal District/Circuit Court Cases

3.15.1 Commercial League Assoc. v. The People, 90 Ill. 166

"... There is a clear distinction between 'profit' and 'wages' or compensation for labor. Compensation for labor cannot be regarded as profit within the meaning of the law. The word 'profit' as ordinarily used, means the gain made upon business or investment - a different thing altogether from mere compensation for labor."

3.15.2 Jack Cole Co. v. Alfred McFarland, Sup.Ct. Tenn 337 S.W.2d. 453

"Legislature can name any privilege a taxable privilege and tax it by means other than an income tax, but legislature cannot name something to be taxable privilege. Constitution Article II, Section 28 . . . realizing and receiving income or earnings is not a privilege that can be taxed."

3.15.3 1916: Edwards v. Keith, 231 F 110, 113

"... one does not derive income by rendering services and charging for them."

3.15.4 1925: Sims v. Ahrens, 271 S.W. 720

"An income tax is neither a property tax nor a tax on occupations of common right, but is an EXCISE tax...The legislature may declare as 'privileged' and tax as such for state revenue, those pursuits not matters of common right, but it has no power to declare as a 'privilege' and tax for revenue purposes, occupations that are of common right."

[Sims v. Ahrens, 167 Ark. 557, 271 S.W. 720 (1925)]

This case established that wage income from occupations that are a common right cannot be taxed as by the state.

3.15.5 1937: Stapler v. U.S., 21 F.Supp. AT 737

"Income within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment and the Revenue Act, means 'gain'... and in such connection 'Gain' means profit...proceeding from property, severed from capital, however invested or employed, and coming in, received, or drawn by the taxpayer, for his separate use, benefit and disposal."

3.15.6 1937: White Packing Co. v. Robertson, 89 F.2d. 775, 779 the 4th Circuit Court

"The tax is, of course an excise tax, as are all taxes on income . . ."

3.15.7 1939: Graves v. People of State of New York, 306 S.Ct. 466

The theory, which once won a qualified approval, that a tax on income is legally or economically a tax on its source, is no longer tenable, New York ex rel. Cohn v. Graves, 300 U.S. 303, 313, 314 S., 57 S.Ct. 466, 467, 108 A.L.R. 721; Hale v. State Board, 302 U.S. 95, 108, 58 S.Ct. 102, 106; Helvering v. Gerhardt, supra; cf. Metcalf & Eddy v. Mitchell, 269 U.S. 514, 46 S.Ct. 172; Fox Film Corp. v. Doyal,286 U.S. 123, 52 S.Ct. 546; James v. Dravo Contracting Co., supra, page 149, 58 S.Ct. page 216; Helvering v. Mountain Producers Corp., 303 U.S. 376, 58 S.Ct. 623, and the only possible basis for implying a constitutional immunity from state income tax of the salary of an employee of the national government or of a governmental agency is that the economic burden... of the tax is in some way passed on so as to impose a burden on the national government tantamount to an interference by one government with the other in the performance of its functions.
[Graves v. People of State of New York, 306 U.S. 466 (1939)]

This case ruled that a tax on income is not a tax on the “source” and that, in effect, income and source are not the same. This reinforces the notion presented in this document that, to be taxable “gross income”, the income must come from a taxable “source”.

3.15.8 1943: Helvering v. Edison Brothers' Stores, 8 Cir. 133 F.2d. 575

"The Treasury cannot by interpretive regulations, make income of that which is not income within the meaning of the revenue acts of Congress, nor can Congress, without apportionment, tax as income that which is not income within the meaning of the 16th Amendment."
[Helvering v. Edison Brothers' Stores, 8 Cir. 133 F.2d. 575 (1943)]

3.15.9 1946: Lauderdale Cemetery Assoc. v. Mathews, 345 PA 239, 47 A. 2d 277, 280

"... reasonable compensation for labor or services rendered is not profit."
[Lauderdale Cemetery Assoc. v. Mathews, 345 Pa. 239, 47 A.2d. 277, 280 (1946)]

3.15.10 1947: McCutchin v. Commissioner of IRS, 159 F.2d. 472 5th Cir. 02/07/1947

"The 16th Amendment does not authorize laying of an income tax upon one person for the income derived solely from another."[wages]
[McCutchin v. Commissioner of IRS, 159 F.2d. 472 (1947)]

This case, along with the following additional cases, establishes that income from employment does not constitute taxable income as per the 16th Amendment.

3.15.11 1952: Anderson Oldsmobile, Inc. vs Hofferbert, 102 F.Supp. 902

"Constitutionally the only thing that can be taxed by Congress is "income." And the tax actually imposed by Congress has been on net income as distinct from gross income. THE TAX IS NOT, NEVER HAS BEEN, AND COULD NOT CONSTITUTIONALLY BE UPON "GROSS RECEIPTS" ...
[Anderson Oldsmobile, Inc. v. Hofferbert, 102 F.Supp. 902 (1952)]

This case established that income taxes were never intended to be imposed on gross receipts or net income, but on "gross income".

3.15.12 1955: Oliver v. Halstead, 196 Va. 992, 86 S.E.2d. 858

"There is a clear distinction between profit and wages, or compensation for labor. Compensation for labor cannot be regarded as profit within the meaning of the law."
[Oliver v. Halstead, 196 Va. 992, 86 S.E.2d. 858 (1955)]

"When one files a return [voluntarily] showing a tax due, he has presumably assessed himself and is content to become liable for the tax and to pay it."

3.15.14 1960: Commissioner of IRS v. Duberstein, 80 S.Ct. 1190

"Property acquired by gift is excluded from gross income."
[Commissioner of IRS v. Duberstein, 80 S.Ct. 1190 (1960)]

Once again, this case severely restricts the meaning of "gross income" and "taxable income" within the meaning of the 16th amendment.

3.15.15 1962: Simmons v. United States, 303 F.2d. 160
This case is about a man named William Simmons, who caught a $25,000 prize fish in a river, and did not want to include the prize money in his “gross income”, over the objections of the IRS. This is an important case, since it helps establish the nature of “direct taxes.”

1. A direct tax is a tax on real or personal property, imposed solely by reason of its being owned by the taxpayer. A tax on the income from such property, such as a tax on rents or the interest on bonds, is also considered a direct tax, being basically a tax upon the ownership of property. Yet, from the early days of the Republic, a tax upon the exercise of only some of the rights adhering to ownership, such as upon the use of property or upon its transfer, has been considered an indirect tax, not subject to the requirement of apportionment. The present tax falls into this latter category, being a tax upon the receipt of money and not upon its ownership.

This tax is similar to others held to be indirect. In the case which on its facts most nearly resembles the present one, Scholey v. Rev., 90 U.S. (23 Wall.) 331, 346-348, 23 L.Ed. 99 (1875), the Supreme Court upheld a federal death tax, placed upon persons receiving real property from a deceased under a will or by intestate succession, against the claim that the tax was an unapportioned direct tax on property. In that case, as in the present, the tax was borne directly by the recipient, but was held to be merely upon the transfer of property. The Scholey case was by name reaffirmed in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41, 78-83, 20 S.Ct. 742, 44 L.Ed. 969 (1900), and by implication in New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, 256 U.S. 345, 349, 41 S.Ct. 506, 65 L.Ed. 963 (1921), both cases upholding federal estate taxes imposed, not upon the beneficiary but upon the decedent’s estate. A tax upon the donor of an inter vivos gift was held to be an indirect tax in Bromley v. McCaugh, 280 U.S. 124, 135-138, 50 S.Ct. 46, 74 L.Ed. 226 (1929). If a tax on giving property is indirect, so would be a tax on receiving it, regardless of its source. That no distinction may be drawn between giving and receiving was pointed out in Fernandez v. Wiener, 326 U.S. 340, 352-355, 361-362, 66 S.Ct. 178, 90 L.Ed. 116 (1945), where the Supreme Court upheld an indirect tax the federal estate tax on community property at the death of one spouse: “If the gift of property may be taxed, we cannot say that there is any want of constitutional power to tax the receipt of it, whether as a result of inheritance [citation omitted] or otherwise, whatever name may be given to the tax * * *. Receipt in possession and enjoyment is as much a taxable occasion within the reach of the federal taxing power as the enjoyment of any other incident of property.”

While the distinctions drawn in these cases may seem artificial, the necessity for making them stems from the structure of the Constitution itself, which distinguishes between direct and indirect taxes. The Supreme Court has restricted the definition of direct taxes to the above-enumerated well-defined categories, and we have no warrant to expand them to others.

2. Even if we were to assume that the tax upon Simmons is direct, it comes within the Sixteenth Amendment, which relieved direct taxes upon income from the apportionment requirement. We need look no further than the two most recent Supreme Court cases in this area. In Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 75 S.Ct. 473, 99 L.Ed. 483 (1955), the Court upheld the inclusion in gross income of money received by the taxpayers as punitive damages, stating that “[h]ere we have instances of undeniable accessions to wealth, clearly realized, and over which the taxpayers have complete dominion.” 348 U.S. at 431, 75 S.Ct. at 477. This test was specifically reaffirmed in James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213, 81 S.Ct. 1052, 6 L.Ed.2d. 246 (1961), where the Court considered the taxability of embezzled money. The plunder was held to be income solely because it came into the taxpayer’s possession and control and despite the fact that he had no right to it and indeed was under a legal obligation to return it to its rightful owner. This obligation to repay was deemed irrelevant, for a gain “constitutes taxable income whatever name may be given to the tax * * *. Receipt in possession and enjoyment is as much a taxable occasion within the reach of the federal taxing power as the enjoyment of any other incident of property.”

You will note here that the circuit court defines a “direct tax” as a tax on the ownership of property, not on “receipt” of income! They treat the transfer of income as an occasion for an “excise” tax. You will note that it completely ignores the concept that one’s own labor is property, and that taxes on labor are in effect “direct taxes” because they are incident on the ownership of one’s labor. This is consistent with the findings of the Supreme Court in Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746, where stated:

67 Hylton v. United States, 3 U.S. (3 Dall.) 171, 1 L.Ed. 556 (1796) (tax on carriages for the conveyance of persons).

Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

....It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND INVIOABLE....

This cite also ignores the other very important aspect of this case, which is that Congress only has the right to tax foreign, international, and interstate commerce, but not intrastate commerce (see section 5.2.6 “Cites that Define Federal Taxing Jurisdiction) under the following sections of the U.S. Constitution:

1. Article I, Section 8, Clause 1.
2. Article I, Section 8, Clause 3.

This case didn’t even discuss whether the income received related to interstate or foreign commerce and came within the jurisdiction of the U.S., and therefore did not properly apply the law to scope the federal power to tax this event as an “excise”. Instead, they just “assumed” that everything was derived from a taxable “source”, which was not the case. For instance, it ignored all of the issues discussed in chapter 5, as far as 26 U.S.C. Section 861 and the corresponding CFR’s (26 CFR §1.861-8) which limit “sources” the IRS can tax to these situations only. The case was rigged from the beginning because they assumed all of Mr. Simmons income was taxable and that he was a “taxpayer” without even attempting to establish his liability for tax under the above constraints.

"... whatever may constitute income, therefore, must have the essential feature of gain to the recipient. This was true when the 16th Amendment became effective, it was true at the time of Eisner v. Macomber Supra, it was true under Section 22(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1938, and it is likewise true under Section 61(a) of the I.R.S. Code of 1934. If there is not gain, there is not income ... Congress has taxed income not compensation." [Conner v. U.S., 303 F Supp. 1187 (1969)]

3.15.17 1986: U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438

"[Defendant] Stahl's claim that ratification of the 16th Amendment was fraudulently certified constitutes a political question because we could not undertake independent resolution of this issue without expressing lack of respect due coordinate branches of government...." [U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986)]

3.16 IRS Publications and Internal Revenue Manual (IRM)

This section appears at the end of the chapter on the legal authority of income taxes because IRS publications have the lowest precedence or authority and do not supersede any law.

WARNING!!!: May people are deceived by their own legal ignorance into thinking that the IRS publications that can be readily downloaded from the IRS website at http://www.irs.gov/ have the force of law. But guess what? These publications are simply hearsay guidelines for Americans that have NO LEGAL AUTHORITY OR RELEVANCY WHATSOEVER! They cannot be used as evidence in a court of law or be read or used by a judge in a tax trial. The only thing that can be legitimately used in a court of law is the actual Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) and Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations (26 CFR)!

Also, don’t allow yourself to be distracted by what is in these publications (or other commercial tax publications for that matter) by IRS agents or representatives, tax attorneys, or tax preparers during the tax litigation or administrative enforcement process, because these publications are simply irrelevant from a legal perspective. You need to vociferously remind everyone you interact with during the tax compliance/enforcement process of this fact. Instead, you should redirect ALL of their comments and advice about taxes back to refer ONLY to the specific law from 26 U.S.C. and 26 CFR that establishes the claim they are trying to make against you during the enforcement process!
For further research on this matter, refer to the following court cases, which reveal that at least five federal courts have ruled that the provisions of the Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) are only directory in nature and are not mandatory nor do they therefore have the force of law.

The IRS’ own procedures appearing in their very own Internal Revenue Manual (IRM), reflect the findings above, as follows:

"IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."

[IRM 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

Remember that there is a precedence and order to the laws, regulations, and guidelines that govern IRS employees. The U.S. Constitution is supreme, followed by the Statutes at Large, then the codified positive law version of these statutes found in the U.S. Code, then the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) that implement the positive law statute, and finally the IRS Publications and the Internal Revenue Manual. Only the Constitution and the Statutes at Large can directly impact anyone with the force of law. Titles of the U.S. Codes that are not enacted into positive law, including the Internal Revenue Code and Title 50, which is where the Selective Service System was created, are simply prima facie evidence of law that have not been enacted into positive law. You can verify for yourself which titles the U.S. Code are positive law by referring to the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204. Whenever there is a dispute over the meaning of a section of the Internal Revenue Code, the first thing you should do is refer back to the appropriate sections of the Statutes at Large from which a particular code was derived to determine the explicit intent of Congress in enacting that section.

26 CFR’s Part 601 and the IRS publications are not binding on either the IRS or individuals, according to the federal courts (Luhring v. Glotzbach, 304 F.2d. 560 (4th Cir. 05/28/1962), Einhorn v. Dewitt, 618 F.2d. 347 (5th Cir. 06/04/1980)). 26 CFR Part 301, on the other hand, has the force and effect of law and is binding both on the IRS and individuals because it is written by the Secretary of the Treasury under the authority of law found in 26 U.S.C. §7805. Also remember that where there are conflicts in terms and definitions or the application of the law, laws with a higher precedence always overrule those of the lower precedence. For instance, if the IRS publications have a much broader definition of "employer" than the U.S. Code, then the U.S. Code takes precedence. Federal agencies have no constitutional authority to broaden the application of the original law in the U.S. Code from which they derive the regulations they publish in the Federal Register that end up in the Code of Federal Regulations.

We refer you again for a definition of the words found in the U.S. Code as documented in section 3.9.1 of this publication for information about the deceptive/fraudulent word games that the congress and IRS play in the tax code. We also repeat and compare some of these definitions below for your benefit, as evidence of the deliberate deception that is part of the Great IRS Hoax.

<td>Employee status under common law. Generally, a worker who performs services for you is your employee if you can control what will be done and how it will be done. This is so even when you give the employee freedom of action. What matters is that you have the right to control the details of how the services are performed. See Pub. 5-A, Employer's Supplemental Tax Guide, for more information on how to determine whether an individual providing services is an independent contractor or an employee. Generally, people in business for themselves are not employees. For example, doctors, lawyers, veterinarians, construction contractors, and others in an independent trade in which they offer their services to the public are usually not employees. However, if the business is incorporated, corporate officers who work in the business are employees. If an employer-employee relationship exists, it does not matter what it is called. The employee may be called an agent or independent contractor. It also does not matter how payments are measured or paid, what they are called, or if the employee works full or part time.</td>

a) The term employer means any person for whom an individual performs or performed any service, of whatever nature, as the employee of such person.

b) It is not necessary that the services be continuing at the time the wages are paid in order that the status of employer exist. Thus, for purposes of withholding, a person for whom an individual has performed past services for which he is still receiving wages from such person is an employer.

c) An employer may be an individual, a corporation, a partnership, a trust, an estate, a joint-stock company, an association, or a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or other unincorporated organization, group or entity. A trust or estate, rather than the fiduciary acting for or on behalf of the trust or estate, is generally the employer.

d) The term employer embraces not only individuals and organizations engaged in trade or business, but organizations exempt from income tax, such as religious and charitable organizations, educational institutions, clubs, social organizations and societies, as well as the governments of the United States, the States, Territories, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia, including their agencies, instrumentalities, and political subdivisions.

For example, where wages, such as certain types of pensions or retired pay, are paid by a trust and the person for whom the services were performed has no legal control over the payment of such wages, the trust is the employer. (g) The term employer also means a person making a payment of a supplemental unemployment compensation benefit which is treated under paragraph (b)(14) of Sec. 31.3401(a)-1 as if it were wages. For example, if supplemental unemployment compensation benefits are paid from a trust which was created under the terms of a collective bargaining agreement, the trust shall generally be deemed to be the employer. However, if the person making such payment is acting solely as an agent for another person, the term employer shall mean such other person and not the person actually making the payment. (h) It is a basic purpose to centralize in the employer the responsibility for withholding, returning, and paying the tax, and for furnishing the statements required under section 6051 and Sec. 31.6051-1. The special definitions of the term employer in paragraphs (e), (f), and (g) of this section are designed solely to meet special or unusual situations. They are not intended as a departure from the basic purpose.</td>

of a service center, may, subject to such terms and conditions as he deems proper, authorize such fiduciary, agent, or other person to perform such acts as are required of such employer or employers under those provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and the regulations thereunder which have application, for purposes of the taxes imposed by such chapter or chapters, in respect of such wages or compensation. If the fiduciary, agent, or other person is authorized by the district director, or director of a service center, to perform such acts, all provisions of law (including penalties) and of the regulations prescribed in pursuance of law applicable to employers in respect of such acts shall be applicable to such fiduciary, agent, or other person. However, each employer for whom such fiduciary, agent, or other person performs such acts shall remain subject to all provisions of law (including penalties) and of the regulations prescribed in pursuance of law applicable to an employer in respect of such acts. Any application for authorization to perform such acts, signed by such fiduciary, agent, or other person, shall be filed with the district director, or director of a service center, with whom the fiduciary, agent, or other person will, upon approval of such application, file returns in accordance with such authorization.

Did you notice that this code does NOT say that the district director may "order" the agent to withhold? He can only "authorize such fiduciary, agent, or other person to perform such acts as are required of such employer or employers under those provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and the regulations thereunder which have application, for purposes of the taxes imposed by such chapter or chapters, in respect of such wages or compensation". The question arises then: "What if he doesn't want to withhold or the employees don't want him withholding?" The answer is that the agent can't be forced under color of law to withhold according to this.

If the IRS put these unambiguous definitions from the U.S. Code at the beginning of the IRS publications, do you think most people would pay anything to the IRS? NOT! Instead, they put the definitions of "withholding agent", "employee", "trade or business", and "United States" NOT in the CFR's but deep at the end of the U.S.C, where people aren't likely to look at it. Most other titles of the U.S. Code put the definitions at the beginning of the title. In implementing the U.S. Code through the CFR, you will note that the Treasury department left the definition of "employee" intact but considerably broadened the definition of "employer" to deceive people. By what authority did the Treasury and IRS do this? There is none! They have no constitutional or statutory authority to broaden the definition of any term used in the U.S. Code when applying it in the CFR’s. Instead, we believe they simply wanted to have more leverage in the use of scare tactics against private companies so they could prevent a Citizen revolt in the process of refusing to sign W-4’s that illegally authorize the enforcement of what are actually federal donations to the municipal government of the District of Columbia. We believe they were "testing the waters" to see how much the courts and citizens would let them get away with by asking for far more from Americans than they have legal authority to get based on the U.S. Codes that they derive their regulations and authority from.

After all, why would an employee want to argue with their employer (look a gift horse in the mouth) and risk their job by dragging their employer into court to litigate the improper application of the tax code by their employer and the wrongful taking of taxes caused by the misreporting of “taxable income” on their W-2 forms? An old Chinese proverb sums this situation up very wisely:

"The mouth that eats does not talk."

Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

Note, however, that the term "employer" in the CFR still depends on and is derived from the definition of employee in the U.S. Code, and therefore it can be no more expansive than the original definition of employer found in the U.S.C. This kind of devious legal chicanery is the reason why even to this day employers still incorrectly report "gross income" in their tax withholdings reported to the IRS, and the IRS wants to keep it that way!

To make matters worse, if you call up the IRS and ask them for advice, they will not claim ANY responsibility for it, nor do they have a legal obligation to assume responsibility! This is true even when the IRS agents are dead wrong! President Reagan attested to this when he said in a 1984 Associated Press (AP) release:

"The government has the nerve to tell the people of the country, 'You figure out how much you owe us—and we can’t help you because our people don’t understand it either (the Code)—and if you make a mistake, we’ll make you pay a penalty for making the mistake.'"

And to further ensconce itself in the “ivory tower”, the IRS came up with Publication 17, which states:

"The publication covers some subjects on which certain courts have taken positions more favorable to the taxpayers than the official position of the Service. Until these interpretations are resolved by higher court decisions, or otherwise, the publication will continue to present the viewpoint of the Service.”

The above is a disclaimer and it is also a tacit admission that IRS publications do not necessarily present the law, but only the law as the IRS wants you to understand it.

Of course, this game-playing by the Department of Plunder directly violates other supreme Court cases, including Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397(1904), which stated:

"Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”

[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397(1904)]

The final twist in the IRS maze comes in IRS Publication 21, where the IRS essentially tells you that you must decide whether you are required to file or not. Ultimately, the decision of whether to file tax returns is truly your responsibility.

Here is what the federal courts say about the admissibility or reliance on the contents of the Internal Revenue Manual:

"Rules contained in Internal Revenue Manual, even if they were codified in the Code of Federal Regulations, did not have force and effect of law, and therefore, district court, in Government’s action to collect assessment, correctly precluded defendant from introducing evidence concerning these provisions.”

"Internal revenue manual was not promulgated pursuant to any mandate or delegation of authority by Congress so that procedures set forth in manual did not have effect of rule of law and therefore were not binding on Internal Revenue Service so that manual conveyed no rights to taxpayers and taxpayers could not allege noncompliance with those procedures to invalidate tax levies.”

3.17 Topical Legal Discussions

3.17.1 Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws

As we mentioned earlier, our very own favorite President, Ronald Reagan, attested to the complexity of the tax code when he said to the Associated Press in 1984:

"The government has the nerve to tell the people of the country, 'You figure out how much you owe us—and we can’t help you because our people don’t understand it either (the Code)—and if you make a mistake, we’ll make you pay a penalty for making the mistake.’"

For several years now, a variety of high public officials have openly declared that the federal income tax code is incredibly complex and needs to be either substantially revised or scrapped. But after making such statements, these officials invariably fail to identify what specific parts of the tax code suffer from this condition, choosing instead to conceal them. Are the objectionable parts of the federal tax code secretly and quietly discussed behind closed Congressional committee doors? If they are, why doesn't someone inform the American public of these deficiencies so that they may likewise participate in this debate? Is it possible that it is the major and not various minor features of the tax code which are complex, even uncertain? Is it possible that these major features are so fundamentally flawed that they simply cannot be repaired? If so, what is the legal consequence of this complexity?

It is alleged that the legal duties arising from the tax code are clearly known to all, but there are a few exceptions to this rule. For example, in United States v. Critzer, 498 F.2d 1160 (4th Cir. 1974), at issue was the validity of the conviction of an Indian for tax evasion. Here, the Bureau of Indian Affairs had informed Mrs. Critzer that the money she derived from real property located within a reservation was not taxable; Mrs. Critzer relied upon this advice and failed to report such income. But, the IRS maintained a contrary position and indicted and secured her conviction for tax evasion. This conviction was reversed on the grounds that the unsettled nature of this field of law precluded any conviction:

"While the record amply supports the conclusion that the underreporting was intentional, the record also reflects that, concededly, whether defendant's unreported income was taxable is problematical and the government is in dispute with itself as to whether the omitted income was taxable," id., at 1160.

"We hold that defendant must be exonerated from the charges lodged against her. As a matter of law, defendant cannot be guilty of willfully evading and defeating income taxes on income, the taxability of which is so uncertain that even co-ordinate branches of the United States Government plausibly reach directly opposing conclusions. As a matter of law, the requisite intent to evade and defeat income taxes is missing. The obligation to pay is so problematical that defendant's actual intent is irrelevant. Even if she had consulted the law and sought to guide herself accordingly, she could have had no certainty as to what the law required.

"It is settled that when the law is vague or highly debatable, a defendant-actually or imputedly-lacks the requisite intent to violate it," id., at 1162.

This single case is an adequate demonstration that there is at least one part of the tax code which is unclear and that lack of clarity caused the reversal of Mrs. Critzer's criminal conviction. But there are others; see United States v. Mallas, 762 F.2d. 361 (4th Cir. 1985) (a prosecution for violating an unclear legal duty abridges principles of due process); United States v. Garber, 607 F.2d. 92, 97-98 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Dahlstrom, 713 F.2d. 1423, 1429 (9th Cir. 1983); United States v. Heller, 830 F.2d. 150 (11th Cir. 1987); and United States v. Harris, 942 F.2d. 1125 (7th Cir. 1991). Unclear legal duties in other fields of law besides taxes likewise prevent criminal convictions on due process grounds; see United States v. Inso, 496 F.2d. 204 (5th Cir. 1974); People v. Dempster, 396 Mich. 700, 242 N.W.2d. 381 (1976); United States v. Anzalone, 766 F.2d. 667, 681-82 (1st Cir. 1985); United States v. Denemark, 779 F.2d. 1559 (11th Cir. 1986); United States v. Varbel, 780 F.2d. 758, 762 (9th Cir. 1986); United States v. Dela Espriella, 781 F.2d. 1432 (9th Cir. 1986); and United States v. Larson, 796 F.2d. 244 (8th Cir. 1986).

Under the U.S. Constitution, the Congress is authorized to impose two different types of taxes, direct and indirect. Via Art. 1, §8, cl. 1, of the Constitution, indirect taxes (excises, duties and imposts) must be uniformly imposed throughout the country. Direct taxes are required via Art. 1, §2, cl. 3, and Art. 1, §9, cl. 4, to be imposed pursuant to the regulation of apportionment. These tax categories are mutually exclusive and any given tax must squarely fit within one category or the other. To which constitutional category does the federal income tax belong? Is it a direct tax, or is it an indirect tax? Do American courts speak with unanimity about this simple question of what is the nature of this tax?

To determine whether and to what extent there is any uncertainty or conflict of authority regarding the nature of the federal income tax requires at least a short review of the fundamental decisions concerning it. In 1894, Congress adopted an income tax act which was declared unconstitutional in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673, aff. reh., 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912 (1895). The Pollock Court found that the income tax was a direct tax which could only be imposed if the tax was apportioned; since this tax was not apportioned, it was found unconstitutional. In an effort to circumvent this decision, the 16th Amendment was proposed by Congress in 1909 and allegedly ratified by the states in 1913. As a result, various opinions arose regarding the legal effect of the amendment. Some factions contended that the 16th Amendment simply eliminated the apportionment requirement for one specific direct tax known as the income tax, while others asserted that the amendment simply withdrew it from the direct tax category and placed the income tax in the indirect, excise tax class. These competing contentions and interpretations were apparently resolved in Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 36 S.Ct. 236 (1916) [1] Rather than attempt a determination of what the Court held in this case, it is more important to learn what various courts have subsequently declared Brushaber to mean.

A little more than a week after the opinion in Brushaber, similar issues were present for decision in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103, 112-13, 36 S.Ct. 278 (1916), which involved the question of whether an inadequate depletion allowance for a mining company constituted a direct tax on the company’s property. As to Baltic’s contention that "the 16th Amendment authorized only an exceptional direct income tax without apportionment," the Court rejected it by stating that this contention:

"... manifestly disregards the fact that by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the 16th Amendment conferred no new power of taxation, but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged, and being placed in the category of direct taxation."

The Court clearly held that income taxes inherently belonged to the indirect/excise tax class, but had been converted by Pollock to direct taxes by considering the source of the income; the 16th Amendment merely banished the rule in Pollock. See also Tyee Realty Co. v. Anderson, 240 U.S. 115, 36 S.Ct. 281 (1916), decided the same day.

However, the victory of defining what the 16th Amendment meant was short lived and later decisions commenced a course which appears to have changed the meaning of Brushaber, or at least provided fertile grounds for an entirely different and opposite construction of it. In William E. Peck & Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 165, 172-73, 38 S.Ct. 432, 433 (1918), which involved a tax imposed on export earnings, the Court seemed to indicate that what was accomplished by the amendment was the elimination of the apportionment requirement for the direct tax known as the income tax, an argument rejected in Baltic:

"The Sixteenth Amendment, although referred to in argument, has no real hearing and may be put out of view. As pointed out in recent decisions, it does not extend the taxing power to new or excepted subjects, but merely removed all occasion, which otherwise might exist, for an apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income, whether it be derived from one source or another."

The drift away from the position of the Court that the income tax via the 16th Amendment fell within the excise tax category became more pronounced with the decision in Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189, 206, 40 S.Ct. 189 (1920), which involved the application of this tax to a stock dividend. Here, the Court plainly stated what many lawyers and some judges today think was accomplished by means of this amendment: the elimination of the apportionment requirement for the direct tax known as the income tax. In deciding this case, the Court quoted the amendment and then redeclared its meaning:

"As repeatedly held, this did not extend the taxing power to new subjects, but merely removed the necessity which otherwise might exist for an apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income. Brushaber,..." 252 U.S., at 206.

"A proper regard for its genesis, as well as its very clear language, requires also that this amendment shall not be extended by loose construction, so as to repeal or modify, except as applied to income, those provisions of the Constitution that require an apportionment according to population for direct taxes upon property, real and personal."

Is this the resurfacing of the argument that "the 16th Amendment authorized only an exceptional direct income tax without apportionment" condemned in Baltic?

From a study of Brushaber, it is thus possible for someone to rely upon those portions of the two phrases at the beginning and ending of 240 U.S. 19 to believe that "the 16th Amendment authorized only an exceptional direct income tax without apportionment." If one fell into that error, this belief would be magnified by the above highlighted portions of Eisner. Confusion abounds as to the correct interpretation of Brushaber, and this is obvious because various courts of this country have relied upon this line of authority to reach diametrically opposing results.

The state courts have been particularly split over the nature of an income tax and whether it constitutes a direct property tax or an indirect/excise, which is not imposed on property. A small number of them hold that an income tax is a direct property tax; see Eliasberg Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Grimes, 204 Ala. 492, 86 So. 56, 58 (1920); State v. Pinder, 108 A. 43, 45 (Del. 1919); Bachrach v. Nelson, 349 Ill. 579, 182 N.E. 909 (1932); Opinion of the Justices, 220 Mass. 613, 108 N.E. 570 (1915); Trefry v. Putnam, 227 Mass. 522, 116 N.E. 904 (1917); Maguire v. Tax Comm. of Commonwealth, 230 Mass. 503, 120 N.E. 162, 166 (1918); Hart v. Tax Comm., 240 Mass. 37, 132 N.E. 621 (1921); In re Ponzi, 6 F.2d. 324 (D.Mass. 1925); Kennedy v. Comm. of Corps. & Taxation, 256 Mass. 426, 152 N.E. 747 (1926); In re Opinion of the Justices, 266 Mass. 583, 165 N.E. 900, 902 (1929); Hutchins v. Comm. of Corps. & Taxation, 272 Mass. 422, 172 N.E. 605, 608 (1930); Bryant v. Comm. of Corps. & Tax’ns., 291 Mass. 498, 197 N.E. 509 (1935); Calliton v. Chase, 174 Wash. 363, 25 P.2d. 81, 82 (1933)(2); Jensen v. Henneford, 185 Wash. 209, 53 P.2d. 607 (1936); State ex rel Manitowoc Gas Co. v. Wisconsin Tax Comm., 161 Wis. 111, 152 N.W. 848, 850 (1915); and State ex rel Sallie F. Moon Co. v. Wisconsin Tax Comm., 166 Wis. 82 (1933).

This split of authority evident within the state cases also manifests itself in the federal appellate courts. For example, in the First Circuit it is difficult to determine the meaning of the 16th Amendment because in United States v. Turano, 802 F.2d. 10, 12 (1st Cir. 1986), that court held that the "16th Amendment eliminated the indirect/direct distinction as applied to taxes on income." Next door in the Second Circuit, there is uncertainty revealed by three completely inconsistent cases. In Jandorff's Estate v. Commissioner, 171 F.2d. 464, 465 (2nd Cir. 1948), that court declared, "It should be noted that estate or inheritance taxes are excises ... while surtaxes, excess profits and war-profits taxes are direct property taxes." Surtaxes are the graduated taxes of the income tax, so this court holds that the personal income tax is a direct tax. But in Ficalora v. Commissioner, 751 F.2d. 85, 87 (2nd Cir. 1984), that court stated that the personal income tax was an indirect tax: "[T]he Supreme Court explicitly stated that taxes on income from one's employment are not direct taxes and are not subject to the necessity of apportionment." But compare United States v. Siika, 845 F.2d. 43, 46 (2nd Cir. 1988) (citing Parker, infra, for the proposition that the tax is direct); In the Third Circuit, it has been held in one case that all income taxes are direct, but in another that only some are direct; see Keasby & Mattison Co. v. Rothensies, 133 F.2d. 894, 897 (3rd Cir. 1943) ([ An income tax is a direct tax upon income therein defined]); and Penn Mutual Indemnity Co. v. Commissioner, 277 F.2d. 15, 19 (3rd Cir. 1960) ([Pollock ... only held that a tax on the income derived from real or personal property was so close to a tax on that property that it could not be imposed without apportionment. The Sixteenth Amendment removed that barrier]).

In the remainder of the Circuits, the difference of opinion as to whether the federal income tax is a direct or indirect tax is likewise as profound and confusing. In the Fourth and Sixth Circuits, the income tax has been held to be an excise tax; see White Packing Co. v. Robertson, 89 F.2d. 775, 779 (4th Cir. 1937) ([The tax is, of course, an excise tax, as are all taxes on income...]); and United States v. Gaumer, 972 F.2d. 723, 725 (6th Cir. 1992) ([Brushaber and the Congressional Record excerpt do indeed state that for constitutional purposes, the income tax is an excise tax]). However, in the Fifth, Seventh, Eighth and Tenth Circuits, arguments that this tax is an excise have been squarely rejected and determined to be frivolous. For example, in Parker v. Commissioner, 724 F.2d. 469, 471 (5th Cir. 1984), the court clearly rejected the contention that this tax is an excise:

"The Supreme Court promptly determined in Brushaber... that the sixteenth amendment provided the needed constitutional basis for the imposition of a direct non-apportioned income tax.

"The sixteenth amendment merely eliminates the requirement that the direct income tax be apportioned among the states.

"The sixteenth amendment was enacted for the express purpose of providing for a direct income tax."

In Coleman v. Commissioner, 791 F.2d. 68, 70 (7th Cir. 1986), the court held that an argument that this tax was an excise was frivolous on its face ("The power thus predates the Sixteenth Amendment, which did no more than remove the apportionment requirement..."). A similar conclusion was reached in United States v. Francisco, 614 F.2d. 617, 619 (8th Cir. 1980), that court declaring that Brushaber held this tax to be a direct one:

"The cases cited by Francisco clearly establish that the income tax is a direct tax, thus refuting the argument based upon his first theory. See Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 19, 36 S.Ct. 236, 242, 60 L.Ed. 493 (1916) (the purpose of the Sixteenth Amendment was to take the income tax out of the class of excises, duties and imposts and place it in the class of direct taxes)."

Finally, in United States v. Lawson, 670 F.2d. 923, 927 (10th Cir. 1982), that court expressed in the following fashion its contempt for the contention that the federal income tax was an excise:

"The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.53
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/"
"Lawson's 'jurisdictional' claim, more accurately a constitutional claim, is based on an argument that the Sixteenth Amendment only authorizes excise-type taxes on income derived from activities that are government-licensed or otherwise specially protected... The contention is totally without merit... The Sixteenth Amendment removed any need to apportion income taxes among the states that otherwise would have been required by Article I, Section 9, clause 4."

Therefore, while the Supreme Court rejected in Baltic the argument that "the 16th Amendment authorized only an direct income tax without apportionment," this position now prevails in the Fifth, Seventh, Eighth and Tenth Circuits. In the Second Circuit, the existing authority illogically claims that the tax is both.

A direct tax applies to and taxes property while an indirect, excise tax is never imposed on property but usually an event such as sales; see Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U.S. 124, 50 S.Ct. 46, 47 (1929).[4] Those courts which hold that an income tax is a direct property tax believe that income is property, yet those which hold that this tax is an excise declare that income is not property. If the courts of this country cannot identify what is the nature of this ephemeral item known as income,[5] then how can the American people? While in Critzer the difference of opinion existed between two government agencies, here the difference of opinion is among many different courts, a situation far more serious than that presented in Heller. Aren't we being subjected to a monumental due process problem far bigger than that to which Mrs.
Critzer was subjected?

The question of what constitutes property is an issue governed by state law; see Acquilino v. United States, 363 U.S. 509, 512-13, 80 S.Ct. 1277, 1280 (1960), and United States v. Baldwin, 575 F.2d. 1097, 1098 (4th Cir. 1978). The definition of the term "property" is very broad; see Samet v. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank, 247 F. 669, 671 (4th Cir. 1917) ("Property is .... everything that has exchangeable value or goes to make up a man's wealth"). It includes money, credits, evidences of debt, and choices in action; see State v. Ward, 222 N.C. 316, 22 S.E.2d. 922, 925 (1942). Income is property according to St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. United States, 617 F.2d. 1293, 1301 (8th Cir. 1980). Accrued wages and salaries are likewise property; see Sims v. United States, 252 F.2d. 434, 437 (4th Cir. 1958), aff'd., 359 U.S. 108, 79 S.Ct.
641 (1959); and Kolb v. Berlin, 356 F.2d. 269, 271 (5th Cir. 1966). Accounts receivable are property; see In re Ralar Distributors, Inc., 4 F.3d. 62, 67 (1st Cir. 1993). Even private employment and a profession are considered property; see United States v. Briggs, 514 F.2d. 794, 798 (5th Cir. 1975).

There appears to be no dispute about the plain requirements of the Constitution that direct taxes must be apportioned and that indirect taxes must be uniform. Likewise as shown above, there is a line of decisional authority regarding the generally accepted proposition that income is property, although there are courts which deny this. In James v. United States, 970
F.2d. 750, 755, 756 n. 11 (10th Cir. 1992), the 10th Circuit made it clear that income is property. Pursuant to United States
v. Lawson, supra, the Tenth Circuit declares that the property known as income is subject to tax under the view that the 16th Amendment eliminated the apportionment requirement for a specific class of property known as income. However, there is ample contrary judicial authority which demonstrates that this construction of the 16th Amendment is erroneous and that the purpose, intent and meaning of the amendment was the opposite construction and that the amendment did not free this one type of property tax from the regulation of apportionment. An error in a logical argument involving a single premise affects the ultimate conclusion. If the Tenth Circuit accepted the proposition that the meaning of the 16th Amendment was contary to that asserted in Lawson, but adhered to its decision in James, a valid legal argument would logically follow that property known as income could not be taxed because the current income tax is not apportioned.

This same problem, but from an opposite perspective, is evident within the Fourth Circuit where the existing authority of Sims v. United States, supra, declares that income is property. Since that Circuit holds that the federal income tax is an excise via White Packing Co. v. Robertson, supra, and since the definition of an excise tax appearing in that Court's opinion in New Neighborhoods, Inc. v. West Virginia Workers' Comp. Fund, 886 F.2d. 714, 719 (4th Cir. 1989), excludes a tax on property, does it not logically follow that there is a tremendous gap in the decisional authority within the Fourth Circuit which presents a view of the law that the property known as income might not be taxed? Based on these cases, is this tax clearly imposed?

Review of the above noted authority in other circuits and states only demonstrates how profound this problem is. In the Sixth Circuit, United States v. Gaumer, supra, declares the income tax to be an excise; via Jack Cole Co. v. MacFarland, 337 S.W.2d. 453, 455-56 (Tenn. 1960), the Tennessee Supreme Court has held that an excise tax cannot be used to tax the right to earn a living. Which authority do the people living in Tennessee follow? If they follow the word of their own state court, they might be charged with a tax crime, yet they have a right to rely upon the word of the courts, even when erroneous; see United States v. Albertini, 830 F.2d. 985, 989 (9th Cir. 1987). A different problem emerges in the Eighth Circuit where United States v. Francisco, supra, holds that an income tax is a direct property tax. Missouri is within the Eighth Circuit, but the Missouri Supreme Court held in Ludlow-Saylor Wire Co. v. Wolfbrinck, supra, that an income tax is an excise; if income is not property under Missouri state law,[6] then how does this federal property tax operate as to this “non-property”? Iowa is also in the Eighth Circuit, but in Hale v. Iowa State Board of Assessment and Review, 232 Iowa 321, 271 N.W. 168, 172 (1937), that court held that “income is not property within the law of taxation.” If state law holds that income is not property yet the federal appellate court for the same state holds the exact opposite, is not a serious uncertainty of the law, due process problem clearly evident?

The decisional authority within the Fifth Circuit, Parker v. Commissioner, supra, holds that this tax is a direct property tax, but a contrary view prevails in Mississippi where its citizens are told that an income tax is an excise; see Hattiesburg Grocery Co. v. Robertson, supra. The courts in Wisconsin and Indiana, via State v. Frear, supra, and Miles v. Dept. of Treasury, supra, have found this tax to be an excise, yet the federal appellate court which encompasses these two states has an entirely different view of the object of the tax; see Coleman v. Commissioner, supra. The Tenth Circuit, which sits in Denver, held in Lawson, supra, that the income tax is a property tax, yet a state court in the same city has declared that such a tax is an excise; see California Co. v. State, supra.

In Alabama, income is property via Eliasberg Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Grimes, supra; but next door in Georgia via Featherstone v. Norman,[7] it is not. While the Eleventh Circuit appears not as yet to have passed upon the question of what type of tax the federal income tax is, consultation of Supreme Court decisions still doesn’t resolve the question. By following the rationale of Brushaber and Bromley, supra, which declare the federal income tax to be an excise tax which is not imposed on property, are the people of Alabama exempt from this tax while those in Georgia are not? But by reversing the choice of Supreme Court decisions to follow in an effort to resolve this controversy merely changes the results but not the problem. By following Eisner which seems to hold that the tax is imposed on property, do the people of Alabama owe the tax while those in Georgia do not? These differing conclusions plainly reveal a serious uncertainty about what is taxed, and no attempt is made herein to offer any explanation for all of this inconsistency; but it is clear that this uncertainty of the law creates a serious due process problem.

The problems created by the failure of American courts to determine what is the nature of an income tax are very broad. Any particular federal tax must fit within one of the two constitutional tax categories and once the category is known, it may be determined whether the tax in question complies with the constitutional regulation for imposition of that type of tax. A direct tax which is uniformly imposed would still be unconstitutional as one imposed in the absence of apportionment. An indirect tax imposed via apportionment would likewise be unconstitutional since it would not be uniform. But if it is impossible to determine which class any given tax falls within, then it is likewise impossible to determine which constitutional regulation, if any, applies to that tax. If the courts of this country hold that an income tax is both an excise tax and a direct one, it cannot with any degree of certainty be determined what constitutional restrictions might or might not apply to this tax or what is even the meaning of the 16th Amendment. What’s more, it cannot be determine what is income, whether property or non-property.

But this is not the only fundamental problem for the federal income tax. Additionally, the question of which statute controls the duty to file income tax returns is subject to judicial discretion. In Commissioner v. Lane-Wells Co., 321 U.S. 219, 222, 64 S.Ct. 511, 513 (1944), the Court noted that §54 of the 1939 Internal Revenue Code, the predecessor for Internal Revenue Code §6001, related to the filing requirement; see also Updike v. United States, 8 F.2d. 913, 915 (8th Cir. 1925). In True v. United States, 354 F.2d. 323, 324 (Cl.Cl. 1965), United States v. Carlson, 260 F.Suppr. 423, 425 (E.D.N.Y. 1966), White v. Commissioner, 72 U.S.T.C. 1126, 1129 (1979), McCaskill v. Commissioner, 77 U.S.T.C. 689, 698 (1981), Counts v. Commissioner, 774 F.2d. 426, 427 (11th Cir. 1985), Blount v. Commissioner, 86 U.S.T.C. 383, 386 (1986), and Beard v. Commissioner, 793 F.2d. 139 (6th Cir. 1986), these courts held that Internal Revenue Code §6011 related to the filing requirement. In United States v. Moore, 627 F.2d. 830, 834 (7th Cir. 1980), United States v. Dawes, 951 F.2d. 1189, 1192, n. 3 (10th Cir. 1991), and United States v. Hicks, 947 F.2d. 1356, 1360 (9th Cir. 1991), those courts held that Internal Revenue Code §§ 6011 and 6012 governed this duty. In contrast, the cases of Steinbrecher v. Commissioner, 712 F.2d. 195, 198 (5th Cir. 1983), United States v. Bowers, 920 F.2d. 220, 222 (4th Cir. 1990), and United States v. Neff, 954 F.2d. 698, 699 (11th Cir. 1992), held that only §6012 governed this duty. But in United States v. Pilcher, 672 F.2d. 875, 877 (11th Cir. 1982), none of the above sections were mentioned and it was held that §7203 required returns to be filed. It is very apparent that there is even a diversity of opinion among judges regarding which sections of the Internal Revenue Code govern the requirement to file income tax returns.

The observation of the dissenting judge in Culliton v. Chase, 25 P.2d. at 89-90, that this “disagreement of the courts and judges on identical problems seems to afford the highest proof that ‘reasonable doubt’ does exist,” is particularly appropriate here. *If American courts cannot decide such fundamental questions as what is the nature of the income tax and which section of the Internal Revenue Code requires the filing of an income tax return, then it is obvious that a serious due process problem exists within the federal income tax code.

If American courts cannot decide such fundamental questions as what is the nature of the income tax and which section of the Internal Revenue Code requires the filing of an income tax return, then it is obvious that the problem with this tax involves these basic questions. Since even the courts are split over these questions, shouldn't we just scrap the whole thing since the condition which exists is incapable of repair?

Based on the foregoing discussion, congress apparently must like this kind of legal anarchy over the tax codes, because it has existed ever since income taxes were introduced with the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and it has never been resolved since the amendment was ratified in 1916. It is clear that amendment introduced a lot of ambiguity in the tax system, which Congress has exploited to their advantage, as evidenced by the fact that the IRS forms and publications still largely ignore the 26 U.S.C. §861 "source" issue as well as the "gross income" issue. In addition, the congress has made the tax code MORE, not LESS ambiguous over the years by trying to downplay the "source" issue, making the wording confusing and unnecessarily complex, as well as removing definitions from the code needed to interpret it, such as "Employee", for instance (see section 3.9.1.4 for further details on this subject). So long as the congress can continue to advantage the government financially by exploiting that deliberate ambiguity and confusion and preserve the illusion of "freedom and liberty" within our country thereby, then there are good reasons for not resolving the conflict by modifying the legislation to read more clearly and eliminate the need to litigate the issues further.

In 1913 during the debate on the first income tax act under the 16th Amendment, Senator Elihu Root commented about the complexity of that first law:

"I guess you will have to go to jail. If that is the result of not understanding the Income Tax Law I shall meet you there. We shall have a merry, merry time, for all of our friends will be there. It will be an intellectual center, for no one understands the Income Tax Law except persons who have not sufficient intelligence to understand the questions that arise under it."[8]

Apparently, nothing has changed.

END NOTES:

[1] In this decision, there is a very lengthy sentence which contains the following phrase: "... by which alone such taxes were removed from the great class of excises, duties and imposts subject to the rule of uniformity, and were placed under the other or direct class." 240 U.S., at 19. This phrase and the one at the very end of this paragraph are almost identical. This language was used to describe the contention the Court was rejecting, not approving.

[2] The dissent in this case noted the wide divergence of the authority as to whether the tax is a direct property tax or an excise. It commented: "The disagreement of the courts and judges on identical problems seems to afford the highest proof that 'reasonable doubt' does exist," 25 P.2d, at 89-90.

[3] It is interesting to note that this court relied upon those portions of the Brushaber decision quoted previously where the Court noted the argument is was precisely rejecting. If the judges who are legal scholars are capable of completely misunderstanding this opinion, is it not also probable that the American people and even lawyers can make the same mistake?

[4] The Court defined these two types of taxes in the following manner: "While taxes levied upon or collected from persons because of their general ownership of property may be taken to be direct,... a tax imposed upon a particular use of property or the exercise of a single power over property incidental to ownership, is an excise which need not be apportioned..."

[5] At least one court has declared that the term "income" is not defined in the Internal Revenue Code; see United States v. Ballard, 535 F.2d. 400, 404 (8th Cir. 1976).

[6] The Court in Ludlow, 205 S.W. at 198, declared that income is not property: "It is apparent therefore, that when the Constitution of 1875 was adopted, the word 'property' as the basis for taxation, proportioned to value, had acquired a fixed and definite meaning preclusive of personal incomes, occupations, privileges and similar sources of revenue."
3.17.2 Reasonable Cause

The concept of "reasonable cause" is a vitally important one... and is applicable to the information in many of the subjects discussed in this document. The best place to begin the explanation of "reasonable cause" is in a generally accepted standard of legal construction and meaning, Black’s law Dictionary, which sees this as a term relating to Criminal law. Yet the term contains the following relevant attributes:

"...(the) state of facts as would lead (a) man of ordinary care and prudence to believe and entertain a strong and honest suspicion."

Prudence is a very important word in this statement...

There are many mentions of "reasonable cause" in the statutes, such as a reason for not withholding the income tax from the source under § 3402, and not sending in a return the IRS expects under 6724, but none really identifies what reasonable cause means under other laws lacking such definitions.

The truth is discovered, in 26 CFR § 1.6661-6(b) where the regulation plainly states that: "reliance on a position" contained in a proposed regulation would ordinarily constitute reasonable cause and good faith. The word "ordinarily" makes it plainly clear when this definition of the term is in effect.

Also see 26 CFR § 1.6661-6, the mere advice of CPA’s and tax professionals cannot be relied upon for 'reasonable cause' and good faith as the Secretary has this to say about the subject:

Reliance on an information return or on the advice of a professional (such as an appraiser, an attorney, or an accountant) would not necessarily constitute a showing of reasonable cause and good faith. Similarly, reliance on facts that, unknown to the taxpayer, are incorrect, would not necessarily constitute a showing of reasonable cause and good faith.

It is plainly apparent by this, the only clear and expansive definition of "reasonable cause" in the entire tax code, stating that any action taken must be well grounded in fact and in law to constitute 'reasonable cause' and 'good faith', after prudent examination of both the facts and the law, not merely advice..

From our understanding, without this criteria being fulfilled, there is nowhere for a payor or employer to claim "reasonable cause and good faith" for their actions, such as ignoring a claim made pursuant to 26 CFR §1.6041A(a)(ii), or any other law which plainly means what the words in it say... if someone has acted without reasonable cause, what then can be their excuse and protection?

3.17.3 The Collective Entity Rule

3.17.3.1 Origins of the Collective Entity Rule

The U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly held that the mandate of the Fifth Amendment, which protects "persons" from compulsory self-incrimination, applies only to "natural people" and not to "fictitious" ones, such as limited and general partnerships, limited liability companies, and corporations. Therefore, corporations, partnerships, limited partnerships, limited liability companies, and other kinds of business organizations are treated differently from individuals for Fifth Amendment purposes. This concept is known as the "Collective Entity Rule."

The Collective Entity Rule was first articulated in Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 26 S.Ct. 370, 50 L.Ed. 652 (1906). In that case, a corporate officer, who had been served with a subpoena duces tecum commanding the production of corporate books and records, claimed a Fifth Amendment privilege against production of the corporate books and records. The Hale Court denied the claim of a privilege, opining that:
Chapter 3: Legal Authority for Income Taxes in the United States

"[W]e are of the opinion that there is a clear distinction . . . between an individual and a corporation, and . . .
the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for examination at the suit of the State. 5

Hale made it clear that a corporation has no Fifth Amendment privilege that insulates the collective entity from producing corporate books and records. The Court's rationale was that because the corporation:

is a creature of the state[,] . . . [i]t receives certain special privileges and franchises, and holds them subject to the laws of the state and the limitations of its charter. Its powers are limited by law. It would be a strange anomaly to hold that a state, having chartered a corporation to make use of certain franchises, could not, in the exercise of its sovereignty, inquire how these franchises had been employed, and whether they had been abused, and demand the production of the corporate books and papers for that purpose. However, the Hale Court did not decide whether a corporate officer or custodian of records could refuse to produce corporate documents by invoking his or her personal Fifth Amendment privilege.6

In Wilson v. United States, 221 U.S. 361 (1911), the Supreme Court held that the corporate officer or custodian cannot use his or her personal Fifth Amendment privilege to shield the corporation from producing corporate records. The Court reasoned that:

[W]ilson held the corporate books subject to the corporate duty. If the corporation were guilty of misconduct, he could not withhold its books to save it; and if he were implicated in the violation of law, he could not withhold the books to protect himself from the effect of their disclosures. The [State's] reserved powers of visitation would seriously be embarrassed, if not wholly defeated in its effective exercise, if guilty officers could refuse inspection of the records and papers of the corporation. No personal privilege to which they are entitled requires such a conclusion... [T]he visitatorial power which exists with respect to the corporation of necessity reaches the corporate books without regard to the conduct of the custodian.71

3.17.3.2 Extensions to the Collective Entity Rule

Very recently the Supreme Court held in United States v. Hubbell, 120 S.Ct. 2037 (2000) that interrogatories and depositions of natural persons, are protected under the Collective Entity Rule. Clearly distinguishing between you and I as natural persons and a person who is subject to an internal revenue tax.

This principle of the Collective Entity Rule was recently applied in Tax Court by Larry Becraft in stopping the government from compelling the production of documents protected by the Fifth Amendment. You might also cite the following two cases regarding the Collective Entity Rule:

filing in court, in the Remedy portion. I think "MRF-1" should be "MFR-1".

Who or what are you? Are you a piece of paper, a legal fiction called a person, or are you a Natural Person or Human?

Black's Law Dictionary defines a corporation as:

"An artificial person or legal entity created by or under the authority of the laws of a state. An association of persons created by statute as a legal entity. The law treats the corporation as a person which can sue and be sued."

Therefore, under the laws of the state, as a "person" rather than a "natural person" you are a legal fiction a corporate/person property of the state and federal government! Natural persons such as yourself are living Souls in human form who cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of earning a living.

3.17.3.3 Legal Fiction

71 Id. at 384-385. See Dreier v. United States, 221 US 394, 31 S.Ct. 550, 55 L.Ed. 784 (1911) (it makes no difference that the document request was directed to the custodian of records rather than to the corporation itself; so long as the documents are property of the corporation, they must be produced).
Two things are required if you are to be taxed. First, the government must have jurisdiction over you as a corporation/person (rather than a "natural person")... property of the state. And you must be engaged in some activity, which is taxable and requires the exercise of a government-granted privilege.

In Section 3.8.9 where we talked about the 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which outlawed slavery we pointed out that the reason there was no law requiring you to file or pay income tax is because such a law would create the prohibited condition of slavery and involuntary servitude. Later I pointed out that if there were no law requiring you to file or pay, the authority of the government to tax you must come from a somewhere else. That somewhere else is a contract.

THERE IS A CONTRACT BETWEEN YOU AND THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WHERE IN YOU GIVE THEM AUTHORITY OVER YOU AND THE POWER TO TAX YOU.

3.17.3.4  Your Fall

According to the Constitution, you are one of the "We the People" who created the Federal Government. It is self-evident that the government is paper and you are a natural person. But from the government’s point of view, you are their corporate/person, property, or slave.

The journey from freedom to slavery began when you applied for your Social Security number and checked the box that said, "Check here if you are a U.S. citizen." By checking the box you were born again, a citizen, a paper creation of the government.

According to 26 CFR §1-1.1(c)

"Every person born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen."

Do you get it? Remember that there are three definitions for the words United States or united States (see section 4.5 for further details). When United States is written with a capital U and S it is referring to the Washington, DC, district of Columbia, United States, created by and under the authority of the Constitution. The use of the words "subject to its jurisdiction" should tell you that a "citizen" is under the authority, and corporate/person property, of the United States.

For most natural persons this is their first contact with the Federal Government. Pretty stupid on our part not to know this, but very slick on the part of the lawyers and politicians who would bind you into slavery. Relax, this is the nexus point, the loophole that will save your butt. Now things will get worse before they get better.

Probably your second contact with the Federal Government was when you voluntarily turned over your Social Security number, when asked by your Employer to fill out a W-4. Filling out the form, you entered your number of dependents and skipped past item 7:

"I claim exemption from withholding for (year) and I certify that I meet BOTH of the following conditions for exemption.
- Last year I had a right to a refund of All Federal income tax withheld because I had No tax liability AND
- This year I expect a refund of ALL Federal income tax withheld because I expect to have NO tax liability.
- If you meet both conditions, write 'EXEMPT' here"

Without exception, everywhere you look in the IRS Code and every single Federal Court case dealing with taxation, what is being taxed are corporations/persons and property of the government, engaged in a taxable activity. The activity you and your employer are engaged in, according to your Individual Master File, has something to do with source that is taxable such as alcohol, tobacco, or firearms. These are the only sources that the Federal government can tax within the states, according to the Constitution. And get this; you are engaged in one of these source activities generally in Puerto Rico, Guam, or the Virgin Islands.

To verify that you have income from a taxable source and that you are engaged in a taxable activity in Puerto Rico, Guam, or the Virgin Islands, use the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) to get a copy of your Individual Master file from the IRS.

3.17.4 The President’s Role In Income Taxation

Presidents since Abraham Lincoln have been involved in the deception that is the income tax. William Howard Taft played a big part in proposing an income tax amendment. He elevated Justice White to Chief Justice. This was the first time a sitting Justice had been elevated to Chief Justice. Taft would be named Chief Justice upon White’s death. The man who figured out the secret of the Sixteenth Amendment, Charles Evans Hughes was made Chief Justice when Taft died in 1930. I can’t imagine a tighter lock on the law than what I just described. Are we going to have fun looking at those good old boys? White and Taft died in harness. Hughes retired in 1941 and died in 1948.

The President appoints the United States Attorney General and that office has for years falsely claimed in its prosecutions of persons who have refused to file or have allegedly filed false tax returns, that the Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution gave Congress the power to tax personal income. The U.S. Attorney General’s Office also falsely claims personal income tax is a direct tax that does not have to be apportioned. We know based on Supreme Court case history that the only tax referred to in the Sixteenth Amendment is an excise tax on income that does not have to be apportioned.

That claim can be refuted by simply looking at the Sixteenth Amendment and asking yourself, "What kind of tax does not have to be apportioned?" Yes, that’s right an indirect tax. The United States Supreme Court has said that the purpose of the Sixteenth Amendment was for the courts to forever keep the income tax in the category of an excise tax. It does not add to the power of Congress to tax, it does not amend, change or eliminate any protection in the Constitution. I submit that the Sixteenth Amendment has been used since its purported ratification to frighten us into believing that Congress was given a special power to tax our incomes without having to specifically describe a taxable harmful activity, identify an activity in need of regulation, or set the total amount of direct tax to be apportioned among the states.

Big government was created out of this mythical tax. To this day no one has found the subject of an excise called an income tax, that would apply to most individuals.

The Internal Revenue Code is full of excise taxes. There are taxes on making airline flights, telephone calls, fishing rods, tires, liquor, fuels, cigars, snuff, outboard motors, bows and arrows, gas guzzler cars etc. What you won’t find is a tax on the activities that produce your income. Lawful taxation of harmful activities and regulated industries helps to secure our Rights to Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. Taxation of our God given rights reduces us to slavery. Before the income tax, we were free to choose whether or not we would be taxed, and taxation of people was consensual and voluntary. The law was clear. After 1913, big government began its cancerous growth. The “income tax” grew by fraud, intimidation and deceit, and President Taft started this fraud going in 1909 by proposing the Sixteenth Amendment, and its cancerous growth has gone unabated and unchecked since then. Making you believe that you owe a tax and then coercing you to pay it by threatening to put you in prison if you don’t is real tax fraud. A free people must consent to their taxation or they are a conquered people.

3.17.5 A Historical Perspective on Income Taxes

The Declaration of Independence is the first and most important part of our organic law. This great document firmly establishes the source of our individual rights and sovereignty. Our only Duty, as a people, is to throw off Government that, "evinces a Design to reduce them under absolute Despotism." We owe no other duty to government and our Constitution limits government in order to maintain our freedom. Limiting government power is the key to remaining free.

National taxation is limited to four taxes: direct, imposts, duties and excises. No national tax is proper that cannot be made to fit in the mold of the four taxes. The Sixteenth Amendment is a further limitation on the power of Congress to tax. After the ratification of the amendment, an "income tax" cannot be a direct tax. If an "income tax" is to be imposed among the several states it must be in the form of the remaining three, indirect taxes, or one of them. The excise is the likely choice, since it regularly produces income of some kind.

The King of Great Britain caused the dissolution of the political connection with the United States of America by his many injurious acts including one, "For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent." The Congress created an "income tax" that does not fit within the mold established by the Constitution. Such a tax may only be imposed upon us with our consent. The voluntary yielding to the will of the proposition of another is necessary for valid consent. This is called "informed consent". Such consent is an act of reason, attended by due deliberation and exercised only after full consideration of the... values on each side. The blind execution of tax agreements (W-4 and 1040) under penalty of perjury, without sufficient tax knowledge and under duress is an act of negligence and cowardice when committed by a Citizen. It is also an act of duress. Under equitable principles, any such act committed without informed consent while under duress becomes the act of the legal person instituting the duress. Since the duress originates from the unlawful activities of the Internal Revenue Service to illegally enforce the Internal Revenue Code, then if anyone is prosecuted for any act resulting from that duress, it would have to be the IRS or more particularly, the appointed officers working within the IRS who are individually liable for the unlawful acts of the people who work below them. The pronouncements of the U.S. Congress below establish exactly how this conspiracy against the rights of Americans are perpetrated by such “communists” and “tyrants” below:

TITLE 50 > CHAPTER 23 > SUBCHAPTER IV > Sec. 841.

Sec. 841. - Findings and declarations of fact

The Congress finds and declares that the Communist Party of the United States [consisting of the IRS, DOJ, and a corrupted federal judiciary], although purportedly a political party, is in fact an instrumentality of a conspiracy to overthrow the [dejure] Government of the United States [and replace it with a defacto government ruled by the judiciary]. It constitutes an authoritarian dictatorship [IRS, DOJ, and corrupted federal judiciary in collusion], within a [constitutional] republic, demanding for itself the rights and privileges [including immunity from prosecution for their wrongdoing in violation of Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8 of the Constitution] accorded to political parties, but denying to all others the liberties [Bill of Rights] guaranteed by the Constitution. Unlike political parties, which evolve their policies and programs through public means, by the reconciliation of a wide variety of individual views, and submit those policies and programs to the electorate at large for approval or disapproval, the policies and programs of the Communist Party are secretly [by corrupt judges and the IRS in complete disregard of the tax laws] prescribed for it by the foreign leaders of the world Communist movement [the IRS and Federal Reserve]. Its members [the Congress, which was terrorized to do IRS bidding recently by the framing of Congressman Traficant] have no part in determining its goals, and are not permitted to voice dissent to party objectives. Unlike members of political parties, members of the Communist Party are recruited for indoctrination [in the public schools by homosexuals, liberals, and socialists] with respect to its objectives and methods, and are organized, instructed, and disciplined [by the IRS and a corrupted judiciary] to carry into action slavishly the assignments given them by their hierarchical chieftains. Unlike political parties, the Communist Party [thanks to a corrupted federal judiciary] acknowledges no constitutional or statutory limitations upon its conduct or upon that of its members. The Communist Party is relatively small numerically, and gives scant indication of capacity ever to attain its ends by lawful political means. The peril inherent in its operation arises not from its numbers, but from its failure to acknowledge any limitation as to the nature of its activities, and its dedication to the proposition that the present constitutional Government of the United States ultimately must be brought to ruin by any available means, including resort to force and violence [or using income taxes]. Holding that doctrine, its role as the agency of a hostile foreign power [the Federal Reserve and the American Bar Association (ABA)] renders its existence a clear present and continuing danger to the security of the United States. It is the means whereby individuals are seduced into the service of the world Communist movement, trained to do its bidding, and directed and controlled in the conspiratorial performance of their revolutionary services. Therefore, the Communist Party should be outlawed.

"To the security of a free Constitution, education contributes ... by teaching the people themselves to know and value their own rights."

"The history of liberty is the history of the limitation of governmental power, not the increase of it."

[Woodrow Wilson]

"They [The makers of the Constitution] conferred, as against the government, the right to be let alone - the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men."

[Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis, 1928] [emphasis added]

"In the general course of human nature, A POWER OVER A MAN’s SUBSISTENCE AMOUNTS TO A POWER OVER HIS WILL."

[Alexander Hamilton, The Federalist, No. 79]

"America is much more than a geographical fact. It is a political and moral fact -- the first community in which men set out in principle to institutionalize freedom, responsible government, and human equality."

[Adlai Stevenson]

After reading the previous chapter on the legal authority for income taxes, it ought to be pretty clear after seeing all the game-playing Congress did with the tax code that we should:

"Always question authority!"

"Always challenge jurisdiction!"

Why should we question authority and challenge jurisdiction? Because if we aren't watching the government closely and keeping them accountable, responsible, and constrained in power by the law and the system of checks and balances that our founders gifted us with, then tyranny is virtually guaranteed:

"Single acts of tyranny may be ascribed to the accidental opinion of a day. But a series of oppressions, ... pursued unalterably through every change of ministers, too plainly proves a deliberate systematic plan of reducing us to slavery."

[Thomas Jefferson]

How do we question authority? By looking at where that authority derives and ensuring that politicians and government officials, when they order us to do something, be willing and able to describe to us the laws that give them their legal authority. It is then our duty, as responsible citizens, to read the laws ourselves and ensure that these officials remain strictly within the legal and constitutional bounds of their authority in order to prevent or avoid abuses of their authority. It is also our duty to ensure that government power and authority is restrained by proper oversight and a system of checks and balances to ensure that it does not concentrate into one spot and lead to tyranny. This is because "absolute power corrupts absolutely", as they say. The voting booth, the jury box, our right to own guns and to use those guns to protect ourselves, and the Grand Jury are the only thing that prevents tyranny from spreading and our politicians from becoming complete tyrants.

Knowing your constitutional, statutory, and common-law rights and the authority and jurisdiction of each government organization is therefore the first major step in questioning authority, which we should all do throughout our dealings with any government organization.

Within the court system, legal authority is summed up in one word: jurisdiction. A court cannot order us to do anything unless and until it can establish that it has "jurisdiction" to order us, or the people or institutions that control our assets, to do something.

This chapter therefore discusses the extent of our rights. For the record, we’ve included a legal definition of “rights”:

"RIGHTS. Individual liberties either expressly provided for in the state or federal constitutions, such as the right to assemble or free speech, or which have been found to exist as those constitutions have been interpreted, such as the right to an abortion; that which a person is entitled to have, or to do, or to receive from others, within the limits prescribed by the law; an enforceable legal right; or the capacity to enforce that right; “a
These rights, in turn, circumscribe the limits of the constitutional and legal authority which any official in our federal and state governments must abide by and respect in administering and executing the laws of the Constitution, the U.S. Code, the Code of Federal Regulations, and your state statutes and regulations.

We will also clarify in this chapter that ultimately, your legal and civil rights come not from your citizenship primarily, but from where you live. That’s right, you have been laboring under a misapprehension for most of your life. The portion of our Constitution called the Bill of Rights, from which you derive your rights, attaches to you not by virtue of your citizenship, but by virtue of where you live. Here are a few of the many examples of that:

> [Baltz v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]

> “The very essence of civil liberty certainly consists in the right of every individual [not citizen, but individual] to claim the protection of the laws, whenever he receives an injury. One of the first duties of government is to afford that protection.”
> [Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137, 1 Cranch 137, 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803)]

> “RIGHT: ... Civil rights are such as belong to every citizen of the state or country, or, in a wider sense, to all its inhabitants [citizens or not], and are not connected with the organization or administration of the government.”

That’s right: you don’t have to be a “citizen” to have rights here in America, because God gave you those rights and they attach to the land you live on and were born on, as you will learn in section 4.11. Being an “inhabitant” is good enough to have the government’s protection for most laws. This is extremely important and something that few Americans fully understand. It is also something the courts are very reluctant to tell you outright because they want you to become a “citizen” so they can induce you to trade in your rights in exchange for taxable government “privileges”.

We’ll start off this chapter by talking in the next section about a subject called “Natural Order”, because that subject is foundational to understanding the rest of the chapter and forming an accurate and enlightened view of the world around us. You will not, in fact, understand most of the content of Chapter 5 unless and until you can grasp this chapter, and especially the next section. Why are this chapter and the next section so important? Because by reading and understanding them, you will understand, for instance:

1. Why the source of all authority and power is not our government, but God and Nature’s Laws, which are both eternal and immutable.
2. Why whenever we try to deviate from the Natural Order or Natural Law that God gave to us as human beings, our government becomes corrupt and begins abusing our rights and exploiting the very people that it was instituted to help and protect.
3. How government as it is practiced today has indeed become a religion of its own making in violation of the First Amendment (see section 0 for further details).
4. Why the government can only tax the corporations and franchises that it creates.

5. That “police powers” are reserved with the states under the Tenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and federal jurisdiction within the borders of the states are severely and necessarily limited to the specific powers delegated and enumerated to the federal government by the Constitution. Any other act or jurisdiction pursued by our federal government is “unlawful” and “illegal” and punishable by Treason against the Constitution.

6. Why “income” in a constitutional sense can only be defined as “corporate profit” anywhere and everywhere in our tax code. Any other design for our country’s system of taxation produces tyranny, slavery, and despotism.

7. Why the government can’t tax people directly (direct taxes), because it didn’t create people: God did!

8. How the ignorance that results from our youth, relative inexperience, and naïve views of the law propagated by a corrupted media and our failing public/government education system has clouded our perceptions so that we cannot effectively discern or recognize truth as a civilization and a culture, and how that ignorance and disinformation is hurting us and bringing God’s vengeance upon our country.

9. How our ignorance and inexperience has caused us to make unrealistic “presumptions” about the world and our government that often leads us into sin and subjection and slavery to that government, which is why we condemned ignorance earlier in section 1.8 and presumptions earlier in section 2.8.2.

Most of us have been making uninformed “presumptions” about our citizenship, the law, or our rights for most of our adult life without ever realizing it, as a matter of fact. The author fell in that category for literally decades before researching and writing this book, for instance. As we said earlier in section 1.8, the remedy for these errors is education and more importantly not earthly wisdom, but the pure and perfect wisdom of God as revealed in His word and through His Holy Spirit, or your conscience, whichever you prefer to call it:

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."
[Prov. 9:10, Bible, NKJV]

“He who gets wisdom loves his own soul; he who keeps understanding will find good.”
[Prov. 19:8, Bible, NKJV]

"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding."
[Prov. 4:7, Bible, NKJV]

The purpose of education is to train our senses and inform our discretion to recognize and discern truth and to do so free of incorrect presumptions fed to us by the government and a corrupted media. Therefore, before we begin investigating the rights and citizenship subjects addressed in this chapter, we must first use education to calibrate our world view and undo the false presumptions we have been fed with and conditioned by for most of our lives. This will ensure that our world view is realistic and informed and consistent with Natural Law, God’s truth, and the world around us: not as we in our ignorance and inexperience perceive it, but as it really is! Our world view is of utmost importance and governs how we perceive and more importantly act and react to the world around us. From our world view comes our priorities, our goals, and the motives that govern everything we do.

Consequently, the subject of this next section is the single most important and fascinating part of this entire book, we believe, and think that it will completely change your view of the world after you have read and reread and taken the time to understand it. Pray about it and think hard about it and ask the Holy Spirit or your conscience for confirmation, because it’s a fundamental and profound teaching that exposes the heart and the cause of most of the deception and tyranny that we presently live under in these great United States of America. You may perceive that the ideas expressed in the next section appear completely different from the mainstream media, from government propaganda, and in some cases from many churches, but we assure you that the foundation of everything in the next section comes right out of the Bible and the mouth of no less than the U.S. Supreme Court, and it isn’t likely that you’ll get a more authoritative or enlightened source than these two. So sit back and take your time and look everything up that we cite if you like in order to verify and validate what we are saying and prove to yourself that it isn’t just our opinion, but a fact that you can rely upon and build your whole life around as we have done.

In writing this chapter, we make frequent use of what is referred to as “moral evidence”, which is every bit as admissible and credible in a court of law as any piece of physical evidence or testimony ever might be:

Moral evidence. As opposed to “mathematical” or “demonstrative” evidence, this term denotes that kind of evidence which, without developing an absolute and necessary certainty, generates a high degree of probability or persuasive force. It is founded upon analogy or induction, experience of the ordinary course of nature or the sequence of events, and the testimony of men.
We encourage you to use this chapter as evidence in your own litigation to defend your God-given rights. Writing and rewriting the next section certainly has completely and permanently changed our world view for the better. ☺

4.1 Natural Order

“Don’t go around saying the world owes you a living. The world owes you nothing. It was here first.”

[Mark Twain]

“Men do not make laws. They do but discover them. Laws must be justified by something more than the will of the majority. They must rest on the eternal foundation of righteousness. That state is most fortunate in its form of government which has the aptest instruments for the discovery of law.”

[Calvin Coolidge, to the Massachusetts State Senate, January 7, 1914]

“If the jury feels the law is unjust [violates God’s law], we recognize the undisputed power of the jury to acquit, even if its verdict is contrary to the law as given by a judge, and contrary to the evidence ... and the courts must abide by that decision.”

[U.S. v. Moylan, 417 F.2d. at 1006 (1969)]

“The sole end for which mankind are warranted, individually or collectively, in interfering with the liberty of any of their number is self-protection.”

[John Stuart Mill]

“I have lived, Sir, a long time, and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth - that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid?”

[Benjamin Franklin]

We explained Natural Law earlier in section 3.4, and Natural Order is an extension of Natural Law. The foundation of Natural Order is the notion that all creations are subject to and subservient to their Creator, who is always the sovereign relative to the creation. God created man so He is the Sovereign relative to man. Man created the states of the Union, so the people of the state are sovereign relative to their state government. The states of the Union then created the federal government, so the states are the sovereigns relative to the federal government and the federal government is subservient to and subordinate to them. The authority delegated by the states to the federal government is a definition and limitation of the power of the federal (not national) government and under the Tenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution: “The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people”. Here is an example of this concept right from no less than the U.S. Supreme Court:

Natural Order therefore defines the natural hierarchy of sovereignty in all of creation based on the order that all things were created. In the words of former President Calvin Coolidge, Natural Law cannot be created by man: it can only be discovered, and the same is true of Natural Order. Natural law is therefore a product of the following Natural Order and hierarchy of sovereignty. This hierarchy of sovereignty is unchangeable and immutable and cannot be denied, denounced, or legislated away by any court or government because it is a product of who and what we are as human beings. All human beings instinctively understand its meaning and application. Below is a diagram of Natural Order:

In the above diagram everyone at a particular level is a “fiduciary” of the parties above and they are bound to this position by contract or by oath of office.

fiduciary duty: A duty to act for someone else’s benefit, while subordinating one’s personal interests to that of the other person. It is the highest standard of duty implied by law (e.g. trustee, guardian).

A fiduciary relationship is a “master” and “servant” relationship. The fiduciary is the servant and he is bound to his Master by oath or contract. For instance, we are bound to act as fiduciaries and bondservants who serve the best interests of the...
God who created us by the contract or the covenant that God has with us which is documented in the Bible. Public servants in government, in turn, are contractually bound to us as the sovereigns they serve by written contracts called the U.S. Constitution and our state Constitution. The founding fathers also agreed that the Constitution was a fiduciary contract between the people and their government during the development of that instrument as documented in the Federalist Paper #78:

“No legislative act contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy (agent) is greater than his principal; that the servant is above the master; that the representatives of the people are superior to the people; that men, acting by virtue of powers may do not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid... It is not otherwise to be supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by judges, as fundamental law. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute.”

[ Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper #78 ]

Both the federal government and the state governments are entirely devoid of any lawful authority to interfere with either of the two contracts we are party to: The Bible or the federal or state Constitutions. Here is the proof of this assertion, direct from the U.S. Supreme Court:

‘Independent of these views, there are many considerations which lead to the conclusion that the power to impair contracts [either the Constitution or the Holy Bible], by direct action to that end, does not exist with the general [federal] government. In the first place, one of the objects of the Constitution, expressed in its preamble, was the establishment of justice, and what that meant in its relations to contracts is not left, as was justly said by the late Chief Justice, in Hepburn v. Griswold, to inference or conjecture. As he observes, at the time the Constitution was undergoing discussion in the convention, the Congress of the Confederation was engaged in framing the ordinance for the government of the Northwestern Territory, in which certain articles of compact were established between the people of the original States and the people of the Territory, for the purpose, as expressed in the instrument, of extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, upon which the States, their laws and constitutions, were erected. By that ordinance it was declared, that, in the just preservation of rights and property, ‘no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said Territory, that shall, in any manner, interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements bona fide and without fraud previously formed.’ The same provision, adds the Chief Justice, found more condensed expression in the prohibition upon the States [in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution] against impairing the obligation of contracts, which has ever been recognized as an efficient safeguard against injustice: and though the prohibition is not applied in terms to the government of the United States, he expressed the opinion, speaking for himself and the majority of the court at the time, that it was clear ‘that those who framed and those who adopted the Constitution intended that the spirit of this prohibition should pervade the entire body of legislation, and that the justice which the Constitution was ordained to establish was not thought by them to be compatible with legislation [or judicial precedent] of an opposite tendency.’” 6 Wall. 623. [99 U.S. 700, 765]

Similar views are found expressed in the opinions of other judges of this court.”

[Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

‘A state can no more impair the obligation of a contract by her organic law [constitution] than by legislative enactment; for her constitution is a law within the meaning of the contract clause of the national constitution. Railroad Co. v. [115 U.S. 650, 673] McClure, 10 Wall. 511; Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 429; Sedge & Const. Law, 637 And the obligation of her contracts is as fully protected by that instrument against impairment by legislation as are contracts between individuals exclusively. State v. Wilson, 7 Chanc., 164; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1; Woodruff v. Troup, 10 How. 190; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U.S. 358, 368.”

[ New Orleans Gas Company v. Louisiana Light Company, 115 U.S. 650 (1885)]

We talked about the terms of the fiduciary duty that exists between the sovereign People and their government when we talked about the Code of Ethics for Government service earlier in section 2.1. This Government Code of Ethics embodies and implements the terms of that fiduciary contract between the sovereign People and their servant government. Incidentally, Alexander Hamilton’s very words from the Federalist Paper #78 echo those of God Himself, who through His son Jesus said the following:

“Remember the word that I said to you: ‘A servant is not greater than his master.’”

[John15:20, Bible, NKJV]

73 See 1 Peter 2:13-17.
Below is what the Bible says about the duties of “servants”, which describe our duties toward God and government’s duties towards us:

“Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh, not with eyeservice, but in sincerity of heart, fearing God. And whatever you do, do it heartily, as to the Lord and not to men, knowing that from the Lord you will receive the reward of the inheritance; for you serve the Lord Christ. But he who does wrong will be repaid for the wrong which he has done, and there is no partiality.”

[Col. 3:22-25, Bible, NKJV]

The Bible covenant between us and our sovereign God also has all the attributes of a valid legal contract:

1. An offer: God’s Love and forgiveness
2. Acceptance: Our acceptance of God’s love and forgiveness and sovereignty over our spiritual lives.
3. Consideration: We commit our time, our life, our families, and our affections to serving and loving and thanking God for his grace and mercy toward us, who are sinners.
4. Mutual assent: God understands us better than we understand ourselves, and we must understand the commitment and the covenant He makes to us by reading the Bible daily.

In many cases, you can confirm the existence of this contract with God by looking in the Bible for the word “yoke” or “covenant”. Here is the definition of “yoke” out of Easton’s Bible Dictionary:

YOKE — (1.) Fitted on the neck of oxen for the purpose of binding to them the traces by which they might draw the plough, etc. (Num. 19:2; Deut. 21:3). It was a curved piece of wood called ‘ol.

(2.) In Jer. 27:2; 28:10, 12 the word in the Authorized Version rendered “yoke” is motah, which properly means a “staff,” or as in the Revised Version, “bar.”

These words in the Hebrew are both used figuratively of severe bondage, or affliction, or subjection (Lev. 26:13; 1 Kings 12:4; Isa. 47:6; Lam. 1:14; 3:27). In the New Testament the word “yoke” is also used to denote servitude (Matt. 11:29; 30; Acts 15:10; Gal. 5:1).

(3.) In 1 Sam. 11:7, 1 Kings 19:21, Job 1:3 the word thus translated is tzemed, which signifies a pair, two oxen yoked or coupled together, and hence in 1 Sam. 14:14 it represents as much land as a yoke of oxen could plough in a day, like the Latin jugum. In Isa. 5:10 this word in the plural is translated “acres.”

To be “yoked” means to be contractually or spiritually bound to God: to be figuratively married to Him as His bride. Here is an example from Jesus’ mouth:

“Come to Me, all you who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you and learn from Me, for I am gentle and lowly in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For My yoke is easy and My burden is light.”

[Matt. 11:28-30, Bible, NKJV]

This contract or covenant we have with God makes us superior to any government or ruler and makes us the sovereign over everyone in government:

“You have delivered me from the strivings of the people [democratic mob rule];
You have made me the head of the nations [and the government of the nations];
A people I have not known [in Washington, D.C., the District of Columbia] shall serve me;
The foreigners [Washington, D.C. is foreign to states of the Union] submit to me;
The foreigners fade away,
And come frightened from their hideouts [on every election day].”

[Psalm 18:43-45, Bible, NKJV]

Incidentally, without this yoke or covenant between us and God, without our unfailing allegiance to Him over and above that of any government or state, and without our adherence to this Sacred contract as evidenced by our steadfast obedience to God’s laws and His commandments (called “fearing God”), we fall from grace, lose our sovereignty, and are then put into subjection and bondage to man’s laws and to government, who they then become our new false god and idol. This is God’s sovereign punishment for our disobedience:

“The wicked shall be turned into hell,
And all the nations that forget God.”
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

[Psalm 9:17, Bible, NKJV]

Then Saul [the king] said to Samuel, “I have sinned, for I have transgressed the commandment of the Lord and your words, because I feared the people [wanted to be politically correct instead of right with God] and obeyed their voice [instead of God’s voice].” Now therefore, please pardon my sin and return with me, that I may worship the Lord.” But Samuel said to Saul [the king], “I will not return with you, for you have rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord has rejected you from being king over Israel”

And as Samuel turned around to go away, Saul seized the edge of his robe, and it tore. So Samuel said to him, “The Lord has torn the kingdom of Israel from you today and has given it to a neighbor of yours, who is better than you.”

The diagram at the beginning of this section reflects the above reality with an arrow showing our fall from grace and sovereignty as a “man” to become “U.S. citizens/idolaters”, which is the price for disobedience to God’s commandments and laws. When that happens, we become “subjects” of the federal government and our own ignorance and sin has voluntarily transformed a constitutional republic into a totalitarian “monarchy” or “oligarchy”:

“citizen. 1: an inhabitant of a city or town: esp: one entitled to the rights and privileges of a freeman. 2 a: a member of a state b: a native or naturalized person who owes allegiance to a government and is entitled to protection from it 3: a civilian as distinguished from a specialized servant of the state—citizenly syn CITIZEN. SUBJECT. NATIONAL mean a person owing allegiance to and entitled to the protection of a sovereign state. CITIZEN is preferred for one owing allegiance to a state in which sovereign power is retained by the people and sharing in the political rights of those people; SUBJECT implies allegiance to a personal sovereign such as a monarch; NATIONAL designates one who may claim the protection of a state and applies esp. to one living or traveling outside that state.”

Another important thing to learn from the above scripture is that Saul fell because he was a man-pleaser. He “feared the people” more than he feared God (see Eccl. 12:13-14). This is a polite way to say that he was more concerned with being “politically correct” than in obeying God and His Laws. The Lord was essentially second on Saul’s priority list and so Saul fell from grace and was dethroned as the king and sovereign over his people. The same fate awaits all who do the same today, including us as Americans. God made us the kings and the sovereigns over our servant government, and this sovereignty is a privilege that results from our faith and obedience to God’s Laws and our worship of Him through our righteous actions. Below is a definition of “worship” from Harper’s Bible Dictionary that confirms these conclusions:

worship, the attitude and acts of reverence to a deity. The term “worship” in the OT translates the Hebrew word meaning ‘to bow down, prostrate oneself,’ a posture indicating reverence and homage given to a lord, whether human or divine. The concept of worship is expressed by the term ‘serve.’ In general, the worship given to God was modeled after the service given to human sovereigns (government rulers); this was especially prominent in pagan religions. In these the deity’s image inhabited a palace (temple) and had servants (priests) who supplied food (offered sacrifices), washed and anointed and clothed it, scented the air with incenses, lit lamps at night, and guarded the doors to the house. Worshipers brought offerings and tithes to the deity, said prayers and bowed down, as one might bring tribute and present petitions to a king. Indeed the very purpose of human existence, in Mesopotamian thought, was to provide the gods with the necessities of life.

Although Israelite worship shared many of these external forms, even to calling sacrifices ‘the food of God’ (e.g., Lev. 21:6), its essence was quite different. As the prophets pointed out, God could not be worshiped only externally. To truly honor God, it was necessary to obey his laws, the moral and ethical ones as well as ritual laws. To appear before God with sacrifices while flouting his demands for justice was to insult him (cf. Isa. 1:11-17; Amos 5:21-22). God certainly did not need the sacrifices for food (Ps. 50:12-13); rather sacrifice and other forms of worship were offered to honor God as king.

The privilege or rulership over our government servants may be revoked at any time if we cease to trust in the Lord and put Him first, no matter the consequence. The following scripture makes this point abundantly clear:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)  Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship  http://famguardian.org/
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and He will lift you up [above your government].”

[James 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

The punishment for our disobedience and our failure to humble ourselves towards God as our King, our Ruler, and our Lawgiver is a tyrannical and dictatorial government that we become enslaved to and oppressed by because of our sin and our consequent inability to govern ourselves because of the sin. We explained why this was the case earlier in section 2.8.1 when we talked about the book of Judges.

Since the Bible is a valid legal contract between us and God just as much as the federal constitution is a contract between “We The People” (as individuals) and their government, then one interesting outcome is that the Constitution forbids states from interfering with such contracts:

United States Constitution, Article 1, Section 10

No State shall...pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.

So not even the government can remove God from His sovereign role over both us and the government, and the Bible confirms that we cannot be separated from the love of God, which is the essence of our faith:

For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor principalities nor powers [governments or rulers], nor things present nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other created thing, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

[Romans 8:38-39, Bible, NKJV, emphasis added]

The Ten commandments say that our top priority is to love God, and by implication, obeying His commandments, His statutes, His Law, and His Word.

He who has My commandments and keeps them, it is he who loves Me. And he who loves Me will be loved by my Father, and I will love him and manifest Myself to him.”

[John 14:21, Bible, NKJV]

We have taken the time to actually catalog on our website many but not all of God’s laws at the web address below for your reference:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/ChurchVState/BibleLawIndex/bl_index.htm

The implications of these revelations are that since God says He and His Law/Word in the Bible are to be first on our priority list, then when or if the vain government of man or its laws attempt to conflict with or supersede the authority of God, we must remind the state that it cannot lawfully interfere with our First Amendment religious views by putting itself above God and in charge of our life or making human laws that conflict with God’s laws which are in the Bible. That very calling and moral obligation of reconciling God’s laws with man’s laws, in fact, is the sole duty of the Trial Jury in the diagram. We even took this argument so far as to PROVE later in section 0 from a legal perspective using evidence exactly how our government has made itself into a religion and a false god to show just how bad this conflict between God and man has become.

God’s laws, however, must always supersede man’s laws because He is the Creator of Heaven and Earth, which makes Him Sovereign over all existence, and we are His sovereign delegates and ambassadors on the earth from whom the government derives ALL of its sovereignty over the finite stewardship which we have entrusted to it through our Constitution. Our obedience to God’s laws, which sometimes puts us in conflict with man’s laws, is what sanctifies us and sets us apart.

Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their trouble, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world [and the corrupted governments and laws of the world]."

[James 1:27, Bible, NKJV]

"Come out from among them [the unbelievers]
And be separate, says the Lord.
Do not touch what is unclean,

34 See Matt. 22:36-40
This faith and sanctification and obedience and joyful service to God makes us into “ministers of a foreign state” while we are here on earth from a legal perspective, and the “foreign state” in this case is “heaven” and “God’s kingdom”. Our ministry is for the glory of God and the love of our fellow man, in satisfaction of the two great commandments of Jesus found in Matt. 22:36-40. No less than the Supreme Court in U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898) said that the phrase “and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States” found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment excludes “ministers of foreign states” from being “U.S. citizens”. That’s right: we can’t be “U.S. citizens” and thereby make government into our false god because we are only “pilgrims and strangers” on a foreign mission while we are temporarily here. The only place that Christians can really intend or realistically expect to return permanently to is heaven because nothing here on earth is permanent for us anyway, and life would be miserable indeed if it were! I’d like to see someone litigate that in a state court. Wouldn’t it be fun to watch?

Here, in fact, is what God thinks about human governments and the nations created by man:

> “Arise, O Lord,
> Do not let man prevail;
> Let the nations be judged in Your sight.
> Put them in fear, O Lord,
> That the nations may know themselves to be but men.”
> [Psalm 9:19-20, Bible, NKJV]

> “Behold, the nations are as a drop in the bucket, and are counted as the small dust on the scales.”
> [Isaiah 40:15, Bible, NKJV]

> “All nations before Him are as nothing, and they are counted by Him less than nothing and worthless.”
> [Isaiah 40:17, Bible, NKJV]

> “He brings the princes to nothing; He makes the judges of the earth useless.”
> [Isaiah 40:23, Bible, NKJV]

> “Indeed they are all worthless; their works are nothing; their molded images are wind and confusion.”
> [Isaiah 41:29, Bible, NKJV]

Worthless! Now do you understand why the Jews were hated, why Christians are persecuted to this day, and why Jesus was crucified and Paul was executed by the Roman government? The same thing happened to the early Jews, who refused to bow to man’s law and held steadfastly to God’s law:

> “Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, “There is a certain people scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are different from all other people’s, and they do not keep the king’s laws. Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it into the king’s treasuries.””
> [Esther 3:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

Christians who are doing what God commands are basically un governable unless you put them in charge as the sovereigns and give them a servant government. Remember, ours is a government “of the people, by the people, and for the people”, as Abraham Lincoln said in his famous Gettysburg Address. That means that we have a moral duty to God to govern ourselves and not have a king or any government above us. Government can only serve us and we are to lead and control it through frequent elections that keep our servants in government accountable. This is confirmed in Prov. 6:6-11:

> “The words ‘people of the United States’ and ‘citizens,’ are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...”

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

Go to the ant, you sluggard!
Consider her ways and be wise,
Which, having no captain,
Overseer or ruler,
Provides her supplies in the summer,
And gathers her food in the harvest.
How long will you slumber, O sluggard?
When will you rise from your sleep?
A little sleep, a little slumber,
A little folding of the hands to sleep--
So shall your poverty come on you like a prowler,
And your need like an armed man.

[Prov. 6:6-11, Bible, NKJV]

Any attempt to put anyone in government above us as a king or ruler amounts to idolatry and violates the first commandment (see Matt. 22:36-38). A jealous God (see Exodus 20:5) simply won’t allow the government to compete with Him for the affections and the worship of His people, who He calls His “bride” in Rev. 21:9 and Rev. 22:17.

“Do not fear, for you will not be ashamed; neither be disgraced, for you will not be put to shame; for you will forget the shame of your youth, and will not remember the reproach of your widowhood anymore. For your Maker is your husband, the Lord of hosts is His name; and your Redeemer is the Holy One of Israel; He is called the God of the whole earth, for the Lord has called you like a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, like a youthful wife when you were refused,” says your God. “For a mere moment I have forsaken you, but with great mercies I will gather you. With a little wrath I hid My face from you for a moment; but with everlasting kindness I will have mercy on you,” says the Lord, your Redeemer.”

[Isaiah 54:4-8, Bible, NKJV]

When we do God’s will and obey His commandments and His laws, we become His bride and an important part of His family!:

“For whoever does the will of God is My brother and My sister and mother.”

[Jesus, in Mark 3:35, NKJV]

And when we disobey His commands and His law, he calls us an “adulterer”:

‘Adulterers and adulteresses! Do you now know that friendship [and “citizenship”] with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend [citizen] of the world makes himself an enemy of God.”

[James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]

When we as God’s bride (yes, we’re already married, you fornicators and idolaters in government looking for an easy lay!) and body of His believers and His children and family commit idolatry by selling ourselves into slavery and subjection to the government in exchange for their protection and privileges and a sense of false security, we are physically and spiritually united with and become “Babylon the Great Harlot” described in Revelation 17:5 of the Bible. The Bible reminds us, as a matter of fact, that it is a SINF to demand an earthly king or ruler and that we instead should by implication be self-governing men and women who are guided by the Holy Spirit to do God’s will and who are servants to His personal and spiritual leadership in our daily lives. He communicates His sovereign will to us daily through our prayers and His word, the Bible. Below is one example where seeking an earthly king instead of God’s leadership is described as a sin:

“Then all the elders of Israel gathered together and came to Samuel at Ramah, and said to him, ‘Look, you are old, and your sons do not walk in your ways. Now make us a king to judge us like all the nations [and be OVER them]’.

“But the thing displeased Samuel when they said, ‘Give us a king to judge us,’ So Samuel prayed to the Lord. And the Lord said to Samuel, ‘Heed the voice of the people in all that they say to you; for they have rejected Me, that I should not reign over them. According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even to this day— with which they have forsaken Me and served other gods—even they are doing to you also [government becoming idolatry].’”

[1 Sam. 8:4-8, Bible, NKJV]
"And when you saw that Nahash king of the Ammonites came against you, you said to me, 'No, but a king shall reign over us,' when the Lord your God was your king.

And all the people said to Samuel, "Pray for your servants to the Lord your God, that we may not die; for we have added to all our sins the evil of asking a king for ourselves."
[1 Sam. 12:12, 19, Bible, NKJV]

The king referred to above was Saul and that king was described in 1 Sam. chapters 12 through 15 as selfish and vain, and who did not serve God or follow His commandments, but instead served himself, like most of our current politicians as a matter of fact. The consequence of Saul the king’s selfishness and disobedient and sinful leadership was harm to his people and a violation of his oath and commission of office direct from God at the time he was appointed by Samuel:

"Now therefore, here is the king whom you have chosen and whom you have desired. And take note, the Lord has set a king over you. If you fear the Lord and serve Him and obey His voice, and do not rebel against the commandment of the Lord, then both you and the king who reigns over you will continue following the Lord your God. However, if you do not obey the voice of the Lord, but rebel against the commandment of the Lord, then the hand of the Lord will be against you, as it was against your fathers."
[1 Sam. 12:13-15, Bible, NKJV]

No doubt, people working in government don’t like being called worthless as the scriptures above indicate nor do they enjoy being reminded that they are recruiting prostitutes (harlots) and fornicators from the flock of sheep that are God’s, even though it’s true, and those Christians who reveal this profound truth are likely to be persecuted by their government like Jesus was:

"And you will be hated by all for My name’s sake."
[Luke 21:17, Bible, NKJV]

Once again to our government servants [of which I am one, by the way]: God Himself says YOUR power and the organization YOU serve is WORTHLESS, with a capital “W”!

Did you get that Mr. President and Mr. Congressman and Mr. Supreme Court Justice and Mr. Secretary of the Treasury and Mr. IRS Commissioner, and other arrogant tyrant dictators? God says your job and your authority is “worthless” and “less than nothing”. Put your tail between your legs, take a big gulp and swallow that pride of yours, grovel in the sand, get on your knees and bow, and lick the very Hand, the ONLY Hand that feeds your pitiful mouth because:

"As I live, says the Lord, every knee shall bow to Me, and every tongue shall confess to God.‘ So then, each of us shall give account of himself to God.”
[Romans 14:11, Bible, NKJV]

"For what is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God.”
[Luke 16:15, Bible, NKJV]

"Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and He will lift you up.”
[James 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

The only reason anyone therefore has to call your profession or your life’s work as a politician or public servant “honorable” is because you are servants of the sovereign people and because you are doing the will of God as their agent and fiduciary in protecting innocent people from harm and exploitation and crime. This very calling, as a matter of fact, is the only authority justifying the existence of civil government because it is a fulfillment of the second greatest command to love our neighbor found in Matt. 22:39. Can a “worthless” organization, as God calls a nation or political party, or the people working in that “worthless” organization write laws that are any more valuable or important than “worthless”? NOT! Here is what God says He will do when we elect or allow corrupt politicians governing a “worthless” organization called a “nation” to write vain laws that supersede His law and His Bible:

But to the wicked, God says:

"What right have you to declare My statutes [write man’s vain law], or take My covenant [the Bible] in your mouth, seeing you hate instruction and cast My words behind you? When you saw a thief, you consented with him, and have been a partner with adulterers. You give your mouth to evil, and your tongue frames deceit. You sit and speak against your brother; you slander your own mother’s son. These things you have done, and I kept silent; you thought that I was altogether like you; but I will reprove you, and set them in order before your
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

Eyes. Now consider this, you who forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver: Whoever offers praise glorifies Me; and to him who orders his conduct aright I will show the salvation of God.

[Psalm 50:16-23, Bible, NKJV]

Shall the throne of iniquity, which devises evil by law, have fellowship with You? They gather together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood. But the Lord has been my defense, and my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; the Lord our God shall cut them off.

[Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV]

It is precisely the above words by God Himself that explain why we have a duty to elect Godly and moral people to public office: so that we don’t have corrupt people in there writing our laws as unjust substitutes for God’s laws and suffer God’s wrath for their misdeeds as our agents and fiduciaries.

The people of this State do not yield their sovereignty to the agencies which serve them. The people, in delegating authority, do not give their public servants right to decide what is good for the people to know and what is not good for them to know. The people insist on remaining informed so that they may retain control over the instruments they have created.

We must therefore conclude that the vain promise of earthly security that comes from giving a government or a king authority over us is a downright fraud and a farce as we clearly explain in our coverage of the Social Security program earlier in section 2.9. Our one and only source of security is God, the creator of all things, and substituting anything else in His place is idolatry. The book of Isaiah chapters 46 and 47 describe what happens to those who elevate government above God and it’s not pretty, folks. For a Satanic lie and a false promise of man-made security by an idolatrous government, we have in effect sold or exchanged our precious birthright from God, our sovereignty, and our greatest gift, to Satan and a covetous government for 20 pieces of silver, like Judas did to Jesus and like Esau did to Jacob in the Bible.

As it is written, "Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated." [Romans 9:13, Bible, NKJV]

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like treasure hidden in a field, which a man found and hid; and for joy over it he goes and sells all that he has and buys that field.

[Matthew 13:44, Bible, NKJV]

Our government has conspired with Satan to hide the treasure spoken of above from our view by taking over our education in the public schools and removing all mentions of God from the classroom, from the textbooks, and the pledge of allegiance, and thereby making us ignorant of the value of our birthright and ripe for selling it for pennies on the dollar.

Shake yourself from the dust, arise; sit down, O Jerusalem! Loose yourself from the bonds of your neck [government slavery], O captive [slave to your sin] daughter of Zion! For thus says the Lord: You have sold yourselves for nothing and you shall be redeemed without money.

[Isaiah 52:2-3, Bible, NKJV]

The Apostle Paul warned us of such abuses when he said:

But know this, that in the last days perilous times will come: For men will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unholy, unloving, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of good, traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying the power [sovereignty of God]. And from such people turn away!

[2 Timothy 3:1-5, Bible, NKJV]

The kinds of people described above worship the creation but deny the Sovereignty and existence and the power of the Creator, who is God.

Therefore God also gave them up to uncleanness, in the lusts of their hearts, to dishonor their bodies among themselves, who exchanged the truth of God for the lie, and worshipped and served the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed forever. Amen

[Romans 1:24-25, Bible, NKJV]
By allowing these kinds of idolatrous, godless, and arrogant people to be stewards and leaders over our children in the public schools, we have then become friends of the world and enemies of God.

THE NEW SCHOOL PRAYER

Your laws ignore our deepest needs
Your words are empty air
You've stripped away our heritage
You've outlawed simple prayer
Now gunshots fill our classrooms
And precious children die
You seek for answers everywhere
And ask the question "Why"
You regulate restrictive laws
Through legislative creed
And yet you fail to understand
That God is what we need!

Our ignorance and disobedience to God then causes us to commit fornication with Satan by joining ourselves to and becoming unequally yoked with an atheistic and in many cases downright evil government.

"Do you not know that friendship with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God."

[James 4:4]

Now do you fully understand why the founding fathers gave us the kind of government that they did? It was the ONLY thing that was compatible with their Christian beliefs! If you belong to God and He is your King (Isaiah 33:22), then man and man’s vain laws have no dominion over you, according to the Apostle Paul:

"Therefore, if you died with Christ from the basic principles of the world, why, as though living in the world, do you subject yourselves to [government] regulations…"

[Colossians 2:20, Bible, NKJV]

Not being subject to man’s law, in fact, is exactly what it means to be “sovereign”! Likewise, the Apostle Paul removed all doubt that we shouldn’t serve anyone but God and His law, when he said:

"But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law [man’s law]."

[Gal. 5:18, Bible, NKJV]

"...the law is not made for a righteous person, but for the lawless and insubordinate, for the ungodly and for sinners, for the unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for fornicators, for sodomites, for kidnappers, for liars, for perjurers, and if there is any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine, according to the glorious gospel of the blessed God which has committed to my trust."

[1 Tim. 1:9-11, Bible, NKJV]

"You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men [and remember that government is made up of men]."

[1 Cor. 7:23, Bible, NKJV]

And when Christ’s Apostles were told by the government not to preach His word in conflict with what God told them, look what one the Apostles said:

"We ought to obey God rather than men."

[Acts 5:27-29, Bible, NKJV]

Interestingly, even our pledge of allegiance validates the Natural Order diagram:

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic, for which it stands, one nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

If our whole nation is under God, then so are its rulers! In this case the rulers are under the people and the people are under God just as the diagram shows. The above diagram is also based on the following four U.S. Supreme Court rulings:
- Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884): “There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States...In this country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it. All else is withheld.”

- Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906): “His [the individual’s] rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State; and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”

- Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935): “In the United States, sovereignty resides in the people...the Congress cannot invoke sovereign power of the People to override their will as thus declared.”

- Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886): “Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law...While sovereign powers are delegated to...the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people.”

Our founding fathers had equally enlightening things to say that also validated the above diagram:

- “The ultimate authority...resides in the people alone...”
  [James Madison, Federalist Paper No. 46]

- “It is when a people forget God that tyrants forge their chains...”
  [Patrick Henry]

- “Those people who are not governed by GOD will be ruled by tyrants.”
  [William Penn (after which Pennsylvania was named)]

- “A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature, and not as the gift of their chief magistrate.”
  [Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134]

- “Can the liberties of a nation be thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis, a conviction in the minds of the people that these liberties are of the gift of God? That they are not to be violated but with His wrath?”
  [Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XVIII, 1782. ME 2:227]

- “Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God.”
  [Benjamin Franklin]

- “Propitious smiles of heaven can never be expected on a nation that disregards the eternal rules of order and right which heaven itself has ordained.”
  [George Washington (1732-1799), First Inaugural Address]

God’s law and His word must therefore always supersede government laws or we will suffer God’s wrath. Jesus made this very clear when he said:

- “No one can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.”
  [Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV]

In the above scripture, “mammon” refers to wealth or abuse of anything, including law or government, for private gain. Here is the Bible Dictionary definition of this word:

MAMMON. This word occurs in the Bible only in Mt. 6:24 and Lk. 16:9, 11, 13, and is a transliteration of Aramaic māmōnā. It means simply wealth or profit, but Christ sees in it an egocentric covetousness which claims man’s heart and thereby estranges him from God (Mt. 6:19ff.): when a man ‘owns’ anything, in reality it owns him. (Cf. the view that mammon derives from Bab. mimma, ‘anything at all’. ‘Unrighteous mammon’ (Lk. 16:9) is dishonest gain (F. Hauck, TDNT 4, pp. 388–390) or simply gain from self-centred motives (cf. Lk. 12:15ff.). The probable meaning is that such money, used for others, may be transformed thereby into true riches in the coming age (Lk. 16:12).
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

Section 0 entitled "Government as Idolatry/Religion" extensively reveals based on the Bible why it must be that God has to be first, because if He isn’t then we violate the First Commandment in Exodus 20:1-11 and Matt. 22:36-38 to love our God with all our heart, mind, and soul. Failing to observe this maxim is like declaring the law of gravity null and void, which is an insane proposition indeed! The bible in Jeremiah chapters 16 and 17 describes what happens when a country and a people deny this fundamental principle and make government or any other idol into a counterfeit god in the pursuit of comfort or personal gain or avoidance of responsibility. Here is an excerpt from that part of the Bible:

"Cursed is the one who trusts in man [or governments made up of men], who depends on flesh for his strength and whose heart turns away from the Lord. He will be like a bush in the wastelands; he will not see prosperity when it comes. He will dwell in the parched places of the desert, in a salt land where no one lives. But blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord, whose confidence is in Him. He will be like a tree planted by the water that sends out its roots by the stream. It does not fear when heat comes; its leaves are always green. It has no worries in a year of drought and never fails to bear fruit."

[Jeremiah 17:5-8, Bible, NIV]

The Apostle Paul in the Bible also confirmed that God and His laws always supersede man and their vain laws when he said:

"...there is no authority except from God."

[Romans 13:1, Bible, NKJV]

"...you are complete in Him [Christ], who is the head of all principality and power."

[Colossians 2:10, Bible, NKJV]

Why is God the only authority and the source of all authority? The root of the word "authority" is "author". Because God created us, he is the "author" of our existence, and therefore the only entity in authority over us. He is our only “Lawgiver” and anything else is a cheap, man-made substitute:

"For the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Lawgiver, the Lord is our King: He will save [and protect] us."

[Isaiah 33:22, Bible, NKJV]

This is similar to how the government handles patents and copyrights. The creator or author of the writing or invention is the person who has “rights” over the thing he or she created.

"The heavens are Yours, the earth also is Yours; the world and all its fullness, You have founded them;..."

[Psalm 89:11-12, Bible, NKJV]

"And having been perfected, He [Jesus] became the author of eternal salvation to all who obey Him."

[Hebrews 5:9, Bible, NKJV]

Likewise, the creator of legal fictions called “corporations” is the government, which is why they can tax and regulate them. Because God is the author of our existence, He endowed us with a natural, instinctive understanding of His law and His sovereignty through the Holy Spirit. Even those who don’t believe in God are endowed with this awareness and sense of morality, in which case it is called “conscience” instead of “Holy Spirit”. This notion of the Holy Spirit is the origin of the whole concept of Natural Law, Natural Order, morality, and Justice. The Bible again confirms this natural gift of the Holy Spirit and the faith that results from it:

"...let us run with endurance the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the same, and has sat down at the right hand of the throne of God."

[Hebrews 12:2, Bible, NKJV]

Some people point to Romans 13:1 cited above and say that we should be subject to or subservient to our government, even if that government is corrupt. Here is the scripture they will cite again:

"Let every soul be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and the authorities are appointed by God."

[Romans 13:1, Bible, NKJV]
What we believe the “governing authorities” as used above by Apostle Paul means is “sovereigns”. Paul was saying that we should be subject to the sovereigns within whatever system of government we are a part. As you will learn later in section 4.5, our system of government is unique in all the world because it is a Republic founded on individual rather than collective rights and all individuals are sovereigns who are individually in charge of the government as a “king” or “governing authority” as the Apostle Paul says here. The people created the government and they existed before the government so they are the sovereigns. Government and public servants within government are there to serve you and me as the individual sovereigns and they must be subject to us and subservient to us, according to Paul’s words above. As we say later in section 4.3.15, the people are the sovereigns rather than the government or anyone working in the government, and the U.S. supreme Court and various state courts agree with this concept as shown below:

"Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts."

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356; 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

"The people of this State, as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the King by his prerogative. Through the medium of their Legislature they may exercise all the powers which previous to the Revolution could have been exercised either by the King alone, or by him in conjunction with his Parliament; subject only to those restrictions which have been imposed by the Constitution of this State or of the U.S."

The real “king” in our society is not the government or anyone serving the sovereign people as government employees, but the PEOPLE! That’s you! So even if you misinterpret Jesus’ words to mean that we should render to a corrupt government that which it illegally asks for and demands, since your own government calls you the king, then your public servants are the ones who should be “rendering” to you, who your own government calls the sovereign. Render to the king (Caesar, that’s you) his due, which is everything that is his property and his right, including 100% of his earned wage. What our dishonorable “servant” politicians and lawyers in government have been doing to destroy this natural order is to dumb you down using the public education system and steal your sovereign birthright by legal treachery and trickery hidden in the laws they write, but we as the sovereigns shouldn’t allow them to get away with this fraud and extortion.

The implications of the Natural Order diagram are profound. First of all, the diagram can be very useful as documentation of our religious belief about the authority of government. We can use our First Amendment Right of freedom of religion to put government inside the box where they belong and keep them there. The biggest implication is that we are not to work for or be slaves of our government. Our government is our slave, we are the masters and it has no business dictating anything to us, stealing our money through direct taxes, forcing us to work for them (slavery), or using government licenses, such as marriage licenses, to impinge on our rights. We are sovereigns relative to it. In the words of Jesus Himself:

[Matt. 4:10, BIBLE]

However, if you want to have rights, then you have to act like you have them and know what they are. If you don’t know what they are and don’t insist on them in all your interactions with government dis-servants, then we can guarantee that the government will pretend like you don’t have any because they want to be in charge.

"Ask not and ye shall DEFINITELY receive not!"

[Family Guardian Fellowship]

One of our readers (Clyde Hyde,mailto:candz@mail.ru) has extended this concept of sovereignty and natural order so far as to litigate in a federal court to request the court to make a declaratory judgment either pronouncing him a slave, or a sovereign, and the courts and the government hate him for it, because he backs them into a corner where they have no choice but to declare the truth about his sovereignty. His efforts were the inspiration behind making the above diagram, and he provided to us a similar but less complete version of the above diagram that inspired this section. Way to go, Clyde! See section 3.13.14 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005, which contains a “Declaratory Judgment to Become a Sovereign” for an example of how he traps the court with this argument into admitting the truth about his sovereignty. It’s fascinating and funny!
The above system of government based on Natural Law and Natural Order is self-regulating and self-balancing. Each entity has a proper role as follows:

Prosecute corrupt public servants for wrongdoing and violation of Constitutional rights. In the case of bad laws, such as those on taxation, refuse to indict persons under such laws, thereby rendering the laws as ineffective as if they were never passed. Also initiate prosecution of citizens who have injured the interests of fellow citizens in violation of criminal laws. The output of the decision-making process for Grand Juries is an indictment, that is filed within the jurisdiction covered by their charter. The legislature not only commands the purse, but prescribes the rules by which the duties and rights of every citizen are to be regulated. The judiciary, on the contrary, has no influence over either the sword or the purse; no direction either of the strength or of the wealth of the society; and can take no active resolution whatever. It may truly be said to have neither force nor will, but merely judgment...&quot; &quot;...This simple view of the matter suggests several important consequences. It proves incontestably, that the judiciary is beyond comparison the weakest of the three departments of power*; that it can never attack with success either of the other two; and that all possible care is requisite to enable it to defend itself against their attacks...&quot; We can say that the legislature represents the heart and emotions of the people. And the executive branch represents strength and muscle of the people, and we would suggest that the judiciary represents the rational mind of the people.</td>

In the above system, the government benefits most and makes its power greatest by having misinformed, ignorant, or illiterate and makes a g

Do you smell a conflict of interest here? This “victim” of the public fool [I mean school] system is legally and socially illiterate and makes a good “sheep” who is easy for the District Attorney (D.A.) to boss around and who will ignorantly take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government, and this is the essence of good, wise, and frugal government. Rights and privileges are created and enforced via federal statutes rather than being granted by the Bill of Rights or the Constitution. Are not Sovereigns, but subject citizens of a totalitarian socialist democracy. See section 4.11.7 later for details.

Some people, when they read this section, respond to it by saying the following:

"Politicians prefer unarmed and illiterate peasants!"

We respond to this comment by saying that we are not insisting that the government do anything other than provide equal and complete protection to everyone for their constitutional rights and their liberties and nothing more. We don’t want to dictate how individuals run their lives or what they can or cannot say. We only wish to ensure that the government fulfills its only legitimate function, which is to prevent injustice rather than to promote justice as we indicated earlier in section 3.3 and to leave people otherwise fully sovereign over their own person and labor and property. These ingredients are the essence of good, wise, and frugal government. Thomas Jefferson agreed with these conclusions:

"With all [our] blessings, what more is necessary to make us a happy and a prosperous people? Still one thing more, fellow citizens—a wise and frugal Government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government, and this is necessary to close the circle of our felicities."

[Thomas Jefferson: 1st Inaugural, 1801. ME 3:320]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

We believe that separation between church and state is important. We also think the Constitution gives us freedom of religion, but not freedom from religion, and those persons who are nonreligious, and especially gays, liberals, and homosexuals, ought to learn to be much more tolerant of the views of Christians than they are today. It is the height of hypocrisy for them on the one hand to be telling Christians they are intolerant, and on the other hand being totally intolerant of Christians themselves. Such left wing groups have become the Nazi’s of our modern era by trying to pass hate crime laws and government regulations to discriminate against Christians who are exercising their First Amendment right to freedom of religious expression. They have done so in an apparent effort to eliminate what they call discrimination on the part of Christians, even though in most cases the only injury they have suffered came not from the person making the statement or committing an alleged act, but from the conviction of the Holy Spirit acting on their consciousness. We believe that persons of any religious should be free exercise their rights to follow their religion and to talk freely in public settings about what God’s law says about the sins of abortion, homosexuality, and fornication.

What does the Bible say that we should do with government servants who are bad stewards who have abused the authority entrusted to them by their masters? The answer is found in the Parable of the Faithful Steward in Luke 12:41-48. We cite from that passage below:

"But if that servant says in his heart 'My master is delaying his coming,' and begins to beat the male and female servants, and to eat and drink and be drunk, the master of that servant will come on a day when he is not looking for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in two and appoint him his portion with the unbelievers. And that servant who knew his master's will, and did not prepare himself or do according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes."

[Luke 12:45-47, Bible, NKJV]

Our government is the “servant” of the sovereign people. This “servant” has:

1. Kicked the master out of his own house and through eminent domain and taken it, our income, and all our property rights over.
2. Is beating not only the male and female servants, but making the master into a servant as well and then beating him too under the color of law but without any lawful authority whatsoever!
3. Has abused his authority and stewardship to punish and control the master by claiming falsely to be acting under the authority of law
4. Has turned the servants on each other and created a police state by appointing some servants in the financial community to “snitch” on all the other servants so that NO ONE has privacy or sovereignty. The motto is: “If you’re not going to be a snitch, then you will be my bitch (prostitute).” as one of our readers puts it. This tactic, incidentally, is the same tactic the communists used in creating informants to snitch on anti-communists.
5. Has made it impossible to call himself to account in the courts because the servant has replaced all the judges with his own cronies and threatened those who might convict or persecute him. Every once in a while, they will lynch a sheep like Congressman Traficant or Congressman George Hansen to keep the rest of the sheep in line.

According to the legal dictionary, the type of government we have is therefore described as a “dulocracy”:

“Dulocracy. A government where servants and slaves have so much license and privilege that they domineer.”

According to the Bible, this wicked servant (our public servants in Congress and the IRS in this case) should be cut in two and flogged and beaten with many stripes. By Natural Law, this would be divine justice for them according to the Bible. Why aren’t we doing this to the corrupt tyrants who have taken over our government if Natural Law demands it?

Another interesting fact is revealed by examining the natural order diagram: That governments invented corporations as creatures of law so that they could become a god and an object of slavery and idol worship for that corporation. People in government simply love being treated as gods and they will make laws to encourage such idol worship. Consider the following evidence in support of such a conclusion:

1. The Bible and our Christian God hold us individually and personally responsible (liable) for our acts during this lifetime. See Rev. 20:11-15 and Romans 14:10-12, which says that we will be judged and held accountable by God individually for what we did or didn’t do during our lifetime.

For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
“As I live, says the Lord,
Every knee shall bow to Me,
And every tongue shall confess to God.”

So then each of us shall give account of himself to God.
[Romans 14:10-12, Bible, NKJV]

2. The fundamental advantage of forming a corporation is limited personal liability. This means at least during our lifetime, that we won’t be held personally responsible as an individual for our wrongdoing so long as we did it as an agent of a corporation. The price we pay for this limited liability is to pay taxes on the profits of the corporation to the federal government, on whom we depend entirely for our existence as an artificial legal entity.

3. The problem with corporations is that when people intend to sin or commit crimes, then corporations provide a convenient legal vehicle to escape personal liability for the crimes. One could therefore quite reasonably say that the government (federal mafia) courts become a protection racket for criminals in exchange for the right to collect revenues from them! Is it then any wonder we hear so much of late about corporations cooking the books? Does Enron, MCI Worldcom, Arthur Anderson, Martha Stewart, etc. ring a bell, folks?

4. Because our God is viewed by atheists and sinners as a harsh God who hates sin and whom they would rather avoid accountability to, then a common approach among these people is to try to replace God with government and then get the government to legalize sinful or formerly criminal activity. This approach only works, however, if God can be removed both from the schools, government, and public life, or Christian morality and God’s laws will condemn them anyway for their acts.

5. When the government wishes to tax natural persons (biological people), its most common approach is to deceive them using “words of art” and tricky legal definitions into thinking that they are taxable corporations involved in foreign commerce or the officers of such corporations. Even the U.S. Supreme Court agrees that “income” within the meaning of the Constitution means “corporate profit” for the purpose of Subtitle A federal income taxes. See the following cases for verification of this fact:

Along the lines of corporations, here’s a funny satire one of our readers sent us highlighting the fundamental problems with corporations we just pointed out above and showing just how badly man screws things up when he tries to improve on what God gave us:

REMAINING U.S. EXECUTIVES MAKE A BREAK FOR IT! -- BAND OF ROVING CHIEF

Executives Spotted Miles from Mexican Border

July 17, 2002

San Antonio, Texas (Rooters)

Unwilling to wait for their eventual indictments, the 10,000 remaining CEOs of public U.S. companies made a break for it yesterday, heading for the Mexican border, plundering towns and villages along the way, and writing the entire rampage off as a marketing expense.

"They came into my home, made me pay for my own TV, then double-booked the revenues," said Rachel Sanchez of Las Cruces, just north of El Paso. "Right in front of my daughters."

Calling themselves the CEO/bitistas, the chief executives were first spotted last night along the Rio Grande River near Quemado, where they bought each of the town's 320 residents by borrowing against pension fund gains. By late this morning, the CEO/bitistas had arbitrarily inflated Quemado's population to 960, and declared a 200 percent profit for the fiscal second quarter.

This morning, the outlaws bought the city of Waco, transferred its underperforming areas to a private partnership, and sent a bill to California for $4.5 billion.

Law enforcement officials and disgruntled shareholders riding posse were noticeably frustrated.

"First of all, they’re very hard to find because they always stand behind their numbers, and the numbers keep shifting," said posse spokesman Dean Levitt. "And every time we yell 'Stop in the name of the shareholders!', they refer us to investor relations. I've been on the phone all damn morning."

"YOU'LL NEVER AUDIT ME ALIVE!"
The pursuers said they have had some success, however, by preying on a common executive weakness. "Last night we caught about 24 of them by disguising one of our female officers as a CNBC anchor," said U.S. Border Patrol spokesperson Janet Lewis. "It was like maths to a flame."

Also, teams of agents have been using high-powered listening devices to scan the plains or telltale sounds of the CEOnistas. "Most of the time we just hear leaves rustling or cattle flicking their tails," said Lewis, "but occasionally we'll pick up someone saying, 'I was totally out of the loop on that."

Among former and current CEOs apprehended with this method were Computer Associates' Sanjay Kumar, Adelphia's John Rigas, Enron's Ken Lay, Joseph Nacchio of Qwest, Joseph Berardino of Arthur Andersen, and every Global Crossing CEO since 1997. Since, due to his contacts to Telmex, his knowledge of local geography is claimed to be outstanding, mPhase's Ron Durando was elected to act as the group's pathfinder. ImClone Systems' Sam Waksal and Dennis Kozlowski of Tyco were not allowed to join the CEOnistas as they have already been indicted.

So far, about 50 chief executives have been captured, including Martha Stewart, who was detained south of El Paso where she had cut through a barbed-wire fence at the Zaragosa border crossing off Highway 375.

"She would have gotten away, but she was stopping motorists to ask for marzipan and food coloring so she could make edible snowman place settings, using the cut pieces of wire for the arms," said Border Patrol officer Jennette Cushing. "We put her in cell No. 7, because the morning sun really adds texture to the stucco walls."

While some stragglers are believed to have successfully crossed into Mexico, Cushing said the bulk of the CEOnistas have holed themselves up at the Alamo.

"No, not the fort, the car rental place at the airport," she said. "They're rotating all the tires on the minivans and accounting for each change as a sales event."

The IRS has sent recruiters to accompany law enforcement and disgruntled shareholders in the chase, and has publicly announced that it is offering the CEOs jobs as IRS collection agents and criminal investigators once captured. Charles Rossotti, the IRS commissioner, has offered them anonymity under the FBI's witness protection program. Apparently, the IRS has been having trouble finding employees, since all the honest ones already resigned to seek more honorable employment.

In conclusion, we have a very good video on our website regarding Jury Nullification that was put together by Red Beckman which unifies the lessons in this section. It thoroughly explains the proper role of each major entity in our Natural Order diagram in detail and is very enlightening to civic minded citizens. You can watch this video at:

4.2 Rights Defined and Explained

"This nation, as experience has proved, cannot always remain at peace, and has no right to expect that it always will have wise and humane rulers, sincerely attached to the principles of the Constitution. Wicked men, ambitious of power, with hatred of liberty and contempt of law, may fill the place once occupied by Washington and Lincoln; and if this right is conceded, and the calamities of war again befall us, the dangers to human liberty are frightful to contemplate. ... For this, and other equally weighty reasons, they secured the inheritance they had fought to maintain, by incorporating in a written Constitution the safeguards which time had proven were essential to its preservation. Not one of these safeguards can the President or Congress or the Judiciary disturb, except the one concerning the writ of habeas corpus.”

This section concerns itself with the origin and nature of rights and privileges. We discuss the subject both from a biblical as well as a legal/civil perspective. The subject of rights and privileges is of utmost important in understanding our role in society and the relationship that government has to us as the sovereign people that they serve. Failure to fully understand this subject can result in making you into a government slave and signing away all your rights and sovereignty without even realizing it.

4.2.1 Rights Defined and Explained

"The people...are the only sure reliance for the preservation of our liberty.”

[Thomas Jefferson to James Madison, 1787. ME 6:392]
“The people of every country are the only safe guardians of their own rights.”
[Thomas Jefferson to John Wyche, 1809]

Black’s Law Dictionary (Sixth Edition) defines our Constitutional Rights:

“... Natural rights are those which grow out of the nature of man [the Creator] and depend upon personality, as distinguished from such as are created by law and depend upon civilized society; or those which are plainly assured by natural law...”

In other words, Natural Rights or Natural Laws come from nature [the Creator] and are separate and distinct from those laws derived by man. Our Constitution not only recognizes these Natural Rights (Natural Laws), but guarantees them as individual Rights. The Constitution recognizes that they are superior to all other laws, including the laws made by man (any level of government). That is, unless of course you freely waive your Rights, which is exactly what you do under compulsion every time you file an income tax return. It is likely, however, that you didn't know that is what you were doing. Hence, this section.

Possession of a legal right conveys certain advantages upon us in a court of law as revealed by the U.S. supreme Court, Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137, 1 Cranch 137, 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803):

The very essence of civil liberty certainly consists in the right of every individual [note that he said individual, and not citizen, since you don’t have to be a citizen to have the protection of government] to claim the protection of the laws, whenever he receives an injury. One of the first duties of government is to afford that protection. In Great Britain the king himself is sued in the respectful form of a petition, and he never fails to comply with the judgment of his court.

In the 3d vol. of his Commentaries, p. 23, Blackstone states two cases in which a remedy is afforded by mere operation of law:

“...In all other cases,” he says, “it is a general and indisputable rule, that where there is a legal right, there is also a legal remedy by suit, or action at law, whenever that right is invaded.”

And afterwards, p. 109, of the same vol. he says,

“I am next to consider such injuries as are cognizable by the court of the common law. And herein I shall for the present only remark, that all possible injuries whatsoever, that did not fall within the exclusive cognizance of either the ecclesiastical, military, or maritime tribunals, are, for that very reason, within the cognizance of the common law courts of justice; for it is a settled and invariable principle in the laws of England, that every right, when withheld, must have a remedy, and every injury its proper redress.

The government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men. It will certainly cease to deserve this high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right.”

The above case is often cited as an authority on the subject of rights, even by the government, and makes mandatory reading for the budding freedom fighter.

The supreme Court has said repeatedly that governments may not tax or regulate the exercise of rights. Here is but one example:

“A state may not impose a charge for the enjoyment of a right granted by the Federal Constitution.”

However, governments can regulate the exercise of “privileges”:

“The power to tax the exercise of a privilege is the power to control or suppress its enjoyment.”

The key to having rights is to avoid the government trap of becoming a person in receipt of government privileges. Even the U.S. Supreme court admitted this, when it said:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

“The rights of sovereignty extend to all persons and things not privileged that are within the territory. They extend to all strangers resident therein; not only to those who are naturalized, and to those who are domiciled therein, having taken up their abode with the intention of permanent residence, but also to those whose residence is transitory. All strangers are under the protection of the sovereign while they are within his territory and owe a temporary allegiance in return for that protection.”

Keep in mind that being a statutory “U.S. citizen”, in receipt of the “privileges and immunities” of federal citizenship derived from 8 U.S.C. §1401 is the very privilege that in effect, denies you your other Constitutionally guaranteed rights and personal sovereignty. Therefore, the key to having rights is also to not be a privileged statutory “U.S. citizen” or a “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but instead to be a “national” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and the Fourteenth Amendment. You don’t need statutory federal citizenship found in 8 U.S.C. §1401 to have rights. As we said at the beginning of this chapter and will say again in section 4.11, your rights come from the land you live on and not your citizenship status. The only thing that being a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 does is take away rights, not endow you with rights. “U.S. citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 was invented only to regulate and enslave people born in and occupying territories and possessions of the United States and has absolutely no bearing upon persons born in states of the Union. Everyone else who was born in a state of the Union already had the rights of kings!

“No white person born within the limits of the United States, and subject to their [the states, and not the federal government] jurisdiction, or born without those limits, and subsequently naturalized under their [the states'] laws, owes the status of citizenship to the recent amendments [Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments] to the Federal Constitution.”

The various articles contained within this chapter will demonstrate to you the facts and the proof, not only that these things are true, but just how they are used to infringe upon your Unalienable Rights as Sovereign Americans and “natural persons” of the several Union states. These Sovereign Americans of the several Union states are the only People who have Constitutional (Natural) Rights. No other status of “citizenship” or “residency” has these Natural Rights, yet you claim these other forms of citizenship everyday, and as you do so, you are unknowingly waving your Natural Rights for the illusion of benefits and privileges from the federal government. In effect, you have exchanged your own Natural Rights for mere “government privileges” and thereby irreparably compromised your personal liberty and sovereignty [Whoops.]

It is all a matter of perspective and choice. The problem is, you probably don't know or understand that there are two sides to this coin - and more importantly, that you have a choice. If you don't know how or when to “Reserve your Rights” then you become prey to oppression and tyranny by any one, including the various levels of government, who might wish to take advantage of you for their own sake or their notions of what is best for you. It is time to take charge of your own destiny and stop being so casual about your Rights. You do have them, in that they do still exist. The question is do you have access to them, when you need them the most. Not likely, unless you understand and use this valuable information at every turn in your involvement with all levels of government.

So, please, take the time to read, study and verify this information thoroughly for yourself. And please, feel free to share it with others. Organize discussion groups with your friends, relatives, and with your various clubs and organizations. The more people who become enlightened, the sooner we can stop the insanity of oppression and tyranny, by any one, especially our own government.

Time after time we have all heard the expression, “The People have the power.” Probably more times than any one of us can count. We have heard that “We the People...” are the masters and the federal government is the servant of the People. Today, most of us would agree that it is the other way around. Yet few of us can explain how or why this has come to be true. While most of us understand these powers are actually our Rights as they were known, understood and written into the Declarations of Independence, the Constitution of the United States of America and the Bill of Rights, few of us understand how to use and enforce these Rights. The majority of us are unaware of how to protect these rights and ourselves from those who would choose to usurp them, entrapping us into a web of deceit and misleading us to believe we must obey what are obviously laws which function outside our protections under the Constitution.

We often hear speakers proclaim “The people must protect (reserve) their Rights or they won’t have any.” Yet, few actually know how. Of course every elected official is required to take an oath of office, which includes the statement “... to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States of America...”. As we all have come to realize, we are gradually losing our Rights with each passing year, as the government continues to erode them away with still more federal regulation being imposed.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.53
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
In paraphrasing Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas (well known for his conservative views), he said:

"... I promise to fight federalism at ever turn. But, the People must first 'reserve' their 'Rights' or I can do nothing..."

We have all heard other notable people make similar statements in the past, and yet I have found that very few of us actually know and understand what is meant by these words. Most of us assume that the government itself is waging the battle to protect our Rights, or simply believe that these Rights we have are just there and known to all. So, who in their right mind would, or even could, get away with denying them? As you read this section, not only will you come to know exactly what Justice Thomas meant in those few words, but you will also understand precisely how to go about “reserving your Rights.” You will learn that there is a lot more going on here than first meets the eye.

So, how do we protect and enforce these Unalienable Rights granted to us by our Creator, from those who would steal them away? Who are those that would trick us into being unknowing and unwilling victims of what seems to be unconstitutional laws that violate our natural rights?

Most would agree that it is the government and big business which seek to usurp our rights. The government on all levels (local, county, state and federal) operates on a system that is actually outside the protections of the Constitution, which is a little known and even less understood conspiracy perpetrated on the American People to control their lives and their money (property and other assets). Meanwhile, big business lobbies congress to the point that “We the People...” have little if any input or affect in the legislative process. So, it is our elected officials in government who have betrayed both their oaths of office, and our faith that they will do what they promised during the election process.

It is our goal, as set forth in this book, to inform you as to precisely how government and big business accomplish these deeds of deception, trickery and fraud. Then, to further instruct you, we will educate you as to how to overcome these obstacles and barriers to the freedoms we were granted by our Creator, and guaranteed by our Constitution, for which so many have fought and died to preserve and protect for ourselves and for our posterity.

We have the power - we always have! It is time then to reeducate ourselves, getting away from the leftist rhetoric and back to the simple facts of the matter in an effort to save our Constitution and our Individual Freedoms. Our tolerance and silence has too long been mistaken for ignorance, and the faith we have entrusted in our elected officials has certainly been betrayed.

"No legislative act contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy (agent) is greater than his principal; that the servant is above the master; that the representatives of the people are superior to the people; that men, acting by virtue of powers may do not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid. It is not to be supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by judges, as fundamental law. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute." [Alexander Hamilton (Federalist Paper # 78)]

"Where rights secured by the Federal Constitution are involved, there can be no rule-making or legislation which would abrogate them." [Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436 (1966)]

"Truth is incontrovertible, ignorance can deride it, panic may resent it, malice may destroy it, but there it is.” [Winston Churchill]

4.2.2 Fundamental Rights: Granted by God and Cannot be Regulated by the Government

According to the Declaration of Independence, our rights come for God and not government or any law enacted by government:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. ." [Declaration of Independence, 1776]
An unalienable right is one that cannot be sold, bargained away, or transferred by any process, including either your consent or through any franchise:

"Unalienable. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred."

As the Declaration of Independence states, governments are established to secure and protect PRIVATE rights. Here is an affirmation of these principles by the U.S. Supreme Court:

"The most basic function of any government is to provide for the security of the individual and of his [PRIVATE] property. Lanzetta v. New Jersey, 306 U. S. 451, 455. These ends of society are served by the criminal laws which for the most part are aimed at the prevention of crime. Without the reasonably effective performance of the task of preventing private violence and retaliation, it is idle to talk about human dignity and civilized values."

[Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 539 (1966)]

Any attempt to alienate those rights, and especially if done without the consent of the owner of the right, therefore:

1. Works a purpose OPPOSITE for which government was created.
2. Is a breach of fiduciary duty on the part of the government.
3. Is a theft.
4. Must be classified as PRIVATE business activity that may not be protected with sovereign immunity. Sovereign immunity, recall, may only be invoked by de jure governments, not private corporations masquerading as “government”, which we call “de facto government”.

We should be asking ourselves: Just how sacred are our God given constitutionally protected rights? Have we lost sight of our objective of restoring liberty for ourselves and family? And even if we know something is wrong, and we start to do something about it, are we standing on solid ground?

We are the masters over our government and not its subjects. We are the “soverein people” as the U.S. Supreme Court called us in Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 12 S.Ct. 375, 143 U.S. 135, 36 L.Ed. 103 (1892). We should not allow ourselves to be compelled to waive fundamental rights to comply with some taxing scheme, merely for exercising my right to work and exist.

We absolutely have no "legal duty" to waive our fundamental rights to:

1. Speak or not to speak, as protected under the First Amendment.
2. Be secure in my personal home, papers and effects, as protected under the Fourth Amendment.
3. Not be compelled to be a witness against ourself per the Fifth Amendment.
4. Due process of law, as protected under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments.
5. An impartial jury, as protected under the Sixth amendment.
6. Any other rights protected under the Ninth Amendment.

This is not a wild theory claim. We don’t need to claim rights under the state Uniform Commercial Code. Our rights are God given, not commercially given. Neither do I need to fear waiving a right because I use a "zip code" as part of my mailing address.

The Supreme Court of the United States has already ruled on the standard for waiver of rights.

"Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

The issue of protection of rights has a track record 10 miles long. We should be able to confidently say:

“We got em, they are ours, you (government) can’t take em. If you (government) say that we lost them or waived them, the burden of proof is on you (government) to show us how we lost them or waived them or where you have the authority to take them.”

Let us cite an example that establishes a standard for the protection of rights, so you can see some of these cases that establish that track record. Back in the 60’s, there was a voting rights case down in Texas. The state of Texas was imposing a poll tax on the voters prior to letting them vote. The Texas U.S. District Court said in U.S. v. Texas, 252 F.Supp 234, 254, (1966):

“Since, in general, only those who wish to vote pay the poll tax, the tax as administered by the State, is equivalent to a charge or a penalty imposed on the exercise of a fundamental right. If the tax were increased to a high degree, as it could be if valid, it would result in the destruction of the right to vote. See Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 244, 54 S.Ct. 444 (1936).”

[Note that the court reiterated the fundamental premise of law expressed by Chief Justice John Marshall in the landmark decision of McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat 418 at.431 (1819), that “the power to tax is the power to destroy.”]

“It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution.” Frost & Frost Tracking Co. v. Railroad Comm’n of California, 271 U.S. 583.

“Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,’ Smith v. Allwright, 321 US. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,’ Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345.”

[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

That Texas federal district court held the poll tax unconstitutional and invalid and enjoined the state of Texas from requiring the payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite to voting.

Now a rare legal procedure followed that ruling. The state of Texas appealed. Not to the court of appeals, but directly to the Supreme Court. And in an equally rare circumstance, the Supreme Court took the district court’s opinion as its own and affirmed the Judgment based on the facts and opinion stated by the district court. See Texas v. U.S., 384 U.S. 155 (1966).

When the Amendments to the Constitution for the United States were ratified, they were considered a bill of restrictions on the government, not a grant of rights that could be taken from "we the people." The courts have upheld this premise many times, so if you're going to take a stand, it would be wise to base that stand on a position that has, at the minimum, the track record established for the guarantee of fundamental rights. There is none better!!

The conclusion of this exercise then, is that the government cannot tax or penalize the exercise of a right. You might then ask yourself:

1. How can the IRS impose a $5000 fine for filing a so-called “frivolous” tax return that exercises our Fifth Amendment right not to incriminate ourselves and doesn’t have our signature? (this is called a Jurat violation)
2. Why does the IRS impose a $50 fine upon employers or individual who file a 1099 form that does not have a social security number if the party we employed wants his or her 5th Amendment right not to incriminate him/herself respected?
3. Why can the state require individuals to provide their social security number in order to get a driver’s license that allows them to exercise their RIGHT to travel?
4. Why can the government impose penalties on individuals for the exercise of rights when the Constitution in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 3 specifically forbids the federal government to impose Bills of Attainder, which are penalties not imposed by a jury trial? Likewise, Article 1, Section 10 also forbids states to impose penalties without a judicial trial?

The answer is that neither the state nor federal governments are legally allowed to do any of the above in a state of the union where the Bill of Rights apply, because they amount to a tax or a penalty on the exercise of a God-given right! On the other hand, they are perfectly entitled to do all of the above as long as they are doing so within the federal zone, where the Bill of Rights do not apply, which is why we say throughout this book that the Internal Revenue Code and most state income tax laws can only apply within the federal zone. If you look for the implementing regulations that authorize any of the above actions, they don’t exist. Because implementing regulations are not required for laws that only apply to government employees, then this is a strong clue that Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code can ONLY apply to federal employees who are elected or appointed officers of the United States government in receipt of taxable privileges of public office. Applying any of the penalties mentioned above to anyone but appointed or elected officers of the United States government and who reside in states of the Union are ILLEGAL and constitute a tort that you can sue for in court. These are the very illegal actions that convert our glorious republic into a relativistic, totalitarian socialist democracy where the collective as a whole is the sovereign and no individuals have rights. They continue to be perpetrated because of fundamental ignorance about the separation of powers and sovereignty between the state and federal governments.

4.2.3 What is the Difference Between a “Right” and a “Privilege”?

A right is a behavior or a choice, the exercise of which can’t be taken away, fined, taxed, or regulated by anyone, including the government. The rights recognized by the Bill of Rights are “unalienable” according to the Declaration of Independence.

[Declaration of Independence]

The word “unalienable” is defined as follows:

So in other words, rights protected by the Constitution or a REAL, de jure government may not lawfully be bargained away, sold, or transferred in relation to that government, including by the commercial mechanism of a franchise. Governments must drop to the level of PRIVATE individuals and surrender their sovereign immunity, in fact, before they can entice you out of a right protected by the Constitution without violating the Constitution and even then, they are violating the purpose of their creation and engaging in a commercial conflict of interest in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §208 to make a business (franchise) out of destroying and enticing you out of your rights.

See also Clearfield Trust Co. v. United States, 318 U.S. 363, 369 (1943) (“The United States does business on business terms”); (quoting United States v. National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, 270 U.S. 527, 534 (1926)); Perry v. United States, supra at 352 (1935) (“When the United States, with constitutional authority, makes contracts, it has rights and incurs responsibilities similar to those of individuals who are parties to such instruments. There is no difference . . . except that the United States cannot be sued without its consent”) (citation omitted); United States v. Bostwick, 94 U.S. 53, 66 (1877) (“The United States, when they contract with their citizens, are controlled by the same laws that govern the citizen in that behalf”); Cooke v. United States, 91 U.S. 389, 398 (1875) (explaining that when the United States “comes down from its position of sovereignty, and enters the domain of commerce, it submits itself to the same laws that govern individuals there”).

What specifically do rights attach to? They attach irrevocably to LAND protected by the Constitution, and not to the STATUS of the people standing on said land.

[Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922) ]
Notice that the Declaration of Independence also states that all men are EQUAL. The results of the requirement that rights are unalienable and that all men are equal are the following:

1. Kings are impossible.
2. The source of all sovereignty is the People as private individuals and NOT as a collective.

"Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents [fiduciaries] of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens." at 472."

3. All governments are established by authority delegated by the people they serve. In that sense, they govern ONLY by our continuing consent and when they fail to do their job properly, it is our right AND duty as the Sovereigns they serve to fire them by changing our domicile and forming a competing government that does a better job.
4. No group or collection of men can have any more authority than a single man.
5. No government, which is simply a collection of people, cannot have any more authority, rights, or privileges than a single man.
6. The people cannot delegate an authority they do not themselves individually have. For instance, they cannot delegate the authority to injure the equal rights of others by stealing from others. Hence, they cannot delegate an authority to a government to collect a tax that redistributes wealth by taking from one group of private individuals and giving it to another group or class of private individuals.
7. A government that asserts “sovereign immunity” must also give natural persons the same right. When governments assert sovereign immunity in court, their opponent has to produce evidence of consent to be sued and writing. The same concept of sovereign immunity pertains to us as natural persons, where if the government attempts to allege that we consented to something, they too must produce evidence of consent to be sued and surrender rights IN WRITING.
8. The only place where all men are UNEQUAL is on federal territory where Constitutional rights do not exist.

If you would like a wonderful, animated version of the above concepts, then we highly recommend the following:

Philosophy of Liberty
http://sedm.org/LibertyU/PhilosophyOfLiberty.htm

Why is all of this relevant and important to the subject of government authority over private persons? Because once you understand this concept of equality, you also understand that:

1. The foundation of the Constitution is equal protection.
2. Any attempt to make us unequal constitutes tyranny, usurpation, and slavery.
3. Any attempt to do any of the following constitutes tyranny, usurpation, and slavery:
   3.1. Replace rights with privileges.
   3.2. Describe rights as privileges.
   3.3. Call a privilege a “right”.
4. Any attempt to do any of the following constitutes tyranny, usurpation, and slavery because it compels us into subjection and subordination to a political ruler as a “public official”:
   4.1. Compel us to participate in a government franchise.
   4.2. Presume that we consented to participate in said franchise without being required to obtain our consent in writing where all rights surrendered to procure the benefits of the franchise are fully disclosed.
   4.3. Replace a de jure government service with a franchise.
   4.4. Confer benefits of a franchise against our will and without our consent.
5. Any attempt to make some persons or groups of persons more equal than others is idolatry in violation of the first four commandments of the Ten Commandments. See Exodus 20:3-8. It amounts to the establishment of a religion and a “superior being”. All religions are based on the “worship” of superior beings, and the essence of “worship” is obedience. The fact that obedience to this superior being is a product of the force implemented under the authority of law doesn’t change the nature of the relationship at all. It is STILL a religion.

"You shall have no other gods [or rulers or governments] before Me."
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: you shall not bow down to them nor serve them [rulers or governments]. For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.

[Exodus 20:3-6, Bible, NKJV]

A privilege, on the other hand, is something that can be taken away at any moment, usually at the discretion of the entity providing it, subject only to the contractual and legal constraints governing your relationship with that entity. For instance, it is unconstitutional for the government to tax or fine you for exercising your right to free speech guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution. To give another example, no one, including the government, your employer, or another human being can fine or penalize you for exercising your right to vote, for instance, by taxing you or charging you a fee. If voting were a privilege then they could, but it is a right, so they can’t. Such a fee is called a “poll tax” and the courts have repeatedly held that poll taxes are illegal, no matter who charges them.

You can’t be fined for exercising the right not to incriminate yourself guaranteed by the 5th Amendment, by, for instance, fining you $500 (under the “Jurat” amendment and 26 U.S.C. §6702) for refusing to sign your 1040 income tax return “under penalty of perjury.” The government also should never be permitted to fine you for your right under the Petition clause of the constitution to correct a government wrongdoing (the First Amendment states that we have a right “to petition the Government for a redress of grievances”), but in fact the courts routinely do this anyway, in violation of the Constitution. This tactic is part of the “judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax” defined elsewhere in this document, including in section 6.6. The fact that most Americans allow and tolerate this kind of injustice, abuse, and violation of their God-given rights confounds us and simply reveals how apathetic and indifferent we have become about our heritage and our treasured rights under the Constitution of the United States.

Privileges attach to a statutory “status” rather than to land protected by the Constitution as in the case of rights. Such statutory statuses include “taxpayer”, “citizen”, “resident”, “employee”, “driver”, “spouse”, etc. If you don’t have the status, then you can’t exercise the privilege, and usually the only way you can acquire the status is by filling out a government form that usually calls itself an “application”. For instance, IRS Form W-4 identifies itself as an “Employee Withholding Allowance Certificate”. If you fill out, sign, and submit that form the regulations controlling its use say that it is an agreement or contract and that you are to be treated as a statutory “employee” beyond that point but NOT before. If you don’t want the status of statutory “employee” under federal law or don’t want the “benefits” associated with said status such as social insurance, then you have to use a different form such as IRS Form W-8BEN.

Privileges, however, are much different from rights. Privileges we want are how the government, our employer, and others we know enslave and coerce us into giving up our rights voluntarily. Giving up a right is an injury, and as one shrewd friend frequently said:

The more needy and desperate we allow ourselves to become, the more susceptible we become to being abused by voluntarily jeopardizing our rights and becoming willing slaves to others. There is nothing unconstitutional or illegal about giving away our rights to PRIVATE parties and not governments in exchange for benefits in this way, so long as we do it voluntarily and with full knowledge of exactly what we are giving up to procure the benefit. The Constitution doesn’t apply to transactions involving private parties, in fact. This is called “informed consent”. Situations where we surrender rights in exchange for privileges are commonplace and actually are the foundation of the commercial marketplace. This exchange is referred to as a business transaction and is usually governed by some contractual or legal vehicle in order to protect the property interests of the parties to the transaction. This legal vehicle is the Uniform Commercial Code, or UCC and the contract that fixes the rights of the two or PRIVATE parties to it. An example of a privilege we give up our property rights to exercise is legalized gambling. If a person is a compulsive gambler and they lose their whole life savings and gamble themselves into massive debt, they in effect have sold themselves into legalized financial slavery to the casino. That’s perfectly legal, and the laws will protect the property interest of the casino and the right of the casino to collect on the debt. Even though the Thirteenth Amendment outlawed slavery and even though the gambler might be a slave in this circumstance, because it was his choice and he wasn’t compelled to do it, then it isn’t illegal or unconstitutional.

Another example of privileges being exchanged for rights is when we obtain a state marriage license. When we voluntarily get a marriage license, we basically surrender our God-given right to control the fruit of our marriage, including our children and all our property, and give jurisdiction to the government to control every aspect of our lives. Many people do this because their hormones get the better of them and they aren’t practical or rational enough to negotiate the terms of their marriage and won’t sit down with their spouse and write down an agreement that will keep the government out of their lives. Marriage is supposed to be a confidential spiritual and religious union between a man and a woman, but when we get a marriage license, we violate the separation of church and state and actually get married not only to our spouse, but also to the government. We become, in effect, a polygamist! A marriage license is a license to the government, not to us, that allows them to invade our lives any way they see fit at anytime at the request of either spouse and based on the presumption that they are furthering the “public good”, whatever that is! If couples get married in the church and get a marriage certificate but don’t get a marriage license from the state, then the government has no jurisdiction over the spouses, the children, or the property of the marriage, and the only way it can get jurisdiction, under such circumstances is to PROVE that someone within the relationship is being hurt by the actions of others. If divorce results from an unlicensed marriage, the parties can litigate if need be, but the government has to stay within the bounds of any written or verbal agreement that the spouses have between them.

The government can’t take away or even bargain away rights protected by the Constitution because the Declaration of Independence, which is “organic law” of this country which is implemented by the Constitution, says these rights are “unalienable”, which means they can’t be sold or transferred by any commercial process, including franchises.

However, governments can definitely take away privileges, often indiscriminately. For instance, receiving social security checks is a privilege, and not a right. The courts have repeatedly ruled that social security is not a contract or a right, but a privilege. We can only earn that privilege by “volunteering” to be a U.S. or “federal” statutory and NOT constitutional “citizen” and paying into the Social Security System. Paying into the Social Security System means participants have to waive their right to not be taxed on our income with direct taxes, which the Constitution forbids. Same thing for Medicare and disability insurance. There is nothing immoral or unethical or illegal with being taxed on our income to support these programs provided:

1. The programs are ONLY offered to those domiciled and physically present on federal territory that is no part of any state of the Union, who are called statutory “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. residents”. Offering the “benefit” to those domiciled outside the territory of the sovereign such as those domiciled in states of the Union is a violation of the separation of powers doctrine.
2. Those being offered the “benefit” are informed prior to joining that participation was voluntary and that we could not be coerced to join or punished for not joining.
3. The program is only offered to EXISTING public officers in the government and is NOT used as a mechanism to unlawfully create any NEW offices. Pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72, all such public offices may be exercise ONLY in the District of Columbia and NOT elsewhere, except as expressly provided by law. There is no provision within the I.R.C. or the Social Security Act that in fact authorizes the creation of NEW public offices or the exercise of the offices that it does regulate within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union. Furthermore, there are no internal revenue districts within any state of the Union, so revenue can’t be collected outside the District of Columbia, which is the only remaining internal revenue district.
4. There is some measure of accountability and fiduciary duty associated with the government in managing and investing our money. Good stewardship of our contributions by the government is expected and bad stewardship is punished by the law and those who enforce the law.
5. We are informed frequently by the fiduciary that we can leave the program at any time, and that our benefits will be proportional to our contributions.
6. We made a conscious, informed decision on a signed contract to sacrifice our rights to qualify to receive the benefit or privilege. This is called “informed consent”, which can only exist where there is “full disclosure” by either party of the rights surrendered and the benefits obtained through the surrender of rights. This approach is the basis for what is called “good faith” dealing.
7. If you die young or never collect benefits, your contributions plus interest should be given to your relatives, so that the government doesn’t benefit financially from people dying.
8. There is no unwritten or invisible or undisclosed contract that binds us, and nothing will be expected of us that wasn’t clearly explained up front before we signed the contract.

However, the problem is that our federal government has mismanaged the funds put into the Social Security System and squandered the money. This has lead them to violate their fiduciary duties and the above requirements as follows:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

The Great Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.5

1. Government employees routinely and deliberately waive or overlook the domicile requirement as a matter of public policy rather than law, and thereby turn a government function into private business. See 20 CFR §422.104, which says that only statutory “citizens” and “residents” domiciled on federal territory within a statutory but not constitutional “State” may lawfully participate.

2. The government refuses to be accountable or to notify us of the benefits we have earned. They also don’t tell us on their statements how much we would earn if we quit contributing today and only drew benefits based on what we paid in the past.

3. The federal government won’t tell us that participation is voluntary and they provide no means on the social security website (http://www.ssa.gov) to de-enroll from the program. Instead, they try to fool us all into thinking that the program is mandatory when in fact it is entirely voluntary. The reason the U.S. Government won’t tell us that participation is voluntarily is that so many people would leave such an inefficient and poorly managed system to start their own plans when they find this out that the Ponzi scheme it has become would suffer instant meltdown and would turn into a big scandal!

4. If you never collect benefits or you die young, all the money you paid in and the interest aren’t given to your relatives as an inheritance. The government keeps EVERYTHING, and this is a BIG injustice that would not occur if the program were run more like the annuity that it should be.

5. There is no written agreement or contract, so they have no obligation or liability to be good stewards over our contributions.

6. Our kids are coerced into joining the system when they are born under the Enumeration At Birth program and the decision is made by their parents and not by them directly. This is unethical and immoral. See section 2.8.7.1 for details on this type of scamming by the government.

7. We are also coerced by our parents to join because the IRS deceives us into thinking that we are obligated to get Socialist Security Numbers for each of our children in order to qualify to use them as deductions on our taxes. In effect, they bribe us with our own money to sell our children into slavery into this inept and poorly managed system.

For all the above reasons and many more, we recommend exiting this bankrupt welfare-state system as quickly as you can. It’s a “privilege” you can’t be coerced to participate in anyway. We have to ask ourselves: Is a compelled benefit really a benefit, or just another form of slavery? The trick is determining how to escape, because you will get absolutely NO help from the Social Security Administration or the government! We provide answers to this dilemma of how to abandon the Social Security Program and your federal citizenship in Chapter 3 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008.

We have prepared the following table to compare rights with privileges to make this section crystal clear and to help you discern the two:

Lastly, it is VERY important to realize that the very words we use to describe ourselves establish whether we are engaged in a privileged activity or a right. We must be VERY careful to recognize key “words or art” that create a false legal presumption of “privilege” and remove or replace them from our written and spoken vocabulary and all the government forms and correspondence. This subject is covered more thoroughly in section 2.5.2.6 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual. Form #10.005, if you would like to know more. Below is a table showing you how to describe yourself so as to avoid any association with “privileged” and thus “taxable” activities or status:

Do you see how tricky this game with words is? We covered this earlier in section 3.9.1 as well. The trickiness is deliberate, so that you can be deceived by a covetous government into becoming a “subject” of their corrupt laws and a feudal serf residing on the federal plantation:

“For where [government] envy and self-seeking [of money they are not entitled to] exist, confusion [and deception] and every evil thing will be there.”

[James 3:16, Bible, NKJV]

4.2.4 The two classes of rights: Civil and Political

It is very important to understand that there are two classes of rights within our system of jurisprudence. All other “rights” are simply subsets of these two classes of rights:

1. Civil rights. Relate to the Bill of Rights and natural rights and have no relation to the establishment, support or management of the government. Attach to the land you inhabit and not your citizenship status. Everyone, whether alien or citizen, has this kind of right and the protection afforded by government is equal to all for this type of right. See section 4.3.4 for complete coverage on the subject of “equal protection”. On this subject, the U.S. Supreme Court said:

“The Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution is not confined to the protection of citizens. It says:

Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

These provisions are universal in their application to all persons within the territorial jurisdiction, without regard to any differences of race, of color, or of nationality; and the equal protection of the laws is a pledge of the protection of equal laws.”

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

2. Political rights. Are a privilege incident to citizenship. Involve participation, directly or indirectly, in the establishment or management of the government. They include voting and the right to serve as a jurist. In most jurisdictions, political rights usually have the prerequisite of “allegiance”, in order to ensure that those who manage or administer the government as voters and jurists have the best interests of the society in mind.

The above two classes of rights above were first defined and clarified in the case of Fletcher v. Tuttle, 151 Ill. 41, 37 N.E. 683 (1894).

Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, refers to “civil rights” as “civil liberties”, and defines them as follows:

“Civil liberties. Personal, natural rights guaranteed and protected by the Constitution; e.g. freedom of speech, press, freedom from discrimination, etc. Body of law dealing with natural liberties, shorn of excesses which invade equal rights of others. Constitutionally, they are restraints on government. Sowers v. Ohio Civil Rights Commission, 20 Ohio Misc. 1`15, 252 N.E.2d. 463, 476. State law may recognize liberty interests more extensive than those independently protected by the Federal Constitution. Mills v. Rogers, 457 U.S. 291, 300, 102 S.Ct. 2442, 2449, 73 L.Ed.2d. 16 (1982). See also Bill of Rights, Civil Rights Acts; Fundamental rights.”

Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, defines “political rights” as follows:

“Political rights. Those which may be exercised in the formation or administration of the government. Rights of citizens established or recognized by constitutions which give them the power to participate directly or indirectly in the establishment or administration of the government.”

Below is a tabular summary that compares these two fundamental types of rights and the place from which they derive in the case of states of the Union:

On federal land or property where exclusive federal jurisdiction applies, as described in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Federal Constitution, the above table looks very different. Remember that the Bill of Rights does not apply within federal property. Therefore, all rights derive from federal legislation and “acts of congress” published in the Statutes at Large and codified in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. Since Congress can rewrite its own laws any time it wants, then it can take away rights by simple legislation. Therefore, on federal property, what are mistakenly called “rights” are really just “privileges”. Anything that can be taken away on a whim or through a legislative enactment simply cannot be described as a “right”. Below is the revised version of the above table that reflects these realities.

Within federal territories, possessions, and Indian reservations, “rights” don’t exist and the “privileges” that replace them are legislatively granted and often, there isn’t even a Constitution to protect people from government usurpation. The only “laws” within federal territories and possessions are those that are enacted by Congress, in most cases. Below is a listing of the legislative “Bill of Rights” for each of the territories and possessions of the United States that are under the stewardship of the U.S. Congress. “Bill or Rights” is a misnomer, and they should be called “Bill of Privileges” rather than “Bill of Rights”. The list below is not all-inclusive but shows you only the most important territories and possessions:

Our public servants don’t want you to know or be able to distinguish between the two fundamental types of rights. They want you to believe that all rights attach to citizenship so that you falsely believe that they are “privileges” incident to citizenship rather than rights granted by God. They also want to do this in order to bring you within their legislative jurisdiction and tax and pillage your labor and property, because being a “citizen” under federal law implies a domicile...

e in. Below is a deceptive definition of “citizen” from Black’s Law Dictionary to prove our point:

“citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.

“Citizens” are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d 101, 109.

Notice that they didn’t mention who else, other than “citizens”, enjoys “full civil rights”, because they want to create a false presumption that all rights derive from citizenship as “entitlements” or “privileges”. We show above, however, that civil rights originate exclusively from the Bill of Rights in the Federal Constitution. Notice that none of the Amendments that form the Bill of Rights mention anything about a requirement for “citizenship”. The cites below help drive home our point to show that EVERYONE, whether “citizen” or “alien” (called “resident” in law) is entitled to “civil rights” under the law”

“Is any one of the rights secured to the individual by the Fifth or by the Sixth Amendment any more a privilege or immunity of a citizen of the United States than are those secured by the Seventh? In none are they privileges or immunities granted and belonging to the individual as a citizen of the United States, but they are secured to all persons as against the Federal government, entirely irrespective of such citizenship. As the individual does not enjoy them as a privilege of citizenship of the United States, therefore, when the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits the abridgment by the states of those privileges or immunities which he enjoys as such citizen, it is not correct or reasonable to say that it covers and extends to [176 U.S. 581, 596] certain rights which he does not enjoy by reason of his citizenship, but simply because those rights exist in favor of all individuals as against Federal governmental powers.” [Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U.S. 581 (1900)]

“RIGHT: ...Civil rights are such as belong to every citizen of the state or country, or, in a wider sense, to all its inhabitants [citizens or not], and are not connected with the organization or administration of the government.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, 1968, pp. 1486-1488]

“In Truax v. Raich, supra, the people of the state of Arizona adopted an act, entitled ‘An act to protect the [271 U.S. 500, 528] citizens of the United States in their employment against noncitizens of the United States,’ and provided that an employer of more than five workers at any one time in that state should not employ less than 80 per cent. qualified electors or native-born citizens, and that any employer who did so should be subject upon conviction to the payment of a fine and imprisonment. It was held that such a law denied aliens an opportunity of earning a livelihood and deprived them of their liberty without due process of law, and denied them the equal protection of the laws. As against the Chinese merchants of the Philippines, we think the present law which deprives them of something indispensable to the carrying on of their business, and is obviously intended chiefly to affect them as distinguished from the rest of the community, is a denial to them of the equal protection of the laws.” [Yu Cong Eng v. Trinidad, 271 U.S. 500 (1926)]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

The alien retains immunities from burdens which the citizen must shoulder. By withholding his allegiance from the United States, he leaves outstanding a foreign [342 U.S. 586] call on his loyalties which international law not only permits our Government to recognize, but commands it to respect. In deference to it, certain dispensations from conscription for any military service have been granted foreign nationals. They cannot, consistently with our international commitments, be compelled "to take part in the operations of war directed against their own country." In addition to such general immunities they may enjoy particular treaty privileges.

Under our law, the alien in several respects stands on an equal footing with citizens, but, in others, has never been conceded legal parity with the citizen. Most importantly, to protract this ambiguous status within the country is not his right, but is a matter of permission and [342 U.S. 587] tolerance. The Government's power to terminate its hospitality has been asserted and sustained by this Court since the question first arose.

The reason that EVERYONE is entitled to civil rights, including “aliens”, is because our Constitution is based on the concept of “equal protection of the laws”. Equal protection is mandated in states of the Union by Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Here is what the Supreme Court says on the requirement for “equal protection”:

“The equal protection demanded by the fourteenth amendment forbids this. No language is more worthy of frequent and thoughtful consideration than these words of Mr. Justice Matthews, speaking for this court, in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 369, 6 S. Sup.Ct. 1064, 1071: ‘When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles upon which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power.’ The first official action of this nation declared the foundation of government in these words: ‘We hold these truths to be self-evident, [165 U.S. 150, 160] that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.’ While such declaration of principles may not have the force of organic law, or be made the basis of judicial decision as to the limits of right and duty, and while in all cases reference must be had to the organic law of the nation for such limits, yet the latter is but the body and the letter of which the former is the thought and the spirit, and it is always safe to read the letter of the constitution in the spirit of the Declaration of Independence. No duty rests more imperatively upon the courts than the enforcement of those constitutional provisions intended to secure that equality of rights which is the foundation of free government.”

[Gailf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U.S. 150 (1897)]

Equal protection means that EVERYONE, whether they are a “citizen” or an “alien” (which is called a “resident” in the tax code), is entitled to the SAME civil rights.

On the other hand, not all People have the same “political rights”. Only “citizens” can vote and serve on jury duty while aliens are excluded from these functions in most states. The reason is that only citizens claim “allegiance” to the political body and therefore only they are likely to exercise their political rights in such a way that will preserve, defend, and protect the existing governmental system and the rights of their fellow men. Chaos would result if aliens could come into a country who are intent on destroying the country and then exercise sovereign powers of voting and jury service in such a way as to disrespect the law and destroy the existing civil order.

4.2.5 Why we MUST know and assert our rights and can’t depend on anyone to help us

All rights come not from the government, from a judge, or any law, but from God, our Creator alone, just as the Declaration of Independence says. Since rights don’t come from any man, but from God, then it’s vain and foolish to ask any earthly man what your rights are. To remain free, we must know what rights are instinctively and be willing to literally fight for them at all times. It’s not only impossible, but illegal for an attorney who practices law to fight for your rights within the context of a court proceeding. Your attorney cannot claim or exercise any of the rights God gave you while he is representing you in any court proceeding. For further details on this, read our article below:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Articles/WhyYouDon'tWantAnAtty/WhyYouDon'tWantAnAttorney.htm

An attorney cannot assert any of your rights on your behalf. Only YOU, the sovereign, can. Below is a very good explanation of why we can’t be free and at the same time allow an attorney to represent us in court. The quote below is extracted from a federal court decision:

“The privilege against self-incrimination [Fifth Amendment] is neither accorded to the passive resistant, nor the person who is ignorant of their rights, nor to one who is indifferent thereto. It is a fighting clause.”

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

Please notice the boldfaced and underlined words the court used in the above quote! What human endeavor are these words normally used in connection with? WAR! Freedom is not for the timid, but for the brave. That is why they call America “Land of the Free and Home of the Brave!” If you want to stay free, then you must be willing to fight with anyone and everyone who tries to take away that freedom, and especially with tyrannical public servants.

Rights [read Liberties] are always demanded!

Also note in the quote above that what the court above called a “privilege” is really structured in the Bill of Rights as a “Liberty” or restraint on government! One who knows them and demands them! Our pledge of allegiance says “with liberty and justice for ALL”. If you are going to stay free, then you must help everyone to stay free. A chain is only as strong as its weakest link. The weakest link is the most helpless, ignorant, and defenseless members of society. We can only remain free so long as we are willing to donate our effort and money to defending the weakest members of society from government abuse. If we only protect our rights and don’t help our neighbor defend his, then the tyrants in government will isolate, divide, and eventually conquer and enslave everyone.

4.2.6 Why you shouldn’t cite federal statutes as authority for protecting your rights

Nearly all federal civil law is a civil franchise that you must volunteer for. This is covered in:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm

As such:

1. One must be domiciled or resident on federal territory to invoke federal civil statutory law. State citizens domiciled in constitutional states of the Union do NOT satisfy this criteria.
2. One must consent to the statutory “citizen” or “resident” franchise by describing themselves as such on government forms.
3. If you are a state citizen domiciled in a constitutional state of the Union and you cite federal statutory law as authority for an injury, then indirectly you are:
   3.1. Misrepresenting your status as as a statutory “citizen of the United States” under federal law.
   3.2. Conferring civil jurisdiction to a federal court that they would not otherwise lawfully have.

There are exceptions to the above, but they are rare. Any enactment of Congress that implements a constitutional provision, for instance, would be an exception. For instance, the civil rights found mainly in Title 42, Chapter 21 entitled “Civil Rights” implement the Fourteenth Amendment. They do not CREATE “privileges” or “rights”, but rather enforce them as authorized by the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 5. This is revealed in the following document:

Section 1983 Litigation, Litigation Tool #08.008
http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm

The most often cited statute within Chapter 21 is 42 U.S.C. §1983. To wit:

TITLE 42 > CHAPTER 21 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1983.
Sec. 1983 - Civil action for deprivation of rights

Every person [not “man” or “woman”, but “person”] who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress, except that in any action brought against a judicial officer for an act or omission taken in such officer’s judicial capacity, injunctive relief shall not be granted unless a declaratory decree was violated or declaratory relief was unavailable. For the purposes of this
The first thing to notice about the above, is that they use the word “person” instead of “man or woman”. This “person” is a CONSTITUTIONAL person described in the Fourteenth Amendment, not a STATUTORY “person” domiciled or resident on federal territory and subject to the GENERAL jurisdiction of the national government. The phrase “within the jurisdiction” above means the SUBJECT MATTER jurisdiction and not the GENERAL jurisdiction. How do we know this? Because:

1. They mention the laws of a State or territory or the District of Columbia RATHER than those of the national government.
2. The statute may ONLY be enforced against officers of constitutional states depriving those under their protection of their constitutionally guaranteed rights. It may NOT be enforced against ANY private person.

You will find out later that the status of being either a STATUTORY “citizen” or STATUTORY “resident” within a franchise is not a status you want to have under federal law, because that is how you become a “taxpayer”! They also use the word “State”, which we know from 4 U.S.C. §110(d) means a federal State, which is a territory or possession of the United States. States of the Union do NOT fit this category, folks!

A very important aspect of natural rights is the following fact:

“You don’t need stinking federal statutes to protect them!” [Family Guardian Fellowship]

Below is an example of a sovereign Indian tribe that sued a state official under the provisions of 42 U.S.C. §1983 and yet tried to assert that it was “sovereign”. The U.S. Supreme Court admitted that it could NOT cite this statute as authority:

The Tribe responds that Congress intended § 1983 “to provide a powerful civil remedy ‘against all forms of official violation of federally protected rights.’” Brief for Respondents 45 (citing Monell v. New York City Dept. of Social Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 700-701 (1978)). To achieve that remedial purpose, the Tribe maintains, § 1983 should be “broadly construed.” Brief for Respondents 45 (citing Monell, 436 U.S. at 684-685) (internal quotation marks omitted). Indian tribes, the Tribe here asserts, “have been especially vulnerable to infringement of their federally protected rights by states.” Brief for Respondents 42 (citing, inter alia, The Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737 (1867) (state taxation of tribal lands); Minnesota v. Mille Lacs Band of Chipewa Indians, 526 U.S. 172 (1999) (state infringement on tribal rights to hunt, fish, and gather on ceded lands);

As we have recognized in other contexts, qualification of a sovereign as a "person" who may maintain a particular claim for relief depends not "upon a bare analysis of the word `person,'" Pfizer Inc. v. Government of India, 434 U.S. 308, 317 (1978), but on the "legislative environment" in which the word appears, Georgia v. Evans, 316 U.S. 159, 161 (1942). Thus, in Georgia, the Court held that a State, as purchaser of asphalt shipped in interstate commerce, qualified as a "person" entitled to seek redress under the Sherman Act for restraint of trade. Id. at 160-163. Similarly, in Pfizer, the Court held that a foreign nation, as purchaser of antibiotics, ranked as a "person" qualified to sue pharmaceuticals manufacturers under our antitrust laws. Pfizer, 434 U.S. at 309-320; cf. Stevens, 529 U.S. at 787, and n. 18 (deciding States are not "person[s]" subject to qui tam liability under the False Claims Act, but留下了 open the question whether they "can be `persons' for purposes of commencing an FCA qui tam action" (emphasis deleted)); United States v. Cleveland Indians Baseball Co., 532 U.S. 200, 213 (2001) ("Although we generally presume that identical words used in different parts of the same act are intended to have the same meaning, the presumption is not rigid, and the meaning of the same words may well vary to meet the purposes of the law." (internal quotation marks, brackets, and citations omitted)).

There is in this case no allegation that the County lacked probable cause or that the warrant was otherwise defective. It is only by virtue of the Tribe's asserted "sovereign" states that it claims immunity from the County's processes. See App. 97-105, ¶¶ 23-25, 108-110, ¶¶ 133-39; 291 F.3d. at 554 (Court of Appeals "find[s] that the County and its agents violated the Tribe's sovereign immunity when they obtained and executed a search warrant against the Tribe and tribal [538 U.S. 711] property," (emphasis added)). Section 1983 was designed to secure private rights against government encroachment, see Will, 494 U.S. at 66, not to advance a sovereign's prerogative to withhold evidence relevant to a criminal investigation. For example, as the County acknowledges, a tribal member complaining of a Fourth Amendment violation would be a "person" qualified to sue under § 1983. See Brief for Petitioners 20, n. 7. But like other private persons, that member would have no right to immunity from an appropriately executed search warrant based on probable cause. Accordingly, we hold that the [sovereign] Tribe may not sue under § 1983 to vindicate the sovereign right it here claims. [6]

[Inyo County, California v. Paiute Shoshone Indians, 538 U.S. 701 (2003)]

State courts are the only appropriate forum in which to litigate to protect your rights if you live in a state of the Union and not on federal property. The Supreme Court confirmed this when it said:

"It would be the vainest show of learning to attempt to prove by citations of authority, that up to the adoption of the recent Amendments [the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendment], no claim or pretense was set up that those rights depended on the Federal government for their existence or protection, beyond the very few express limitations which the Federal Constitution imposed upon the states—such as the prohibition against ex post facto laws, bill of attainder, and laws impairing the obligation of contracts. But with the exception of these and a few other restrictions, the entire domain of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the states, as above defined, lay within the constitutional and legislative power of the states, and without that of the Federal government. Was it the purpose of the 14th Amendment, by the simple declaration that no state should make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, to transfer the security and protection of all the civil rights which we have mentioned, from the states to the Federal government? And where it is declared that Congress shall have the power to enforce that article, was it intended to bring within the power of Congress the entire domain of civil rights heretofore belonging exclusively to the states?

We are convinced that no such result was intended by the Congress which proposed these amendments, nor by the legislatures of the states, which ratified them.

Having shown that the privileges and immunities relied on in the argument are those which belong to citizens of the states as such, and that they are left to the state governments for security and protection, and not by this article placed under the special care of the Federal government, we may hold ourselves excused from defining the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States which no state can abridge, until some case involving those privileges may make it necessary to do so.

When properly litigated in a state court, the only authority necessary for the defense of rights is the Constitution itself and proof of your domicile in a state of the Union and not on federal property. The Supreme Court alluded to this fact when it stated:

"The government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men. It will certainly cease to deserve that high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right."
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

Those citing EXCLUSIVELY the constitution do not NEED federal statutes, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

1. They only apply within federal jurisdiction and on federal land, where the Bill of Rights do not apply and where federal jurisdiction is exclusive and plenary. See Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901). These statutes are therefore meant as a substitute for the Bill of Rights that only applies in federal areas.
2. They are intended to be used by “persons” domiciled on federal territory wherever situated and may only be invoked by nonresident parties where a specific extraterritorial subject matter issue enumerated in the Constitution is involved, such as interstate commerce.
3. The result of persons citing federal statutes who are domiciled in Constitutional states of the Union is that these people basically are volunteering or "electing" to become "resident" parties and/or “taxpayers” for the purposes of the dispute. Keep in mind that if you are a Constitutional and not statutory “citizen”, then making such an election is a CRIME pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §911!

Per Fourteenth Amendment, Section 5, 42 U.S.C. §1981, implements the equal protection provisions of said amendment as follows:

All persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall have the same right in every State and Territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, give evidence, and to the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens. shall be subject to like punishment, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions of every kind, and to no other.

The whole chapter 21 only applies to people “within the jurisdiction of the United States”, which we already said are CONSTITUTIONAL and NOT federal STATUTORY “persons”. If you are domiciled within a state of the Union and don’t maintain a domicile on federal territory, then that doesn’t include you, amigo! By “like”, they mean the same “taxes” as “U.S. citizens” pay who were born in federal territories or possessions or the District of Columbia. Notice they put “punishment, pains, penalties, and taxes” in the same sentence because they are all equivalent!

"A fine is a tax for doing something wrong. A tax is a fine for doing something right."

Here is some more evidence:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship and Rights!

4.2.7 Enumeration of inalienable rights

As we said in the previous sections, you must know your rights before you have any! A sovereign who is not subject to federal statutory law cannot cite that law in his defense, and can only defend himself by litigating in defense of his Constitutional and natural rights. He must do so in equity and not law, and proceed against the perpetrator as a private individual.

There is no single place we have found which even attempts to enumerate all of these rights or “protected liberty interests”. You won’t find them listed in any statute or legislative act or legal reference book. The only source we have found which identifies them is mainly rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court and state Supreme Courts. The following subsections constitute a summary of these rights, provided for ready reference in order to save you the MUCHO research time we had to devote in producing it:

Nothing contained in any title of this Act shall be construed as indicating an intent on the part of Congress to occupy the field in which any such title operates to the exclusion of State laws on the same subject matter, nor shall any provision of this Act be construed as invalidating any provision of State law unless such provision is inconsistent with any of the purposes of this Act, or any provision thereof.

4.3 Government

4.3.1 What is government?

We’ll start off this section with a definition of government from Black’s Law Dictionary. Note especially the definition of “Republican government”, which is the kind government we have here in America:

Government. From the Latin gubernacula. Signifies the instrument, the helm, whereby the ship to which the state was compared, was guided on its course by the “gubernator” or helmsman, and in that view, the government is but an agency of the state, distinguished as it must be in accurate thought from its scheme and machinery of government.

In the United States, government consists of the executive, legislative, and judicial branches in addition to administrative agencies. In a broader sense, includes the federal government and all its agencies and bureaus, state and county governments, and city and township governments.

The system of polity in a state; that form of fundamental rules and principles which a national or state is governed, or by which individual members of a body politic are to regulate their social actions. A constitution, either written or unwritten, by which the rights and duties of citizens and public officers are prescribed and defined, as a monarchical government, a republican government, etc. The machinery by which the sovereign power in a state expresses its will and exercises its functions; or the framework of political institutions, departments, and offices, by means of which the executive, judicial, legislative, and administrative business of the state is carried on.

The whole class or body of officeholders or functionaries considered in the aggregate, upon whom devolves the executive, judicial, legislative, and administrative business of the state.

In a colloquial sense, the United States or its representatives, considered as the prosecutor in a criminal action; as in the phrase, “the government objects to the witness.”

The regulation, restrain, supervision, or control which is exercised upon the individual members of an organized jural society by those invested with authority; or the act of exercising supreme political power or control.

See also De facto government; Federal government; Judiciary; Legislature; Seat of government.

Federal government. The government of the United States of America, as distinguished from the governments of the several states.

Local government. The government or administration of a particular locality, especially, the governmental authority of a municipal corporation, as a city or county, over its local and individual, exercised in virtue of power delegated to it for that purpose by the general government of the state or nation.

Mixed government. A form of government combining some of the features of two or all of the three primary forms, viz., monarchy, aristocracy, and democracy.

Republican government. One in which the powers of sovereignty are vested in the people and are exercised by the people, either directly, or through representatives chosen by the people, to whom those powers are specially delegated. In re Duncan, 139 U.S. 449, 11 S.Ct. 573, 36 L.Ed. 219; Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 162, 22 L.Ed. 627.

The important term in the above definition is the term “state”, which is then precisely defined as follows in that same legal dictionary:

In a Republican Form of Government, the “state” then, is the People both individually and collectively, who are the Sovereigns, and they, not their public servants, govern themselves using laws that they mutually and individually consent to through their elected representatives. A consenting party is one who chooses a civil domicile in a specific region and thereby becomes a statutory “citizen”. Being a constitutional citizen does NOT make one a “consenting party” because the act of birth is NOT an act of discretion or implied consent.

When one becomes a member of society, he necessarily parts with some rights or privileges which, as an individual not affected by his relations to others, he might retain. "A body politic," as aptly defined in the preamble of the Constitution of Massachusetts, "is a social compact by which the whole people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for the common good." This does not confer power upon the whole people to control rights which are purely and exclusively private. Thorne v. R. & B. Railroad Co., 27 Vt. 143; but it does authorize the establishment of laws requiring each citizen to so conduct himself, and so use his own property, as not unnecessarily to injure another. This is the very essence of government, and 125*125 has found expression in the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas. From this source come the police powers, which, as was said by Mr. Chief Justice Taney in the License Cases, 5 How. 583, "are nothing more or less than the powers of government inherent in every sovereign, ... that is to say, ... the power to govern men and things." Under these powers the government regulates the conduct of its citizens one towards another, and the manner in which each shall use his own property, when such regulation becomes necessary for the public good. In their exercise it has been customary in England from time immemorial, and in this country from its first colonization, to regulate ferries, common carriers, hackmen, bakers, millers, wharfingers, innkeepers, &c., and, in so doing to fix a maximum of charge to be made for services rendered, accommodations furnished, and articles sold. To this day, statutes are to be found in many of the States upon some or all these subjects; and we think it has never yet been successfully contended that such legislation came within any of the constitutional prohibitions against interference with private property. With the Fifth Amendment in force, Congress, in 1820, conferred power upon the city of Washington "to regulate . . . the rates of wharfage at private wharves, . . . the sweeping of chimneys, and to fix the rates of fees therefor, . . . and the weight and quality of bread," 3 Stat. 587, sect. 7; and, in 1848, "to make all necessary regulations respecting hackney carriages and the rates of fare of the same, and the rates of hauling by cartmen, wagoners, Carmen, and draymen, and the rates of commission of auctioneers,"

The Declaration of Independence says “that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed”. That consent (individual consent, as opposed to collective consent) expresses itself in several ways:

1. Choosing a domicile within a specific geographic place and thereby consenting to the civil statutory laws of that specific place. See: Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
2. Pledging allegiance to the flag of our nation or state.
4. Signing a government form containing a perjury statement that subjects us to the jurisdiction of that government.
5. Signing a government form obligating us to do something.
6. Voting for our elected representatives and then having them enact our laws (agreements) into positive law.
7. Submitting ourselves to the jurisdiction of the court when there is litigation. This includes entering a plea in a court of justice when accused of a crime. Pleas must be consensual.

appearance. A coming into court as a party to a suit, either in person or by attorney, whether as plaintiff or defendant. The formal proceeding by which a defendant submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court. The voluntary submission to a court's jurisdiction.

In civil actions the parties do not normally actually appear in person, but rather through their attorneys (who enter their appearance by filing written pleadings, or a formal written entry of appearance). Also, at many
8. Sending my money to a public servant when they ask for it.
9. Volunteering to serve in the military BEFORE we are drafted.
10. Obeying the request of a public servant to do something.

Anything not consensual is therefore unjust and the Supreme Court describes it as a “despotism”.

“It must be conceded that there are rights in every free government beyond the control of the State [or a covertus jury or majority of electors]. A government which recognized no such rights, which held the lives, liberty and property of its citizens, subject at all times to the disposition and unlimited control of even the most democratic depository of power, is after all a despotism. It is true that it is a despotism of the many—of the majority, if you choose to call it so—but it is not the less a despotism.”

[Loan Ass’n v. Topeka, 87 U.S. (20 Wall.) 655, 665 (1874)]

The purpose of our system of justice is exclusively to ensure that everything that happens in society is done only by consent, and to punish those:

1. Who deprive others of life, liberty, or property without their consent. Involuntary deprivation of any one of these three is an injury, whether or not there is a law that criminalizes the behavior. The sole purpose law protects us by preventing such injury.
2. Who compel people to do anything either through force, or fraud, or both. That is why kidnapping, fraud, extortion, rape, and racketeering are all crimes.

Any good Republican government must ask for your individual consent preferably in writing in order to take your money or property through taxation or judicial process. This is the requirement of the Fifth Amendment. The U.S. Supreme Court explains it this way:

“That property which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations:
First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor’s injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor’s benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”

[Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

There are only three types of governments in the context of “consent”:

1. When the government is honest, it will ask for consent directly and thereby inform you that you and not them are in charge. This was the de jure government our founders gave us.
2. When the government is dishonest and deceptive and greedy and covetous of power and money but still at least a little democratic in form, it will do it so indirectly that you never even knew you gave consent. In such a corrupted government those who expose the deception and tyranny of the process by which consent was fraudulently procured are then punished and persecuted. This is the de facto government we have today: one that punishes those who expose the fraud and extortion that is the income tax and who also oppose any other type of government tyranny.
3. If the government is completely tyrannical, such as a monarchy or dictatorship, it will completely disregard the will of the people and never ask them for permission or consent to do anything. Sovereignty resides in the king or dictator and not the people under such a government. This is the type of government we have within the federal zone or federal “United States”[[1], where the people within it are ruled by people who do not live there, but instead by a Congress full of people who are alien to it and who came from states of the Union.

The most substantive evidence that we have good government is that it is continually asking for our consent in a very explicit way and always reminding us that we, and not them, are in charge!
When people get together and decide to give consent as a collective, they do so only through a written Constitution (which is a contract) or through enacted positive law. The Supreme Court calls this approach “government by compact”:

“In Europe, the executive is synonymous with the sovereign power of a state...where it is too commonly acquired by force or fraud, or both...In America, however the case is widely different. Our government is founded upon compact [consent expressed in a written contract called a Constitution or in positive law]. Sovereignty was, and is, in the people.”

[Glass v. The Sloop Betsy, 3 (U.S.) Dall 6]

Note the above profound statement of the U.S. Supreme Court: “In Europe, the executive is synonymous with the sovereign power of a state...where it is too commonly acquired by force or fraud, or both.” This is what happens when governments are created or choose to operate without the consent of the people they exist to serve: force or fraud. This is also exactly what happens, for instance, in a pure democracy where the majority rules unconstrained by a bill of rights, but it can’t happen in a Republic. The existence of force or fraud within any government, in fact, is the essence of tyranny. The unlawful application of force or fraud is also precisely the same disease that happen in a Republic. The existence of force or fraud within any government, in fact, is the essence of tyranny. The unlawful application of force or fraud is also precisely the same disease that now afflicts and corrupts our allegedly republican form of government, and which has thereby transformed it into a de facto socialist democracy which disrespects the Constitutional rights of individuals and abuses and enslaves its citizens in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. This force or fraud is implemented mainly by:

1. Using definitional deceptions, vaguely written laws that are subject to misinterpretation, and collusion between the Judicial and the Executive Branches to in effect undermine the Constitution and consolidate all power into the hands of the Executive Branch of the government. The tools that our treasonous politicians have used to effect this will be thoroughly documented and explained later in the book in section 6.1.
2. Creating conflicts of interest in the judicial system on the part of judges, attorneys, and jurors. For instance, making judges and jurors decide tax matters that will affect their tax bill. The corruption of the judicial system started in 1938 with the ruling in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277, 59 S.Ct. 838 (1939).
3. Compelling participation in government franchises and/or refusing to protect your right to NOT participate. This:
   3.1. Turns all those so compelled into public officers within the government.
   3.2. Causes the crime of impersonating a public officer.
   3.3. Turns a de jure government into a de facto government.

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030

4. Turning a statutory “citizen” into a franchise and a public officer in the government and interfering with common law remedies in court. This effectively outlaws private rights and private property and makes a de jure government into a de facto government. See:

Here is the legal definition of “compact” to prove our point that the Constitution and all federal civil law written in furtherance of it are indeed a “compact” and consensual contract:

“Compact, n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties, which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties, in their distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. See also Compact clause; Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty.”

Enacting a mutual agreement into positive law then, becomes the vehicle for expressing the fact that the People collectively agreed and consented to the law and to accept any adverse impact that law might have on their liberty. Public servants then, are just the apparatus that the sovereign People use for governing themselves. As the definition above shows, the apparatus and machinery of government is simply the “rudder” that steers the ship, but the Captain of the ship is the People.
individually and collectively. In a true Republican Form of Government, the REAL government is the people individually and collectively, and not their public servants.

An excellent free video animation is provided on our website to help illustrate in very simple terms that all just government is based on consent, and that liberty can only exist where the actions of all parties are free of force, fraud, and duress. It is called “The Philosophy of Liberty” and we highly encourage you to view it:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom/Articles/PhilosophyOfLiberty-english.swf

We will now summarize the above analysis succinctly into a single terse definition of “government”, in the case of our Republican Form of Government mandated by Article 4, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution:

“Government. The means by which the sovereigns, who are the People individually and collectively and who are called the “state”, exercise their divine and natural right directly from God to regulate and control and govern their own affairs so as to:

1. Prevent conflicts of interest among those in the judicial system who enforce the social contract, so that those who don’t want to participate in the civil aspects of the contract are not coerced to do so.
2. Protect your right to NOT be compelled to participate in any government franchise, including the statutory "citizen" or "resident" franchise. Otherwise, it is FRAUD to claim the franchise is "voluntary".
3. Protect each other from harm to their life, liberty, and property. See the last six commandments of the ten commandments found in Exodus 20:12-17. The greatest protection of our liberties comes from a separation of powers within government, so that power cannot concentrate and produce tyranny. This is the basis of having a Republican Form of Government and it is called the "Separation of Powers Doctrine" in the legal field.
4. Provide the maximum liberty to every member of society. In the legal realm, this is called "equal protection of the laws" and its purpose is to eliminate partiality in judgment. The following scriptures from God’s Laws prohibit partiality in judgment: Exodus 23:3, Leviticus 19:15, Deut. 1:17, Deut. 10:17, Deut. 16:19, Job 13:10, Prov. 18:5, Prov. 24:23, Prov. 28:21, Romans 2:11, James 2:9, James 3:17. The declaration of independence also says that all men are created equal and those who are equal cannot be discriminated against or have their liberty taken away because they are black, poor, disadvantaged, or a "nontaxpayer".
5. Honor their God and perfect their faith and salvation by obeying His sacred laws, and NO OTHER LAW. See Ecclesiastes 12:13, which says that man’s sole purpose on earth is to fear God and keep His holy commandments. James 2:14-26 also says that our faith is perfected by our works of obedience to a sovereign God and His laws, and that faith without works is dead faith. Genesis 1:28 also identifies the source of ALL of our delegated authority to govern ourselves, which is God Himself. Here, in fact, is what God says on this very subject of writing laws that conflict with God’s laws:

But to the wicked, God says:

"What right have you to declare My statutes [write man's vain law], or take My covenant [the Bible] in your mouth, seeing you hate instruction and cast My words behind you? When you saw a thief, you consented with him, and have been a partaker with adulterers. You give your mouth to evil, and your tongue frames deceit. You sit and speak against your brother; you slander your own mother’s son. These things you have done, and I kept silent; you thought that I was altogether like you; but I will reprove you, and set them in order before your eyes. Now consider this, you who forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver: Whoever offers praise glorifies Me; and to him who orders his conduct aright [and bases it on God’s laws] I will show the salvation of God.”

[Psalm 50:16-23, Bible, NKJV]

In satisfying the above requirements, the people satisfy the first of the two great commandments to love our God with all our heart, mind, and soul, found in Exodus 20:2-11. The above requirements also fulfill the second of the two great commandments to love our neighbor as ourself, which is found in Leviticus 19:18, Gal. 5:14, Mark 12:28-33; Romans 13:9, Matt. 22:39; Luke 10:27; James 2:8 within the Bible.

The collective result of the sovereign people governing themselves under God’s laws found in the Bible is protection, both while they are on this earth and after they die. Man’s laws only protect us while we are here in body, but God’s laws also protect as after we die and become spirit. Therefore, a just society will base its laws entirely and exclusively upon God’s laws so as to maximize protection for all people both here and in the afterlife. Anything less will produce evil in the sight of the Lord, perversion of the purposes of government, tyranny, and abuse of the legal and governmental apparatus for personal profit.

To answer the main question of this section on what exactly is government in the simplest possible way:

“IN AMERICA, GOVERNMENT IS US! WE ARE THE GOVERNMENT! EVERY ONE OF US! Why? Because in America under a Republican Form of Government, the People are the sovereigns, and not their public servants.”

Note that by saying the government is US, we do NOT mean to say that we are all public officers in the government! Rather, while we serve as jurists, voters, and statutory "Taxpayers" we must REMAIN EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE and beyond the civil control of the government. Otherwise, the government transforms from de jure to de facto. This is covered in:

De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

The above conclusions are consistent with the Supreme Court, which said on this very subject:

“From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereign. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens,” [Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.ed. 454, 457, 471, 472 (1794)]

The above conclusions are also completely consistent with the words of President Abraham Lincoln, who said in his famous Gettysburg Address during the Civil War in 1863:

“It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.” [Abraham Lincoln, Gettysburg Address, November 19, 1863]

“...government of the people, by the people, and for the people” makes the People their own governors and government. We simply can't have any rulers above us if our Constitution (Article 4, Section 2 and Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1) makes everyone equal under the law and our Declaration of Independence says “All men are created equal”. If the Judge and the President and the Congressmen have the same rights as us, they can’t be our rulers, and can only be our servants. Even the Supreme Court agrees with the conclusion that the People are the sovereigns, which makes them their OWN governors and rulers:

- Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892): “The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."

- Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884) “There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States...In this country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it. All else is withheld.”

- Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906) “His [the individual’s] rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

- Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935) “In the United States, sovereignty resides in the people… the Congress cannot invoke sovereign power of the People to override their will as thus declared.”

Another very important inference about the meaning of government is in order at this point. If WE are the government here in America, and if WE accept any money from a public servant, then WE also become statutory “employees” of the government within a legal context. The tax code is written to apply entirely and exclusively to instrumentalities, “public officers”, and statutory “employees” of the federal government, which is exactly what we become if we accept any amount of money from our public servants that we did not in fact earn with our own personal sweat and labor. When public servants try to bribe you with your own stolen “tax” money using a socialist handout program, they in effect are attempting to bring you under the control of their laws as statutory “employees” of the government! The only thing the government can lawfully spend money on is a “public purpose”, which means you must be a federal public officer, agent, statutory “employee”, or instrumentality on official business executing a constitutionally authorized government function in order to lawfully receive public funds. Otherwise, you are committing theft and embezzlement by converting public funds to a private use. Remember that the primary purpose of law is to control and limit what government can do so that the true sovereigns, the people, will be LEFT ALONE by the government.

This status of having accepted their stolen loot and thereby becoming connected to them as a statutory “employee” is the status described in the Internal Revenue Code as being “effectively connected with a trade or business” in the United States”. Those who are “effectively connected” are plugged into the government matrix. This point will become very important later on in Chapter 5, where we talk about who the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code truly are. This status of being “effectively connected” really means that we have become a government whore and adulterer. The legal dictionary defines “commerce” as intercourse:

“Commerce … Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it is carried on…”

The Bible describes believers (us) as God’s bride.

[Isaiah 54:5-6, Bible, NKJV]

When we as God’s bride accept stolen loot, and involve ourselves in commerce with the government, we become adulterers and friends of the world:

“Where do wars and fights come from among you? Do they not come from your desires for pleasure [unearned money] that war in your members [and your democratic governments]? You lust after other people’s money and do not have, You murder [the unborn to increase your standard of living] and covet [the unearned] and cannot obtain [except by empowering your government to STEAL for you]. You fight and war [against the rich and the nontaxpayers to subsidize your idleness]. Yet you do not have because you do not ask [the Lord, but instead ask the deceitful government]. You ask and do not receive, because you ask amiss, that you may spend it on your pleasures. Adulterers and adulteresses! Do you not know that friendship with the world [or the governments of the world] is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world [or the governments of the world] makes himself an enemy of God.”

[James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]
4.3.2 Biblical view of taxation and government

"The reward of energy, enterprise and thrift is taxes." -- William Feather

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service. And do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God." [Romans 12:1-2, Bible, NKJV]

There are several new testament verses that are quoted out of context by alleged government authorities and false churches in order to deceive people into believing that they should support their man-made governments and obey their man-made law. This, however, is not the case, as God has never given His people authority to make their own law or to walk in the statutes of men. Therefore, a more detailed look is necessary regarding these scriptures so that the deception can clearly be seen.

One verse that is relentlessly misquoted is “...render unto Caesar!” found in Mark 12:14-17, where Jesus said:

"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." [Mark 12:14-17, Bible, NKJV].

When Jesus said this, He was totally aware of God’s Law, and we can be sure that He was not telling the teachers of the law to do contrary to God’s Law. Let’s see just exactly what Jesus meant by “the things which are Caesar’s” when he said this.

First of all, who was this “Caesar” that Jesus was referring to, but the equivalent of a king? Let’s see who the king is in our society according to the supreme Court:

"Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts." [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356; 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

"The people of this State, as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the King by his prerogative. Through the medium of their Legislature they may exercise all the powers which previous to the Revolution could have been exercised either by the King alone, or by him in conjunction with his Parliament; subject only to those restrictions which have been imposed by the Constitution of this State or of the U.S." [Lansing v. Smith, 21 D. 89; 4 Wendel 9 (1829) (New York)].

The real “king” in our society is not the government or anyone serving the sovereign people in the government, but the PEOPLE! That’s you! So even if you misinterpret Jesus’ words to mean that we should render to corrupt government “servants” that which they illegally ask for and demand, since your own government (judiciary in this case) calls you the king, then your public servants are the ones who should be “rendering”! Render to the sovereign king (Caesar, that’s you) his due, which is everything that is his property and his right, including 100% of his earned wage.

"Remember the word that I said to you, 'A servant is not greater than his master.'" [Jesus in the Bible, John 15:20]

Why does the IRS insist on arguing with their “King” (which is you) and violating this scripture? Therefore, covetous public servants in the government, from a Biblical perspective, simply can’t be greater than the sovereigns they serve in the public at large or they are violating God’s law, denying equal protection of the law to all, and become hypocrites and tyrants. Plain and simple, isn’t it?

The other thing that people often overlook in interpreting Jesus passage above regarding taxes is the following question:

"What exactly does belong to Caesar?"

As we pointed out earlier in section 4.1 and as we will point out again later in section 5.1.1, the only thing that a sovereign (such as a government or a biological person) can “own” and control is that which he creates. Below is a list of the many things that God created, direct from the Bible. He “owns” all these things by implication, which means everything else belongs to “Caesar”:

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship
http://famguardian.org/
Well, if God created the heavens and the earth, then what else is there? What is it that Caesar can “own” if he can’t own these and didn’t create these? Even the U.S. Supreme Court confirms that a sovereign cannot destroy that which it did not create, and that the power to tax is the power to destroy. Another way of saying this is that the creation cannot be greater than its Creator.

“Woe to him who strives with his Maker! Let the potsherd strive with the potsherds of the earth! Shall the clay say to him who forms it, ‘What are you making?’ Or shall your handiwork say, ‘He has no hands?’ Woe to him who says to his father, ‘What are you begetting?’ Or to the woman, ‘What have you brought forth?’”

[Isaiah 45:9-10, Bible, NKJV]

The cite below from the U.S. Supreme Court proves the above conclusion. The court was ruling on whether the federal government, which was a creation of the sovereign states, can tax it’s creator: a state of the Union. The conclusion was absolutely NOT!

“The taxing power of the federal government does not therefore extend to the means or agencies through or by the employment of which the states perform their essential functions; since, if these were within its reach, they might be embarrassed, and perhaps wholly paralyzed, by the burdens it should impose. That the power to tax involves the power to destroy; that the power to destroy may defeat and render useless the power to create; that there is a plain repugnance in conferring on one government a power to control the constitutional measures of another, which other, in respect to those very measures, is declared to be supreme over that which exerts the control, are propositions not to be denied.”

The government cannot tax the labor of a natural person because it didn’t create people -God did! For government to tax/destroy people who were made in the image of God and are therefore servants of God is an affront to the Creator. It also amounts to adultery by those who allow themselves to be so enslaved, because they are fornicating outside of marriage with a false idol or god called government:

The definition of “commerce” in the legal dictionary confirms that serving the government or sending it our money is “intercourse”. Intercourse is illegal outside of marriage. When we commit “intercourse” with government by sending our money to it or serving it, then we are committing adultery, because government is not our husband: only God is.

“Commerce … Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it is carried on…”

The concept of commerce with government being a form of adultery ties back to the theme we will mention later in section 4.3.12, where we say that the government wants you to believe that the status of being a “citizen” is just like marrying the government, and God plainly doesn’t allow that.

Extending these timeless principles to the matter above of “Rendering to Caesar”: The only thing Caesar “created” was the money with his image on it, so the only thing he has the moral authority to destroy or harm using the money is only the creation itself, which is the money. For instance, we cannot allow the use of Caesar’s money to destroy, harm, enslave, or control the people who are compelled without recourse to use it or we will violate the rulings of the Supreme Court above. The only way that result can be guaranteed is for us to give back to Caesar’s all of his fake fiat paper money and to barter with gold and silver instead. That, in fact, is exactly what the original founding fathers did! We started out with currency based on gold that had value independent of the government. This is what Jesus was indirectly implying here: give back to Caesar that which is Caesar’s, which is his money. This also happens to be the only conclusion consistent with the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court above and with Natural Order described in section 4.1.

The context for the “Render to Caesar” quote above was that the Pharisees wanted to trap Jesus. They were the teachers of the Law, and knew full well what God’s word says about laws and governments other than God’s. The Pharisees knew ALL of the following:

They knew that even their own Israelite kings could not make any law, but could only administer God’s law, not turning aside from God’s commandments, to the right hand, or to the left:

[Deut 17:14] [The word of the Lord through his servant Moses]: When thou [Israel] art come into the land which the LORD thy God gives thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me;

[Deut 17:18] And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book out of that which is before the priests the Levites: [17:19] and it shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life: that he may learn to fear the LORD his God, to keep all the words of this law and these statutes, to do them: [17:20] That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand. Or to the left: to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel.

Not adding to it, or diminishing from it:

What thing soever I command you [all Israel], observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it.
[Deut 12:32]

The Pharisees knew that it was a sin to walk in the statutes of the heathen, and that if their OWN ISRAELITE KINGS made any statutes, it was a SIN to walk in their statutes as well:

[2 Ki 17:6] In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes. [17:7] for so it was, that the children of Israel had sinned against the LORD their God, which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had feared other gods, [17:8] And walked in the statutes of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel, and of the kings of Israel, which they had made. [2Ki 17:18] Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight: there was none left but the tribe of Judah only. [17:19] Also Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

The Pharisees knew that God’s people have laws that are different from all other people’s [God’s Laws] and that even in foreign lands they do not keep the king’s [man’s] laws:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

Then Haman [the highest prince in the kingdom of the Medes and the Persians] said to King Hauser’s [the king of the Medes and the Persians who reigned from India to Ethiopia], “There is a certain people [The Jews; Judeans who were obedient to God’s Law] scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are different from all other people’s, and they do not keep the king’s laws...”

[Est 3:8]

The Pharisees knew the principle that consenting with a thief, be he a tyrant king or commoner, makes one a partaker with that thief—and an apostate:

“When thou sawest a thief then thou consentedst with him, and hast been partaker with adulterers.”

Adulterers—Strong’s reference number: 5003

Hebrew: na’aph

Definition: to commit adultery; fig. to apostatize

The Pharisees knew that those who participate in evil through the use of an agent are guilty of the act themselves:

[2 Sa 11:14] And it came to pass in the morning, that David wrote a letter to Joab [his agent], and sent it by the hand of Uriah. [11:15] And he wrote in the letter, saying, Set ye Uriah in the forefront of the hottest battle, and retire ye from him, that he may be smitten, and die. [11:16] And it came to pass, when Joab observed the city, that he assigned Uriah unto a place where he knew that valiant men were. [11:17] And the men of the city went out, and fought with Joab: and there fell some of the people of the servants of David; and Uriah the Hittite died also.

[2 Sa 11:26] And when the wife of Uriah heard that Uriah her husband was dead, she mourned for her husband. [11:27] And when the mourning was past, David sent and fetched her to his house, and she became his wife, and bare him a son. But the thing that David had done displeased the LORD.

[2 Sa 12:9] [Then Nathan said to David] Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the LORD, to do evil in his sight? thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, [through the use of an agent] and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

Therefore, by the same principle, the Pharisees knew that participating in a heathen government by financing a heathen agent of the government to enforce heathen laws makes the one who pays the tribute guilty of the acts of the heathen government.

The Pharisees knew that those who are obedient to God’s laws only will not pay toll, tribute, and custom to a heathen king (“Caesar”):

[Ezr 4:6] Now in the reign of Ahasuerus [a heathen king (“Caesar”)], in the beginning of his reign, they [the king’s people through their agents, the counselors] wrote an accusation [to the king] against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem. [saying the following:] [4:12] Let it be known to the king that the Jews [who obey God’s law, not the king’s law] who came up from you have come to us at Jerusalem, and are building the rebellious and evil city, [from the king’s point of view only; righteous and obedient from God’s point of view] and are finishing its walls and repairing the foundations. [4:13] Let it now be known to the king that, if this city is built and the walls completed, they will not pay tax, tribute, or custom, and the king’s treasury will be diminished. [They will pay no tribute to “Caesar”]. [NKJV]

[4:16] We certify the king that, if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means thou shalt have no portion [no tribute to “Caesar”] on this side the river. [KJV]

The Pharisees knew that the throne of iniquity cannot have fellowship with God or his believing family:

[Ps 94:20] Shall the throne of iniquity [wicked rulers] have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law? [make enactments or decrees which condemn innocent blood by adding to or diminishing from God’s Law]

The Pharisees knew that the people in whose heart is God’s law are to obey His Law and are not to fear the reproach of men:
The Pharisees knew God’s admonition about not following after the manners of the heathen:

\[[Eze 11:10]\] Ye [Israel] shall fall by the sword; I [the Lord] will judge you in the border of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

\[[Eze 11:12]\] And ye shall know that I am the LORD: for ye have not walked in my statutes, neither executed my judgments, but have done after the manners of the heathen that are round about you.

Note: The Hebrew word translated to “manners” speaks specifically of governmental and judicial activity. Here, Ezekiel is not speaking of “ways or customs” of the heathen, he is speaking about the “statutes, ordinances, judgments, laws and government” of the heathen.

Manners—Strong’s reference number: 4941

Hebrew: mishpat

Derivation: Derived from 8199

Definition: prop. a verdict (favorable or unfavorable) pronounced judicially, espec. A sentence or formal decree (human or [partic.] divine law, individual or collect.) include. The act, the place, the suit, the crime, and the penalty; abstr. justice, include. right, or privilege (statutory or customary), or even a style

Manners—Strong’s reference number: 8199

Hebrew: shaphat

Derivation: A primary word.

Definition: to judge, i.e., pronounce sentence (for or against); impl. vindicate or punish; by extens. To govern; pass. To litigate (lit. or fig.)

The Pharisees knew that God’s people do not obey wicked governments that have other gods even if they are thrown into a fiery furnace:

\[[Dan 3:16\] Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego replied to the king, "O Nebuchadnezzar, we do not need to defend ourselves before you in this matter. [3:17] If we are thrown into the blazing furnace, the God we serve is able to save us from it, and he will rescue us from your hand, O king.

\[[3:18\] But even if he does not, we want you to know, O king, that we will not serve your gods or worship the image of gold you have set up." [NIV]

\[[3:19\] Then Nebuchadnezzar was full of fury, and the expression on his face changed toward Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego. Therefore he spoke and commanded that they heat the furnace seven times more than it was usually heated. [3:20\] And he commanded certain mighty men of valor who were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-Nego, and cast them into the burning fiery furnace. [NKJ]

The Pharisees knew that God’s people do not obey wicked governments even if they are thrown into a lion’s den:

\[[Dan 6:7\] All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counselors, and the captains, have consulted together to establish a royal statute, and to make a firm decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any god or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions. [Dan 6:10\] Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime.

\[[Dan 6:16\] Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. . .”

The Pharisees knew that those who have set up kings and princes [governments] but not by God’s hand, have trespassed against His law:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

[Hos 4:1] [The word of the LORD through the prophet Hosea]: Hear the word of the LORD, ye children of Israel: for the LORD hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land.

[Hos 8:1] Set the trumpet to thy mouth. He [the enemy] shall come as an eagle against the house of the LORD, because they [Israel] have transgressed my covenant, and trespassed against my law.

[Hos 8:4] They have set up kings, but not by me: they have made princes, and I [the Lord] knew it not: of their silver and their gold have they made them idols, that they may be cut off.

The Pharisees knew that it is a sin to keep statutes made by Israelite kings, let alone a heathen “Caesar”:

[Mic 6:13] [The warning of the Lord through his servant Micah]: Therefore also will I [the Lord] make thee [Israel] sick in smiting thee, in making thee desolate because of your sins.

[Mic 6:16] For the statutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab [kings of Israel who made their own statutes], and ye walk in their counsels; that I should make thee a desolation, and the inhabitants thereof an hissing: therefore ye shall bear the reproach of my people.

The Pharisees were fully aware that God only allowed “Caesar” to be in power to prove Israel to see whether they would keep the way of the LORD to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not:

[Jdg 2:21] I [the Lord] also will not henceforth drive out any from before them [Israel] of the nations [heathen Caesars, etc.] which Joshua left [unvanquished] when he died: [2:22] That through them [the heathen governments] I may prove Israel, whether they will keep the way of the LORD to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not.

[Jdg 3:4] and they [the nations which the LORD left] were to prove Israel by them, to know whether they [Israel] would hearken unto the commandments of the LORD, which he commanded their fathers by the hand of Moses.

And the Pharisees were aware of the conclusion of the whole matter:

[Ecc 12:13] Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man.

And finally, the Pharisees knew that when a people, and especially believers, refuse to correct or rebuke sin in their society, then the unrebuked sin of even one evil man could curse the whole society and separate that society from the blessings of the Lord. In the Pharisees time, the evil was that of the King named Caesar, which they could not and would not rebuke and thus became hypocrites, as Jesus called them.

[Matt. 23:23, Bible] “Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have neglected the weightier matters of the law: justice and mercy and faith. These you ought to have done, without leaving the others undone.”

The Pharisees knew their hypocrisy in the matter of rebuking sin at the time they asked the question of Jesus about rendering taxes to Caesar because the Book of Joshua, Chapter 7, written 1400 years earlier, tells the story about Moses’ successor Joshua, who lost a war with the Amorites and the blessings of God because one of his men illegally stole a treasure that was the spoils of war and hid it under his tent and would not confess or right his wrong before God and his people, and preferred to lie about it. The result was that the people felt guilty and cowardly in battle and ran away from the enemy to become the laughing stock of the land. They were cursed by God because they would not confront and correct this evil in their society, which consisted of theft and deceit:

[Joshua 7:11-13] “Israel has sinned, and they have also transgressed My covenant which I commanded them, For they have even taken some of the accursed things, and have both stolen and deceived [the IRS]; and they have also put it among their own stuff.

“Therefore, the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because they have become doomed to destruction. Neither will I be with you anymore, unless you destroy the accursed [the IRS and the Federal Reserve in our day and age] from among you.”
Therefore, knowing all of the above scriptures, the Pharisees laid a trap for Jesus similar to the question: “Have you stopped beating your wife yet?” They were certain that they could trap Jesus into affirming that either: it was lawful to pay tribute to “Caesar”, which they knew to be against God’s Law, and thereby condemning him under God’s Law to pay tribute to a heathen government [Caesar], thereby condemning him under “Caesar’s” “law”. Then the Pharisees could go tell “Caesar”, and thereby get rid of Jesus with the sword of Caesar:

[Mat 22:17] [The Pharisees sent their disciples to Jesus, who said,] Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar, or not?

Jesus was also versed in the above scriptures. He was fully aware that it is against God’s Law to give tribute to a heathen “Caesar”. He also knew that it would enrage “Caesar” for him to say so. Jesus knew that giving the correct answer was a trap laid for him by the Pharisees, and he evaded their trap by the following: He didn’t define what was or was not “Caesar’s. He didn’t even affirm that the penny with “Caesar’s” image and superscription was to be rendered to “Caesar”. Jesus’ answer was that the Pharisees should render to “Caesar”, a heathen who did not know or obey God’s Law, exactly what was due to any heathen or Israelite who did not obey God’s Law:

[Num 15:15] One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation [of Israel], and also for the stranger [foreigner; non Israelite] that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD. [15:16] One law and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you. (i.e.: death for breaking God’s Law:

Therefore, the Pharisees knew that what they had just been told was to render unto ”Caesar” what God’s Law required: death, and since they were declining to carry out the sentence of the law, they were hypocrites, since they were the enforcement officials of God’s Law and knew what “Caesar” was due under God’s Law. They had also been told that they were acting presumptuously by not harkening to carry out the sentence of the law and they themselves should be put to death along with “Caesar” in order to put their own evil away from Israel:

[Deu 17:11] According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee, and according to the judgment which they shall tell thee, thou shalt do: thou shalt not decline from the sentence which they shall shew thee, to the right hand, nor to the left. [17:12] And the man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken unto the priest that standeth to minister there before the LORD thy God, or unto the judge, [and render unto Caesar what Caesar was due, death in this particular case] even that man shall die [the Pharisees, for not carrying out the sentence in this particular case]: and thou shalt put away the evil from Israel.

This is obviously why the Pharisees marveled at Jesus. They were not about to tell “Caesar” that God’s Law required him to be put to death, because “Caesar” would have then come after the Pharisees. In addition, Jesus had just rebuked both “Caesar” and the Pharisees by stating publicly that both “Caesar” and the Pharisees should be put to death, and the Pharisees who hated Jesus knew it but couldn’t go tell “Caesar” in order to get Jesus in trouble. Also, “Caesar” and his agents didn’t know enough about God’s Law to realize that Jesus said that “Caesar” should be put to death, and “Caesar” thinks to this very day that Jesus was saying to pay tribute. Checkmate. Jesus will, incidentally, render to “Caesar” what is “Caesar’s” at His coming:

[Luk 19:27] Jesus, speaking of himself in a parable said,] but those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them [kings, “Caesars”, judges of the earth and their followers at His coming], bring hither, and slay them before me.

[Psalm 2:7] [The psalmist foretelling that Jesus will “render unto Caesar what is Caesar’s at his coming]: I will declare the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, Thou art my Son [Jesus]; this day have I begotten thee.

[2:9] Thou [Jesus] shalt break them [the heathen kings (Caesars) and judges] with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter’s vessel. [2:10] Be wise now therefore, O ye kings: ["Caesars"] be instructed, ye judges of the earth. [Note: These verses in Psalm 2 are confirmed to be about Jesus in Acts 13:33; Heb 1:5; 5:5, and by Jesus Himself in Rev 2:26-27].

[Zechariah prophesying that Jesus will “render unto Caesar what is Caesar’s” at His coming]: And the LORD [Jesus] shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one LORD, and his name one.

[14:12] And this shall be the plague wherewith the LORD [Jesus] will smite all the people [kings, “Caesars”, judges of the earth and all who follow them] that have fought against Jerusalem [Jesus’ capital city when He comes with his saints]; Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth. [Note: These verses can be seen to be about Jesus in Mat 25:31-32; Mat 28:18; Joh 18:37; 1Ti 6:13-15; Rev 11:15; Rev 19:14; Rev 20:4-6].

Continuing with Jesus’ answer to the Pharisees:

[Mat 22:18] But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? [22:19] Shew me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny. [22:20] And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? [22:21] They say unto him, Caesar’s. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar’s, and unto God the things that are God’s.

[Mar 12:14] And when they [certain of the Pharisees and of the Herodians] were come, they say unto him, Master, we know that thou art true, and carest for no man: for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth: Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not? [12:15] Shall we give, or shall we not give? But he, knowing their hypocrisy, said unto them, Why tempt ye me? Bring me a penny, that I may see it. [12:16] and they brought it. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? And they said unto him, Caesar’s. [12:17] and Jesus answering said unto them, Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar’s and to God the things that are God’s. And they marveled at him.

[Luke 20:22] [The chief priests and scribes asked Jesus,] Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Caesar, or no? [20:23] but he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, Why tempt ye me? [20:24] shew me a penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Caesar’s. [20:25] and he said unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar’s, and to God the things that are God’s.

From that day forward, the Pharisees and the Sadducees would not ask Jesus any further questions:

[Mat 22:46] And no one was able to answer Him a word, nor from that day on did anyone dare question Him anymore. [NKJ]

[Luk 20:39] Then some of the scribes answered and said, “Teacher, You have spoken well.” [20:40] but after that they dared not question Him anymore. [NKJ]

The silence of the Pharisees from that point on spoke volumes about their sin. The Bible explains that those who are silent, such as the Pharisees and Saducees who tried to trap Jesus, do NOT praise Him, which by implication means that they dishonor God:

“The dead do not praise the LORD. Nor any who go down into silence.”
[Psalm 115:17, Bible, NKJV]

“Out of the mouth of babes [Jesus never attended a man-made school] and nursing infants You have ordained strength,
Because of Your enemies,
That You may silence the enemy and the avenger.”
[Psalm 8:2, Bible, NKJV]

“For this is the will of God, that by doing [or saying] good you may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men”
[1 Peter 2:15, Bible, NKJV]

“For the LORD our God has put us to silence And given us water of gall to drink, Because we have sinned against the LORD.”
[Jeremiah 8:14, Bible, NKVJ]

Jesus was not calling for revolution against Rome, even though it was an oppressive conqueror of Israel. On the other hand, His apostles refused to obey a government order not to preach and teach in Jesus’ name (Acts 5:27-29). On that occasion, one of Jesus' apostles said:

“We ought to obey God rather than men.”

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The same admonition to obey God rather than man is found in Psalm 118:8-9

"It is better to trust the Lord
Than to put confidence in man,
It is better to trust in the Lord
Than to put confidence in princes."

[Psalm 118:8-9; Bible, NKJV]

Finally, the Apostle Paul agreed with and reiterated these conclusions by saying that it is scandalous for Christians to use civil rather than ecclesiastical courts in order to settle our disputes:

1 Corinthians 6:1 Dare any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

1 Corinthians 6:7 Now therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law [in a civil rather than ecclesiastical court] one with another. Why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather [suffer yourselves to] be defrauded?

The Roman Tribute Coin

5. Tiberius; 14 - 37 A.D.; AR denarius; the "Tribute Penny" of the Bible. In Mark 12:14-17 the Temple priests, testing Jesus, asked Him:

And when they were come, they say unto him, "Master, we know that thou art true, and carest for no man: for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth: Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not? Shall we give, or shall we not give?"

But he, knowing their hypocrisy, said unto them, "Why tempt ye me? bring me a penny (denarius), that I may see [it]."

And they brought [it]. And he saith unto them, "Whose [is] this image and superscription?" And they said unto him, "Caesar's."

And Jesus answering said unto them, "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's." And they marveled at him.

The account of the Tribute to Caesar is more extensively covered in Matthew, chapter 22. In this account, and others, the bible clearly shows that as soon as the Herodians understood the answer that they received, they marveled at the answer, and went on their way. After that time, they ceased to question Him any more.

When you research out the origin and lineage of the term “Pontifus Maximus”, you find the Babylonian origin. Essentially, it is saying that “Caesar is God.” This title was later adopted by the Roman Popes.

Conclusions

Aren't we supposed to obey the authority over us? Yes, as long as there is no conflict with God's law. Blind obedience to all civil authority dictates, wishes, whims etc. is not always necessary though. Furthermore, if blind obedience to civil authority is really the rule to live by, I have some thought provoking questions for those who preach that false doctrine to answer:

1. Was it right for Moses parents to disobey the civil authority over them and not kill their baby? The Hebrew midwives disobeyed the civil authority and God blessed them. See Ex. 1.
2. Was it right for Peter and the disciples to disobey civil authority and keep preaching Christ? See Acts 5.
3. Was it right for Samson to disobey the civil authority (the Philistines ruled the land)? See Judges 16.
4. Was it right for the prophets to disobey the civil authority and proclaim their message at the risk of life, limb and property? See Hebrews 11.
5. Was it right for Daniel to disobey the civil authority and pray to God in spite of the command by the absolute dictator not to do so? See Daniel 6.
6. Was it right for the founding fathers like Patrick Henry, George Washington, etc. to disobey King George, the civil authority over them, and begin this great land we now freely enjoy? I suggest you re-read the Declaration of independence and try to see the motive of those great and godly men.
7. If tyranny is not the government ordained by God, is it right to resist tyranny? See the entire history of the nation of Israel in their struggle against various tyrants.
8. Was it right for the Germans at the concentration camps to obey their elected or appointed civil authority and kill the Jews?
9. Have the IRS’s chains of slavery become comfortable to you and you prefer them and the peace and safety of not standing for what is right over liberty? See Patrick Henry’s famous speech. It applies very well here.
10. Was it right for the French underground to disobey the civil authority and blow up German tanks, bridges etc during WW II?
11. Was it right for the men in the book of Judges to disobey the civil authority over them and rebel against their rulers?

13. If someone steals your car, kidnaps your kids or rapes your wife, will you call the police (use the civil authorities and legal system) and defend your family physically and legally?

14. If the pacifist position is what some are now preaching, should Bible colleges and churches expel students and church members who go into the military or refuse entrance or membership to those who are in or have been in the military in order to be consistent?

15. Was it right for Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego to disobey the civil authority by not bowing on command? See Daniel 3.

16. In Acts 5 and 12 Peter disobeyed the civil authorities over him. He walked past the sleeping guards, out of jail and fled the country. This was illegal for him to do. Is this the same Peter who wrote the I Peter passage we preach from about obeying authority?

When one understands that the answer Jesus gave to whether we should pay taxes was given under Hebrew law, then they understand that the same fate awaits all who pay the tribute to Caesar that God will mete out for Caesar, then we can see that Jesus was clearly saying, “Do not pay taxes unto Caesar”, as was alleged at His trial. See Luke 23:2, where the people accused Jesus of forbidding the payment of taxes to Caesar, which said:

[Luke 23:2, KJV] And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this [fellow] perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, saying that he himself is Christ a King.

See also: First Samuel 8:7-19 in which we learn God’s displeasure with those who refused to be governed by Him and instead decided to elect their own King [government], who God said would oppress them.

And the Lord said to Samuel, “Hear the voice of the people in all that they say to you; for they have not rejected you, but they have rejected Me, that I should not reign over them.

“According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even to this day—with which they have forsaken Me and served other gods—so they are doing to you also.

“Now therefore heed their voice. However, you shall solemnly forewarn them, and show them the behavior of the king who will reign over them.”

So Samuel told all the words of the Lord to the people who asked him for a king. And he said, “This will be the behavior of the king who will reign over you: He will take your sons and appoint them for his own chariots and to be his horsemen, and some will run before his chariots.

“He will appoint captains over his thousands and captains over his fifties, will set some to plow his ground and reap his harvest, and some to make his weapons of war and equipment for his chariots.

“He will take your daughters to be perfumers, cooks, and bakers.

“And he will take the best of your fields, your vineyards, and your olive groves, and give them to his servants.

“He will take a tenth of your grain and your vintage, and give it to his officers and servants.

“And he will take your male servants, your female servants, your finest young men, and your donkeys, and put them to his work.

“He will take a tenth of your sheep. And you will be his servants.

“And you will cry out in that day because your king whom you have chosen for yourselves, and the Lord will not hear you in that day.”

Nevertheless the people refused to obey the voice of Samuel; and they said, “No, but we will have a king over us, that we also may be like all the nations and that our king may judge us and go out before us and fight our battles.”

What God was saying is that we should not appoint our government to rule over us, but to have them serving us and for God to rule over us as the sovereigns in charge of the government.

“Away with you, Satan! For it is written, ‘You shall worship the Lord your God, and Him only [NOT the government!] you shall serve.’”

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

[Matt. 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

He was saying this because he knew that tyranny and a dictatorship would be the ultimate result, which would be oppressive and sinful.

“You know that the rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and those who are great exercise authority over them. Yet it shall not be so among you; but whoever desires to become great among you, let him be your servant, And whoever desires to be first among you, let him be your slave—just as the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give His life a ransom for many.”

Is our present government our servant? Does the Internal Revenue SERVICE serve you? Our founding fathers ensured that the U.S. government started out in 1776 as our servant by limiting its power with a masterful system of checks and balances. They did this because the abuses and tyranny of the British king were fresh in their minds. But since then, we have forgotten what God told us and looked the other way while our Congress [who has unlawfully made itself into the equivalent of the king in biblical times] and its henchmen in the IRS [the king’s tax collectors] have transformed themselves from servants to tyrannical dictators by slowly but systematically rewriting the laws to deceive people into believing this have a tax liability because the apathetic populace they created using the public education system let them get away with it. Revelation 18:3-8 describes what the reward is to be for those who seek to be part of such a corrupt government or those who trust in and do not rebel against such a government: God is talking below about Babylon, which is a metaphor for all the graft and corruption that results from human government unrestricted by the checks and balances that our founding fathers put into the U.S. Constitution and unaccountable to God. Earlier in Revelation 17, Babylon the Great is described as “The Great Harlot who sits on many waters with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication” (Rev. 17:1-2). We believe that this great Harlot is really the bride of Christ (his church/people) described by Paul in Eph. 5:22-24 which never married her husband, Christ, and therefore becomes a harlot and commits fornication with Satan. Here’s Rev. 18:3-8:

“For all the nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth have become rich through the abundance of her luxury.”

And I heard another voice from heaven saying, “Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive of her plagues.

“For her sins have reached to heaven, and God has remembered her iniquities.

“Render to her just as she rendered to you, and repay her double according to her works; in the cup which she has mixed, mix double for her.

“In the measure that she glorified herself and lived luxuriously, in the same measure give her torment and sorrow; for she says in her heart, ’I sit as queen, and am no widow, and will not see sorrow.’

[Rev. 18:3-8, Bible, NKJV]

Look above again at what is REALLY supposed to be “rendered to Caesar [Babylon]” in Revelation 18:6-8:

“Render to her just as she rendered to you, and repay her double according to her works; in the cup which she has mixed, mix double for her.

“In the measure that she glorified herself and lived luxuriously, in the same measure give her torment and sorrow; for she says in her heart, ’I sit as queen, and am no widow, and will not see sorrow.’

“Therefore her plagues will come in one day—death and mourning and famine. And she will be utterly burned with fire, for strong is the Lord God who judges her.”

Notice above the phrase: “in the cup which she has mixed, mix double for her.” That phrase ought to look very familiar to those who have read the Bible. In particular, we believe it refers to the following Bible passage, which talks about how to discipline a THIEF. Babylon the Great Harlot is simply an ignorant people who consented with a thief called government. That thief was empowered to commit its deplorable acts of injustice by two things: 1. The vote of the democratic majority; 2. The collective indifference of the people towards the criminal acts of their government.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The phrase “his neighbor’s goods” above, by the way, includes both the labor and the property of your neighbor. If the government as your agent pilfers or steals the labor of your neighbor to support you by misrepresenting what the tax code says, then it is a thief and you are consenting with a thief by receiving such stolen property. Consequently, you are part of Babylon the Great Harlot, and you will get a double dose of the abuse you heaped on others in the process according to the above!

Based on Rev. 18:6-8, the ultimate reward for trusting government to rule us or allowing a king to rule over us instead of God is death and famine.

Why is this the reward to be rendered to Caesar? Because the idolatry represented by making Caesar into a false god violates the first and most important commandment:

You shall have no other gods [including Kings or government] before Me. You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; you shall not bow down or serve them. For I, the Lord your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.

The Bible is replete with examples of those who were killed at the command or with the blessing of God for the idolatry of worshipping other gods, including government. Below are just a few examples:

Ezekiel 9:5 “And I heard God say to the other men, ‘Follow him through the city and kill. Spare no one.’”

Ezekiel 9:6 “Kill the old men, young men, young women, mothers and children.”

Ezekiel 9:7 “God said to them, ‘Defile the Temple. Fill its courtyards with corpses. Get to work!’ So they began to kill the people in the city.”

Ezekiel 9:11 “Then the man wearing linen clothes returned and reported to the Lord, ‘I have carried out your orders.’”

CONTEXT FOR WHY GOD COMMANDED THE KILLING IN THE ABOVE FOUR VERSES:

Ezekiel 8:17: “Have you seen this, O son of man? Is it a trivial thing to the house of Judah to commit the abominations which they commit here? For they have filled the land with violence; then they have returned to provoke Me to anger. Indeed they put the branch to their nose. Therefore I also will act in fury. My eye will not spare nor will I have pity: and though they cry in My ears with a loud voice, I will not hear them.”

The people were:

- Committing acts of violence (Ezekiel 8:17)
- Worshipping idols (Eze. 8:10-12)
- Women were weeping for an idol called Tammuz (Ezekiel 8:14)
- Priests were worshipping the sun God. (Ezekiel 8:16)

The killing was God’s judgment and wrath against His own people, not those of other races in a Zionist plot. God disciplined His own children in this case for violating the greatest and the first of the ten commandments found in Exodus 20:3-11.

God simply fulfilled justice by punishing His own people for violating the first commandment and committing idolatry. If He hadn’t done this, He would not have maintained the sanctity of His children... at the time (His family now includes everyone, not just Israel) or allowed the truth of His word, recorded in their writings, to be passed down through the generations so we could enjoy it today. The greater good was thereby accomplished, because God through the Israelites allowed His word and His truth to be revealed to us in what later became the Bible. No other culture or race has been able, through so many generations, to record the history and divine intervention of God in the lives of men better or in a more inspiring way than the writings of the Jews about God, and God apparently wanted to protect this, or His message of truth to us, and His love letter to the world, the Holy Bible, would be lost forever if He allowed His messenger, the Israelites, to be corrupted and to renounce their heritage and their history and the writings of the Bible they authored.

[Rev. 3:19]

The only thing the Bible says is to be rendered to Caesar is death and mourning and famine. Render to him his due!

Now do you understand what Jesus was saying and why both the Government and the Pharisees wanted to crucify Him?

We’re not suggesting here that you should take the law into your own hands and subvert the sovereignty of God through vigilante justice in fulfilling Jesus’ command above, but we are showing you what God says Caesar really deserves and what only God in His righteousness can give him. Note that Jesus also took the trouble here to hide or encrypt His subtle message, so that it would survive the ages and time and appear in the version of the Bible we have today. Otherwise, the government would have destroyed the Bible message long ago.

Luke 10:21, “In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent [of the world], and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.”

The Bible is radical and revolutionary when the Holy Spirit illuminates for us what God is really saying. Is it any wonder our Christian founding fathers rebelled against the King of Britain so they could restore God to His rightful role over them, to put the king under them? Those who truly believe that we should “render unto Caesar that which is Caesar’s” can’t in good conscience support the notion of the American Revolution, which at the time accomplished the opposite goal and was an armed rebellion against “Caesar”.

4.3.3 The purpose of government: protection of the weak from harm and evil

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that the purpose of government was protection when it said:

“In the formation of a government, the people may confer upon it such powers as they choose. The government, when so formed, may, and when called upon should, exercise all the powers it has for the protection of the rights of its citizens and the people within its jurisdiction; but it can exercise no other.”
[United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

The important aspect of the above is consent. The Declaration of Independence says that all just powers of government derive from the consent of the governed. In the legal field, “positive law” constitutes the only legitimate evidence that the people ever consented to surrender authority or any part of their rights to the government. Every power not originating from explicit consent is unjust by implication and amounts to tyranny. The people have to consent to delegate authority to protect them to the government that they collectively form. Those powers they do not explicitly consent to delegate to government and that protection which they do not want or do not consent to receive from government, they should not be forced to either cooperate with or to pay for. To do otherwise is the very definition of tyranny.

The next question is, what exactly is the government protecting us from? The Supreme Court explained that it’s duty is to protect us from enemies of the Constitution, which is the solemn expression of the will of the sovereign People who ordained it:

“The obligations of allegiance to the State, and of obedience to her laws, subject to the Constitution of the United States, are binding upon all citizens, whether faithful or unfaithful to them, but the relations which subsist while these obligations are performed are essentially different from those which arise when they are disregarded and set at nought. And the same must necessarily be true of the obligations and relations of States and citizens to the Union. No one has been bold enough to contend that, while Texas was controlled by a government hostile to the United States, and in affiliation with a hostile confederation, waging war upon the United States, senators chosen by her legislature, or representatives elected by her citizens, were entitled to seats in Congress, or that any suit instituted in her name could be entertained in this court. All admit that, during this condition of civil war, the rights of the State as a member, and of her people as citizens of the Union, were suspended. The government and the citizens of the State, refusing to recognize their constitutional obligations, assumed the character of enemies, and incurred the consequences of rebellion.”

[Texas v. White, 74 U.S. 700 (1868)]

Consequently, any citizen who doesn’t honor their constitutional obligations, which means ensuring that the government stays within the boundaries of the Constitution, is an ENEMY that the government and more importantly the courts, have a sacred duty to protect us from.

There’s no such thing as a free lunch. The protection afforded by the police powers of a government is, however, procured at a high price. That price is our unfailing “allegiance” and “obedience” to our protector and whatever laws it passes that apply within the jurisdiction where we are domiciled.

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”
[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 162, 166-168 (1874)]

Another way of saying the above is that we can’t earn or deserve the right to be protected unless and until we are willing to reciprocate by protecting our protector. This is an extension of the Golden Rule described by Jesus in Matt. 7:12 and Luke 6:31, in which He told us to do unto others as we would have them do unto us.

[Matt. 7:12, Bible, NKJV]

How then, does this “allegiance” or “mutual protection” manifest itself and who is it directed at? In our society, the People as private citizens and individuals are the “sovereigns” and the government is their servant. The government is simply a “contractor” or an agent with specific authority delegated through the contract called the Constitution, but it is not the “sovereign”. The collection of all “sovereigns” within a political community, in fact, is called the “state” in Black’s Law Dictionary. We emphasize here that the definition of “state” does NOT include public servants or anyone working in the government. In America, the “state” is the people, and not their public servants. Here is how the Supreme Court describes it:

“From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts [contracts called “Constitutions”], it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens.”
[Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.ed. 454, 457, 471, 472 (1794)]

As you will learn later in this chapter, having “allegiance” to a “state” and the laws that it enacts for the equal protection of all inhabitants, in fact, is the only qualification necessary to be a “citizen” within a political community. Those born within a political community are “presumed” to have such allegiance because under the concept of “jus sanguinis”, children assume the same citizenship status as their parents, and therefore are “presumed” to have the same “allegiance” and warrant the same protection as their parents.

Another interesting result of this “allegiance” that we must have in order to procure the protection of our neighbor is that this allegiance must be exclusive and undiluted by any other competing allegiances. Another way of saying this is that we cannot have conflicting allegiances or we will have a conflict of interest. Conflict of interest is a federal crime under 18
U.S.C. §208, for instance. Here is the way the introduction explains it in the Supreme Court case of Talbot v. Janson, 3
U.S. 133 (1795). This is not the opinion of the court, per se, but it is very enlightening nonetheless:

“Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things.

Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact [contract]; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure. [. . .] The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign....

[Talbot v. Janson, 3 U.S. 133 (1795); From the syllabus but not the opinion; SOURCE:

The implication of the above concept regarding conflicting allegiance is profound. Essentially, we must conclude from the above that we can’t take an oath to more than one sovereign at a time and that our primary allegiance and source of protection lies with the last sovereign we took an oath to. The Bible says not to take oaths to any earthly thing and that we can and should only take oaths toward God:

“Again, you have heard that it was said to the people long ago, ‘Do not break your oath, but keep the oaths you have made to the Lord.’ But I tell you, Do not swear [toward men] at all: either by heaven, for it is God’s throne; or by the earth, for it is his footstool; or by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the Great King. And do not swear by your head, for you cannot make even one hair white or black. Simply let your ‘Yes’ be ‘Yes,’ and your ‘No,’ ‘No’; anything beyond this comes from the evil one.”

[Matt. 5:33-37, Bible, NKJV]

“You shall fear the LORD your God; you shall serve Him [ONLY], and to Him you shall hold fast, and take oaths in His name. He is your praise, and He is your God, who has done for you these great and awesome things which your eyes have seen. Your fathers went down to Egypt with seventy persons, and now the LORD your God has made you as the stars of heaven in multitude.”

[Deut. 10:12-22, Bible, NKJV]

Based on the above analysis, the MAIN source of protection that believers can have is God and not any government or man-made thing. This is the only conclusion one can reach based on the above requirements of the Bible and the Supreme Court. We’ll cover this subject in much greater detail in the next section. It is also true, however, that the First Amendment was intended to ensure that our government cannot interfere with or punish us for having our primary allegiance to God:

First Amendment

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Below is how the Supreme Court described the competing allegiances of people toward both God and the “state”. As you will learn shortly, God and government are competitors for the affection and worship/obedience of the people:

‘Much has been said of the paramount duty to the state, a duty to be recognized, it is urged, even though it conflicts with convictions of duty to God. Undoubtedly that duty to state exists within the domain of power, for government may enforce obedience to laws [whose ONLY purpose is to protect, but not to dictate any other matters] regardless of scruples. When one’s belief collides with the power of the state, the latter is supreme within its sphere and submission or punishment follows. But, in the forum of conscience, duty to a moral power higher than the state has always been maintained. The reservation of that supreme obligation, as a matter of principle, would unquestionably be made by many of our conscientious and law-abiding citizens.

The essence of religion is belief in a relation to God involving duties superior to those [283 U.S. 605, 634] arising from any human relation. As was stated by Mr. Justice Field, in Davis v. Beason, 133 U.S. 333, 342, 10 S.Ct. 299, 300: ‘The term ‘religion’ has reference to one’s views of his relations to his Creator, and to the obligations they impose of reverence for his being and caracter, and of obedience to his will.’ One cannot speak of religious liberty, with proper appreciation of its essential and historic significance, without assuming the existence of a belief in supreme allegiance to the will of God.

Professor Macintosh, when pressed by the inquiries put to him, stated what is axiomatic in religious doctrine. And, putting aside dogmas with their particular conceptions of deity, freedom of conscience itself implies respect for an innate conviction of paramount duty. The battle for religious liberty has been fought and won with respect to religious beliefs and practices, which are not in conflict with good order [because not harmful to anyone], upon the very ground of the supremacy of conscience within its proper field. What that field is, under our system of government, presents in part a question of constitutional law, and also, in part, one of legislative policy in avoiding unnecessary clashes with the dictates of conscience. There is abundant room for enforcing the requisite authority of [positive] law [which the I.R.C. is NOT] as it is enacted and requires obedience, and for maintaining the conception of the supremacy of law as essential to orderly government, without demanding that either citizens or applicants for citizenship shall assume by oath an obligation to regard allegiance to God as subordinate to allegiance to civil power. The attempt to exact such a promise, and thus to bind one’s conscience by the taking of oaths or the submission to tests, has been the cause of many deplorable conflicts. The Congress has sought to avoid such conflicts in this country by respecting our happy tradition.”

[U.S. v. Machintosh, 283 U.S. 605 (1931)]

The jurisdiction that government has to protect the people is completely devoid of any moral or lawful authority to dictate to a man how he must use his property so long as doing so does not injure his neighbor in its use. Here is how the Supreme Court describes it:

“Surely the matters in which the public has the most interest are the supplies of food and clothing; yet can it be that by reason of this interest the state may fix the price at which the butcher must sell his meat, or the vendor of boots and shoes his goods? Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights,—life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;’ and to ‘secure,’ not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it to his neighbor’s injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor’s benefit; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due compensation.”

Based on the above, the government cannot, should not, and must not be allowed compel you to use your property for your neighbor’s benefit. Consequently, the government cannot compel you to participate in any social program, including Unemployment Insurance, Social Security, Medicare, food stamps, or any other welfare-state program. In short, government cannot involve itself in any kind of charity, because the family and the church were given exclusive jurisdiction over this subject matter by God Himself in the Holy book. If the government gets into these areas, it is breaking down the separation of powers that is the foundation of our government and is abusing its taxing power to STEAL, as you will learn later. The only exception to this rule is that if the recipient is a federal statutory “employee”, it is OK, because the money we are paying as a citizen is supporting the functions of the government, which is the only legitimate use of a “tax”:

‘To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.

Nor is it taxation. ‘A tax,’ says Webster’s Dictionary, ‘is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.’ ‘Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.’ Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.”

[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]

Another important concept surrounding the protection offered by government and its laws is that if we give them our allegiance and they abuse it by refusing to recognize and protect our sovereignty, which is their half of the bargain, then we cease to have any legal duty to obey them:

“the enemy acquired that firm possession which enabled him to exercise the fullest rights of sovereignty over that place. The sovereignty of the United States over the territory was, of course, suspended, and the laws of the United States could no longer be rightfully enforced there or be obligatory upon the inhabitants who remained and submitted to the conquerors. By the surrender, the inhabitants passed under a temporary allegiance to the British government and were bound by such laws and such only as it chose to recognize and impose. From the nature of the case, no other laws could be obligatory upon them, for there is no protection or allegiance or sovereignty, there can be no claim to obedience.”

The above case of disobeying a corrupt government that isn’t doing its job is not only a right, but a duty, according to the Declaration of Independence:

“But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.”

[Declaration of Independence]

How is it that we can lawfully cease to obey a government or its laws when neither are not only not protecting us, but actually hurting us? The method is to “divorce the corporate state” using the following steps, which are exhaustively described in the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 and simplified below:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53
1. Change our domicile to a place outside the legislative jurisdiction of the government in question. For example, we can lawfully change our domicile to “heaven” and rely exclusively on God’s laws for our protection. The Jews did this in the book of Nehemiah by building a wall and erecting their own substitute government. This removes us from the jurisdiction of the civil laws of a corrupted government. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says the capacity to sue or be sued is determined by the laws of the defendant’s domicile. Domicile must be voluntary and when it is coerced, it’s obligations cannot be enforced.

2. Change our citizenship status to that of a “national” and not a “citizen”. A “national”, as you will learn in section 4.11.10 and following later in this chapter, is a person subject to the “political jurisdiction” but not the “legislative jurisdiction” of the government in question. Citizenship, like allegiance, must be voluntary, and when it is coerced, it’s obligations cannot be enforced.

3. Revoke all licenses and privileges from the government:
   3.1. Revoke all marriage licenses and replace them with private contracts.
   3.2. Revoke driver’s licenses or get a foreign driver’s license.
   3.3. Revoke all government-issued numbers, such as Socialist Security Numbers.
   3.4. Stop accepting all privileged “government benefits”. When we cease to need or want anything, we can’t be controlled by the government.

   “The more you want, the more the world can hurt you.” [Confucius]

When we have accomplished the above steps, the only thing we can lawfully be held responsible for by the government is hurting our neighbor, which are the criminal laws. We are not subject to or responsible for most civil laws or taxes.

Now let’s look at the purpose of government from a spiritual perspective. According to the Bible, the purpose of government is to reward good and punish evil as God’s law defines it and NOT as man’s law defines it. This responsibility on the part of government can be summarized in one word: protection. Government is there to protect us from evil on the part of fellow Americans, aliens, and even other nations. This commission derives directly from the second great commandment to love our neighbor as ourselves found in Romans 13:9 and Matt. 29:39.

“Master, which is the greatest commandment in the law? Jesus said to him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. (39) And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all law…”

[Matthew 22:36-40, Bible, NKJV]

The Apostle Paul even said that loving our neighbor fulfilled ALL the law. We assume he said this because God is our neighbor:

“For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: ‘You shall love your neighbor as yourself.’”

To be more specific, that which the government is protecting in the process of “loving” us, according to Thomas Jefferson in our Declaration of Independence, is our “life, liberty, and our pursuit of happiness”. The Supreme Court has said that “pursuit of happiness” equates with our property rights. Here is an example:

“By that portion of the fourteenth amendment by which no State may make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, or take life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, it has now become the fundamental law of this country that life, liberty, and property (which include the pursuit of happiness) are sacred rights, which the Constitution of the United States guarantees to its humblest citizen against oppressive legislation, whether national or local, so that he cannot be deprived of them without due process of law.”

[Bartemeyer v. State of Iowa, 85 U.S. 129 (1873)]

That is why we say:

“Liberty, man’s highest value, is simply love disguised.” [Family Guardian Fellowship]

We emphasize that fear and love, by the way, are mutually exclusive:

“There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.”
Therefore, if there is any aspect of what government does that makes us fearful or afraid even though we are diligently doing our best to follow God’s law in its entirety and loving our neighbor according to the standards that God set down in the Ten Commandments, then our government has violated its commission and its authority delegated from God, because it is not fulfilling the second great commandment to “love our neighbor” as the Bible requires. Instead, it has become a terrorist organization that makes us afraid for our lives and our liberties. We expand upon this point further in section 2.1.10 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, where we will establish from a legal perspective that the IRS is indeed a terrorist organization.

Governments based on fear that disrespect the requirement for consent of the governed are Satanic while governments based on love and respect for our neighbor are godly. Most of the governments throughout the world are based on fear and not love, and therefore most of them are Satanic, which is to say that they are controlled by Satan himself. They are Satan’s property. Jesus, after all, referred to Satan as “the ruler of the world,” the one whom mankind in general obeys by heeding his urgings to ignore God’s requirements (John 14:30; Eph. 2:2). The Bible also calls Satan “the god of this system of things,” who is honored by the religious practices of people who adhere to this system of things. See 2 Cor. 4:4; 1 Cor. 10:20.

When endeavoring to tempt Jesus Christ, the Devil brought Him up and showed him all the kingdoms, also called “governments” of the inhabited earth in an instant of time; and the Devil said to Him:

“I will give you all this authority and the glory of them, because it has been delivered to me, and to whomever I wish I give it. You, therefore, if you do an act of worship before me, it will all be yours.”

[Luke 4:5-7]

If the governments of the world both present as well as past were not under Satan's authority and rulership he could never have offered them to Christ in the first place. Revelation 13:1-2 reveals that Satan gives “power, throne and great authority” to the global political system of rulership. Daniel 10:13, 20 discloses that Satan has had demonic princes over principal kingdoms of the earth. Ephesians 6:12 refers to these as constituting “governments, authorities, world rulers of this darkness, wicked spirit forces in heavenly places.” No wonder that 1 John 5:19 says: "The whole world is lying in the power of the wicked one." But his power is only for a limited period of time and is only by the toleration and consent of God Almighty.

When we love our neighbor (our fellow Americans) the way that God intends, we would certainly never hurt or enslave them or make them afraid like our government does and if everyone loved them, then they wouldn’t need protection or government to begin with! In that ideal state, we would be a country (but not a nation, see section 4.6) without a need for a government, which is exactly how Adam and Eve were before their fall. It is also the type of government the founding fathers intended: “A government of the people, for the people, and by the people”, as Abraham Lincoln said at his famous Gettysburg address. A government of the people, by the people, and for the people is a government where the people rule themselves without a king and are aided in doing that through their public servants who represent and execute but not usurp the people’s will.

"The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct [run] the government through their representatives [servants]. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. . .”

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

Our biblical response to godly government is found in the same passage as God’s purpose for government.

"Submit yourself to every ordinance of man [which is] for the Lord's sake, whether it be to the king, as supreme, or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well."

[1 Peter 2:13-14, Bible, KJV]

Our duty to submit to godly authority has a qualifier attached to it, and that is that the authority be godly, that it “praises good and punishes evil” according to God’s, and not man’s definition of evil found in His law, the Bible. The Apostle Paul even said that all authority comes from God:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

[Romans 13:1, Bible, NKJV]

Therefore, when “authority” ceases to be godly or violates God’s sacred law, then we cease to have a duty to submit to it. The implication is that any act by a government employee that does not have authority that comes from God’s law ceases to have any authority at all, and by implication becomes the act of a private and not government authority undertaken for personal gain. After all, how can you claim that you are a servant of God or His Divine Justice as we showed earlier in section 4.1 if you follow or condone or subsidize a government that disrespects or disobeys or rebels against God and His law? This would lead to an absurd consequence indeed!

[Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV]

Those people who founded America found themselves in exactly that position where they could not please both God and the British government and their reaction was to rebel and not obey.

If God is who He says He is, then He is the ultimate designer of all that exists in the universe. He is the great “physician”, the great “engineer”. His “user manual” on how to run everything he created for us is in His Holy Book. The scriptures identify four types of government: personal government, family government, church government and civil government. If God is God then only He has the authority (the author) to set the jurisdictional boundaries between each type of government because only He created them all:

“The heavens are Yours, the earth also is Yours; The world and all its fullness, You have founded them; The north and the south, You have created them; Tabor and Hermon rejoice in Your name. You have a mighty arm; Strong is Your hand, and high is Your right hand. Righteousness and justice are the foundation of Your throne; Mercy and truth go before Your face”

For example, God delegated to families the teaching of children, not to government. The entire system of government schools is a violation of God’s design. A civil government limited in jurisdiction to only the purposes identified in scripture would need very little money to operate. There would be no need to tax a man’s right to exist. No need to tax his wages or salary, because people would be presumed to govern their own affairs and support themselves, and to delegate to government only those things that they cannot do for themselves, like a military, a court system, and jails.

Protection of its weaker citizens is therefore the only source of moral authority for anything that government does. But exactly who is it that government has the greatest and most sacred duty to protect? The strong or the wealthy or the educated in any society don’t need protection because they can fend for themselves. The reason we even have a public education system is to make even the humblest of citizens better able to fend for themselves to begin with. With their wealth and education and influence, the strong of society can:

1. Hire the best lawyers to defend them.
2. Bribe politicians.
3. Use their influence to coerce others to do their bidding.
4. Hire bodyguards.
5. Install alarm systems to protect their property.
6. Pay expensive talent to manage their assets to eliminate taxes altogether using trusts and exotic tax shelters.
7. Form cartels and monopolies to coerce the people to pay higher prices.

So the real people who the government is there to protect are the weak and defenseless of our society: those with so little money and so little influence and education that no one else would even bother come to their aid and protection. These people include:

- Widows
- Adolescents
Lysander Spooner explained the purpose of Government as follows:

"Government is established for the protection of the weak against the strong. This is the principal, if not the sole motive for the establishment of all legitimate government. It is only the weaker party that lose their liberties, when a government becomes oppressive. The stronger party, in all governments are free by virtue of their superior strength. They never oppress themselves. Legislation is the work of this stronger party; and if, in addition to the sole power of legislation, they have the sole power of determining what legislation shall be enforced, they have all power in their hands, and the weaker party are the subjects of an absolute government. Unless the weaker party have a veto, they have no power whatever in the government and...no liberties... The trial by jury is the only institution that gives the weaker party any veto upon the power of the stronger. Consequently it is the only institution that gives them any effective voice in the government, or any guaranty against oppression."

The Bible also confirms that the purpose of God’s law is to protect the weaker, not stronger parties, when God said:

The Essence of the Law

"And now, Israel, what does the LORD your God require of you, but to fear the LORD your God, to walk in all His ways and to love Him, to serve the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul, and to keep the commandments of the LORD and His statutes which I command you today for your good? Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong to the LORD your God, also the earth with all that is in it. The LORD delighted only in your fathers, to love them; and He chose their descendants after them, you above all peoples, as it is this day. Therefore circumcise the foreskin of your heart, and be stiff-necked no longer. For the LORD your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great God, mighty and awesome, who shows no partiality nor takes a bribe. He administers justice for the fatherless and the widow, and loves the stranger, giving him food and clothing. Therefore be foreigners, for you were strangers in the land of Egypt. You shall fear the LORD your God; you shall serve Him, and to Him you shall hold fast, and take oaths in His name. He is your praise, and He is your God, who has done for you these great and awesome things which your eyes have seen. Your fathers went down to Egypt with seventy persons, and now the LORD your God has made you as the stars of heaven in multitude."

[Deut. 10:12-22, Bible, NKJV]

"A father of the fatherless, a defender of widows, Is God in His holy habitation. God sets the solitary in families; He brings out those who are bound into prosperity; But the rebellious dwell in a dry land."

[Psalm 68:5-6, Bible, NKJV]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

"For if you thoroughly amend your ways and your doings, if you thoroughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbor, if you do not oppress the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, and do not shed innocent blood in this place, or walk after other gods to your hurt, then I will cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers forever and ever."

[Jer. 7:5-7, Bible, NKJV]

Thus says the LORD: "Execute judgment and righteousness, and deliver the plundered out of the hand of the oppressor. Do no wrong and do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, or the widow, nor shed innocent blood in this place."

[Jer. 22:3, Bible, NKJV]

"Do not oppress the widow or the fatherless, The alien or the poor. Let none of you plan evil in his heart Against his brother."

[Zech. 7:10, Bible, NKJV]

Is government living up to its calling to defend and protect the above types of defenseless and weaker people? Well, for starters, we show you in section 2.12.1 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form 06.008 that the IRS focuses the vast majority of its audit activity and expenditures on low income people, who are least able to afford to pay extortion money to the government or expensively litigate to defend their rights when abused. That is a massive injustice because as we just pointed out, the weak and the poor are the ones who need government’s protection the most! Abortion falls in the same category. All of the scriptures above that refer to the “fatherless” are also referring to children born usually to poor women who didn’t have a male provider and who in most cases were unwanted. Who defends the speechless and the most vulnerable members of society like unborn children, most of whom are fatherless? Our government certainly isn’t doing it! Here is what the Bible says about what we are supposed to do for all the babies who are being murdered by abortionists at government expense:

"Open your mouth for the speechless, In the cause of all [unborn children] who are appointed to die. Open your mouth, judge righteously, And plead the cause of the poor and needy."

[Prov. 31:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

Our government is failing miserably at the only job that it has to protect the most defenseless members in society, folks! God said abortion is the weapon of choice that He would use against a wicked and defiant people who rebel against Him and His Law and who refuse to defend the weak of society. Here is an example:

"All the kings of the nations, All of them, sleep in glory, Everyone in his own house; But you [the rebellious and wicked] are cast out of your grave Like an abominable branch, Like the garment of those who are slain, Thrust through with a sword, Who go down to the stones of the pit, Like a corpse trodden underfoot. You will not be joined with them in burial, Because you have destroyed your land And slain your [unborn] people, The brood of evildoers shall never be named, Prepare slaughter for his children Because of the iniquity of their fathers, Lest they rise up and possess the land, And fill the face of the world with cities."

"For I will rise up against them," says the LORD of hosts, "And cut off from Babylon the name and remnant, And offspring and posterity," says the LORD. "I will also make it a possession for the porcupine, And marshes of muddy water; I will sweep it with the broom of destruction," says the LORD of hosts.

Our birth rate has gone so low because of abortion that we aren’t even replacing the people we have, and God is thereby using abortion to extinct a selfish and wicked and rebellious people from their own land. Couples who should be having babies are so worried about their personal standard of living and civil status and keeping up with the Joneses that we aren’t having any more children because they cost too much money. Their tax rate is so high that they can’t afford to have babies. Instead, we are sucking babies brains out (partial birth abortion) and throwing them in the garbage can! Those societies and peoples who don’t allow the murder of abortion are the ones who will eventually inherit our land, which right now looks like it will be the Mexican and Black cultures. God is doing this because in Genesis 1:28, He commanded us to “be fruitful and multiply” and we are disobeying and defying His command, so He is disciplining us. We have forgotten what God said about children, and how they are a gift from Him. God is angry with us because we won’t accept His gift!

“Behold, children are a heritage from the LORD, The fruit of the womb is a reward. Like arrows in the hand of a warrior, So are the children of one’s youth. Happy is the man who has his quiver full of them; They shall not be ashamed, But shall speak with their enemies in the gate.”
[Psalm 127:3-5, Bible, NKJV]

As of 1909, when the Sixteenth Amendment was proposed, the United States federal government had yet to become the great nanny in the sky (the political corporation, or Parens Patriae) solving everybody’s problems from cradle to grave. Instead, our government largely followed the Biblical mandate just mentioned. Government’s fundamental duty to protect life and property can also be found at Romans 13:3-4.

The Geneva Bible, which is the Bible the Pilgrims used, states:

“For princes are not to be feared for good works, but for evil. Wilt you then be without fear of the power? Do well. For shalt though have praise of the same. For he is the minister of God for thy wealth. But if though do evil, fear: for he beareth not the sword for nought: for he is the minister of God to take vengeance on him that doth evil.”

When government takes one-third or more of a man’s yearly earnings, using as its authority to do so a “Code” that isn’t even enacted “law” that is many thousands of pages long and so complicated that virtually no one can understand it, is government doing good? Or is government doing evil?

The way to make people respect and obey the law is to make the law respectable. The way to make the law respectable, in turn, is to keep is short and simple and comprehensible by the common man, who is the person it was intended to apply to. The extent to which only judges and lawyers can understand the law is the extent to which the law is no longer respectable. The extent to which our law becomes not law, but “Code” that is not enacted into positive law and which essentially is a state-sponsored “religion” is the extent to which our government has become a false god and a religion. The Internal Revenue “Code” is not law, but religion, as you will find out later in section 5.4.1. It doesn’t protect or help anyone but public servants and the irresponsible.

Adam Smith, in his famous book entitled “Wealth of Nations,” upon which our founders heavily relied when they wrote our Constitution, espoused this same general concept of government described above:

“The first duty of the sovereign is, that of protecting the society from the violence and invasion of other independent societies…The second duty of the sovereign is, that of protecting, as far as possible, every member of the society from the injustice or oppression of every other member of it…The third duty and last duty of the sovereign or commonwealth is that of erecting and maintaining those public institutions and those public works, which, though they may be in the highest degree advantageous to a great society…”

When Jesus said, “Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar’s: and to God the things that are God’s,” (Matt. 22:21) notice that He did not say, “Give Caesar everything he asks you for.” Jesus also didn’t define exactly what belongs to Caesar, now did he? Deuteronomy 10:14 says that the entire world belongs to God, so what really DOES belong to Caesar?

[Deuteronomy 10:14, Bible, NKJV]

Inherent in the former statement is the idea that there are limits on what belongs to Caesar and that the consent of the people, not Caesar, define what belongs to Caesar. God also said in 1 Sam. 12:19 that Caesar CANNOT be above us, but must below us, and that it is a sin to have a “king” above us. By implication, this means that no one working in government can be anything BUT a servant below us and not a ruler above us. The servant cannot be greater than the Master, and must SERVE the master:

“Servants, be submissive to your masters with all fear, not only to the good and gentle, but also to the harsh.”

[1 Peter 2:18, Bible, NKJV]

In God’s world view, civil government has limited jurisdiction and is a servant of the people, who are then servants of God who are conformed to God’s holy Law. If government asks you to render to it the mind of your child, will you obey or object?

4.3.4 Equal protection

Equal protection is the cornerstone of all free governments. It is the heart and soul of the Constitution and is mentioned once in the Declaration of Independence and three times in the Constitution as follows:

Declaration of Independence: “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.”
[See: http://www.archives.gov/national_archives_experience/charters/declaration_transcript.html]

Constitution, Article IV, Section 1: Full Faith and Credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, Records, and judicial Proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general Laws prescribe the Manner in which such Acts, Records and Proceedings shall be proved, and the Effect thereof.
[See: http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/data/constitution/article04/]

Constitution, Article IV, Section 2: “The Citizens of each State shall be entitled to all Privileges and Immunities of Citizens in the several States.”
[See: http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/data/constitution/article04/16.html#3]

Constitution, Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1: “No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.”
[See: http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/data/constitution/amendment14/]

Equal protection is also found in the enactments of Congress made in pursuance to the Constitution. Below is one of many examples found in the Titles of the U.S. Code:

TITLE 42 > CHAPTER 21 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1981.
Sec. 1981. - Equal rights under the law

(a) Statement of equal rights

All persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall have the same right in every State and Territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, give evidence, and to the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens, shall be subject to like punishment, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions of every kind, and to no other.

Equal protection means, for instance, that:

1. All Biological People are treated equally under the law. See the Declaration of Independence. The law may not discriminate against or injure one group of people to the benefit of another group. They all have equal civil rights, but they must be “citizens” in order to have political rights.

2. All States are equal under the Constitution. See http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/data/constitution/article04/16.html#3

3. Every legal “person” is equal under the law in any given place. The one exception to this rule is that that biological people enjoy the protection of the Bill of Rights (the first Ten Amendments to the U.S. Constitution) whereas artificial persons such as corporations do not.

Our notion of “justice”, in fact, originates with the concept of equal protection. Here is a definition of “justice” from Easton’s Bible Dictionary.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

JO

— is rendering to every one [equally, whether citizen or alien] that which is his due. It has been distinguished from equity in this respect, that while justice means merely the doing what positive law demands, equity means the doing of what is fair and right in every separate case.
[Easton’s Bible Dictionary, 1996]

Those who want to graphically depict the operation of law and justice will often do so by using a scale. The purpose of a scale is to demonstrate when two weights are precisely equal, and when they are not equal, the scale will tip to one side or the other and thereby demonstrate the existence of inequality. When the weights are unequal, we have what is called a “false balance”. The Bible mentions the following in regards to a false or unjust balance:

“Dishonest scales are an [hateful] abomination to the LORD,
But a just weight is His delight.”
[Prov. 11:1, Bible, NKJV]

The above scripture is basically saying that God HATES a false balance. He hates when people are cheated for dishonest gain, which is called “mammon” in the Bible.

“No one can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon.”

[Jesus in Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV]

“MAMMON. This word occurs in the Bible only in Mt. 6:24 and Lk. 16:9, 11, 13, and is a transliteration of Aramaic māmônâ. It means simply wealth or profit, but Christ sees in it an egocentric covetousness which claims man’s heart and thereby estranges him from God (Mt. 6:19ff.): when a man ‘owns’ anything, in reality it owns him. (Cf. the view that mammon derives from Bab. mimma, ‘anything at all.’) ‘Unrighteous mammon’ (Lk. 16:9) is dishonest gain (F. Hauck, TDNT 4, pp. 388–390) or simply gain from self-centred motives (cf. Lk. 12:15ff.). The probable meaning is that such money, used for others, may be transformed thereby into true riches in the coming age (Lk. 16:12).”

A famous Bible commentary on Prov. 11:1 above has the following very enlightening things to say which reveal the true meaning of “equal protection”:

"As religion towards God is a branch of universal righteousness (he is not an honest man that is not devout), so righteousness towards men is a branch of true religion, for he is not a godly man that is not honest, nor can he expect that his devotion should be accepted; for,

1. Nothing is more offensive to God than deceit in commerce. A false balance is here put for all manner of unjust and fraudulent practices [of our public dis-servants] in dealing with any person [within the public], which are all an abomination to the Lord, and render those abominable [hated] to him that allow themselves in the use of such accursed arts of thriving. It is an affront to justice, which God is the patron of, as well as a wrong to our neighbour, whom God is the protector of. Men [in the IRS and the Congress] make light of such frauds, and think there is no sin in that which there is money to be got by, and, while it passes undiscovered, they cannot blame themselves for it; a blot is no blot till it is hit, Hos. 12:7, 8. But they are not the less an abomination to God, who will be the avenger of those that are defrauded by their brethren.

2. Nothing is more pleasing to God than fair and honest dealing, nor more necessary to make us and our devotions acceptable to him: A just weight is his delight. He himself goes by a just weight, and holds the scale of judgment with an even hand, and therefore is pleased with those that are herein followers of him.

A [false] balance, [whether it be in the federal courtroom or at the IRS or in the marketplace.] cheats, under pretence of doing right most exactly, and therefore is the greater abomination to God.”

[Matthew Henry’s Commentary on the Whole Bible; Henry, M., 1996, c1991, under Prov. 11:1]

Equal protection demands that all persons shall be treated equally in any given place. It does not, however, guarantee that the persons in one place will be treated the same as persons in another place or another state. Here is an explanation of this fact from the Supreme Court:

“We might go still farther and say, with undoubted truth, that there is nothing in the Constitution to prevent any state from adopting any system of laws or judicature it sees fit for [176 U.S. 581, 599] all or any part of its territory. If the state of New York, for example, should see fit to adopt the civil law and its method of procedure for New York city and the surrounding counties, and the common law and its method of procedure for the rest of the state, there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent its doing so. This would not of itself, within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment, be a denial to any person of the equal protection of the laws. If every person residing or being in either portion of the state should be accorded the equal protection of the laws prevailing there, he could not justly complain of a violation of the clause referred to. For, as before said, it has respect to persons and classes of persons. It means that no person or class of persons shall be denied the same protection of the laws which is enjoyed by other persons or other classes in the same place and under like circumstances. The Fourteenth Amendment does not profess to secure to all persons in the United States the benefit of the same laws and the same remedies. Great diversities in these respects may exist in two states separated only by an imaginary line. On one side of this line there may be a right of trial by jury, and on the other side no such right. Each state prescribes its own modes of judicial proceeding. If diversities of laws and judicial proceedings may exist in the several states without violating the equality clause in the Fourteenth Amendment, there is no solid reason why there may not be such diversities in different parts of the same state. A uniformity which is not essential as regards different states cannot be essential as regards different parts of a state, provided that in each and all there is no infraction of the constitutional provision. Diversities which are allowable in different states are allowable in different parts of the same state. Where part of a state is thickly settled, and another part has but few inhabitants, it may be desirable to have different systems of judicature for the two portions, trial by jury in one, for example, and not in the other. Large cities may require a multiplication of courts and a peculiar arrangement of jurisdictions. It would be an unfortunate restriction of the powers of the state government if it could not, in its [176 U.S. 581, 600] discretion, provide for these various exigencies. If a Mexican state should be acquired by treaty and added to an adjoining state or part of a state in the United States, and the two should be erected into a new state, it cannot be doubted that such new state might allow the Mexican laws and judicature to continue unchanged in the one portion, and the common law and its corresponding judicature in the other portion. Such an arrangement would not be prohibited by any fair construction of the Fourteenth Amendment. It would not be based on any respect of persons or classes, but on municipal considerations alone, and a regard for the welfare of all classes within the particular territory or jurisdiction.”
[Missouri v. Lewis, 101 U.S. 22 (1879)]

Equal protection is also the heart of our tax system, which is a form of “commerce” described in the above passage:

1. All Americans in the states are required to pay the same amount of money to support the federal government, and this amount is called a “direct tax” or a “capitation tax”. A tax which is graduated and discriminates against the rich, for instance, is unequal and therefore violates equal protection. That is why the Constitution says the following:
   1.1. Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4: “No Capitation, or other direct, Tax shall be laid, unless in Proportion to the Census of Enumeration herein before directed to be taken.”
   1.2. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3: “Representatives and direct Taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective Numbers”

2. All states pay the same amount, per person, to support the federal government. An apportioned direct tax is collected by the state government, and the same amount is assessed against every person in the state and throughout the country. It is up to the states how they choose to collect the money, but they must pay their apportionment at the beginning of every federal fiscal year.

3. In the Internal Revenue Code:
   3.1. All income tax that applies within states of the Union has a flat percentage rate of 30% for ALL income and are not “graduated” or “progressive”. See 26 U.S.C. §871(a).
   3.2. The only people who pay a graduated and discriminatory rate are those who “consent” or “elect” to do so. That “election” is made by filing a form 1040 rather than the form 1040NR that is the proper form for those in states of the Union. All income connected with a “trade or business in the United States”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”, is subject to the graduated rate. Because all “public offices” exist in the District of Columbia under 4 U.S.C. §72, and because the Bill of Rights and the requirement for equal protection do not apply in the District of Columbia, a graduated rate of tax is then applied to what essentially are the government’s own elected or appointed officers. These people are the only real statutory “employees” within the Internal Revenue Code. See 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) for proof.

When equal protection is working the way it is supposed to, we have a society that is entirely free of “hypocrisy”, “favoritism”, and “partiality”. We looked in Black’s Law Dictionary for the word “hypocrisy” and it wasn’t there. According to Jesus, lawyers and judges are among the worst hypocrites of all, which may explain why they don’t want the truth about their misdeeds mentioned in their favorite or most frequently used book. Below is a definition of the word from Harper’s Bible Dictionary:
“hypocrisy, a term and idea that are primarily limited in the Bible to the NT writings. The Greek word transliterated into English as ‘hypocrite’ was used to denote an actor, one who performed behind a mask. Thus the popular understanding came to be that of persons who pretended to be something that they were not. It is interesting to note, however, that hypocrisy does not appear to be so limited in meaning in the NT. The term can sometimes denote general wickedness or evil, self-righteousness, pretense, or breach of contract.’

In Gal. 2:13, Paul accuses Peter, Barnabas, and other Jewish Christians of hypocrisy (RSV: ‘insincerity’). Although the term does not occur in Acts 5:1-11, the story reflects the seriousness with which the early church regarded hypocritical behavior. Perhaps the most frightening aspect of this sin is that one can enter the state of hypocrisy and not realize it (Matt. 7:21-23).”

[Nave’s New Bible Dictionary]

Hypocrisy or favoritism in the administration of man’s laws results in an unstable government, because people get angry at the government for playing favorites and eventually will revolt against that government. Everyone who has been a parent knows how this works. Parents who don’t love all their children equally will end up with sibling rivalries that can alienate family members from each other, make family life very tumultuous, and eventually destroy families. Likewise, if you want to know exactly what is wrong in the political family called “government”, start looking for instances of favoritism and hypocrisy, which are the surest signs of tyranny and injustice. This whole book is an effort to do precisely that.

The Supreme Court had some very powerful things to say about the requirement for equal protection. Below are a few of their more eloquent dicta on the subject:

“The equal protection demanded by the fourteenth amendment forbids this. No language is more worthy of frequent and thoughtful consideration than these words of Mr. Justice Matthews, speaking for this court, in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 369, 6 S.Supp. Ct. 1064, 1071: ‘When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles upon which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power.’ The first official action of this nation declared the foundation of government in these words: ‘We hold these truths to be self-evident, [165 U.S. 150, 160] that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.’ While such declaration of principles may not have the force of organic law, or be made the basis of judicial decision as to the limits of right and duty, while in all cases reference must be had to the organic law of the nation for such limits, yet the latter is but the body and the letter of which the former is the thought and the spirit, and it is always safe to read the letter of the constitution in the spirit of the Declaration of Independence. No duty rests more imperatively upon the courts than the enforcement of those constitutional provisions intended to secure that equality of rights which is the foundation of free government.”

[Galf. C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U.S. 150 (1897)]

“In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private contract [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker] and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. ‘It is against all reason and justice,’ he added, ‘for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence into guilt, or punish innocence as a crime, or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private employment contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican governments.’ 3 Dall. 388.”

[Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 (1878)]

The notion of equal protection is also found hidden throughout the Bible. When it is talked about, it is described as “hypocrisy” or “hypocrites”. Below are just a few examples where the subject of “hypocrites” is described in the New King James Bible:

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

5. Hypocrites described as:
   5.3. Self-righteous. Isa 65:5; Lu 18:11.
   5.4. Covetous. Ez 33:31; 2 Pe 2:3.
   5.5. Ostentatious. Mt 5:2,5,16; 23:5.
   5.6. Censorious. Mt 7:3-5; Lu 13:14,15.
   5.7. Regarding tradition more than the word of God. Mt 15:1-3.
   5.9. Having but a form of godliness. 2 Ti 3:5.
   5.10. Seeking only outward purity. Lu 11:39.
   5.11. Professing but not practicing. Ez 33:31,32; Mt 23:3; Ro 2:17-23.
   5.13. Gloriing in appearance only. 2 Co 5:12.
6. Worship by hypocrites not acceptable to God. Isa 1:11-15; 58:3-5; Mt 15:9.
12. Hypocrites when in power, are a snare. Job 34:30.
19. Exemplified by the following Bible personalities

Note item 5.14 above, which describes hypocrites as “trusting in privileges”. Here is what the scripture says in that reference:

But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees coming to his baptism, he said to them, “Brood of vipers! Who warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Therefore bear fruits worthy of repentance, and do not think to say to yourselves, ‘We have Abraham as our father.’ For I say to you that God is able to raise up children to Abraham from these stones. And even now the ax is laid to the root of the trees. Therefore every tree which does not bear good fruit is cut down and thrown into the fire. I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance, but He who is coming after me is mightier than I, whose sandals I am not worthy to carry. He will baptize you with the Holy Spirit and fire. His winnowing fan is in His hand, and He will thoroughly clean out His threshing floor, and gather His wheat into the barn; but He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.” [Jesus in Matt. 3:7-12, Bible, NKJV]
What Jesus was implying in the above scripture is that we should not trust in, or rely upon any kind of “privileges” and that we instead will be judged at Jesus’ second coming by our acts of righteousness, and not by our “privileged” status or condition. You will note, for instance, that at the final Wedding Supper of the Lamb described in the book of Revelation Chapter 19 and in Matt. 22:2-14, believers in God who have been obedient to God’s calling and His sacred Law shall be present to rejoin their Bridegroom, who is Jesus, God’s Son. Those who are invited to the wedding must be attired in clean white linen, which is described in Rev. 19:18 as “the righteous acts of the saints”. Note there is no mention of “privilege” being an adequate substitute for righteous acts anywhere in the Bible.

And to her [the bride of Christ, which is the Church and the believers in the Church] it was granted to be arrayed in fine linen, clean and bright, for the fine linen is the righteous acts of the saints.

Then he said to me, “Write: ‘Blessed are those who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb!’”

[Rev. 19:8, Bible, NKJV]

[Matt. 22:11-14, Bible, NKJV]

We’ll expand considerably upon that idea of “trusting in privileges” as being a kind of hypocrisy that is despised not only by most people, but more importantly by God Himself in several other places in this book, because it is a very important point and the key to the way our government causes our taxing system to operate. Most notably, we will cover it later in section 4.3.12, where we will talk about “Government-instituted slavery using ‘privileges’.”

Other places where the subject of equality and equal protection is dealt with in the Bible include the following:

“You shall not show partiality in judgment; you shall hear the small as well as the great; you shall not be afraid in any man’s presence, for the judgment is God’s. The case that is too hard for you, bring to me, and I will hear it.”

[Deut. 1:17, Bible, NKJV]

[Deut. 16:19, Bible, NKJV]

“For the LORD your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great God, mighty and awesome, who shows no partiality nor takes a bribe.” [Deut. 10:17, Bible, NKJV]

“He [God] will surely rebuke you If you secretly show partiality.”

[Job 13:10, Bible, NKJV]

[Prov. 22:2, Bible, NKJV]

“But you, do not be called ‘Rabbi’; for One is your Teacher, the Christ, and you are all brethren. Do not call anyone on earth your father; for One is your Father, He who is in heaven. And do not be called teachers; for One is your Teacher, the Christ. But he who is greatest among you shall be your servant. And whoever exalts himself will be humbled, and he who humbles himself will be exalted.”

[Jesus in Matt. 23:8-12, Bible, NKJV]

But Jesus called them to Himself and said to them, “You know that those who are considered rulers over the Gentiles lord it over them, and their great ones exercise authority over them. Yet it shall not be so among you; but whoever desires to become great among you shall be your servant. And whoever of you desires to be first shall be slave of all.” For even the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give His life a ransom for many.

[Mark 10:42-45, Bible, NKJV. See also Matt. 20:25-28]

“There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus.”

[Gal. 3:28, Bible, NKJV]
Is it fitting to say to a king, "You are worthless,"
And to nobles, "You are wicked?"
Yet He [God] is not partial to princes,
Nor does He regard the rich more than the poor;
For they are all the work of His hands.
[Job. 34:18-19, Bible, NKJV]

"The poor man is hated even by his own neighbor,
But the rich has many friends.
He who despises his neighbor sins:
But he who has mercy on the poor, happy is he."
[Prov. 14:20-21]

"You shall not show partiality to a poor man in his dispute."
[Exodus 23:3, Bible, NKJV]

"The rich shall not give more and the poor shall not give less than half a shekel, when you give an offering to the LORD, to make atonement for yourselve"
[Exodus 30:15, Bible, NKJV]

"The poor man is hated even by his own neighbor,
But the rich has many friends."
[Prov. 14:20-21]

"You shall not show partiality to a poor man in his dispute.
[Exodus 23:3, Bible, NKJV]

"The rich shall not give more and the poor shall not give less than half a shekel, when you give an offering to the LORD, to make atonement for yourselves."
[Exodus 30:15, Bible, NKJV]

"Better is the poor who walks in his integrity Than one perverse in his ways, though he be rich."
[Prov. 28:6, Bible, NKJV]

"And again I say to you, it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God."
[Matt. 19:24, Bible, NKJV]

"For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek, for the same Lord over all i s rich to all who call upon Him."
[Rom. 10:12, Bible, NKJV]

"Command those who are rich in this present age not to be haughty, nor to trust in uncertain riches but in the living God, who gives us richly all things to enjoy."
[1 Tim. 6:17, Bible, NKJV]

Every place where Jesus Christ vehemently condemned a sin in the Bible was one where hypocrisy and inequality was evident. The greater the hypocrisy, the more vehement was His condemnation. Below is the most graphic example of His condemnation of hypocrisy from the Bible, in Matt. 23. This was the passage cited in the definition of “hypocrisy” above:

"Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You shut the kingdom of heaven in men's faces. You yourselves do not enter, nor will you let those enter who are trying to.

"Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You travel over land and sea to win a single convert, and when he becomes one, you make him twice as much a son of hell as you are.

"Woe to you, blind guides! You say, 'If anyone swears by the temple, it means nothing; but if anyone swears by the gold of the temple, he is bound by his oath.' 16You blind fools! Which is greater: the gold, or the temple that makes the gold sacred? 17You also say, 'If anyone swears by the altar, it means nothing; but if anyone swears by the gift on it, he is bound by his oath.' 18You blind men! Which is greater: the gift, or the altar that makes the gift sacred? 19Therefore, he who swears by the altar swears by it and by everything on it. 20And he who swears by the temple swears by it and by the one who dwells in it. 21And he who swears by heaven swears by God's throne and by the one who sits on it.

"Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You give a tenth of your spices—mint, dill and cumin. But you have neglected the more important matters of the law—justice, mercy and faithfulness. You should have practiced the latter, without neglecting the former. 23You blind guides! You strain out a gnat but swallow a camel.

"Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You clean the outside of the cup and dish, but inside they are full of greed and self indulgence. 25Blind Pharisee! First clean the inside of the cup and dish, and then the outside also will be clean.

"Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You clean the outside of the cup and dish, but inside they are full of greed and self indulgence. 25Blind Pharisee! First clean the inside of the cup and dish, and then the outside also will be clean.

"Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You are like whitewashed tombs, which look beautiful on the outside but on the inside are full of dead men's bones and everything unclean. 26In the same way, on the outside you appear to people as righteous but on the inside you are full of hypocrisy and wickedness."
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

1. When the IRS attempts collection, they seize people’s property and money without even going to court. But when we want to collect anything from anyone, we have to hire an expensive lawyer and go to court and the federal judiciary will refuse to force the IRS to pay our legal fees, which never would have been necessary if they had just obeyed the law like everyone else. This prejudices the defense of our rights.

2. The IRS insists that we put the most intimate details about ourselves on a tax return document, and yet when you talk to anyone at the IRS or write them a letter, they refuse to sign the letter or even provide their full legal name or address.

3. Those who counterfeit money are punished with 20 years in prison, but when the IRS produces a fraudulent security called an “assessment” with no authority of law whatsoever and sells it on the open market, the federal judiciary routinely refuses to convict them of securities fraud.

4. The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, Public Law 104-208 requires in section 809 that anyone collecting a debt, when requested, produce the original debt instrument and prove the existence of the debt. HOWEVER, when people send a Privacy Act request to the IRS demanding evidence of a valid assessment, the IRS routinely refuse to produce it and the courts routinely refuse to compel them to produce it, knowing full well that there is no law that authorizes them to do assessments on people.

Lastly, we must remember that any entity that can break the Ten Commandments or any of man’s laws and not suffer the same punishment under the law as everyone else in society based on equal protection of the laws is a false god and an idol. An idol is simply any “superior being or thing” which has greater rights and sovereignty than anyone else in society. The first four commandments of the Ten commandments make idolatry not only a sin, but the WORST kind of sin punishable by death. Any misguided individual who tolerates or votes in favor of governments abusing their taxing powers to steal from the rich and give to the poor is committing treason against the Constitution and also is violating the second great commandment to love his neighbor. You don’t STEAL from someone you love, and neither do honorable or respectable members of society tolerate or condone government servants who do the stealing as their agents either. The Ten commandments say “Thou shalt not steal.” They don’t say: “Though shalt not steal, UNLESS you are the government.”

29-30 “Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You build tombs for the prophets and decorate the graves of the righteous. 29 And you say, ‘If we had lived in the days of our forefathers, we would not have taken part with them in shedding the blood of the prophets.’ 30 So you testify against yourselves that you are the descendants of those who murdered the prophets. 31 Fill up, then, the measure of the sin of your forefathers!”

31 “You snakes! You brood of vipers! How will you escape being condemned to hell? 32 Therefore I am sending you prophets and wise men and teachers. Some of them you will kill and crucify; others you will flog in your synagogues and pursue from town to town. 33 And so upon you will come all the righteous blood that has been shed on earth, from the blood of righteous Abel to the blood of Zechariah son of Berekiah, whom you murdered between the temple and the altar. 34 I tell you the truth, all this will come upon this generation.

35 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, you who kill the prophets and stone those sent to you, how often I have longed to gather your children together, as a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, but you were not willing. 36 Look, your house is left to you desolate. 37 For I tell you, you will not see me again until you say, ‘Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord.’”

8. Chapter 5 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 points out all the lies and propaganda put out by the government intended to deceive the average American into accepting an unequal role as a federal serf working for a privileged class of hypocrites in the District of Columbia (Washington “D.C.”):

Because it is a natural human tendency to hate hypocrisy and sin, those who intend to win using litigation against the government should grandstand to the jury the inherent inequity, injustice, and hypocrisy rampant in our government. This will mobilize the support needed to get a conviction against government lawbreakers.

4.3.5 How government and God compete to provide “protection”

We stated in the previous section that the goal of government is protection of the liberties of the sovereign public from evil and harm. Here is an example from the Declaration of Independence:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.”

Because God loves us, He has exactly the same purpose and goal as any just government should have. Here are a few examples of how the purpose of God is protection, and there are many more in the book of Psalm:

“O you afflicted one, tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold, I will lay your stones with colorful gems, and lay your foundations with sapphires. I will make your pinnacles of rubies, your gates of crystal, and all your walls of precious stones. All your children shall be taught by the Lord, and great shall be the peace of your children. In righteousness you shall be established; you shall be far from oppression, for you shall not fear; and from terror, for it shall not come near you. Indeed they shall surely assemble, but not because of Me. Whoever assembles against you shall fall for your sake.

“Behold, I have created the blacksmith who blows the coals in the fire, who brings forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the spoiler to destroy. No weapon formed against you shall prosper, and every tongue which rises against you in judgment you shall condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is from Me,” says the Lord.”
[Isaiah 54:11-17, Bible, NKJV]

As Christians, we should prefer God’s protection over government’s protection at all times. This is because we should trust the Lord and not man:

“It is better to trust the Lord
Than to put confidence in man.
It is better to trust in the Lord
Than to put confidence in princes.”
[Psalm 118:9-10, Bible, NKJV]
In the scripture above, the term “man” is synonymous with the words “nation” or “government”. Governments are simply collections of men and if we can’t put confidence in “men”, then we also can’t put confidence or trust in any collection of men, whether it be a corporation or a government. Here is one reason why:

"Arise, O Lord,
Do not let man prevail;
Let the nations be judged in Your sight.
Put them in fear, O Lord,
That the nations may know themselves to be but men."
[Psalm 9:19-20, Bible, NKJV]

No collection of men, whether it be an organized jural society, a government, or simply a mob, can have any more rights than a single man, because the Constitution makes the people, not the government, the sovereigns (kings) and makes us all “equal” under the law. We covered the section of “equal protection of the law” earlier in the chapter, in fact. In particular, the Fourteenth Amendment section 1 guarantees “equal protection of the laws” to all. At the point when the Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776, we eliminated all “kings” and “rulers” in our society because that divinely inspired document said that all of us were endowed by God Himself with equal, inalienable rights, which implied that we all are equal under God’s laws and man’s laws:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator [God] with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

If we are all equal under the law, then our government may not discriminate against biological people for the benefit of its own statutory “employees” or the corporate entities which it creates in the furtherance of “commerce”. The real “king” in our society, then, is the people individually and collectively and public servants in government, from the President on down, simply serve them. Therefore, government statutory “employees” or public officers cannot have any more “privileges” or rights than private citizens. The public servant cannot be greater than his Master, which is you. The purpose for having juries in courts is so that the people can govern themselves, which relegates the judge to that of being simply a coach to ensure that they do it fairly and in a way that is consistent with the Constitution and respects the equal rights of others. The legal encyclopedia Corpus Juris Secundum and the United States supreme Court both confirmed the above conclusions somewhat when they said:

"...when the United States enters into commercial business it abandons its sovereign capacity and is treated like any other corporation..."  [91 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), United States, §4]

"It has always been a part of the judicial function to determine whether the act of one party (whether that party be a single individual, an organized body, or the public as a whole) operates to divest the other party of any rights of person or property. In every constitution is the guaranty against the taking of private property for public purposes without just compensation."

[Reagan v. Farmers Loan & Trust Co., 154 U.S. 362 (1894)]

Here is another example of why we should trust the Lord instead of any man or collection of men in government for our protection, extracted again from the Bible:

"For I was ashamed to request of the king an escort of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy on the road, because we had spoken to the king, saying 'The hand of our God is upon all those for good who seek Him, but His power and His wrath are against all those who forsake Him.' So we fasted and entreated our God for this, and He answered our prayer."
[Ezra 8:21-22, Bible, NKJV]

When governments have (or at least “should” have) the same loving goals as God in terms of protecting us (His children and His sheep/ flock) equally from evil and harm, then we are to submit to them. When they cease to be ministers of God’s justice or turn against God, then we should disobey those government laws that conflict with God’s laws or natural law.

"We ought to obey God rather than men."
[Acts 5:27-29, Bible, NKJV]

This must be so because we have a fiduciary duty to God himself to keep justice under His sacred law over and above any earthly law, and when our servants in government don’t or won’t do it, then it becomes our job as the Sovereigns and Masters to do the job they have failed to do as our agents and servants:
If we sit idly by and neglect our civic duties while subsidizing and encouraging our servants in government to breach their fiduciary duty to protect us because of our negligence and inattention, then we become accountable to God for the acts and omissions of our agents and the harm that causes to our neighbor and our fellow man. This is vividly illustrated by the story of David and Bathsheba in the Bible found in 2 Samuel Chapters 11 and 12. In that story, king David lusted after a beautiful married woman named Bathsheba and had his servant send Bathsheba’s husband Uriah into battle to be killed (See 2 Sam. 11:14-25). After Uriah was killed and David married Bathsheba, first the Lord killed the child born of adultery and then here is what the Lord said to David about the acts of his servant/agent, and note that God held David, not his servant, responsible for the murder:

[Then Nathan said to David] “Why have you despised the commandment of the Lord, to do evil in His sight? You have killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword; you have taken his wife to be your wife, and you have killed him with the sword of the people of Ammon. Now therefore, the sword shall never depart from your house, because you have despised Me, and have taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be your wife.”

Because both God and government have as their goal protection of their subjects or believers, you could say that both God and government are competitors for the affections, worship, and obedience of the people. This has been so throughout history. The whole notion behind the separation of church and state is aimed at making this competition fair and equal between these two competing sovereigns. That is why churches are not supposed to involve themselves in politics if they want to maintain their tax exempt status and why governments may not tax churches: because taxation by government of churches or political advocacy against government by churches would destroy that perfect separation of powers.

When government becomes too oppressive, then the healthy competition between church and state ensures a steady convergence back to the perfect balance of powers that Natural Law requires. For instance, if government raises its tax rates too high, then everyone will either donate everything they have to the church or become churches (Corporation Sole, for instance) in order to avoid government taxes and control. Likewise, when church gets to be too big or influential, then the government tries to step in and pass laws and ordinances to limit its power or worse yet, creates its own state-sanctioned church, as the kings of England did with the Anglican church. In that case, the church becomes another means of state control. America was founded by Quakers in the 1600’s who were trying to escape state control of the Anglican church so they could worship freely according to their conscience and without government interference. See section 5.2.1 for a fascinating history of the creation and founding of America.

When governments grow too big, the competition between church and state for the affections and loyalty of the public favors government and thereby prejudices the influences of churches and God on the people. At that point, churches and believers have a moral responsibility for political activism and reform. This political imbalance is perpetuated by a combination of: 1. Media advocacy; 2. Unjust laws that discriminate against religious activities; 3. Dumbing down of the population in regards to religious issues and legal issues. Government thus becomes a substitute for God or an idol in this case, and this violates the First Commandment to put God first and have no other gods (see Exodus 20:1-11, Bible, NKJV).

The focus of section 0 later is to then prove from a legal perspective using evidence that our contemporary government has indeed replaced God and become an idol, and that this condition poses a great threat to our freedoms and liberties, and invites the wrath of God. Ultimately, the result will be subjection and slavery of the people to their rulers and a police state the likes of which this country has never seen. The people will be lead like lambs into government and legal profession captivity and slavery because of their ignorance and lack of faith or trust in God.

“The Gentiles shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they were unfaithful to Me, therefore I hid My face from them. I gave them into the hand of their enemies, and they all fell by the [legal] sword. According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions I have dealt with them, and hidden My face from them.”

[Ezekiel 39:23-24, Bible, NKJV]

How has God “hidden his face”? By the outlawing of simple prayer in the schools, by the removal of the ten commandments and crosses from public buildings and parks, by the removal of religious teachings from our classrooms, and by the passing of government laws that clearly violate God’s laws. See section 4.18 later, for instance, for further details on man’s laws conflict with God’s laws.
4.3.6 Separation of powers doctrine

The foundation of our republican form of government is the notion of “separation of powers”. In the legal field, this is called “the separation of powers doctrine”. The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed the purpose of the separation of powers doctrine in the case of U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995):

“In Europe, the Executive is almost synonymous with the Sovereign power of a State; and, generally, includes legislative and judicial authority. When, therefore, writers speak of the sovereign, it is not necessarily in exclusion of the judiciary; and it will often be found, that when the Executive affords a remedy for any wrong, it is nothing more than by an exercise of its judicial authority. Such is the condition of power in that quarter of the world, where it is too commonly acquired by force, or fraud, or both, and seldom by compact. In America, however, the case is widely different. Our government is founded upon compact. Sovereignty was, and is, in the people. It was entrusted by them, as far as was necessary for the purpose of forming a good government, to the Federal Convention; and the Convention executed their trust, by effectually separating the Legislative, Judicial, and Executive powers; which, in the contemplation of our Constitution, are each a branch of the sovereignty. The well-being of the whole depends upon keeping each department within its limits. In the State government, several instances have occurred where a legislative act, has been rendered inoperative by a judicial decision, that it was unconstitutional; and even under the Federal government the judges, for the same reason, have refused to execute an act of Congress. When, in short, either branch of the government usurps that part of the sovereignty, which the Constitution assigns to another branch, liberty ends, and tyranny commences.”

[The Betsey, 3 U.S. 6 (1794)]

“We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 530 U.S. 452, 488 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid. “

"The people of the United States, by their Constitution, have affirmed a division of internal governmental powers between the federal government and the governments of the several states—committing to the first its powers by express grant and necessary implication; to the latter, or [301 U.S. 548, 611] to the people, by reservation, 'the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States.' The Constitution thus affirms the complete supremacy and independence of the state within the field of its powers. Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238, 295], 56 S.Ct. 855, 865. The federal government has no more authority to invade that field than the state has to invade the exclusive field of national governmental powers; for, in the oft-repeated words of this court in Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 725, 'the preservation of the States, and the maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National government.' The necessity of preserving each from every form of illegitimate intrusion or interference on the part of the other is so imperative as to require this court, when its judicial power is properly invoked, to view with a careful and discriminating eye any legislation challenged as constituting such an intrusion or interference. See South Carolina v. United States, 195 U.S. 437, 448, 26 S.Ct. 110, 4 Ann.Cas. 737."

The founders believed that men were inherently corrupt. They believed that where power concentrates, so does tyranny. To prevent tyranny, they separated the power within our government in the following ways:

1. Separation of church (God) and state. The state and God (the church) are in competition with each other to protect the people, as we showed in the previous section. Guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution.
2. Separation of money and state. Guaranteed by Article 1, Section 10, Clause 1 of the Constitution, which required that no State shall make anything but gold and silver money. See also section 2.8.9.2 later.
3. Separation of marriage and state. At the time, there were no marriage licenses and everyone got married in their church. Their marriage certificate was the family bible, because that is where they recorded the ceremony.
4. Separation of education and state. The Constitution did not authorize the federal government to get involved in education, and since everything not mentioned in the Constitution was reserved to the states under the Tenth Amendment, we also had separation of education and state.
5. Separation of media and state: The founders always believed that a free and independent media was a precursor to an accountable and moral government and they wrote the requirement for freedom of the press into the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

6. Separation of the people and the government. The founders gave the people equal footing with the state governments by giving them the House of Representatives. The House of Representatives is equal in legislative power to the Senate, which represents the state governments.

7. State v. Federal separation. The states had complete sovereignty internal to their border over everything except taxes on foreign commerce, mail fraud, and counterfeiting. Slavery was later added to that by the Thirteenth Amendment. The federal government had jurisdiction over all external or foreign matters only. Guaranteed by Art. IV of the Constitution.

8. Separation of powers within the above two distinct governments. Guaranteed by Art. I, Art. II, and Art. III of the Constitution:
   - 8.1. Executive
   - 8.2. Legislative
   - 8.3. Judicial

The founding fathers derived the idea of separation of powers from various historical legal treatises available to them at the time they wrote the Constitution. The main source which described this separation of powers and after which they patterned their design for our government was a book written by Montesquieu which you can read for yourself below:

The Spirit of Laws, Baron de Montesquieu

http://famguardian.org/Publications/SpiritOLaws/sol.htm

The founders implemented separation between the federal and state governments to put the states in competition with each other for citizens and commerce, so that when one state became too oppressive by having taxes that were too high or too many laws, people would move to a better state where they had more freedom and lower taxes. This would ensure that the states that were most oppressive would have the fewest citizens and the worst economy. They also put the federal government in charge of foreign commerce only, so that the only way it could increase its revenues was to promote, not discourage or restrict, commerce with foreign nations. If the taxes on foreign commerce were too high, people would simply buy more domestic goods and the federal government would shrink. It was naturally self-balancing.

The founders also put branches within each government in competition with each other: Executive, Legislative, and Judicial. They ensured that each branch had distinct functions that could not be delegated to another branch of government. Each branch would then jealously guard its power and jurisdiction to ensure that it was not invaded or undermined by the other branch. This ensured that there would always be a balance of powers so that the system was self-regulating and the balance of powers would be maintained.

Where Congress exceeds its authority relative to the States, therefore, the departure from the constitutional plan cannot be ratified by the "consent" of state officials. An analogy to the separation of powers among the branches of the Federal Government clarifies this point. The Constitution's division of power among the three branches is violated where one branch invades the territory of another, whether or not the encroached-upon branch approves the encroachment. In Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 118–137 (1976), for instance, the Court held that Congress had infringed the President's appointment power, despite the fact that the President himself had manifested his consent to the statute that caused the infringement by signing it into law. See National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S. at 842, n. 12. In INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 944–959 (1983), we held that the legislative veto violated the constitutional requirement that legislation be presented to the President, despite Presidents' approval of hundreds of statutes containing a legislative veto provision. See id., at 944–945. The constitutional authority of Congress cannot be expanded by the "consent" of the governmental unit whose domain is thereby narrowed, whether that unit is the Executive Branch or the States.

State officials thus cannot consent to the enlargement of the powers of Congress beyond those enumerated in the Constitution. Indeed, the facts of this case raise the possibility that powerful incentives might lead both
The founders put the states in charge of the federal government by filling the senate with delegates from each state and by giving each state full and complete and exclusive control over all taxation within its borders, with the exception of taxes on foreign commerce, which is commerce external to states of the Union and among foreign countries.

"In the states, there reposes the sovereignty to manage their own affairs except only as the requirements of the Constitution otherwise provide. Within these constitutional limits the power of the state over taxation is plenary."

[New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144 (1992)]

The states gave the federal government control only over taxes on foreign commerce under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution. The states ensured this result by mentioning in two places in the Constitution, Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4, that all direct taxes had to be apportioned to the legislatures of each state. The requirement to apportion direct taxes is the only mandate that appears twice in the Constitution, because they wanted to emphasize this limit on federal taxing powers. This ensured that the federal government could never burden or economically enslave individual citizens within each state or tax state governments directly:

"The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many, but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."

The founders imposed these restrictions on direct taxation because they knew that direct taxes amounted to slavery and they didn't want to become slaves to the federal government. Through the requirement for apportionment, state legislatures became the intermediaries for all federal appropriations that depended on other than indirect taxes on foreign commerce. Any other approach would require citizens in the states to serve two masters: state and federal, for the income they earn. This is a fulfillment of the Bible, which said on this subject:

"No one can serve two masters [state and federal]: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

Thomas Jefferson, one of our most important founding fathers, confirmed the purpose of the separation of powers between state and federal governments. He confirmed that the purpose of the federal government was to regulate commerce and interaction with foreign countries and that it never had the authority or jurisdiction to invade within states, either through legislation or through police powers:

"The extent of our country was so great, and its former division into distinct States so established, that we thought it better to confederate U.S. government as to foreign affairs only. Every State retained its self-government in domestic matters, as better qualified to direct them to the good and satisfaction of their citizens, than a general government so distant from its remoter citizens and so little familiar with the local peculiarities of the different parts."

[Thomas Jefferson to A. Coray, 1823. ME 15:483]

"I believe the States can best govern our home concerns, and the General Government our foreign ones."

[Thomas Jefferson to William Johnson, 1823. ME 15:450]

81 See Federalist Paper #45 for confirmation of this fact.
"My general plan [for the federal government] would be, to make the States one as to everything connected with foreign nations, and several as to everything purely domestic."

[Thomas Jefferson to Edward Carrington, 1787. ME 6:227]

"Distinct States, amalgamated into one as to their foreign concerns, but single and independent as to their internal administration, regularly organized with a legislature and governor resting on the choice of the people and enlightened by a free press, can never be so fascinated by the arts of one man as to submit voluntarily to his usurpation. Nor can they be constrained to it by any force he can possess. While that may paralyze the single State in which it happens to be encamped, [the] others, spread over a country of two thousand miles diameter, rise up on every side, ready organized for deliberation by a constitutional legislature and for action by their governor, constitutionally the commander of the militia of the State, that is to say, of every man in it able to bear arms."

[Thomas Jefferson to A. L. C. Destutt de Tracy, 1811. ME 13:19]

You can read the above quotes from Thomas Jefferson on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Politics/ThomasJefferson/jeff1050.htm

Note that Jefferson said that the federal government was given jurisdiction over foreign affairs only, which includes foreign commerce. The only exception to this general rule is subject matter within the states over the following:

1. Slavery under the Thirteenth Amendment.
2. Counterfeiting under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 5 of the Constitution.
3. Mail under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 7 of the Constitution.
4. Assaults and infractions against its own officers under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 18 of the Constitution.
5. Treason under Article 3, Section 3, Clause 2 of the Constitution.

Every other type of subject matter jurisdiction exercised by the federal government within the states is not authorized by the Constitution, and therefore can only be undertaken with the voluntary consent and participation of the state governments and the people within them. This type of consensual jurisdiction is called "comity".

"comity. Courtesy; complaisance; respect; a willingness to grant a privilege, not as a matter of right, but out of deference and good will. Recognition that one sovereignty allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial act of another sovereignty, having due regard to rights of its own citizens. Nowell v. Nowell, Tex.Civ.App., 408 S.W.2d 550, 553. In general, principle of "comity" is that courts of one state or jurisdiction will give effect to laws and judicial decisions of another state or jurisdiction, not as a matter of obligation, but out of deference and mutual respect. Brown v. Babbitt Ford, Inc., 117 Ariz. 192, 571 P.2d 689, 695. See also Full faith and credit clause."

Jefferson’s quotes are also fully consistent with our system of federal taxation. For instance, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution limits federal taxation powers to commerce with foreign nations and between, but not within, states. 26 CFR §1.861-8(f) also reveals that the only specific sources of “gross income” that are taxable under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code are those associated with Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) and Foreign Sales Corporations (FSCs), both of whom are involved in commerce with foreign countries only. Even the IRS’ own publications in the Federal Register confirm that this was the original intent of the founders. Below is an excerpt from the Federal Register, Volume 37, page 20960 dated October 5, 1972:

"Madison’s Notes on the Constitutional Convention [see Federalist Paper #45] reveal clearly that the framers of the Constitution believed for some time [and wrote this permanent requirement into the Constitution] that the principal, if not sole, support of the new Federal Government would be derived from customs duties and taxes connected with shipping and importations. Internal taxation would not be resorted to except infrequently, and for special [emergency] reasons. The first resort to internal taxation, the enactment of internal revenue laws in 1791 and in the following 10 years, was occasioned by the exigencies of the public credit. These first laws were repealed in 1802. Internal revenue laws were reenacted for the period 1813-17, when the effects of the war of 1812 caused Congress to resort to internal taxation. From 1818 to 1861, however, the United States had no internal revenue laws and the Federal Government was supported by the revenue from import duties and the proceeds from the sale of public lands. In 1862 Congress once more levied internal revenue taxes. This time the establishment of an internal revenue system, not exclusively dependent upon the supplies of foreign commerce, was permanent."

What the IRS doesn't tell you in the above is that the resort to internal taxation under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code was only authorized against officers of the United States government and not against private citizens living in the states of the Union. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, the enactment of the Sixteenth Amendment didn't change that Constitutional requirement one iota either. You can view this document on our website at:

Those federal politicians, legislators, and judges intent on becoming tyrants or expanding their power must break down the separation of powers established by the founders above if they want to concentrate power or take away powers from the states. They have done this over the years mainly by the following means, which we devote nearly the entirety of this book to exposing and explaining:

1. Deliberately deceiving people about the intent and result of ratifying the Sixteenth Amendment. According to the U.S. Supreme Court, the Sixteenth Amendment “conferred no power of taxation” upon the federal government, but simply reinforced the idea that federal income taxes are indirect excise taxes only on businesses. Yet, to this day, your dishonest Congressman and the IRS itself both insist that the Sixteenth Amendment is the basis for their authority to tax the labor of a natural person, in spite of the fact that these kinds of taxes violate the Thirteenth Amendment and constitute slavery and involuntary servitude.

2. Eliminating separation of church and state by either taxing churches or using the IRS to terrorize and gag them for their political activities. This is already happening. See the following website for details: http://www.hushmoney.org/

3. Eliminating separation of money and state by eliminating the gold standard and transitioning to a fiat paper currency. This was done in 1913 with the introduction of the Federal Reserve Act on Dec. 23, 1913, shortly after the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment in February 1913.

4. Eliminating separation of marriage and state by introducing marriage licenses. This was done in a large scale starting in 1923, with the Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act of 1929. See section 4.14.6.7 later for further details.

5. Confusing the definitions of words to make the separation of powers between state and federal unclear. For instance:

5.1. Confusing the definitions of “state” and “State”.

5.2. Confusing the definition of “United States”

5.3. Not defining the word “foreign” in the Internal Revenue Code

6. Obfuscating the distinctions between “U.S. citizen” and “national” status within federal statutes. “U.S. citizens” were born in the federal United States while “nationals” were born in states of the Union.

7. Judges violating the due process rights of the accused by making frequent use of false presumption against litigants regarding citizenship and “taxpayer” status without documenting in their rulings what presumptions they are making or having to defend with evidence why such presumptions are warranted. Remember that “presumption” is the opposite of due process and also happens to be a sin in the Bible. Refer to section 2.8.2 earlier for details.

8. Refusing to acknowledge or recognize the limits of federal jurisdiction within federal courtrooms. We have been informed of many individuals being brutalized and abused by itinerant federal judges whose jurisdiction was challenged.

9. Suppressing any evidence or debate in courtrooms on the nature of separation of powers. Doing so by complicating rules of evidence, and making citizens meet a higher standard for evidence than the government.

10. Using the proceeds of extorted or illegally-collected federal income tax revenues to break down the separation of powers between states and the federal government. For instance, depriving states of federal revenues who do not do what the federal government wants them to do. This is called “privilege-induced slavery”. We explain later in section 6.1 that this kind of artifice has been thoroughly exploited to create a de facto government that is completely at odds with the de jure separation of powers required by our Constitution.

11. Discrediting and slandering legal professionals who bring attention to the separation of powers between state and federal jurisdiction by calling them “frivolous” or “incompetent” and/or pulling their license to practice law. The framing of Congressman Traficant and Congressman George Hansen are examples of this kind of political persecution by abusing the legal system as a tool of persecution.

12. Paying people in the legal publishing business to obfuscate the definitions of words. We show later in section 6.8 several instances of such corruption.

13. Making the laws found in the U.S. Code so confusing that the average American can’t rely on his own understanding of them to know what the law requires. Instead, he must compelled to rely on a high-paid expert, such as a judge or lawyer, both of whom have a conflict of interest in expanding their power, to say what the law really requires. This transforms our society from a “society of laws and not men” into a “society of men”.

14. Suppressing and oppressing the Right to Petition guaranteed to We the People in the First Amendment. The Founders believed that the people had an inalienable right to withhold payment of taxes until their petitions were heard and responded to. Federal courts have evaded and avoided upholding this requirement, in what amounts to treason against the Constitution punishable by death. See the article on our website about this subject at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/LegalEthics/RightToPet-031002.pdf

The U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186 (1962) has developed some legal criteria for determining whether a court may invade or undermine the duties of a coordinate branch of government in its rulings and thereby undermine the separation of powers. Below is the criteria:

1. Has the issue been committed expressly by the Constitution to a coordinate political branch of the government?
2. Are there judicially discoverable and manageable standards for deciding the case?
3. Can the case be decided without some initial policy determination of a kind clearly for nonjudicial discretion?
4. Can the case decide the case independently without expressing lack of respect due a coordinate branch of the government?
5. Is there an unusual need for unquestioning adherence to a political decision already made?
6. Is there a potentiality for embarrassment from multifarious decisions by different branches of the government on the same question?

In the criteria above, the Executive and Legislative branches of the government are regarded as “political branches”, while the judicial branch is not a political branch, but exclusively a legal branch. Understanding these criteria are important for readers who want to challenge the exercise of political powers by the federal judiciary, such as in areas of:

1. Interfering with one’s political choice of domicile. See section 5.4.5 later for details.
2. Interfering with one’s political choice of citizenship. See sections 4.11 through 4.11.13 later.
3. Interfering with the exercise of political rights or a political party. You as a private individual constitute an independent sovereignty and political party and a court may not interfere with your political choices. See section 4.2.4 earlier for a definition of political rights.

A court that interferes with or questions or undermines a persons political affiliations above is involving itself in political questions and the judge is overstepping his authority.

“Political questions. Questions of which courts will refuse to take cognizance, or to decide, on account of their purely political character, or because their determination would involve an encroachment upon the executive or legislative powers.

“Political questions doctrine” holds that certain issues should not be decided by courts because their resolution is committed to another branch of government and/or because those issues are not capable, for one reason or another, of judicial resolution. Islamic Republic of Iran v. Pahlavi, 116 Misc.2d. 590, 455 N.Y.S.2d. 987, 990.

A matter of dispute which can be handled more appropriately by another branch of the government is not a “justiciable” matter for the courts. However, a state apportionment statute is not such a political question as to render it nonjusticable. Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 208-210, 82 S.Ct. 691, 705-706, 7 L.Ed.2d. 663.

The U.S. Supreme Court has also insightfully defined the very harmful affect on society when the judicial branch of the government involves itself in political questions of the above nature in the case of Luther v. Borden:

“But, fortunately for our freedom from political excitements in judicial duties, this court [the U.S. Supreme Court] can never with propriety be called on officially to be the umpire in questions merely political. The adjustment of these questions belongs to the people and their political representatives, either in the State or general government. These questions relate to matters not to be settled on strict legal principles. They are adjusted rather by inclination, or prejudice or compromise, often.

[...] Another evil, alarming and little foreseen, involved in regarding these as questions for the final arbitrament of judges would be that, in such an event, all political privileges and rights would, in a dispute among the people, depend on our decision finally. We would possess the power to decide against, as well as for, them, and, under a prejudiced or arbitrary judiciary, the public liberties and popular privileges might thus be much perverted, if not entirely prostrated. But, allowing the people to make constitutions and unmake them, allowing their representatives to make laws and unmake them, and without our interference as to their principles or policy in doing it, yet, when constitutions and laws are made and put in force by others, then the courts, as empowered by the State or the Union, commence their functions and may decide on the rights which conflicting parties can legally set up under them, rather than about their formation itself. Our power begins after theirs [the Sovereign People] ends. Constitutions and laws precede the judiciary, and we act only under and after them, and as to disputed rights beneath them, rather than disputed points in making them. We speak what is the law, jus dicere, we speak or construe what is the constitution, after both are made, but we make, or revise, or control neither. The disputed rights beneath constitutions already made are to be governed by precedents, by sound legal principles, by positive legislation e.g. "positive law"], clear contracts, moral duties, and fixed rules; they are per se questions of law, and are well suited to the education and habits of the bench. But the other disputed points in making constitutions, depending often, as before shown, on policy, inclination, popular resolves and popular will and arising not in respect to private rights, not what is meum and tuum, but in relation to politics, they belong to politics, and they are settled by political tribunals, and are too dear to a people bred in the school of Sydney and Russel for them ever to intrust their final decision, when disputed, to a class of men who are so far removed from them as the judiciary, a class also who might decide them erroneously, as well as right, and if in the former way, the consequences might not be able to be averted except by a revolution, while a wrong decision by a political forum can be often be peacefully corrected by new elections or instructions in a single month; and if the people, in the distribution of powers under the constitution, should ever think of making judges supreme arbiters in political controversies when not selected by them nor at liberty to follow such various considerations in their judgments as [48 U.S. 53] belong to mere political questions, they will dethrone themselves and lose one of their own invaluable birthrights; building up in this way -- slowly, but surely -- a new sovereign power in the republic, in most respects irresponsible and unchangeable for life, and one more dangerous, in theory at least, than the worst elective oligarchy in the worst of times. Again, instead of controlling the people in political affairs, the judiciary in our system was designed rather to control individuals, on the one hand, when encroaching, or to defend them, on the other, under the Constitution and the laws, when they are encroached upon. And if the judiciary at times seems to fill the important station of a check in the government, it is rather a check on the legislature, who may attempt to pass laws contrary to the Constitution, or on the executive, who may violate both the laws and Constitution, than on the people themselves in their primary capacity as makers and amenders of constitutions.”
[Luther v. Borden, 48 U.S. 1 (1849)]

4.3.7 “Sovereign”=“Foreign”

In law, a “nonresident alien” is called a “foreigner”, “stranger”, “transient foreigner”, "sojourner", "stateless person", or simply a “nonresident”. This is an unavoidable result of the fact that states of the Union are:

1. Sovereign in respect to each other and in respect to federal jurisdiction.
2. “foreign countries” or “foreign states” with respect to federal legislative jurisdiction.

“The United States Government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state.” [N.Y. v. re Merriam, 36 N.E.
505, 141 N.Y. 479, affirmed 16 S.Ct. 1073, 41 L.Ed. 287]
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, 8864]

3. Addressed as “states” rather than “States” in federal law because they are foreign.
4. The equivalent of independent nations in in respect to federal jurisdiction excepting the subject of foreign affairs.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Many Americans naturally cringe at the idea of being called a “foreigner” in their own country. The purpose of this section is to explain why there is nothing wrong with maintaining the status of being “foreign” and why it is the ONLY way to preserve and protect the separation of powers that was put into place by the very wise founding fathers for the explicit purpose of protecting our sacred Constitutional Rights.

Going along with the notion of the Separation Of Powers doctrine in the previous section is the concept of “sovereignty”. Sovereignty is the foundation of all government in America and fundamental to understanding our American system of government. Below is how President Theodore Roosevelt, one of our most beloved Presidents, describes “sovereignty”:

“We of this mighty western Republic have to grapple with the dangers that spring from popular self-government tried on a scale incomparably vaster than ever before in the history of mankind, and from an abounding material prosperity greater also than anything which the world has hitherto seen. As regards the first set of dangers, it behooves us to remember that men can never escape being governed. Either they must govern themselves or they must submit to being governed by others. If from lazziness or fickleness, from folly or self-indulgence, they refuse to govern themselves then most assuredly in the end they will have to be governed from the outside. They can prevent the need of government from without only by showing they possess the power of government from within. A sovereign cannot make excuses for his failures; a sovereign must accept the responsibility for the exercise of power that inheres in him; and where, as is true in our Republic, the people are sovereign, then the people must show a sober understanding and a sane and steadfast purpose if they are to preserve that orderly liberty upon which as a foundation every republic must rest.”

[President Theodore Roosevelt; Opening of the Jamestown Exposition; Norfolk, VA, April 26, 1907]

In this section, we will cover some very important implications of sovereignty within the context of government authority and jurisdiction generally. We will analyze these implications both from the standpoint of relations WITHIN a government and the relationship that government has with its citizens and subjects. We will expand upon the subject of sovereignty in the context of taxes later in sections 5.2.2 and 5.2.3.

Sovereignty can exist within individuals, families, churches, cities, counties, states, nations, and even international bodies. This is depicted in the “onion diagram” below, which shows the organization of personal, family, church, and civil government graphically. The boundaries and relations between each level of government are defined by God Himself, who is the Creator of all things and the Author of the user manual for it all, His Holy Book. Each level of the “onion” below is considered sovereign, independent, and “foreign” with respect to all the levels external to it. Each level of the diagram represents an additional layer of protection for those levels within it, keeping in mind that the purpose of government at every level is “protection” of the sovereigns which it was created to serve and which are within it in the diagram below:

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The interior levels of the above onion govern and direct the external levels of the onion. For instance, citizens govern and direct their city, county, state, and federal governments by exercising their political right to vote and serve on jury duty. Here is how the Supreme Court describes it:

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

“...at the Revolution, the sovereignty devolved on the people; and they are truly the sovereigns of the country, but they are sovereigns without subjects...with none to govern but themselves; the citizens of America are equal as fellow citizens, and as joint tenants in the sovereignty.”
[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall (U.S.) 419, 454, 1 L.Ed. 440, 455 @DALL 1793, pp. 471-472]

City governments control their state governments by directing elections, controlling what appears on the ballot, and controlling how much of the property and sales tax revenues are given to the states. State government exercise their authority over the federal government by sending elected representatives to run the Senate and by controlling the “purse” of the federal government when direct taxes are apportioned to states.
Sovereignty also exists within a single governmental unit. For instance, in the previous section, we described the Separation of Powers Doctrine by showing how a “republican form of government” divides the federal government into three distinct, autonomous, and completely independent branches that are free from the control of the other branches. Therefore, the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial departments of both state and federal governments are “foreign” and “alien” with respect to the other branches.

Sovereignty is defined in man’s law as follows, in Black’s Law Dictionary:

“Sovereignty. The supreme, absolute, and uncontrollable power by which any independent state is governed:

1. Supreme political authority; paramount control of the constitution and frame of government and its administration; self-sufficient source of political power, from which all specific political powers are derived;
2. The international independence of a state, combined with the right and power of regulating its internal affairs without foreign dictation; also a political society, or state, which is sovereign and independent.

“Sovereignty” consists of the combination of legal authority and responsibility that a government or individual has within our American system of jurisprudence. The key words in the above definition of sovereignty are: “foreign”, “uncontrollable”, and “independence”. A “sovereign” is:

1. A servant and fiduciary of all sovereigns internal to it.
2. Not subject to the legislative or territorial jurisdiction of any external sovereign. This is because he is the “author” of the law that governs the external sovereign and therefore not subject to it.

“Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law...While sovereign powers are delegated to...the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people.”

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

3. “Foreign” but not a privileged “alien” with respect to other external sovereigns, from a legal perspective. This means that:

1. The purpose of the laws of the sovereign at any level is to establish a fiduciary duty to protect the rights and sovereignty of all those entities which are internal to a sovereignty.
2. The existence of a sovereign may be acknowledged and defined, but not limited by the laws of an external sovereign.
3. The rights and duties of a sovereign are not prescribed in any law of an external sovereign.
4. “Independent” of other sovereigns. This means that:

1. The sovereign has a duty to support and govern itself completely and to not place any demands for help upon an external sovereign.
2. The moment a sovereign asks for “benefits” or help, it ceases to be sovereign and independent and must surrender its rights and sovereignty to an external sovereign using his power to contract in order to procure needed help.
5. The purpose of the Constitution is to preserve “self-government” and independence at every level of sovereignty in the above onion diagram:

“The determination of the Framers Convention and the ratifying conventions to preserve complete and unimpaired state [and personal] self-government in all matters not committed to the general government is one of the plainest facts which emerges from the history of their deliberations. And adherence to that determination is incumbent equally upon the federal government and the states. State powers can neither be appropriated on the one hand nor abdicated on the other. As this court said in Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 725, ‘The preservation of the States, and the maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National government. The Constitution, in all its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union, composed of indestructible States.’ Every journey to a forbidden end begins with the first step; and the danger of such a step by the federal government in the direction of taking over the powers of the states is that the end of the journey may find the states so despoiled of their powers, or what may amount to the same thing—so [298 U.S. 238, 296] relieved of the responsibilities which possession of the powers necessarily enjoins, as to reduce them to little more than geographical subdivisions of the national domain. It is safe to say that if, when the Constitution was under consideration, it had been thought that any such danger lurked behind its plain words, it would never have been ratified.”

[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

Below are some examples of the operation of the above rules for sovereignty within the American system of government:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

1. No federal law prescribes a duty upon a person who is a “national” but not a “citizen” under federal law, as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), or 8 U.S.C. §1152(a)(21). References to “nationals” within federal law are rare and every instance where it is mentioned is in the context of duties and obligations of public servants, rather than the “national himself” or herself. We will expand further upon this subject later in section 4.11.1 and following.

2. Natural persons who have not expressly and in writing contracted away their rights are “sovereign”. Here is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes it:

“There is a clear distinction in this particular case between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the State. The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”

[Black v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906)]

3. States of the Union and the Federal government are both immune from lawsuits against them by “nationals”, except in cases where they voluntarily consent by law. This is called “sovereign immunity”. Read the Supreme Court case of Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999) for exhaustive details on the constitutional basis for this immunity.

4. States of the Union are “foreign” with respect to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction. In federal law, they are called “foreign states” and they are described with the upper case word “states” within the U.S. Code and in the upper case “States” in the Constitution. Federal “States”, which are actually territories of the United States (see 4 U.S.C. §110(d)) are spelled in upper case in most federal statutes and codes. States of the Union are immune from the jurisdiction of federal courts, except in cases where they voluntarily consent to be subject to the jurisdiction. The federal government is immune from the jurisdiction of state courts and international bodies, except where it consents to be sued as a matter of law. This is called “sovereign immunity”.

Foreign States: “Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
The term ‘foreign nations’, ..., should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”

Foreign Laws: “The laws of a foreign country or sister state. In conflicts of law, the legal principles of jurisprudence which are part of the law of a sister state or nation. Foreign laws are additions to our own laws, and in that respect are called ‘juris receptum’.”

5. The rules for surrendering sovereignty are described in the “Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act”, which is codified in 28 U.S.C. §§1602-1611. A list of exceptions to the act in 28 U.S.C. §1605 define precisely what behaviors cause a sovereign to surrender their sovereignty to a fellow sovereign.

The key point we wish to emphasize throughout this section is that a sovereign is “foreign” with respect to all other external (outside them within the onion diagram) sovereigns and therefore not subject to their jurisdiction. In that respect, a sovereign is considered a “foreigner” of one kind or another in the laws of every sovereign external to it. For instance, a person who is a “national” but not a subject “citizen” under federal law, as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452, is classified as a “nonresident alien” within the Internal Revenue Code. He is “alien” to the code because he is not subject to it and he is a “nonresident” because he does not maintain a domicile in the federal zone. This is no accident, but simply proof in the law itself that such a person is in deed and in fact a “sovereign” with respect to the government entity that serves him. Understanding this key point is the foundation for understanding the next chapter, where we will prove to you with the government’s own laws that most Americans born in and living within states of the Union, which are “foreign states” with respect to federal jurisdiction, are:

1. “nonresident aliens” as defined under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)

2. Not “persons” or “individuals” within federal civil law, including the Internal Revenue Code. You can’t be a “person” or an “individual” within federal law unless you either have a domicile within federal jurisdiction or contract with the federal government to procure an identity or “res” within their jurisdiction and thereby become a “res-ident”. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the rights of human beings are unalienable, which means they can’t be bargained or contracted away through any commercial process. Therefore, domicile is the only lawful source of jurisdiction over human beings.

“Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights—life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and to secure, not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a man has honestly acquired he retains full control of...”

[Budd v. People of State of New York, 143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

Furthermore, the Bible says we can’t contract with “the Beast”, meaning the government and therefore, we have no delegated authority to give away our rights to the government:

“You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a “resident” in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against Me [God].

For if you serve their gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely be a snare to you.”

[Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

3. Not “nonresident alien individuals”. You can’t be a “nonresident alien individual” without first being an “individual” and therefore a “person”. 26 U.S.C. §7701(c) defines the term “person” to include “individuals”. Instead, they are “nonresident alien NON-individuals”.

4. “foreign” or “foreigners” with respect to federal jurisdiction. All of their property is classified as a “foreign estate” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(31). In the Bible, this status is called a “stranger”:

“You shall neither mistreat a stranger nor oppress him, for you were strangers in the land of Egypt.”

[Exodus 22:21, Bible, NKJV]

“And if a stranger dwells with you in your land, you shall not mistreat him.”

[Leviticus 19:33, Bible, NKJV]

5. Not “foreign persons”. You can’t be a “foreign person” without first being a “person”.

6. “nontaxpayers” if they do not earn any income from within the “federal zone” or that is connected with an excise taxable activity called a “trade or business”, which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as a public office in the United States government.

7. Not qualified to sit on a jury in a federal district court, because they are not “citizens” under federal law.

Now do you understand why the Internal Revenue Code does not define the term “foreign” anywhere? They don’t want to spill the beans and inform you that you are sovereign and not subject to their jurisdiction! Instead, they want to commit treason by destroying the sovereignty of the people and thereby expand their jurisdiction illegally by:

1. Promoting false presumption about federal jurisdiction.

2. Exploiting “cognitive dissonance” by appealing to the aversion of the average American to being called a “foreign person” or “nonresident alien” with respect to his own federal government.

3. Misleading and deceiving Americans into believing and declaring on government forms that they are statutory rather than constitutional “U.S. citizens” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 who are subject to their corrupt laws instead of “nationals” but not a “citizens” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) . The purpose is to compel you through constructive fraud to associate with and conduct “commerce” ( intercourse/fornication) with “the Beast” as a statutory “U.S. citizen”, who is a government whore. They do this by the following means:

3.1. Using “words of art” to encourage false presumption.

3.2. Using vague or ambiguous language that is not defined and using political propaganda instead of law to define the language.

Keep in the mind the following with respect to “foreign persons” and the status of being an “nonresident alien” as a sovereign:

1. There is nothing wrong with being an “alien” in the tax code, as long as we aren’t an alien with a “domicile” in the District of Columbia, which makes us into a “resident”. The taxes described under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code are not upon “aliens”, but instead mainly upon “residents”, who are “aliens” with a legal domicile within federal exclusive jurisdiction. We cover this in section 5.4.19 of the Great IRS Hoax.
2. A “nonresident alien” is not an “alien” and therefore not a “taxpayer” in most cases. 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) defines an “alien” as a person who is neither a citizen nor a resident of the District of Columbia. 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) defines a “nonresident alien” as a person who is neither a citizen nor a national.

3. A “nonresident alien” who is also an “alien” may elect under 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4) to be treated as a “resident” by filing the wrong tax form, the 1040, instead of the more proper 1040NR form. Since that election is a voluntary act, then income taxes are voluntary for nonresident aliens.

4. A “nonresident alien” who is a non-citizen national may not lawfully elect to become a “resident alien” or a “resident” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) or 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4).

5. The only way that a “nonresident alien” who is also a “non-citizen national” can lawfully become domiciled in a place is if he or she or it physically moves to that place and then declares an intention to remain permanently and indefinitely. When the nonresident alien does this, it becomes a statutory citizen of that place, not a “resident alien”.

6. Only “aliens” can have a “residence” within the Internal Revenue Code pursuant to 26 CFR §1.871-2. Non-citizen nationals cannot lawfully be described as having a “residence” because that word is nowhere defined to include “non-citizen nationals” with a domicile or abode on federal territory.

This concept of being a “foreign person” or “nonresident alien” as a sovereign is also found in the Bible as well. Remember what Jesus said about being free?:

"Ye shall know the Truth and the Truth shall make you free."
[John 8:32, Bible, NKJV]

We would also add to the above that the Truth shall also make you a “nonresident alien” in your own country! Below are a few examples why:

"Adulterers and adulteresses! Do you now know that friendship [and "citizenship"] with the world [or the governments of the world] is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend ["citizen" or "taxpayer" or "resident" or "inhabitant"] of the world makes himself an enemy of God."
[James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]

"For our citizenship is in heaven [and not earth], from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"
[Philippians 3:20, Bible, NKJV]

"I am a stranger in the earth; Do not hide Your commandments [laws] from me."
[Psalm 119:19, Bible, NKJV]

"I have become a stranger to my brothers, and an alien to my mother's children; because zeal for Your [God's] house has eaten me up, and the reproaches of those who reproach You have fallen on me."
[Psalm 69:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

It is one of the greatest ironies of law and government that the only way you can be free and sovereign is to be an “foreign person” or what the Bible calls a “stranger” of one kind or another within the law, and to understand the law well enough to be able to describe exactly what kind of “foreign person” you are and why, so that the government must respect your sovereignty and thereby leave you and your property alone.

"The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings and of his intellect. They knew that only a
The very object of "justice" itself is to ensure that people are "left alone". The purpose of courts is to enforce the requirement to leave our fellow man alone and to only do to him/her what he/she expressly consents to and requests to be done:

PAULSEN, ETHICS (Thilly's translation), chap. 9.

"Justice, as a moral habit, is that tendency of the will and mode of conduct which refrains from disturbing the lives and interests of others, and, as far as possible, hinders such interference on the part of others. This virtue springs from the individual's respect for his fellows as ends in themselves and as his co equals. The different spheres of interests may be roughly classified as follows: body and life; the family, or the extended individual life; property, or the totality of the instruments of action; honor, or the ideal existence; and finally freedom, or the possibility of fashioning one's life as an end in itself. The law defends these different spheres, thus giving rise to a corresponding number of spheres of rights, each being protected by a prohibition. . . . To violate the rights, to interfere with the interests of others, is injustice. All injustice is ultimately directed against the life of the neighbor; it is an open avowal that the latter is not an end in itself, having the same value as the individual's own life. The general formula of the duty of justice may therefore be stated as follows: Do no wrong yourself, and permit no wrong to be done, so far as lies in your power; or, expressed positively: Respect and protect the right."

A person who is "sovereign" must be left alone as a matter of law. There are several examples of this important principle of sovereignty in operation in the Bible as well. For example:

Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, "There is a certain people scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; their laws are different from all other people's, and they do not keep the king's laws [are FOREIGN with respect to them and therefore sovereign]. Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it into the king's treasuries."

[Esther 3:8-9, Bible, NKJV]

In the Bible, when the Jews were being embarrassed and enslaved by surrounding heathen populations, they responded in the Book of Nehemiah by building a wall around their city and being self-contained and self-governing to the exclusion of the "aliens" and "foreigners" around them, who were not believers. This is their way of not only restoring self-government, but of also restoring God as their King and Sovereign, within what actually amounted to a "theocracy":

"The survivors [Christians] who are left from the captivity in the province are there in great distress and reproach. The wall [of separation between "church", which was the Jews, and "state", which was the heathens around them] of Jerusalem is also broken down, and its gates are burned with fire."

[Neh. 1:3; Bible, NKJV]

Then I said to them, "You see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lies waste, and its gates are burned with fire. Come and let us build the wall of [of separation in] Jerusalem that we may no longer be a reproach." And I told them of the hand of my God which had been good upon me, and also of the king's words that he had spoken to me. So they said, "Let us rise up and build." Then they set their hands to this good work.

But when Sanballat the Horonite, Tobiah the Ammonite official, and Geshem the Arab heard of it, they laughed at us and despised us, and said, "What is this thing that you are doing? Will you rebel against the king?"

So I answered them, and said to them, "The God of heaven Himself will prosper us; therefore we His servants will arise and build [the wall of separation between church and state]."

[Neh. 3:17-18, Bible, NKJV]

The "wall" of separation between "church", which was the Jews, and "state", which was the surrounding unbelievers and governments, they were talking about above was not only a physical wall, but also a legal one as well! The Jews wanted to be "separate", and therefore "sovereign" over themselves, their families, and their government and not be subject to the surrounding heathens and nonbelievers around them. They selected Heaven as their "domicile" and God's laws as the basis for their self-government, which was a theocracy, and therefore became "strangers" on the earth who were hated by their neighbors. The Lord, in wanting us to be sanctified and “separate” as His “bride”, is really insisting that we also be a “foreign person” or “stranger” with respect to our unbelieving neighbors and the people within the heathen state that has territorial jurisdiction where we physically live:

“Come out from among them [the unbelievers and government idolaters]
And be separate [“sovereign” and “foreign”], says the Lord.
Do not touch what is unclean [corrupted],
And I will receive you.
I will be a Father to you,
And you shall be my sons and daughters,
Says the Lord Almighty.”
[2 Corinthians 6:17-18, Bible, NKJV]

When we follow the above admonition of our Lord to become “sanctified” and therefore “separate”, then we will inevitably be persecuted, just as Jesus warned, when He said:

“If the world hates you, you know that it hated Me before it hated you. If you were of the world, the world would love its own. Yet because you are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hates you. Remember the word that I said to you, ‘A servant is not greater than his master.’ If they persecuted Me, they will also persecute you. If they kept My word, they will keep yours also. But all these things they will do to you for My name’s sake, because they do not know Him who sent Me. If I had not come and spoken to them, they would have no sin, but now they have no excuse for their sin._ He who hates me hates My father also. If I had not done among them the works which no one else did, they would have no sin; but now they have seen and also hated both Me and My Father. But this happened that the word might be fulfilled which is written in their law, ‘They hated Me without a cause.’”
[John 15:18-25, Bible]

The persecution will come precisely and mainly because we are sovereign and therefore refuse to be governed by any authority except God and His sovereign Law. Now do you understand why Christians, more than perhaps any other faith, have been persecuted and tortured by governments throughout history? The main reason for their relentless persecution is that they are a threat to government power because they demand autonomy and self-government and do not yield their sovereignty to any hostile (“foreign”) power or law other than God and His Holy law. This is the reason, for instance, why the Roman Emperor Nero burned Christians and their houses when he set fire to Rome and why he made them part of the barbaric gladiator spectacle: He positively hated anyone whose personal sovereignty would make his authority and power basically irrelevant and moot and subservient to a sovereign God. He didn’t like being answerable to anyone, and especially not to an omnipotent and omnipresent God. He viewed God as a competitor for the affections and the worship of the people. This is the very reason why we have "separation of church and state" today as part of our legal system: to prevent this kind of tyranny from repeating itself. This same gladiator spectacle is also with us today in a slightly different form. It’s called an "income tax trial" in the federal church called "district court". Below are just a few examples of the persecution suffered by Jews and Christians throughout history, drawn from the Bible and other sources, mainly because they attempted to fulfill God’s holy calling to be sanctified, separate, sovereign, a “foreign person”, and a “stranger” with respect to the laws, taxes, and citizenship of surrounding heathen people and governments:

1. The last several years of the Apostle John’s life were spent in exile on the Greek island of Patmos, where he was sent by the Roman government because he was a threat to the power and influence of Roman civil authorities. During his stay there, he wrote the book of Revelation, which was a cryptic, but direct assault upon government authority.
2. Every time Israel was judged in the Book of Judges, they came under “tribute” (taxation and therefore slavery) to a tyrannical king.
3. Abraham’s great struggles for liberty were against overreaching governments, Genesis 14, 20.
5. Egyptian Pharaohs enslaved God’s people, Ex. 1.
6. Joshua’s battle was against 31 kings in Canaan.
7. Israel struggled against the occupation of foreign governments in the Book of Judges
8. David struggled against foreign occupation, 2 Samuel 8, 10
9. Zechariah lost his life in 2 Chronicles for speaking against a king.
10. Isaiah was executed by Manasseh.
11. Daniel was oppressed by Officials who accused him of breaking a Persian statutory law.
12. Jesus was executed by a foreign power Jn. 18ff.
13. Jesus was a victim of Israel’s kangaroo court, the Sanhedrin.
14. The last 1/4 of the Book of Acts is about Paul’s defense against fraudulent accusations.
15. The last 6 years of Paul’s life was spent in and out prison defending himself against false accusations.
Taxation is the primary means of destroying the sovereignty of a person, family, church, city, state, or nation. Below is the reason why, from a popular bible dictionary:

"TRIBUTE. Tribute in the sense of an impost paid by one state to another, as a mark of subjugation, is a common feature of international relationships in the biblical world. The tributary could be either a hostile state or an ally. Like deportation, its purpose was to weaken a hostile state. Deportation aimed at depleting the manpower. The aim of tribute was probably twofold: to impoverish the subjugated state and at the same time to increase the conqueror’s own revenues and to acquire commodities in short supply in his own country. As an instrument of administration it was one of the simplest ever devised: the subjugated country could be made responsible for the payment of a yearly tribute. Its non-arrival would be taken as a sign of rebellion, and an expedition would then be sent to deal with the recalcitrant. This was probably the reason for the attack recorded in Gn. 14.

If you want to stay “sovereign”, then you had better get used to the following:

1. Supporting yourself and governing your own families and churches, to the exclusion of any external sovereignty. This will ensure that you never have to surrender any aspect of your sovereignty to procure needed help.
2. Learning and obeying God’s laws.
4. Being persecuted by the people and governments around you because you insist on being “foreign” and “different” from the rest of the “sheep” around you.

If you aren’t prepared to do the above and thereby literally “earn” the right to be free and “sovereign”, just as our founding fathers did, then you are literally wasting your time to read further in this book. Doing so will make you into nothing more than an informed coward. Earning liberty and sovereignty in this way is the essence of why America is called:

“The land of the free and the home of the brave.”

It takes courage to be brave enough to be different from all of your neighbors and all the other countries in the world, and to take complete and exclusive responsibility for yourself and your loved ones. Below is what happened to the founding fathers because they took this brave path in the founding of this country. Most did so based on the Christian principles mentioned above. At the point when they committed to the cause, they renounced their British citizenship and because “aliens” with respect to the British Government, just like you will have to do by becoming a “national” but not a “citizen” under federal law:

And, for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our Sacred honor

Have you ever wondered what happened to the fifty-six men who signed the Declaration of Independence? This is the price they paid:

Five signers were captured by the British as traitors, and tortured before they died. Twelve had their homes ransacked and burned. Two lost their sons in the revolutionary army, another had two sons captured. Nine of the fifty-six fought and died from wounds or hardships resulting from the Revolutionary War.

These men signed, and they pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor!

What kind of men were they? Twenty five were lawyers or jurists. Eleven were merchants. Nine were farmers or large plantation owners. One was a teacher, one a musician, one a printer. Two were manufacturers, one was a minister. These were men of means and education, yet they signed the Declaration of Independence, knowing full well that the penalty could be death if they were captured.

Almost one third were under forty years old, eighteen were in their thirties, and three were in their twenties. Only seven were over sixty. The youngest, Edward Rutledge of South Carolina, was twenty-six and a half, and the oldest, Benjamin Franklin, was seventy. Three of the signers lived to be over ninety. Charles Carroll died at the age of ninety-five. Ten died in their eighties.

The first signer to die was John Morton of Pennsylvania. At first his sympathies were with the British, but he changed his mind and voted for independence. By doing so, his friends, relatives, and neighbors turned against him. The ostracism hastened his death, and he lived only eight months after the signing. His last words were, “tell them that they will live to see the hour when they shall acknowledge it to have been the most glorious service that I ever rendered to my country.”

Carter Braxton of Virginia, a wealthy planter and trader, saw his ships swept from the seas by the British navy. He sold his home and properties to pay his debts, and died in rags.

Thomas McKean was so hounded by the British that he was forced to move his family almost constantly. He served in the Congress without pay, and his family was kept in hiding. His possessions were taken from him, and poverty was his reward.

The signers were religious men, all being Protestant except Charles Carroll, who was a Roman Catholic. Over half expressed their religious faith as being Episcopalian. Others were Congregational, Presbyterian, Quaker, and Baptist.

Vandals or soldiers or both, looted the properties of Ellery, Clymer, Hall, Walton, Gwinnett, Heyward, Rutledge, and Middleton.

Perhaps one of the most inspiring examples of "undaunted resolution" was at the Battle of Yorktown. Thomas Nelson, Jr. was returning from Philadelphia to become Governor of Virginia and joined General Washington just outside of Yorktown. He then noted that British General Cornwallis had taken over the Nelson home for his headquarters, but that the patriot's were directing their artillery fire all over the town except for the vicinity of his own beautiful home. Nelson asked why they were not firing in that direction, and the soldiers replied, "Out of respect to you, Sir." Nelson quietly urged General Washington to open fire, and stepping forward to the nearest cannon, aimed at his own house and fired. The other guns joined in, and the Nelson home was destroyed. Nelson died bankrupt, at age 51.

Caesar Rodney was another signer who paid with his life. He was suffering from facial cancer, but left his sickbed at midnight and rode all night by horseback through a severe storm and arrived just in time to cast the deciding vote for his delegation in favor of independence. His doctor told him the only treatment that could help him was in Europe. He refused to go at this time of his country's crisis and it cost him his life.

Francis Lewis's Long Island home was looted and gutted, his home and properties destroyed. His wife was thrown into a damp dark prison cell for two months without a bed. Health ruined, Mrs. Lewis soon died from the effects of the confinement. The Lewis's son would later die in British captivity, also.

"Honest John" Hart was driven from his wife's bedside as she lay dying, when British and Hessian troops invaded New Jersey just months after he signed the Declaration. Their thirteen children fled for their lives. His fields and his grist mill were laid to waste. All winter, and for more than a year, Hart lived in forests and caves, finally returning home to find his wife dead, his children vanished and his farm destroyed. Rebuilding proved too be too great a task. A few weeks later, by the spring of 1779, John Hart was dead from exhaustion and a broken heart.

Norris and Livingston suffered similar fates.

Richard Stockton, a New Jersey State Supreme Court Justice, had rushed back to his estate near Princeton after signing the Declaration of Independence to find that his wife and children were living like refugees with friends. They had been betrayed by a Tory sympathizer who also revealed Stockton's own whereabouts. British troops pulled him from his bed one night, beat him and threw him in jail where he almost starved to death. When he was finally released, he went home to find his estate had been looted, his possessions burned, and his horses stolen. Judge Stockton had been so badly treated in prison that his health was ruined and he died before the war's end, a broken man. His surviving family had to live the remainder of their lives off charity.

William Ellery of Rhode Island, who marveled that he had seen only "undaunted resolution" in the faces of his co-signers, also had his home burned.

When we are following the Lord’s calling to be sovereign, separate, “foreign”, and “alien” with respect to a corrupted state and our heathen neighbors, below is how we can describe ourselves from a legal perspective:

1. We are fiduciaries of God, who is a "nontaxpayer", and therefore we are "nontaxpayers". Our legal status takes on the character of the sovereign who we represent. Therefore, we become "foreign diplomats".

“For God is the King of all the earth; Sing praises with understanding.”
[Psalm 47:7, Bible, NKJV]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

2. The laws which apply to all civil litigation relating to us are from the domicile of the Heavenly sovereign we represent, which are the Holy Bible pursuant to:

2.1. God's Laws found in the following memorandum of law:

Laws of the Bible, Form #13.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

2.2. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b)

2.3. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 44.1

3. Our "domicile" is the Kingdom of God on Earth, and not within the jurisdiction of any man-made government. We can have a domicile on earth and yet not be in the jurisdiction of any government because the Bible says that God, and not man, owns the WHOLE earth and all of Creation. We are therefore "transient foreigners" and "stateless persons" in respect to every man-made government on earth. Click here for details.

"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."

4. We are "Nonresident aliens" and "nationals" but not "citizens" under federal law. The reason this must be so is that a "citizens of the United States" (who are all born in and resident within exclusive federal jurisdiction under 8 U.S.C. §1401) may not be classified as an instrumentality of a foreign state under 28 U.S.C. §1332(c) and (d) and 28 U.S.C. §1603(b). See our article entitled "Why you are a 'national', 'state national', and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen" for further details and evidence.

5. We are not and cannot be "residents" of any earthly jurisdiction without having a conflict of interest and violating the first four Commandments of the Ten Commandments found in Exodus 20. Heaven is our exclusive legal "domicile", and our "permanent place of abode", and the source of ALL of our permanent protection and security. We cannot and should not rely upon man's vain earthly laws as an idolatrous substitute for God's sovereign laws found in the Bible. Instead, only God's laws and the Common law, which is derived from God's law, are suitable protection for our God-given rights.

"For I was ashamed to request of the king an escort of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy on the road, because we had spoken to the king, saying 'The hand of our God is upon all those for g"

[1 Chronicles 8:19-22, Bible, NKJV]

6. We are "Foreign Ambassadors" and "Ministers of a Foreign State" called Heaven. The U.S. Supreme Court said in U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark below that "ministers of a foreign state" may not be statutory "citizens of the United States" under the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. Furthermore, the Fourteenth Amendment was intended exclusively for freed slaves and not sovereign Americans such as us.

"For our citizenship is in heaven (and not earth), from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"

[Philippians 3:20, Bible, NKJV]

"And Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court [legislating from the bench, in this case], in analyzing the first clause [of the Fourteenth Amendment], observed that "the phrase 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof' was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign states, born within the United States."

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

7. Our dwelling, which is a "temporary and not permanent place of abode", is a "Foreign Embassy". Notice we didn't say "residence", because only "residents" (aliens) can have a "residence" under 26 CFR §1.871-2(b).

9. We are a "stateless person" within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. §1332(a) immune from the jurisdiction of the federal courts, which are all Article IV, legislative, territorial courts. We are "stateless" because we do not maintain a domicile within the "state" defined in 28 U.S.C. §1332(d), which is a federal territory and excludes states of the Union.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

10. We are not allowed under God's law to conduct "commerce" or "intercourse" with "the Beast" by sending to it our money or receiving benefits we did not earn. Black's law dictionary defines "commerce" as "intercourse". The Bible defines "the Beast" as the "kings of the earth"/political rulers in Rev. 19:19:

"Commerce, ...Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the instrumentalities [governments] and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it is carried on..."

"Come, I will show you the judgment of the great harlot [the atheist totalitarian democracy] who sits on many waters [which are described as seas and multitudes of people in Rev. 17:15], with whom the kings of the earth [political rulers of today] committed fornication [intercourse], and the inhabitants of the earth were made drunk with the wine of her fornication [intercourse, usurious and harmful commerce]."

So he carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderness. And I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet beast which was full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. The woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet, and adorned with gold and precious stones and pearly, having in her hand a golden cup full of abominations and the filthiness of her fornication [intercourse]. And on her forehead a name was written: MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

I saw the woman, drunk with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. And when I saw her, I marveled with great amazement."

[Rev. 17:1-6, Bible, NKJV]

"And I saw the beast, the kings [heathen political rulers and the unbelieving democratic majorities who control them] of the earth [controlled by Satan], and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him [God] who sat on the horse and against His army."

[Revelation 19:19, Bible, NKJV]

The Bible calls this kind of commerce "fornication" and "adultery" and describes the fornicator called "Babylon the Great Harlot" basically as a democracy instead of a Republic in Revelation chapters 17 to 19. This is consistent with the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act found in 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2), which says that those who conduct "commerce" with the "United States" federal corporation within its legislative jurisdiction thereby surrender their sovereignty. Participation in our corrupted tax system also fits the classification of "commerce" within the meaning of this requirement. See the link below for details:

4.3.8 The purpose of income taxes: government protection of the assets of the wealthy

Since those Americans who have accumulated great wealth benefit more from government than those who have little, it is logical to assume that the wealthy should pay more for government than the poor as the former enjoy a greater benefit. It is the "no free lunch" principle:

"Mr. COX. It is not my intention to belittle wealth, but, on the other hand, I believe it should be the duty of all to uphold it where it is honestly procured. The idea that men like Carnegie, now the holder of more than $300,000,000 worth of the bonds of the United States steel trust, escape federal taxation is indeed absurd...and then, to realize that all of these enormous fortunes are escaping their just and proportionate share of taxation while the people themselves are staggering under our present system of indirect taxation, it is no wonder to me they cry for relief. If it be the determination of the so-called 'business interests' in this country to maintain an enormous navy at a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars annually, as well as an army, to protect and defend their various business interests, I insist that this part of the wealth of the country ought to stand its proportionate share of taxation, and I know of no way to compel them to do it as justly and equitably as an income tax. [Loud applause]" [44 Cong.Rec. 4424 (1909)]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

If you give it some thought, you’ll realize that it would be impossible to accumulate a lot of wealth if it were not for the institution of civil government. What if we lived in anarchy? How much would your stocks and bonds be worth? How much would your vacation home be worth that was hundreds of miles away from where you live? These things would be worth nothing. And what about your overseas investments in oil wells in Africa? If there were no United States navy, air force, or army to protect them, these investments would be worthless too.

So those corporations or businesses that have accumulated a level of wealth beyond what they can personally protect have received an extra benefit from civil government. In this case, the amount of benefit can be measured by the amount of property that has been accumulated. A tax on the income of this property could fairly accurately coincide with the degree of the benefit received. This was the original purpose of the income tax: to tax income from property of corporations and businesses so that the property paid for the support of the government is in proportion to the benefit of property received from the existence of civil government. Sounds reasonable to us:

“Taxation is the equivalent for the protection which the government affords to the persons and property of its citizens; and as all are alike protected, so all alike should bear the burden, in proportion to the interests secured.

There is also an element of charity inherent in an income tax system that seeks to make property pay for the support of government. The charity involves property that is not productive and not producing income. This would be the family farm that was inherited by beneficiaries who were unable to work it for whatever reason. The farm would pay no income tax as it earned no income, thus allowing the new owners to keep the farm and not lose it to the tax man as they might under a direct tax.

Because the Constitution has always authorized an indirect, unapportioned income tax on corporations involved in foreign and interstate trade under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3, the means has always been available for the federal government to institute income taxes, with or without the Sixteenth Amendment. If you read the Congressional debates on the Sixteenth Amendment in 1909, you will find that the Sixteenth Amendment was originally introduced by Congress to make the “rich” pay their fair share of the cost of supporting the government. In most cases, the “rich” referred to were the large corporations and trusts that had formed as a result of the gigantic industrial monopolies in the oil, steel, and railroad businesses. The Democrats appealed to people’s jealousies by proposing to institute an income tax on the very rich owners of these trusts and corporations through a direct, unapportioned tax on property while the Republicans proposed higher indirect excise taxes in the Corporate Tax Act of 1909 to appease the Democrats. That Corporate Tax Act of 1909 wasn’t enough to appease the Democrats and the American people so the Sixteenth Amendment was proposed as a solution. Several versions of the Sixteenth Amendment were proposed during the Congressional debates in 1909, including a direct, unapportioned income tax. However, the version that included direct, unapportioned taxes was soundly defeated and the version we have today which survived, according to several rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court, continues to be an indirect excise tax on federal corporations only. The Sixteenth Amendment, as a matter of fact, conferred no new powers of taxation, according to the Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916). See the following for additional details on the nature of the income tax as an indirect excise tax:

4.3.9  Why all man-made law is religious in nature

A fascinating book on the subject of Biblical Law entitled The Institutes of Biblical Law by Rousas John Rushdoony irrefutably establishes that all law is religious, and that it represents a covenant between man and God which is characterized as divine revelation. When we consider that government is founded exclusively on law, government itself then becomes a religion to implement or execute or enforce divine revelation. When government abuses the authority delegated by God through God’s law, then it also becomes a false religious cult. This exposition will set the stage for section 0 later, which establishes that our present day government is nothing but a cult surrounding the false religion it created with its own unjust law because this law has become a vain substitute and an affront to God’s Law found in the Bible. Here are some very insightful quotes from pp. 4-5 of that wonderful book:

Law is in every culture religious in origin. Because law governs man and society, because it establishes and declares the meaning of justice and righteousness, law is inescapably religious, in that it establishes in practical fashion the ultimate concerns of a culture. Accordingly, a fundamental and necessary premise in any and every study of law must be, first, a recognition of this religious nature of law.

Second, it must be recognized that in any culture the source of law is the god of that society. If law has its source in man’s reason, then reason is the god of that society. If the source is an oligarchy, or in a court, senate, or ruler, then that source is the god of that system. Thus, in Greek culture law was essentially a religiously humanistic concept.

In contrast to every law derived from revelation, nomos for the Greeks originated in the mind (nous). So the genuine nomos is no mere obligatory law, but something in which an entity valid in itself is discovered and appropriated...It is “the order which exists (from time immemorial), is valid and is put into operation.”

Because for the Greeks mind was one being with the ultimate order of things, man’s mind was thus able to discover ultimate law (nomos) out of its own resources, by penetrating through the maze of accident and matter to the fundamental ideas of being. As a result, Greek culture became both humanistic, because man’s mind was one with ultimacy, and also neoplatonic, ascetic, and hostile to the world of matter, because mind, to be truly itself, had to separate itself from non-mind.

Modern humanism, the religion of the state, locates law in the state and thus makes the state, or the people as they find expression in the state, the god of the system. As Mao Tse-Tung has said, “Our God is none other than the masses of the Chinese people.” In Western culture, law has steadily moved away from God to the people (or the state) as its source, although the historic power and vitality of the West has been in Biblical faith and law.

Third, in any society, any change of law is an explicit or implicit change of religion. Nothing more clearly reveals, in fact, the religious change in a society than a legal revolution. When the legal foundations shift from Biblical law to humanism, it means that the society now draws its vitality and power from humanism, not from Christian theism.

Fourth, no disestablishment of religion as such is possible in any society. A church can be disestablished, and a particular religion can be supplanted by another, but the change is simply to another religion. Since the foundations of law are inescapably religious, no society exists without a religious foundation or without a law-system which confides the morality of its religion.

Fifth, there can be no tolerance in a law-system for another religion. Toleration is a device used to introduce a new law-system as a prelude to a new intolerance. Legal positivism, a humanistic faith, has been savage in its hostility to the Biblical law-system and has claimed to be an “open” system. But Cohen, by no means a Christian, has aptly described the logical positivists as “nihilists” and their faith as “nihilistic absolutism.”

Every law-system must maintain its existence by hostility to every other law-system and to alien religious foundations or else it commits suicide.

In analyzing now the nature of Biblical law, it is important to note first that, for the Bible, law is revelation. The Hebrew word for law is torah which means instruction, authoritative direction. The Biblical concept of law is broader than the legal codes of the Mosaic formulation. It applies to the divine word and instruction in its totality:

...the earlier prophets also use torah for the divine word proclaimed through them (Is. viii. 16, cf. also v. 20; Isa. xxx. 9 f.; perhaps also Isa. i. 10). Besides this, certain passages in the earlier prophets use the word torah also for the commandment of Yahweh which was written down: thus Hos. viii. 12. Moreover there are clearly examples not only of ritual matters, but also of ethics.

Hence it follows that at any rate in this period torah had the meaning of a divine instruction, whether it had been written down long ago as a law and was preserved and pronounced by a priest, or whether the priest was delivering it at that time (Lam. ii. 9; Ezek. vii. 26; Mal. ii. 4 f.), or the prophet is commissioned by God to pronounce it for a definite situation (so perhaps Isa. xxx. 9).

Thus what is objectively essential in torah is not the form but the divine authority.\(^8\)

The law is the revelation of God and His righteousness. There is no ground in Scripture for despising the law. Neither can the law be relegated to the Old Testament and grace to the New:

The time-honored distinction between the OT as a book of law and the NT as a book of divine grace is without grounds or justification. Divine grace and mercy are the presupposition of law in the OT; and the grace and love of God displayed in the NT events issue in the legal obligations of the New Covenant. Furthermore, the OT contains evidence of a long history of legal developments which must be assessed before the place of law is adequately understood. Paul's polemics against the law in Galatians and Romans are directed against an understanding of law which is by no means characteristic of the OT as a whole.\(^9\)

There is no contradiction between law and grace. The question in James's Epistle is faith and works, not faith and law.\(^10\) Judaism had made law the mediator between God and man, and between God and the world. It was this view of law, not the law itself, which Jesus attacked. As Himself the Mediator, Jesus rejected the law as mediator in order to re-establish the law in its God-appointed role as law, the way of holiness. He established the law by dispensing forgiveness as the law-giver in full support of the law as the convicting word which makes men sinners.\(^11\) The law was rejected only as mediator and as the source of justification.\(^12\) Jesus fully recognized the law, and obeyed the law. It was only the absurd interpretations of the law He rejected. Moreover,

We are not entitled to gather from the teaching of Jesus in the Gospels that He made any formal distinction between the Law of Moses and the Law of God. His mission being not to destroy but to fulfil the Law and the Prophets (Mt. 5:17), so far from saying anything in disparagement of the Law of Moses or from encouraging His disciples to assume an attitude of independence with regard to it, He expressly recognized the authority of the Law of Moses as such, and of the Pharisees as its official interpreters. (Mt. 23:1-3).\(^13\)

With the completion of Christ's work, the role of the Pharisees as interpreters ended, but not the authority of the Law. In the New Testament era, only apostolically received revelation was ground for any alteration in the law. The authority of the law remained unchanged.

St. Peter, e.g. required a special revelation before he would enter the house of the uncircumcised Cornelius and admit the first Gentile convert into the Church by baptism (acts 10:1-48) --a step which did not fail to arouse opposition on the part of those who were of the circumcision" (cf. 11:1-18).\(^14\)

The second characteristic of Biblical law is that it is a treaty or covenant. Kline has shown that the form of the giving of the law, the language of the text, the historical prologue, the requirement of imprecations and benedictions, and much more, all point to the fact that the law is a treaty established by God with His people. Indeed, "the revelation committed to the two tables was rather a suzerainty treaty or covenant than a legal code."\(^15\) The full covenant summary, the Ten Commandments, was inscribed on each of the two tables of stone, one table or copy of the treaty for each party in the treaty, God and Israel.\(^16\)

The two stone tables are not, therefore, to be likened to a stele containing one of the half-dozen or so known legal codes earlier than or roughly contemporary with Moses as though God had engraved on these tables a corpus of law. The revelation they contain is nothing less than an epitome of the covenant granted by Yahweh, the sovereign Lord of heaven and earth, to his elect and redeemed servant, Israel.

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Not law, but covenant. That must be affirmed when we are seeking a category comprehensive enough to do justice to this revelation in its totality. At the same time, the prominence of the stipulations, reflect in the fact that "the ten words" are the element used as pars pro toto, signifies the centrality of law in this type of covenant. There is probably no clearer direction afforded the biblical theologian for defining with biblical emphasis the type of covenant God adopted to formalize his relationship to his people than that given in the covenant he gave Israel to perform, even "the ten commandments."

Such a covenant is a declaration of God's lordship, consecrating a people to himself in a sovereignly dictated order of life.57

This latter phrase needs re-emphasis: the covenant is "a sovereignly dictated order of life." God as the sovereign Lord and Creator gives His law to man as an act of sovereign grace. It is an act of election, of selecting his own creature to be the object of His own grace.58

The God to whom the earth belongs will have Israel for His own property, Ex. xix. 5. It is only on the ground of the gracious election and guidance of God that the divine commands to the people are given, and therefore the Decalogue, Ex. xx. 2, places at its forefront the fact of election.59

In the law, the total life of man is ordered: "there is no primary distinction between the inner and the outer life; the holy calling of the people must be realized in both."60

The third characteristic of the Biblical law or covenant is that it constitutes a plan for dominion under God. God called Adam to exercise dominion in terms of God's revelation. God's law (Gen. 1:26 ff.; 2:15-17). This same calling, after the fall, was required of the godly line, and in Noah it was formally renewed (Gen. 9:1-17). It was again renewed with Abraham, with Jacob, with Israel in the person of Moses, with Joshua, David, Solomon (whose Proverbs echo the law), with Hezekiah and Josiah, and finally with Jesus Christ. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper is the renewal of the covenant: "this is my blood of the new testament" (or covenant), so that the sacrament itself re-establishes the law, this time with a new elect group (Matt. 26:28; Mark 14:24; Luke 22:20; 1 Cor. 11:25). The people of the law are now the people of Christ, the believers redeemed by His atoning blood and called by His sovereign election. Kline, in analyzing Hebrews 9:16, 17, in relation to the covenant administration, observes:

...the picture suggested would be that of Christ's children (cf. 2:13) inheriting his universal dominion as their eternal portion (note 9:15b; cf. also 1:14; 2:5 ff.; 6:17-11:7 ff.). And such is the wonder of the messianic Mediator-Testator that the royal inheritance of his sons, which becomes of force only through his death, is nevertheless one of coredgency with the living Testator! For (to follow the typographical direction provided by Heb. 9:16,17 according to the present interpretation) Jesus is both dying Moses and succeeding Joshua. Not merely after a figure but in truth a royal Mediator redivivus, he secures the divine dynasty by succeeding himself in resurrection power and ascension glory.60

The purpose of God in requiring Adam to exercise dominion over the earth remains His continuing covenant word: man, created in God's image and commanded to subdue the earth and exercise dominion over it in God's name, is recalled to this task and privilege by his redemption and regeneration.

The law is therefore the law for Christian man and Christian society. Nothing is more deadly or more derelict than the notion that the Christian is at liberty with respect to the kind of law he can have. Calvin whose classical humanism gained ascendency at this point, said of the laws of states, of civil governments:

I will briefly remark, however, by the way, what laws it (the state) may piously use before God, and be rightly governed by among men. And even this I would have preferred passing over in silence, if I did not know that it is a point on which many persons run into dangerous errors. For some deny that a state is well constituted, which neglects the polity of Moses, and is governed by the common laws of nations. The dangerous and seditious nature of this opinion I leave to the examination of others; it will be sufficient for me to have evinced it to be false and foolish.61

57 Ibid., p. 17.
59 Ibid., p. 182.
60 Kline, Treaty of the Great King, p. 41.
Such ideas, common in Calvinist and Lutheran circles, and in virtually all churches, are still heretical nonsense. Calvin favored “the common law of nations.” But the common law of nations in his day was Biblical law, although extensively denatured by Roman law. And this “common law of nations” was increasingly evidencing a new religion, humanism. Calvin wanted the establishment of the Christian religion; he could not have it, nor could it last long in Geneva, without Biblical law.

Two Reformed scholars, in writing of the state, declare, “It is to be God’s servant, for our welfare. It must exercise justice, and it has the power of the sword.” Yet these men follow Calvin in rejecting Biblical law for “the common law of nations.” But can the state be God’s servant and by-pass God’s law? And if the state “must exercise justice,” how is justice defined, by the nations, or by God? There are as many ideas of justice as there are religions.

The question then is, what law is for the state? Shall it be positive law, after calling for “justice” in the state, declare, “A static legislation valid for all times is an impossibility.” Indeed! Then what about the commandment, Biblical legislation, if you please. “Thou shalt not kill,” and “Thou shalt not steal”? Are they not intended to valid for all time and in every civil order? By abandoning Biblical law, these Protestant theologians end up in moral and legal relativism.

Roman Catholic scholars offer natural law. The origins of this concept are in Roman law and religion. For the Bible, there is no law in nature, because nature is fallen and cannot be normative. Moreover the source of law is not nature but God. There is no law in nature but a law over nature, God’s law.105

Neither positive law [man’s law] nor natural law can reflect more than the sin and apostasy of man: revealed law [e.g. ONLY THE BIBLE] is the need and privilege of Christian society. It is the only means whereby man can fulfill his creation mandate of exercising dominion under God. Apart from revealed law [the BIBLE], man cannot claim to be under God but only in rebellion against God.

To summarize the findings of this section:

1. The purpose of law is to describe and codify the morality of a culture. Since only religion can define morality, then all law is religious in origin.

2. In any culture, the source of law becomes the god of that society. If law is based on Biblical law, then the God of that society is the true God. If it becomes the judges or the rulers, who are at war with God, then these rulers become the god of that society.

3. In any society, any change of law is an explicit or implicit change of religion.

4. The disestablishment of religion in any society is an impossibility, because all civilizations are based on law and law is religious in nature.

5. There can be no tolerance in a law system for another religion. All religious systems eventually seek to destroy their competition for the sake of self-preservation. Consequently, governments tend eventually to try to control or eliminate religions in order to preserve and expand their power.

6. The laws of our society must derive from Biblical law. Any other result leads to “humanism”, apostasy, and mutiny against God, who is our only King and our Lawgiver.

7. Humanism is the worship of the “state”, which is simply a collection of people under a democratic form of government. By “worship”, we mean obedience to the dictates and mandates of the collective majority. The United States is NOT a democracy, it is a Republic based on individual rights and sovereignty, NOT collective sovereignty.

8. The consequence of humanism is moral relativism and disobedience to God’s laws, which is sin and apostasy and leads to separation from God.

4.3.10 The Unlimited Liability Universe

103 Ibid., p. 73.

104 Ibid., p. 75.

In the previous section, we showed how the shift in our culture away from Biblical law has taken us down the path to “humanism”, which turns the “state” or government into a religion and a law system that eventually focuses itself on eradicating all other competing religions and law-systems in the society in order to ensure its own survival. Humanism is the worship of the “state” and it is the essence of socialism. Recall that a “state” is simply a collection of people within a political jurisdiction.

“The hand of the diligent will rule.
But the lazy [or irresponsible] man will be put to forced labor.”
[Prov. 12:24, Bible, NKJV]

We will build on that theme in this section to show how the inexorable growth of the power and influence of the state and of humanism is perpetrated in our culture. Much of the content of this section derives once again from the excellent book Biblical Institutes of Law by Rousas Rushdoony, 1972, pp. 664-669. The premise of this section is that the growth of humanism, socialism, and collectivism requires the government to exploit the weaknesses of the people. Thomas Jefferson warned us about this tendency of government, when he said:

“In every government on earth is some trace of human weakness, some germ of corruption and degeneracy, which cunning will discover, and wickedness insensibly open, cultivate and improve.”
[Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XIV, 1782. ME 2:207]

The chief weakness that covetous governments have learned to exploit in order to expand their power is to appeal to people’s sinful need to avoid responsibility of all kinds and to thereby evade the consequence of their sinful, lazy, apathetic, and ignorant actions. People by nature are lazy and will always take the path of least resistance. They will often pay any price to evade responsibility for themselves and their actions, including giving up all their rights. In legal terms, the government therefore expands its power by:

1. Writing laws and creating programs that insulate people from responsibility for their actions and themselves.
2. Calling those who receive the benefit of these laws “privileged”
3. Instituting a tax on the “privileged” activities.
4. Persecuting those who speak out about the above types of exploitation.

In effect, the government “wolf” takes over the public fool (school) system, regulates the media, and coerces apathetic and cowardly employers everywhere into helping them manufacture “sheep” that it may devour and enslave.

“Most assuredly, I say to you, he who does not enter the sheepfold by the door, but climbs up some other way [using the Federal Reserve, the IRS, the media, and taking over the public schools], the same is a thief and a robber.”
[Jesus in John 10:1, Bible, NKJV]

“If you make yourselves sheep, the wolves will eat you.”
[Benjamin Franklin]

“A democracy is a sheep and two wolves deciding on what to have for lunch. Freedom is a well armed sheep contesting the results of the decision.”
[Benjamin Franklin]

[Tiberius Caesar]
These sheep are “preprogrammed” to be irresponsible, dependent on government, dysfunctional, ignorant, apathetic, and lazy. They are taught to evade personal responsibility for every aspect of their behavior. In short, their sin and violation of God’s laws have made them unable to govern or support themselves, and so they have given government the moral authority to step in as their “Parens Patriae”, or government parent, to take over their lives and become an agent of plunder to support their sinful and irresponsible lifestyle. These sheep are trained and conditioned by our government “servants”, like Pavlov’s dogs, to succumb to the enticements of an evil government (called a “Beast” in the book of Revelation in the Bible) by participating in and partaking of the benefits of socialism and in so doing, they surrender their sovereignty to the totalitarian democratic “collective”.

“A violent man entices his neighbor, And leads him in a way that is not good He winks his eye to devise perverse things; He purses [covers] his lips [by not telling the whole truth] and brings about evil.”
[Prov. 16:29-30, Bible, NKJV]

The brainwashed sheep are unwittingly recruited to join a mob full of treacherous socialists who want to plunder the rich by abusing their voting rights and their power sitting as a jurist. If a member of the flock of sheep balks at joining the socialist mob, they are censured and punished usually financially for being politically incorrect. They are denied a job or a socialist benefit and/or credit if they refuse to take the mark of the Beast, the Socialist Security Number, or refuse to fill out a W-4 to begin withholding taxes. Those who participate in this brand of socialism all share “one purse”, and make the government effectively into one big social insurance company to insulate themselves from responsibility for their own laziness, apathy, greed, and sin. The role of government in a republic then transitions from that of only protecting the people to that of punishing and plundering success while rewarding and encouraging failure. Here is how the Bible says we should view this, and note that it says this is “evil” and that we should not participate in it:

Avoid Bad Company

“My son, if sinners [socialists, in this case] entice you, Do not consent If they say, “Come with us, Let us lie in wait to shed blood; Let us lurk secretly for the innocent without cause; Let us swallow them alive like Sheol, And whole, like those who go down to the Pit: We shall fill our houses with spoil [plunder]; Cast in your lot among us, Let us all have one purse”– My son, do not walk in the way with them, Keep your foot from their path; For their feet run to evil, And they make haste to shed blood. Surely, in vain the net is spread In the sight of any bird; But they lie in wait for their own blood. They lurk secretly for their own lives. So are the ways of everyone who is greedy for gain; It takes away the life of its owners.”
[Proverbs 1:10-19, Bible, NKJV]

God, however, wants us to follow His sacred law, and the result of doing so makes government unnecessary, because we become self-governing and self-supporting and do not make government into a false god or become idolaters in the process:

“He [God] brings the princes to nothing, He makes the judges of the earth useless.”
[Isaiah 40:23, Bible, NKJV]

“How long will you slumber, O sluggard? When will you rise from your sleep? A little sleep, a little slumber, A little folding of the hands to sleep– So shall your poverty come on you like a prowler, And your need like an armed man [from the government/IRS]. ”
[Prov. 6:9-11, Bible, NKJV]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

"The hand of the diligent will rule.
But the lazy man will be put to forced labor [working for the government through income taxes]."
[Prov. 12:24, Bible, NKJV]

After government has exploited our own sinfulness in this way so as to make us ripe for their political control, domination, and oppression, a huge monolithic government bureaucracy steps in as our “sugar daddy” or “Parens Patriae” and not only offers but demands to help us run our marriages, our financial affairs, our businesses, and forces us to pay taxes to support the infrastructure needed to do this. In many cases, they force us to pay for services and benefits that we don’t want! What business within a truly free economy could force you to buy or use their product other than a monopoly, and aren’t monopolies illegal under the Sherman Antitrust Act? Tyrants in government thereby appear to the ignorant and complacent masses of sheep as God’s avengers to “harvest” (STEAL) our property, our liberty, our labor, and everything else they covet and lust after, and we not only willingly accept their domination, but we beg for it by demanding ever more increasing amounts of “free” government services! The resulting evasion of responsibility and acquiescence to government usury by the sheep manifests itself in many forms, a few of which we have summarized below:

The ultimate result of the universal and complete adoption of the above concepts is as follows, which is a parody of the content of the Bible, Psalm 23:

DEMOCRAT’S 23rd PSALM

The government is my Shepherd, therefore I shall not work.
It alloweth me to lie down on a good job.
It leadeath me beside still factories;
it destroyeth my initiative,
It leadeath me in the path of a parasite for politic’s sake.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Yea, though I walk through the valley of laziness and deficit spending, I will fear no evil, for the government is with me.

It prepareth an economic Utopia for me, by borrowing from future generations. It filleth my head with false security; my inefficiency runneth over.

Surely the government should take care of me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in a welfare state forever and ever.

In the legal field, the process of evading responsibility is called “avoiding liability”. Amazingly, the government openly admits that it is one big insurance company which exists to insulate people from all types of liability! Here is what one Congressman said during the Congressional debates on the Sixteenth Amendment, which is the income tax amendment:

“M. Thiers, the great French statesman, says, ‘a tax paid by a citizen to his government is like a premium paid by the insured to the insurance company, and should be in proportion to the amount of property insured in one case and the other to the amount of property protected or defended [or managed] by the government.’”

[44 Cong.Rec. 4959 (1909)]

The natural consequence of the logic of the quote above is that the less responsibility and liability we are willing to assume for ourselves, the greater will be our tax rate and the corresponding slavery to government that goes with it. If you trace the percentage of the average American family’s income which goes to pay state and federal taxes over the last 100 years, we can see in numerical terms the shift away from personal responsibility and the rise of the “collective” as the sovereign in our society. This information reveals how we have abandoned the original Constitutional Republican model based on faith and personal responsibility, and gradually drifted to a socialist/humanistic economy like most of the rest of the nations in the world. God warned us that this would happen but we simply refuse to heed Him because of the hedonistic stupor our government has put us into by bribing us with “free” government benefits and programs subsidized with STOLEN loot through illegally enforcing the income tax code:

“And they rejected His statutes and His covenant that He had made with their fathers, and His testimonies [His Law/Bible] which He had testified against them; they followed [government] idols, became idolaters, and went after the nations who were all around them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them that they should not do like them. So they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, made for themselves a molded image and two calves, made a wooden image and worshiped all the host of heaven, and served Baal. And they caused their sons and daughters to pass through the fire, practiced witchcraft and soothsaying, and sold themselves [through usurious taxes] to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke Him to anger. Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them from His sight; there was none left but the tribe of Judah alone.”

[2 Kings 17:15-18, Bible, NKJV]

One congressman has actually quantified this shift from personal to collective responsibility in a wonderful article entitled “The Coming Crisis: How Government Dependency Threatens America’s Freedom” available on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Freedom/Articles/ComingCrisis-01508.pdf

Governments therefore know that people don’t want to have to accept responsibility or liability and they use this sinful human tendency to expand their power and revenues by transferring responsibility to themselves. The transfer of responsibility from us as individuals to the government cannot occur, however, without a transfer of sovereignty with it. Sovereignty and dependency are mutually exclusive. The buck has to stop somewhere, and when we won’t take responsibility for ourselves, we have to surrender sovereignty to the collective democracy, and this eventually leads to socialism and humanism. This abdication of our responsibilities also amounts to a violation of God’s laws. Christians have a MUCH higher calling with their God than simply to depend on a bloated and evil socialist government to subsidize their idleness and hedonism with funds that were stolen from their brother through illegal extortion and constructive fraud:

“You shall not follow a crowd to do evil; nor shall you testify in a dispute so as to turn aside after many to pervert justice.”

[Exodus 23:2, Bible, NKJV]
“Now about brotherly love we do not need to write to you, for you yourselves have been taught by God to love each other. And in fact, you do love all the brothers throughout Macedonia. Yet we urge you, brothers, to do so more and more.

“Make it your ambition to lead a quiet life, to mind your own business and to work with your hands, just as we told you, so that your daily life may win the respect of outsiders and so that you will not be dependent on anybody.”
[1 Thess. 4:9-12, Bible, NIV]

There is nothing new to this government approach of encouraging irresponsibility and indemnifying a person from liability for their own sinful actions. Government is simply imitating God’s approach. Throughout the Bible, God warns us that we will be held personally liable for all of our choices and actions. That liability will occur on judgment day:

“And as it is appointed for men to die once, but after this the judgment, so Christ was offered once to bear the sins of many. To those who eagerly wait for Him He will appear a second time, apart from sin, for salvation. For the law, having a shadow of the good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with these same sacrifices, which they offer continually year by year, make those who approach perfect [in the sight of God].”
[Hebrews 9:27-28, 10:1, Bible, NKJV]

Here you can see that God is talking about final judgment for our actions and choices, and He is implying that unless we are perfect in His eyes at that judgment, then we are condemned. However, God is also promising indemnification from personal liability, which here is called “salvation” to those who “eagerly wait for Him”. Faith in and obedience to Christ is basically being offered here as an insurance policy against the final judgment and wrath of God. That obedience manifests itself in following the two great commandments that Christ revealed to us in Mark 12:28-33:

Then one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, perceiving that He had answered them well, asked Him, "Which is the first commandment of all?"

Jesus answered him, "The first of all the commandments is: “Hear, O Israel, the LORD our God, the LORD is one. And you shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind, and with all your strength. This is the first commandment. And the second, like it, is this: “You shall love your neighbor as yourself. There is no other commandment greater than these.”

So the scribe said to Him, "Well said, Teacher. You have spoken the truth, for there is one God, and there is no other but He. And to love Him with all the heart, with all the understanding, with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love one’s neighbor as oneself, is more than all the whole burnt offerings and sacrifices."

[Mark 12:28-33, Bible, NKJV]

“For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: ‘You shall love your neighbor as yourself.’”
[Gal 5:14, Bible, NKJV]

The important thing to remember is that there is a BIG difference between man’s and God’s approach toward encouraging people to avoid liability. Faith produces salvation and indemnification because it makes us appear “perfect” in God’s eyes, but it does not relieve us from personal liability for obeying God’s laws.

Faith Without Works Is Dead

What does it profit, my brethren, if someone says he has faith but does not have works? Can faith save him? If a brother or sister is naked and destitute of daily food, and one of you says to them, “Depart in peace, be warmed and filled,” but you do not give them the things which are needed for the body, what does it profit? Thus also faith by itself, if it does not have works, is dead.

But someone will say, “You have faith, and I have works.” Show me your faith without your works, and I will show you my faith by my works. You believe that there is one God. You do well. Even the demons believe—and tremble! But do you want to know, O foolish man, that faith without works is dead? Was not Abraham our father justified by works when he offered Isaac his son on the altar? Do you see that faith was working together with his works, and by works faith was made perfect? And the Scripture was fulfilled which says, "Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness." And he was called the friend of God.

You see then that a man is justified by works, and not by faith only.

Likewise, was not Rahab the harlot also justified by works when she received the messengers and sent them out another way?
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.

[James 2:14-26, Bible, NKJV]

Faith in God does not allow us to avoid the final judgment, but our works provide evidence of our faith and obedience at that judgment. The final judgment is like a court trial. With no admissible evidence of our faith at this trial, we will be convicted of our sin and suffer God’s wrath.

“Then I saw a great throne and Him who sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away. And there was found no place for them.

“And I saw the dead, small and great, standing before God, and books were opened. And another book was opened, which is the Book of Life. And the dead were judged according to their works, by the things which were written in the books.

“The sea gave up the dead who were in it, and Death and Hades delivered up the dead who were in them. And they were judged, each one according to his works.

“Then Death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.

“And anyone not found written in the Book of Life was cast into the lake of fire.”

[Revelation 20:11-15, Bible, NKJV]

The purpose of God’s law is to teach us how to love God and our neighbor (see the Ten Commandments in Exodus 20). The Bible says that obedience to God’s laws even after we profess faith is still mandatory:

“Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in heaven.”

[Matt. 7:21, Bible, NKJV]

“But whoever keeps His word, truly the love of God is perfected in him. By this we know that we are in Him.”

[1 John 2:5, Bible, NKJV]

“For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments. And His commandments are not burdensome.”

[1 John 5:3, Bible, NKJV]

“Therefore, to him who knows to do good and does not Do it, to him it is sin.”

[James 4:17, Bible, NKJV]

“Blessed are those who do His commandments, that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city.”

[Rev. 22:14; Bible, NKJV]

“But he who looks into the perfect law of liberty and continues in it, and is not a forgetful hearer but a DOER of the work, this one will be blessed in what he does.”

[James 1:25, Bible, NKJV]

The government, on the other hand, tells us that we can be criminals under God’s law and avoid liability and responsibility for our sins on earth as long as we join the “collective” and worship the politicians and the government as our false god by surrendering control over our earnings from labor to that god in the form of income taxes. Basically, we have to serve the government with our labor, and the Bible calls that kind of servitude “worship”. Below is an excerpt from the Ten Commandments demonstrating this:

“You shall have no other gods before Me.

“You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; you shall not bow down to them nor serve [worship] them. For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

That false government promise of no liability for sin was the same promise that Satan made when he tempted the first sinner, Eve. Satan promised Eve that if she sinned by eating the forbidden fruit of the tree, then she would not suffer the consequence of death promised by God. Remember that the Bible says “The wages of sin is death” (Romans 6:23) and Satan lied when he promised Eve that she would not die. In short, there would be no liability for her violation of God’s law and instead, she would be a “god” herself:

Then the serpent said to the woman, “You will not surely die [no liability]. For God knows that in the day you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God, knowing good and evil.”

In a “collective” form of government such as a democracy, the “collective” is the false god to be worshipped. That collective is called the “state” in legal terms. When we join that collective, we become like a god, and share in the unjust authority and power that it has. That unjust authority expresses itself through the abuse of voting rights and jury service in a way that actually injures our neighbor and offends God because it attempts to indemnify us from the consequences and liability for our sin and irresponsibility.

A limited liability company is one in which the liability of each shareholder is limited to the amount of his shares or stocks, or to a sum fixed by guarantee called “limited liability guarantee”. The purpose of limited liability laws is to limit responsibility. Although the ostensible purpose is to protect the shareholders, the practical effect is to limit their responsibility and therefore encourage recklessness in investment. A limited liability economy is socialistic. By seeking to protect people, a limited liability economy merely transfers responsibility away from the people to the state, where “central government planning” supposedly obviates personal responsibility. Limited liability encourages people to take chances with limited risks, and to sin economically without paying the price. Limited liability laws rest on the fallacy that payment for economic sins need not be made. In actuality, payment is simply transferred to others. Limited liability laws were unpopular in earlier, Christian eras but have flourished in the Darwinian world. They rest on important religious presuppositions.

In a statement central to his account, C.S. Lewis described his preference, prior to his conversion to Christianity, for a materialistic, atheistic universe. The advantages of such a world are the very limited demands it makes on a man.

To such a craven and materialist’s universe has the enormous attraction that it offered you limited liabilities. No strictly infinite disaster could overtake you in it. Death ended all. And if ever finite disasters proved greater than one wished to bear, suicide would always be possible. The horror of the Christian universe was that it had no door marked Exit...But, of course, what mattered most of all was my deep-seated hatred of authority, my monstrous individualism, my lawlessness. No word in my vocabulary expressed deeper hatred than the word Interference. But Christianity placed at the center what then seemed to me a transcendental Interferer. If this picture were true then no sort of “treaty with reality” could ever be possible. There was no region even in the innermost depth of one’s soul (nay, there least of all) which one could surround with a barbed wire fence and guard with a notice of No Admittance. And that was what I wanted; some area, however small, of which I could say to all other beings, “This is my business and mine only.”

This is an excellent summation of the matter. The atheist wants a limited liability universe, and he seeks to create a limited liability political and economic order. The more socialistic he becomes, the more he demands a maximum advantage and a limited liability from his social order, an impossibility.

In reality, living with the fact that the universe and our world carry always unlimited liabilities is the best way to assure security and advantage. To live with reality, and to seek progress within its framework, is man’s best security.

The curses and the blessings of the law stress man’s unlimited liability to both curses and blessings as a result of disobedience or obedience to the law. In Deuteronomy 28:2 and 15, we are told that the curses and blessings come upon us and “overtake” us. Man cannot step outside of the world of God’s consequence. At every moment and at every point man is overtaken, surrounded, and totally possessed by the unlimited liability of God’s universe.

Man seeks to escape this unlimited liability either through a denial of the true God, or by a pseudo-acceptance which denies the meaning of God. In atheism, the attitude of man is well summarized by William Ernest Henley's poem, "Invictus." Henley boasted of his "unconquerable soul" and declared,

\begin{quote}
I am the master of my fate; \\
I am the captain of my soul
\end{quote}

Not surprisingly, the poem has been very popular with immature and rebellious adolescents.

Pseudo-acceptance, common to mysticism, pietism, and pseudo evangelicals, claims to have "accepted Christ" while denying His law. One college youth, very much given to evangelizing everyone in sight, not only denied the law as an article of his faith, in speaking to this writer, but went further. Asked if he would approve of young men and women working in a house of prostitution as whores and pimps to convert the inmates, he did not deny this as a valid possibility. He went on to affirm that many of his friends were converting girls and patrons wholesale by invading the houses to evangelize one and all. He also claimed wholesale conversion of homosexuals, but he could cite no homosexuals who ceased the practice after their conversion; nor any whores or their patrons who left the houses with their "evangelizers."

Such lawless "evangelism" is only blasphemy.

In the so-called "Great Awakening" in colonial New England, antinomianism, chiliasm, and false perfectionism went hand in hand. Many of these "holy ones" forsook their marriage for adulterous relations, denied the law, and claimed immediate perfection and immortality.

What such revivalism and pietism espouses is a limited liability universe in God's name. It is thus atheism under the banner of Christ. It claims freedom from God's sovereignty and denies predestination. It denies the law, and it denies the validity of the curses and blessings of the law. Such a religion is interested only in what it can get out of God: hence, "grace" is affirmed, and "love," but not the law, nor God's sovereign power and decree. But smorgasbord religion is only humanism, because it affirms the right of man to pick and choose what he wants; as the ultimate arbiter of his fate, man is made captain of his soul, with an assist from God. Pietism thus offers limited liability religion, not Biblical faith.

According to Heer, the medieval mystic Eckhart gave to the soul a "sovereign majesty together with God. The next step was taken by the disciple, Johannnes of Star Alley, who asked if the word of the soul was not as mighty as the word of the Heavenly Father." In such a faith, the new sovereign is man, and unlimited liability is in process of being transferred to God.

In terms of the Biblical doctrine of God, absolutely no liabilities are involved in the person and work of the Godhead. God's eternal decree and sovereign power totally govern and circumscribe all reality, which is His creation. Because man is a creature, man faces unlimited liability; his sins have temporal and eternal consequences, and he cannot at any point escape God. Van Til has summed up the matter powerfully:

\begin{quote}
The main point is that if man could look anywhere and not be confronted with the revelation of God then he could not sin in the Biblical sense of the term. Sin is the breaking of the law of God. God confronts man everywhere. He cannot in the nature of the case confront man anywhere if he does not confront him everywhere. God is one; the law is one. If man could press one button on the radio of his experience and not hear the voice of God then he would always press that button and not the others. But man cannot even press the button of his own self-consciousness without hearing the requirement of God.
\end{quote}

But man wants to reverse this situation. Let God be liable, if He fails to deliver at man's request. Let man declare that his own experience pronounces himself to be saved, and then he can continue his homosexuality or work in a house of prostitution, all without liability. Having pronounced the magic formula, "I accept Jesus Christ as my personal lord and savior," man then transfers almost all the liability to Christ and can sin without at most more than a very limited liability. Christ cannot be accepted if His sovereignty, His law, and His word are denied. To deny the law is to accept a works religion, because it means denying God's sovereignty and assuming man's existence in independence of God's total law and government. In a world where God functions only to remove the liability of hell, and no law governs man, man works his own way through life by his own conscience. Man is saved, in such a world, by his own work of faith, of accepting Christ, not by Christ's sovereign acceptance of him. Christ said, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you" (John 15:16). The pietist insists that he has chosen Christ; it is his work, not Christ's. Christ, in such a faith, serves as an insurance agent, as a guarantee against liabilities, not as sovereign lord. This is paganism in Christ's name.

In paganism, the worshipper was not in existence. Man did not worship the pagan deities, nor did services of worship occur. The temple was open every day as a place of business. The pagan entered the temple and bought the protection of a god by a gift or offering. If the god failed him, he thereafter sought the services of another. The pagan's quest was for an insurance, for limited liability and unlimited blessings, and, as the sovereign believer, he shopped around for the god who offered the most. Pagan religion was thus a transaction, and, as in all business transactions, no certainty was involved. The gods could not always deliver, but man's hope was that, somehow, his liabilities would be limited.

The "witness" of pietism, with its "victorious living," is to a like limited liability religion. A common "witness" is, "Praise the Lord, since I accepted Christ, all my troubles are over and ended." The witness of Job in his suffering was, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him" (Job 13:15). St. Paul recited the long and fearful account of his sufferings after accepting Christ: in prison, beaten, shipwrecked, stoned, betrayed, "in hunger and thirst,...in cold and nakedness" (II Cor. 11:23-27). Paul's was not a religion of limited liability nor of deliverance from all troubles because of his faith.

The world is a battlefield, and there are casualties and wounds in battle, but the battle is the Lord's and its end is victory. To attempt an escape from the battle is to flee from the liabilities of warfare against sinful men for battle with an angry God. To face the battle is to suffer the penalties of man's wrath and the blessings of God's grace and law.

Apart from Jesus Christ, men are judicially dead, i.e., under a death sentence, before God, no matter how moral their works. With regeneration, the beginning of true life, man does not move out from under God's unlimited liability. Rather, with regeneration, man moves from the world of unlimited liability under the curse, to the world of unlimited liability under God's blessings. The world and man were cursed when Adam and Eve sinned, but, in Jesus Christ, man is blessed, and the world progressively reclaimed and redeemed for Him. In either case, the world is under God's law. Blessings and curses are thus inseparable from God's law and are simply different relationships to it.

Men inescapably live in a world of unlimited liability, but with a difference. The covenant-breaker, at war with God and unregenerate, has an unlimited liability for the curse. Hell is the final statement of that unlimited liability. The objections to hell, and the attempts to reduce it to a place of probation or correction, are based on a rejection of unlimited liability. But the unregenerate has, according to Scripture, an unlimited liability to judgment and the curse. On the other hand, the regenerate man, who walks in obedience to Jesus Christ, his covenant head, has a limited liability to judgment and the curse. The unlimited liability of God's wrath was assumed for the elect by Jesus Christ upon the cross. The regenerate man is judged for his transgressions of the law of God, but his liability here is a limited one, whereas his liability for blessings in this life and in heaven are unlimited. The unregenerate can experience a limited measure of blessing in this life, and none in the world to come; they have at best a limited liability for blessing.

Man thus cannot escape an unlimited liability universe. The important question is this: in which area is he exposed to unlimited liability, to an unlimited liability to the curse because of his separation from God, or to an unlimited liability to blessing because of his faith in, union with, and obedience to Jesus Christ?

Along the lines of this section, a reader sent us the following poem which summarizes why our lives will amount to nothing if we do not accept personal responsibility for ourself and learn to accept the unlimited liability that God bestowed upon us as part of his death sentence for our disobedience in the book of Genesis:

Risk.

To weep...

is to risk appearing sentimental,

To hope...

is to risk despair,

To reach out for another...

is to risk involvement,
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

To try... is to risk failure.

To expose feelings... is to risk exposing your true self.

To place your ideas, your dreams before the crowd... is to risk their loss.

To love is to risk... not being loved in return.

To live... is to risk dying.

But risks must be taken because the greatest hazard in life, is to risk nothing.

The person who risks nothing, does nothing, has nothing, and is nothing. They may avoid suffering and sorrow, but they cannot learn, feel, change, grow, love, and live. Chained by their certitudes, they are a slave, they have forfeited their freedom.

Only a person who risks, is free.

4.3.11 The result of violating God’s laws or putting man’s laws above God’s laws is slavery, servitude, and captivity

The Bible vividly describes what happens when the people choose to disregard God’s laws and follow only the laws of men or of governments made up of men. The result of disregarding God’s laws and substituting in their place man’s vain laws is slavery, servitude, and captivity for any society that does this. The greater the conflict or deviation between man’s laws and God’s laws, the more severe the punishment and oppression and wrath will be that God will inflict:

But to the wicked, God says:

“What right have you to declare My statutes [write man’s vain law], or take My covenant [the Bible] in your mouth, seeing you hate instruction and cast My words behind you? When you saw a thief, you consented with him, and have been a partaker with adulterers. You give your mouth to evil, and your tongue frames deceit. You sit and speak against your brother; you slander your own mother’s son. These things you have done, and I kept silent; you thought that I was altogether like you; but I will reprove you, and set them in order before your eyes. Now consider this, you who forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver: Whoever offers praise glorifies Me; and to him who orders his conduct aright I will show the salvation of God.”

Below is an excerpt from the Bible that illustrates the point we are trying to make in this section, found in 2 Kings 17:5-23.

The governments described below that violated God’s laws and thereby alienated themselves from God consisted of kings, but today’s equivalent is our politicians, who by law should be servants but who through extortion under the color of law in illegally enforcing income taxes, have made themselves into the equivalent of kings.

Israel Carried Captive to Assyria

Now the king of Assyria went throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria and besieged it for three years.

In the ninth year of Hoshea, the king of Assyria took Samaria and carried Israel away to Assyria, and placed them in Halah and by the Habor, the River of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.

For so it was that the children of Israel had sinned against the LORD their God, who had brought them up out of [slavery in] the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and they had feared other gods, and had walked in the statutes of the nations whom the LORD had cast out from before the children of Israel, and of the kings of Israel, which they had made. Also the children of Israel secretly did against the LORD their God things that were not right, and they built for themselves high places in all their cities, from watchtower to fortified city. They set up for themselves sacred pillars and wooden images on every high hill and under every green tree. There they burned incense on all the high places, like the nations whom the LORD had carried away before them; and they did wicked things to provoke the LORD to anger. For they served idols [governments and laws and kings], of which the LORD had said to them, “You shall not do this thing.”
1. Yet the LORD testified against Israel and against Judah, by all of His prophets, every seer, saying, "Turn from your evil ways, and keep My commandments and My statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by My servants the prophets." Nevertheless they would not hear, but stiffened their necks, like the necks of their fathers, who did not believe in the LORD their God, and they rejected His statutes and His covenant that He had made with their fathers, and His testimonies which He had testified against them; they followed idols, became idolaters, and went after the nations who were all around them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them that they should not do like them. So they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, made for themselves a molded image and two calves, made a wooden image and worshiped all the host of heaven, and served Baal. And they caused their sons and daughters to pass through the fire, practiced witchcraft and soothsaying, and sold themselves through various taxes to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke Him to anger. Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them from His sight; there was none left but the tribe of Judah alone.

2. Also Judah did not keep the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made. And the LORD rejected all the descendants of Israel, afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of plunderers, until He had cast them from His sight. For He tore Israel from the house of David, and they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king. Then Jeroboam drove Israel from following the LORD, and made them commit a great sin. For the children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they did not depart from them, until the LORD removed Israel out of His sight, as He had said by all His servants the prophets. So Israel was carried away from their own land to Assyria, as it is to this day.

Therefore, the surest way to incur the wrath of God against you is to disregard or violate His Laws, or to put the commandments and laws and governments of men above obedience to His sacred laws. We must have our priorities straight or we may dishonor God and violate the first four commandments of the Ten Commandments, which require us to love and trust and honor God above and beyond any earthly government. If we put man’s laws above God’s laws on our priority list, then we are committing idolatry toward a man-made thing called government, as we explained earlier in section 4.1.

We will describe later in section 4.18 a few examples where the modern day vain laws of our government conflict with God’s laws. These conflicts of law force us into the circumstance where we must make a choice in our obedience and allegiance. The choice of which of those two we should obey when there is such a conflict ought to be quite evident to those who have read the passage above.

4.3.12 Government-instituted slavery using “privileges”

"In the matter of taxation, every privilege is an injustice."

[Voltaire]

"The more you want, the more the world can hurt you."

[Confucius]

"If you think of yourselves as helpless and ineffectual, it is certain that you will create a despotic government to be your master. The wise despot, therefore, maintains among his subjects a popular sense that they are helpless and ineffectual."

[Frank Herbert, The Dosadi Experiment]

Anyone who has been married instictively knows what “privilege-induced slavery” is. They understand that you have to give up some of your “rights” for the benefits and “privileges” associated with being married. For instance, one of the rights that the government forces you to give up using the instrument it created called the “marriage license”, especially if you are a man, is sovereignty over your property and your labor. As we said in the previous section, if you get married with a state marriage license, then control over your property and labor is surrendered ultimately to the government, because if your spouse becomes dissatisfied, the marriage license gives the government absolute authority to hijack all your property and your labor for the imputed “public good”, but as you will find out, the chief result of this hijacking is actually injustice. The marriage license authorizes a family law judge to abuse your property and your labor without your voluntary consent to create a welfare state for women intent on rebelling against their husbands and using marriage as a means of economic equalization. The book entitled Sovereign Christian Marriage, Form #06.009 explains that this very characteristic of marriage licenses issued by the state accomplishes the following unjust results:

1. Usurps and rebels against the sovereignty of God by interfering with His plan for marriage and family clearly spelled out in the Bible.
2. Encourages spouses to get divorced, because at least one of them will be financially rewarded with the property and labor of the other for doing so.
3. Makes marriage into legalized prostitution, where the sex comes during the marriage and the money comes after marriage and the state and family court judge becomes the pimp and the family law attorneys become tax collectors for the pimp.

The above defects in the institution of marriage caused by the government “privilege” called state-issued marriage licenses, of course, are the natural result of violating God’s/Natural law on marriage found in the Bible, where Eph. 5:22-24 makes the man, and not the government or the woman, the sovereign in the context of families. This is what happens whenever mankind rebels against God’s authority by trying to improve on God’s design for the family: massive injustice. Remember, that God created man first, and out of man’s rib was created woman, which makes man the sovereign, and this conclusion is completely consistent with the concept of Natural Order we discussed earlier in section 4.1.

“For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, since he is made in the image and glory of God; but woman is the glory of man. For man is not from woman, but woman from man. Nor was man created for the woman, but woman for the man.”
[1 Cor. 11:7-9, Bible, NKJV]

If you are going to arrogantly call this attitude chauvinistic, politically incorrect, or bigoted then you’re slapping God in the face and committing blasphemy because this is the way GOD designed the system and who are YOU to question that?

“But indeed, O man, who are you to reply against God? Will the thing formed say to him who formed it, ‘Why have you made me like this?’ Does not the potter have power over the clay, from the same lump to make one vessel for honor and another for dishonor?”
[Romans 9:20-21, Bible, NKJV]

The government uses this very same concept of privilege-induced slavery in the “constructive contract” you in effect sign by becoming a “citizen” or availing yourself of a government benefit. Here is the phrase that one of our astute readers uses to describe it in his book Social Security, Mark of the Beast, which is posted on our website for your reading pleasure:

“Protection draws subjection."
[Steven Miller]

Protectio trahit subjectionem, subjectio projectionem. Protection draws to it subjection, subjection, protection. Co. Litt. 65.
[Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856;
SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

In a sense, when you become a “citizen”, you “marry” the state in order to have its protection, and we’ll talk about the terms of this constructive “marriage contract” later in section 4.11. Below is a summary:

1. When you become a “citizen” by either being naturalized or by choosing a domicile within the jurisdiction of the government, you must profess allegiance.

1.1. “Domicile” carries with it the concept of “allegiance”.

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the property is located.”
[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

2. You marry the state by promising it “allegiance”. Spouses who marry each other take a similar oath to “love, honor, and obey” each other, and thereby protect each other.

“All Allegiance and protection by the government from harm are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 162, 166-168 (1874)]

3. Your passport is proof you are “married” to the state. See 22 U.S.C. §212

“No passport shall be granted or issued to or verified for any other persons than those owing allegiance, whether citizens or not, to the United States.”

[22 U.S.C. §212]

4. After you have “married” the state, you assume a citizenship status as a “national”, which is simply someone who has allegiance to the “state”.

All forms of allegiance require the taking of oaths, and God says you can’t take oaths and that the reason is because you are married to Him and not some pagan ruler or government. Those who take oaths to anything other than God become “friends of the world” and enemies of God:

“Do not fear, for you will not be ashamed; neither be disgraced, for you will not be put to shame; for you will forget the shame of your youth, and will not remember the reproach of your widowhood anymore. For your Maker is your husband, the Lord of hosts is His name; and your Redeemer is the Holy One of Israel; He is called the God of the whole earth, for the Lord has called you like a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, like a youthful wife when you were refused,” says your God. “For a mere moment I have forsaken you, but with great mercies I will gather you. With a little wrath I hid My face from you for a moment; but with everlasting kindness I will have mercy on you,” says the Lord, your Redeemer.”

[Isaiah 54:4-8, Bible, NKJV]

We have an article on our website entitled “The Citizenship Contract” by George Mercier that actually describes in detail the terms of the citizenship marriage contract below:

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/MercierGeorge/InvContrcts--TheCitizenshipContract.htm
Here is the way the U.S. supreme Court describes this marriage contract:

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 162, 166-168 (1874)]

Like marriage licenses, signing the “citizenship contract” means you give up some of your rights, and as a matter of fact, the government wants you to believe that you give up the same rights by becoming a citizen as you do by getting a marriage license. When you marry the federal government by becoming a “U.S. citizen”, you in effect are assimilated into the federal corporation called the “United States” defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A) and are classified by the courts as an officer of that corporation in receipt of taxable privileges. You also then become completely subject to the jurisdiction of that corporation. If you are a child of God, at the point when you married the state as a citizen, you united God with an idolatrous, mammon state and sold yourself into legal slavery voluntarily, in direct violation of the Bible:

[Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV]

“Do not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. For what fellowship has righteousness with lawlessness? And what communion has light with darkness?”

[2 Cor. 6:14, Bible, NKJV]

As expected, God’s law once again says that we should not become citizens of this world, and especially if it is dominated by unbelievers:

“For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ”

[Philippians 3:20]

[Hebrews 11:13]

“Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul...”

[1Peter 2:1]

“Do you not know that friendship with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God. ”

[James 4:4]

One of the reasons God doesn’t want us to become citizens of this world is because when we do, we have violated the first commandment and committed idolatry, by replacing God with an artificial god called government, who then provides protection for us that we for one reason or another can’t or won’t trust or have faith in God to provide. This lack of faith then becomes our downfall. The words of the Apostle Paul resolve why this is:

“But he who doubts is condemned if he eats, because he does not eat from faith; for whatever is not from faith [in God] is sin.”

[Rom. 14:23, Bible, NKJV]

Is it moral or ethical for the government to try to manipulate our rights out of existence by replacing them with taxable and regulatable “privileges” by procuring our consent and agreement? Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court says on this subject:

“It would be a palpable incongruity to strike down an act of state legislation which, by words of express divestment, seeks to strip the citizen of rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution, but to uphold an act by which the same result is accomplished under the guise of a surrender of a right in exchange for a valuable privilege which the state threatens otherwise to withhold. It is not necessary to challenge the proposition that, as a general rule, the state, having power to deny a privilege altogether, may grant it upon such conditions as it sees fit to impose. But the power of the state in that respect is not unlimited, and one of the limitations is that it may not impose conditions which require the relinquishment of Constitutional rights. If the state may compel the surrender of one constitutional right as a condition of its favor, it may, in like manner, compel a surrender...
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

So the bottom line is that it is not permissible for a state to try to undermine your Constitutional rights by making privileges contingent on surrendering Constitutional rights, but they do it anyway because we let them get away with it, and because they are very indirect about how they do it.

In a very real sense, the government has simply learned how to use propaganda to create fear and insecurity in the people, and then they invent vehicles to turn eliminating your fear into a profit center that requires you to become citizens and pay taxes to support. For instance, they use the Federal Reserve to create the Great Depression by contracting the money supply, and then they get these abused people worried and feeling insecure about retirement and security in the early 1930’s, and then invent a new program called Social(ist) Security to help eliminate their fear and restore your sense of security. But remember, in the process of procuring the “privilege” to be free of anxiety about old age, you have surrendered sovereignty over your person and labor to the government, and then have the moral authority to tax your wages and make you into a serf and a peon to pay off the federal debt accumulated to run that program.

“A right common in every citizen such as the right to own property or to engage in business of a character not requiring regulation CANNOT, however, be taxed as a special franchise by first prohibiting its exercise and then permitting its enjoyment upon the payment of a certain sum of money.”

Clear thinking about our freedom and liberty demands that when faced with situations like this, we ask ourselves, where does the government derive its authority and “privileges”? The answer is:

...from the PEOPLE!

The Declaration of Independence says so!

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Instead, we ought to charge government workers a tax for the “privilege” of having the authority and the “privilege” from the people to serve (not “govern”, but SERVE) them, and the tax that government servants pay as for that privilege should be equal to whatever they charge us for the privileges they delegate back to us using the authority we gave them! We need to think clearly about this because it’s very easy to get trapped in bad logic by deceitful lawyers and politicians who want to get into your bank account and enslave you with their unjust laws and extortion cleverly disguised as legitimate taxes. We should always remember who the public servants are and who the public is. We are the public and government employees are the servants! Start acting like the boss for once and tell the government what you expect out of them. The only reason the government continues to listen to us is because:

1. We vote our officials into office.
2. If we don’t like the laws they pass, we can nullify them every time we sit down on a jury or a grand jury.
3. If the above two approaches don’t keep their abuse of power in check, we can buy guns to protect ourselves from government abuse.

For instance, the government started issuing marriage licenses in about 1923 and charged people for the “privilege”. But then we have to ask ourselves what a license is. A license is permission from the state to perform an act which, without a license, would be illegal. Is it illegal to get married without the blessing of the state? Did Adam and Eve have a marriage license from God? Absolutely NOT. Marriage licenses, driver’s licenses, and professional licenses are a scam designed to increase control of the state over your life and turn you into a financial slave and serf to the government!

The IRS uses privilege-induced slavery to its advantage as well. For instance, it:

1. Sets the rate of withholding for a given income slightly higher than it needs to be so that Americans who paid tax will have to file to get their money back. In the process of filing, these unwitting citizens:

1.1. Have to incriminate themselves on their tax returns.
1.2. Forfeit most of the Constitutional rights, including the First (right to NOT communicate with your government), Fourth (seizure), and Fifth Amendment (self-incrimination) protections.
1.3. Tell the IRS their employer, which later allows the IRS to serve the private employer illegally with a “Notice of Ley” and steal assets in violation of due process protections in the Constitution in the Fifth Amendment.

2. On the W-4 form, makes it a privilege just to hold onto your income. The regulations written by the Treasury illegally (and unconstitutionally) say that if a person does not submit a W-4 or submits an incorrect W-4, the employer (who really isn’t a statutory “employer” because it isn’t a federal employer who has statutory “employees” as defined in 26 CFR §31.3401(c)) must withhold at the single zero rate. Thus, it becomes a “privilege” to just receive the money you earned without tax deducted! The only way you can preserve the “privilege” is to incriminate yourself by filling out the W-4, in violation of the Fifth Amendment.

3. The federal judiciary and the IRS will wickedly tell you that because of the Anti-Injunction Act found at 26 U.S.C.
§7421, if you dispute the amount of tax you owe or you assert non-liability, you must pay the tax FIRST before you are permitted to file a lawsuit and subject your case to judicial review. In effect, what Congress has done by legislation is forced you to bribe the government in order to have the privilege to sue them! If you assert that you are a “nontaxpayer” and a person not liable for tax, the IRS will try to get your case dismissed because corrupt judges will assert “sovereign immunity”. See section 2.4.2 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 for further details on this scam. For those of you who are Christians, this scam quite clearly violates the bible, which declares:

“And you shall take no bribe, for a bribe blinds the discerning and perverts the words of the righteous.”
[Exodus 23:8 ]

4. Your state government will tell you that you MUST give them a valid Social Security Number in order for you to get a state driver’s license. They will do this in spite of the fact that traveling is a right and not a government privilege. In the words of the U.S. Supreme Court and lower courts:

“The right to travel is part of the 'liberty' that a citizen cannot be deprived without due process of law.”

“The use of the highways for the purpose of travel and transportation is not a mere privilege, but a common and fundamental Right of which the public and the individual cannot be rightfully deprived.”
[Chicago Motor Coach vs. Chicago, 169 N.E. 22; Ligare vs. Chicago, 28 N.E. 934; Boon vs. Clark, 214 SSW

To give you just one more example of how privilege-induced slavery leads to government abuse, let's look at licenses to practice law. The only rational basis for having any kind of professional license is consumer protection, but the legal profession has totally distorted and twisted this concept to benefit them, which amounts to a massive conflict of interest.
For instance:

1. Only licensed attorneys can defend others in court. This prevents family members or friends or paralegals from providing low-cost legal assistance in court, and creates a greater marketplace and monopoly for legal services by attorneys. This also means that a lot more people go without legal representation, because they can’t afford to hire a lawyer to represent them. Is that justice, or is that simply the spread of oppression and injustice in the name of profit for the legal profession?
2. Even if the attorney is licensed to practice law from the socialist state, the court can revoke their right to defend anyone in a court of law. For instance:

2.1. Look at what the court did to attorney Jeffrey Dickstein in United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990), which we showed in section 6.6.4.5. If you look at the ruling for this case, you will find that the court withdrew defendant Collins right to be represented by Attorney Dickstein, because they called attorney Dickstein a “vexatious litigant”. He was therefore deprived of his choice of competent legal counsel, because the court viewed his counsel as “politically incorrect”.

2.2. Refer also to what the court did to attorney Oscar Stilley in section 6.8.1, as he defended Dr. Phil Roberts on tax charges. The court said, and we quote:

“The practice of law, sir, is a privilege, especially in Federal Court. You’re close to losing that privilege in this court, Mr. Stilley.”

3. Clients with attorneys are given favoritism by the court in the award of attorney fees against the other side. This leads attorneys to inflate their fees if they expect sanctions, in order to coerce the opposing side to settle. In most courts, pro per or pro se litigants are either not allowed or seldom are awarded attorney fees against the opposing side. Only litigants who have counsel can get attorney fee awards by the court. In effect, the courts treat the time and expense of pro per litigants in defending themselves as irrelevant and completely without value! That’s right.. if you as a pro per litigant keep track of your time diligently and bill for it at a rate less than an attorney in your motion for sanctions against the other side, the judge (who incidentally used to be a lawyer and probably still has lawyer golf buddies he wants to bring business to) will laugh you out of the courtroom! This has the effect of incentivizing people to have expensive legal counsel and incentivizes the lawyers to prolong the litigation and maximize their hourly rate to maximize their income. If you then ask a judge why they don’t award attorney fee sanctions to pro per litigants, he might get defensive and say: “Pro per litigants are high maintenance, and make extra work for the court because they don’t know what they are doing.” And yet these same courts and judges are the ones who earlier, as attorneys practicing law, intimidated and perpetuated the very ignorance on the part of their clients that made these people ignorant litigants as pro pers! All this rhetoric is just a smokescreen for the real agenda, which is maximizing business for and profits of those who practice law, and restricting the supply of qualified talent in order to keep the prices and the income of attorneys artificially high.

If we avail ourselves of a “privilege” granted by the state through operation of any statute that does not involve the exercise of a fundamental right, then we cannot have a constitutional grounds for redress of grievances against the statute:

“Anyone who partakes of the benefits or privileges of a given statute, or anyone who even places himself into a position where he may avail himself of those benefits at will, cannot reach constitutional grounds to redress grievances in the courts against the given statute.”

But if we are simply trying to exist, by working and receiving a paycheck, voting, serving on jury duty, and fulfilling our various civic and family duties, we cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing:

“The individual, unlike the corporation, cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing. The corporation is an artificial entity which owes its existence and charter power to the State, but the individual’s right to live and own property are natural rights for the enjoyment of which an excise cannot be imposed.”

“Legislature... cannot name something to be a taxable privilege unless it is first a privilege.” [Taxation West Key 43], “The Right to receive income or earnings is a right belonging to every person and realization and receipt of income is therefore not a ‘privilege’, that can be taxed.” [Taxation West Key 933]-[Jack Cole Co. v. MacFarland, 337 S.W.2d. 453, Tenn.]

"Tyranny is the inevitable consequence of rule from above, a point that the Founding Fathers understood well when they separated the powers of a small and restrained government.

“Liberty is a human achievement, the product of a 1,000-year struggle. We have taken too lightly our obligation to "earn it anew." Consequently, we are ceasing to possess 'that which thy fathers bequeathed thee.' Our legislative political order has become an administrative state in which 'We the People' are increasingly fearful of the government that we allegedly control.

“If Thomas Jefferson was right, we cannot get self-rule back without a revolution.”
[Jeff Bowman]

God, in Exodus 20:3, as part of the Ten Commandments, said:

“You shall have no other gods before Me.”

Our life as Christians should revolve around putting God at the top of our priority list. That means supporting His causes with the first fruits of our labor and tithing to the church. Here’s the scripture to back up this assertion:

“Honor the Lord with your possessions, and with the firstfruits of all your increase; so your barns will be filled with plenty, and your vats will overflow with new wine.”
[Prov. 3:9-10]

But how can we tithe to the church and put God first, if we illegally pay almost 50% of our income to all the following combined taxes before God even gets his first dime in out tithes?:

1. Federal income tax (25% of our income).
2. State income tax. (15% of our income)
3. Property tax. (5% of our income)
4. Sales tax. (2% of our income)
5. Estate (Death) taxes. (up to 100% of our income and our assets over a lifetime!)
Instead, the first fruits of our labor and almost 50% of our living income (and 100% of our assets when we die) go to the GOVERNMENT first in the form of income taxes, before we ever even see a dime of our own income, and we put way too much emphasis and reliance on the government to help us. In effect, we allow or permit or volunteer ourselves to become government slaves and they become our masters and thus we lose our sovereignty and thereby make God of secondary importance, presumably because we want a hand-out and government “security”. But listen to what God says about this type of abomination:

"Cursed is the one who trusts in man [and by implication, governments made up of men], who depends on flesh for his strength and whose heart turns away from the Lord. He will be like a bush in the wastelands; he will not see prosperity when it comes. He will dwell in the parched places of the desert, in a salt land where no one lives. But blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord, whose confidence is in Him. He will be like a tree planted by the water that sends out its roots by the stream. It does not fear when heat comes; its leaves are always green. It has no worries in a year of drought and never fails to bear fruit."

[Jeremiah 17:5-8, Bible, NIV]

By surrendering our sovereignty and letting government become our god or our cult, we have committed idolatry: relying more on government and man than we do on God or ourselves to meet our needs. Jesus Himself, however, specifically warned us not to do this:

[Matt. 4:10, Bible, NKJV]

This kind of pernicious evil violates Psalm 118:8-9, which says: "It is better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in man. It is better to trust the Lord than to put confidence in princes." I translate “princes” to mean “government”. Likewise, such idolatry also violates Psalm 146:3, which says: “Put not your trust in princes, [nor] in the son of man, in whom [there is] no help. “

But can government REALLY be a religion from a genuine legal perspective and can we prove this in court? Absolutely! Let's look at the definition of “religion” from Black’s Law Dictionary to answer this question, and notice the highlighted words:

"Religion. Man's relation to Divinity, to reverence, worship, obedience, and submission to mandates and precepts of supernatural or superior beings. In its broadest sense includes all forms of belief in the existence of superior beings exercising power over human beings by volition, imposing rules of conduct, with future rewards and punishments. Bond uniting man to God, and a virtue whose purpose is to render God worship due him as source of all being and principle of all government of things. Nikolnikoff v. Archbishop, etc., of Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 142 Misc. 894, 255 N.Y.S. 653, 663."

Now we will take the highlighted words from this definition of “religion” above and put them into a table and compare worship of God on the left to worship of government on the right. The results are very surprising. The attributes in the left column of the table below are listed in the same sequence presented in the above definition and have asterisks next to them. Those attributes without asterisks provide additional means of comparison between worship of God and worship of government (god with a little “g”).

Isn’t that interesting? The other thing you MUST conclude after examining the above table is that if anyone in government is a “superior being” relative to any human in the society they govern, then the government unavoidably becomes an idol and a god to be “worshipped” and submitted to as if the government or its servants individually were a religion. In the feudal system of British Common Law from which our legal system derives, they even call judges “Your Worship”:
During the nearly four centuries spanned by this book, after Joshua's death, but quickly sanctioned time -- the gods [money, sex, covetousness] literally become a snare to them (2:3). It will certainly cease to deserve that high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right.” [Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137, 1 Cranch 137, 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803)]

A government run by judges, instead of law, is called a “kritarchy”. Such a government is described as a government of men and not of law. Since judges are also “public servants”, then a “kritarchy” also qualifies as a “dulocracy”:

“A government where servants and slaves have so much license and privilege that they domineer.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 501]

The book of Judges in the Bible shows what happens to a culture that trusts in man and the flesh and their own feelings rather than in God’s law for their sense of justice and morality. Below is an excerpt from our Bible introducing the Book of Judges to make the moral lessons contained in the book crystal clear:

The Book of Judges stands in stark contrast to Joshua. In Joshua an obedient people conquered the land through trust in the power of God. In Judges, however, a disobedient and idolatrous people are defeated time and time again because of their rebellion against God.

In seven distinct cycles of sin to salvation, Judges shows how Israel had set aside God’s law and in its place substituted “what was right in his own eyes” (21:25). The recurring result of abandonment from God’s law is corruption from within and oppression from without. During the nearly four centuries spanned by this book, God raises up military champions to throw off the yoke of bondage and to restore the nation to pure worship. But all too soon the “sin cycle” begins again as the nation’s spiritual temperance grows steadily colder.

... The Book of Judges could also appropriately be titled “The Book of Failure.”

Deterioration (1:1-3:4). Judges begins with short-lived military successes after Joshua’s death, but quickly turns to the repeated failure of all the tribes to drive out their enemies. The people feel the lack of a unified central leader, but the primary reasons for their failure are a lack of faith in God and lack of obedience to Him (2:1-2). Compromise leads to conflict and chaos. Israel does not drive out the inhabitants (1:21, 27, 29, 30); instead of removing the moral cancer [IRS, Federal Reserve?] spread by the inhabitants of Canaan, they contract the disease. The Canaanite gods [money, sex, covetousness] literally become a snare to them (2:3).

Judges 2:11-23 is a microcosm of the pattern found in Judges 3-16.

Deliverance (3:5-16:31). In verses 5:5 through 16:31 of the Book of Judges, seven apostasies (fallings away from God) are described, seven servitudes, and seven deliverances. Each of the seven cycles has five steps: sin, servitude, supplication, salvation, and silence. These also can be described by the words rebellion, retribution, repentance, restoration, and rest. The seven cycles connect together as a descending spiral of sin (2:19). Israel vacillates between obedience and apostasy as the people continually fail to learn from their mistakes. Apostasy grows, but the rebellion is not continual. The times of rest and peace are longer than the times of bondage. The monotony of Israel’s sins can be contrasted with the creativity of God’s methods of deliverance.

Depravity (17:1-21:25). Judges 17:1 through 21:25 illustrate (1) religious apostasy (17 and 18) and (2) social and moral depravity (19-21) during the period of the judges. Chapters 19-21 contain one of the worst tales of degeneration in the Bible. Judges closes with a key to understanding the period: “everyone did what was right in his own eyes” (21:25) [a.k.a. “what FEELS good”]. The people are not doing what is wrong in their own eyes, but what is “evil in the sight of the Lord” (2:11).

The hypocrisy and idolatry represented by a government of judges or of men rather than law not only violates the first and greatest Commandment in the Bible found in Exodus 20:3 and Matt. 22:37-38, but is also more importantly violates the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution:

First Amendment:

> Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

How do government servants make themselves or the government they are part of into a “superior being”? Here are just a few highly unethical and evil ways:

1. Write laws that apply to everyone but them.
2. Manipulate the enforcement of laws so that government servants don’t have to obey.
3. Exceed their jurisdiction or lawful authority and not be punished or prosecuted for it.
4. Abuse officially immunity or sovereign immunity with the blessing and collusion of a corrupted judiciary to protect themselves from punishment for their wrongdoing.
5. Lie to or mislead a grand jury and not be held accountable for it because they would have to prosecute themselves if they did.
6. Judges setting courtroom policy prohibiting audio or video recording of any proceeding so that they cannot be held accountable for their own violations of law in the courtroom.
7. Judges suppressing admission of evidence in court that would undermine their power or control over society.
8. Making cases unpublished where the government was litigated against and lost, thus preventing them from being cited as precedent.

Made:  For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)

http://www.nonpublication.com/

9. Judges telling juries that they must rule in the case based on what the judge says is the law rather than based on a reading of the actual law.
10. Judges issuing general orders to the law librarian in the public/government courthouse prohibiting jurists or litigants from using the law library so as to make their profession into a priesthood and prevent jurists from ensuring that they are following the law. See: http://famguardian.org/Disks/IRSDVD/Evidence/JudicialCorruption/GenOrder228C-Library.pdf
11. Government judges and prosecutors abusing the purpose of the legal system to terriorize and persecute Americans for their political activities or to coerce them into giving up some right that the law entitles them to. Most Americans can’t afford legal representation and government abuses this vulnerability by litigating maliciously and endlessly against their enemies to terriorize them into submission and run up their legal bills. This makes their victims into a financial slave of an expensive attorney who is licensed by the same state he is litigating against, which imparts a conflict of interest that prejudices the rights of his client.

By making itself a “superior being” relative to the people it governs and serves and using the color but not actual force of law to compel the people to pay homage to and “worship” and to serve it with their stolen labor (extorted through illegally enforced income taxes), Congress has mandated a religion, with all the many necessary characteristics found in the legal definition of “religion” indicated above, and this is clearly unconstitutional. The only way to guarantee the elimination of the conflict of law that results from putting government above the people is to:

1. Make God the sovereign over all of creation.
2. Make the people servants to God and His fiduciary agents.

3. Create government as a servant to the People and their fiduciary agent. Make the only source of government authority that of protecting the people from evil, injustice, and abuse.

There is no other rational conclusion one can reach based on the above analysis. There is simply no other way to solve this logical paradox of government becoming a religion in the process of making itself superior to the people or the “U.S. citizens”. The definition of “religion” earlier confirmed that God must be the origin of an earthly government, when it said:

“Bond uniting man to God, and a virtue whose purpose is to render God worship due him as source of all being and principle of all government of things.”

One of our readers, Humberto Nunez, wrote a fascinating and funny article showing just how similar government and most religions really are:

GOVERNMENT IS A PAGAN CULT AND WE’VE ALL BEEN DRINKING THE KOOL AID

By: Humberto Nunez

Government is a pagan cult. When you join the Armed Forces, the first thing they do is shave your head. Just like in many cults, where they shave your head. The Army also uses sleep deprivation in Boot Camp, just like many cults do, to brainwash their people.

Secret Service Agents are willing to “die for their beliefs” (in defense of The President: their cult leader).

Many men say that they would “die for their country”. This is a form of pagan Martyrdom for the pagan cult State.

Many today say that “religion has caused more war…” and blah blah blah.

But the fact is that governments send out draft cards, not churches. Governments started WWI and WWII, not religion. In fact, during times of peace governments hate religion because religion is the governments’ #1 competition for allegiance, and during times of war, governments use religion for their own agenda.

Another similarity to cults: FBI Agents even dress similar to Mormons, and have the same type of haircuts.

Many cults have a dress code of some kind, just like in the Army, and even in the Corporate world.

When you join the Moonies you would probably end up selling flowers for them, and the Moonies will keep all the profits from the work you do. When you work today, the pagan cult State takes your profits (in the form of income taxes), and they won’t let you leave their cult (the State). If you attempt to not pay your taxes, you would be arrested and branded a criminal.

Now, I did a little research into the symptoms and signs of a cult and found these 5 Warning Signs: (to distinguish a cult from a ‘normal’ religion)

3. The organization is willing to place itself above the law; this is probably the most important characteristic.

4. The leadership dictates, (rather than suggests) important personal (as opposed to spiritual) details of followers’ lives, such as whom to marry, what to study in college, etc.

5. The leader sets forth ethical guidelines members must follow but from which the leader is exempt.

6. The group is preparing to fight a literal, physical Armageddon against other human beings.

7. The leader regularly makes public assertions that he or she knows is false and/or the group has a policy of routinely deceiving outsiders.

Now, let’s break these down one by one.

1. The organization is willing to place itself above the law; this is probably the most important characteristic.

Example: Death Penalty.

What is the purpose and intention behind State sponsored Death Penalty? The primary purpose and intention behind State sponsored Death Penalty is not to deter crime, nor is it to be tough on crime. To understand the purpose and intent behind this, we must study psychology, in particular, behavioral psychology; like in training a dog. To train a dog, one must use behavioral modification techniques. For example, the primary purpose and intention behind anti-smoking laws is to get you to obey the State. Before you can train a dog to kill, you must first train the dog to obey simple commands; like sit, and roll over. The same is true of recycling laws. Glass bottles are actually much safer for the environment than plastic bottles. The primary purpose and intention behind recycling laws is not to save the environment, it is a behavioral modification technique to get the people to obey the Government.

Now, back to State sponsored death penalty laws. The primary purpose and intention behind Death Penalty laws is to get people used to the idea that the State is above the law. It is illegal for people to kill and to murder. With State sponsored Death Penalty laws, the State is Above the Law.

There you have symptom #1:

1. The organization is willing to place itself above the law; this is probably the most important characteristic.

2. The leadership dictates, (rather than suggests) important personal (as opposed to spiritual) details of followers’ lives, such as whom to marry, what to study in college, etc.

I can give a dozen examples of this behavioral modification ploy of cults. Recycling and anti-smoking laws were two examples I explained above. Dictating the behavior of Americans today is pervasive throughout our entire society.

3. The leader sets forth ethical guidelines members must follow but from which the leader is exempt.

We can see this today very clearly when it comes to violence. Many Americans today are forced to attend Anger Management Courses while at the same time the State uses violence (like in the Iraq War).

4. The group is preparing to fight a literal, physical Armageddon against other human beings.

Three words: War on Terrorism

5. The leader regularly makes public assertions that he or she knows is false and/or the group has a policy of routinely deceiving outsiders.

I don’t think that last symptom (of a cult) needs further explanation.

Well there you have it; the Government has all of the 5 major signs/symptoms of being a cult.

For the philosophy behind The Nature of Government I recommend this read:

http://www.apfn.org/apfn/nature_gov.htm

It is A MUST READ for all Americans and all freedom loving peoples of the world. It is so good that if I start quoting from it, I’ll just end up pasting the entire article here in my article. So I’ll just leave it at that and say you the reader here MUST READ IT.

Now, the atheist says “Show me God.” I say, “Show me government.” I do not believe in the existence of government. Now hold your horses, I know that sounds silly at first, but let me explain.

Let’s say you were on a ship full of people. Now the people in that ship went insane and started hallucinating, thinking that you were an alien from another planet and that you must be killed. If those people on that ship killed you, you would really be dead, literally. Just because of the reality of the consequences of that mass hallucination (you being dead) does not prove that you were really an alien. It just proves that the people were suffering from mass hallucination. So, just because the so-called ‘government’ can arrest you and put you in jail, that does not prove the existence of government. It just proves mass hallucination.

Let’s start again now:

The atheist says “Show me God.” I say, “Show me government.” Now don’t tell me the White House. That is not ‘government’. That is a building. That’s just as if I were to show an atheist a church (a building), that would not prove the existence of God.

Ok now, you might show me a Police Officer in uniform, and offer proof on how he can actually arrest me, to prove the existence of Government.

Well, I can show an atheist a priest in uniform, but that would not prove the existence of God. Even if Congress gave priests the authority to arrest people on the streets that would still not prove the existence of God to an atheist. Just like a cop in uniform does not prove the existence of government, it only proves that the people are suffering from mass hallucination.

People today are obsessed with the laws of the pagan-cult State. The Constitution, the Bill of Rights, etc. etc., people meditating day and night on the ‘laws’ of the pagan-cult State, as opposed to the Law of God. Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, these men have become cult figures. They have replaced Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Noah, Moses, as the men of God to be pondered on and studied.

Sacrifice for Protection

In ancient times, people performed human sacrifice to their pagan false gods for ‘Protection’ from the gods. They believed their gods also played the role of ‘Provider’ by performing human sacrifice for rain for their crops for example.

Today, the U.S. Fed. Govt. is asking for “Sacrifice for Protection”. The State today is now saying that the people must sacrifice their Freedoms and Liberties for ‘Protection’ from terrorism (demons, evil spirits, etc.) and that the State will then ‘Provide’ them with safety.

This is metaphorically a form of human sacrifice. It is not a human sacrifice where you literally kill someone (like in the Death Penalty), but it is a “human” sacrifice. I mean, the State is not asking the animals to sacrifice their Freedoms and Liberties, it is asking us humans, so it is a “human” sacrifice as opposed to an ‘animal’ sacrifice in that sense. Also, there is death involved; the death of our Freedoms and Liberty.

By the way, State sponsored Death Penalty is another form of human sacrifice for the pagan-cult State, and State sponsored abortion is a form of child sacrifice for this pagan-cult State.

Black Robes: Judges and Devil worshippers

Judges wear Black Robes just like Devil worshippers. The Judges’ Desk is the altar of baal. They bring men tied up in handcuffs before the altar (Judges’ desk) and these men are for the human sacrifice and the entire court proceeding is a satanic ritual.

Sounds crazy? Is it a coincidence that the ‘language of the court’ is Latin (ex: Habeas Corpus) just like the ‘language of a Catholic Exorcism’ is also in Latin? Lawyers speak Latin in the court room just like Priests use Latin when performing exorcisms when you have a ‘case’ of full DEMONIC POSSESSION.

Also, the same type of ‘respect’ a Priest would expect from a visitor to his church is the same type of respect a Judge expects in his court room. There’s even a penalty for disobeying this ‘respect’; it’s called “Contempt of Court”.

Another psychological conditioning behavior modification technique being applied on the American Public is this: Television shows like Judge Judy, Judge Joe, all these People’s Courts television shows. The primary intention and purpose behind these so-called Court Room Justice shows is to condition the public to get used to entering a court room with NO Trial by Jury. In not one of any of these types of shows do you ever see a Trial by Jury; that is not a mistake, it is intentional, and by design.

I can go on and on with this article and offer a million more details.

To conclude, if the U.S. Govt. plans to attack Iran, North Korea, etc. in the future. And if there is the possibility that this War on Terrorism might lead to WWII. Then, that is nothing but pagan-cult MASS SUICIDE. And the U.S. Govt. is a pagan cult, and WE’VE ALL BEEN DRINKING THE KOOL AID. [Does Jim Jones from Ghana ring a bell?]

Now, some readers of this article (especially neo-conservatives) would automatically brand me an Anarchist. I am not an Anarchist, what I am questioning is the role of government. According to the Founding Fathers of America, the role of government was to protect your Individual Rights. NOT TO TAKE THEM AWAY.

And finally, if the people will not serve God, they will end up serving and being slaves of government. I am sure many Christians would believe this, and even some followers of eastern philosophies; for this is a form of ‘Bad Karma’.

And, if man will not serve God, then woman will not serve man. This is also a form of ‘bad karma’ [and it may also explain why the divorce rate is so high].

Another fascinating and funny article that helps to clarify just how God-like our government has become is as follows:
The Ten Commandments of the U.S. Government

I. I am the Lord of the Talmud, thou shalt have no Biblical God before me.

II. Thou shalt not make unto thee any but Satanic images: the witch, symbol of the city government and police department of Salem, Massachusetts; the five-pointed occult pentagram of Sirius, of the state religion of Egypt, emblem of the Department of Defense and our Armed Forces, and the badge of U.S. law enforcement at all levels; the pyramid of Pharaoh, capped by the all-Seeing Eye of Horus, emblazoned on the currency in the denomination of one shekel.

III. Thou shalt not take the name of thy god in vain: thou shalt not blaspheme the name Rabbi, Israeli, Zionism, “U.S. government”, or any politician or agency.

IV. Remember the Wal Mart sale on the Sabbath Day, and keep it holy by spending. Seven days must thou labor, that thereby thou shalt spend ever more.

V. Honor thy son and thy daughter. Neither spank nor say no to them when they seek to consume the sex and violence that is dangled before them from every lawful venue. Thy daughter shalt dress like a cheap harlot from the age of eight onward, and thy son shall engage in bloody video games, likewise from his eighth year. All of these are legal and profitable, saith the Lord.

VI. Thou shalt not kill the molester of 150 children in his prison cell, and thou shalt condemn the convict who executes the molester, lest such justice be encouraged, and lest it be known that the convict had greater common sense and honor than a legion of our judges.

VII. Thou shalt commit adultery and televise and popularize it throughout the land, and broadcast it into Afghanistan and Iraq, that thereby the Muslims shall be vouchsafed a share in our democracy and freedom.

VIII. Thou shalt not steal from us, for we detest competition.

IX. Thou shalt indeed bear false witness, for by perjury our Law is established.

X. Covet thy neighbor’s goods and thy neighbor’s wife, for thereby doth our Order prosper.

I’ll bet you never even dreamed that there were so many parallels between Christianity and government, did you? I’ll bet you also never thought of government as a religion, but that is exactly what it has become. The idea of making government a religion or creating false idols for the people to worship is certainly not new. Here is an example from the bible, where “cities” are referred to as “gods”. Notice this passage also criticizes evolutionists when it says “Saying to.. a stone ‘you gave birth to me.’” Evolutionists believe that we literally descended from rocks that evolved from a primordial soup:

As the thief is ashamed when he is found out,
So is the house of Israel ashamed;
They and their kings and their princes, and their priests and their prophets, Saving to a tree, "You are my father,"
And to a stone, "You gave birth to me;"
For they have turned their back to Me, and not their face.
But in the time of their trouble
They will say, ‘Ariase and save us.’
But where are your gods [governments] that you have made for yourselves?
Let them arise,
If they can save you in the time of your trouble;
For according to the number of your cities
Are your gods, O Judah."
[Jeremiah 2:26-28, Bible, NKJV]
Golden Calves at Bethel and Dan

22 Then Jeroboam fortified Shechem in the hill country of Ephraim and lived there. From there he went out and built up Peniel.
23 Jeroboam thought to himself, “The kingdom will now likely revert to the house of David. 27 If these people go up to offer sacrifices at the temple of the LORD in Jerusalem, they will again give their allegiance to their lord, Rehoboam king of Judah. They will kill me and return to King Rehoboam.” 24 After seeking advice, the king made two golden calves. He said to the people, “It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem. Here are your gods, O Israel, who brought you up out of Egypt.” 29 One he set up in Bethel, and the other in Dan. 30 And this thing became a sin; the people went even as far as Dan to worship the one there.
31 Jeroboam built shrines on high places and appointed priests from all sorts of people, even though they were not Levites. 32 He instituted a festival on the fifteenth day of the eighth month, like the festival held in Judah, and offered sacrifices on the altar. This he did in Bethel, sacrificing to the calves he had made. And at Bethel he also installed priests at the high places he had made. 33 On the fifteenth day of the eighth month, a month of his own choosing, he offered sacrifices on the altar he had built at Bethel. So he instituted the festival for the Israelites and went up to the altar to make offerings.

[1 Kings 12:25-33, Bible, NIV]

Similar to Jeroboam, our present government conquers the people by encouraging them to become distracted with false idols. These false idols include:

1. Government. This translates into worship of and slavery to government through the income tax and an obsession with petticoat government to protect people from discrimination or punishment for the consequences of their sins, including homosexuality, dishonesty, and infidelity.

2. Money. They use this lust for money to divide and conquer and control families by getting them fighting over their property dry. They supplement this local anesthetic called “sin” with a combination of cognitive dissonance, lies and propaganda, ignorance generated by the public fool (school) system, and an occasional media report about how they trashed a famous person to keep you in fear and immobilized to oppose their organized extortion and racketeering. This trains you never to trust or respect your own judgment well enough to even conceive of questioning authority or challenging their jurisdiction.

“Surely oppression destroys a wise man’s reason.
And a [compelled] bribe [called income tax] debases the heart.”

[Ecclesiastes 7:7, Bible, NKJV]

Have you ever visited a doctor’s office for minor surgery?  What the doctor does is administer a local anesthetic to numb your senses in the area he will be cutting and operating on so you won’t experience pain or feel what he is doing. The government does the same thing. Before they hook you up to “The Matrix” using their umbilical called the “income tax” to painfully suck you dry, they use a “local anesthetic” that numbs your senses and your discretion. This “local anesthetic” is the sin and hedonism and idolatry they try to get you addicted to and distracted with that they use to make you into a slave:

“Most assuredly, I say to you, whoever commits sin is a slave of sin.”

[Jesus in John 8:34, Bible, NKJV]
The concept of government as a religion especially applies to the field of taxation. The Internal Revenue Code is 9,500 pages of very fine print. We know because we have a personal copy and read it often. Our own former Treasury Secretary Paul O’Neill calls it, and I quote:

“9,500 pages of gibberish.”

[See this quote in a news article at: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/OrgAndDuties/IRSExhibit-PaulONeill-IRSCode9500PgsOfGibberish.pdf]

How many people have taken the time to read the Internal Revenue Code in its entirety, and even among those very few people who have read it completely, how many believe that they fully and completely understand it well enough to swear under penalty of perjury that facts they reveal and statements they might make about their own personal tax liability would be completely consistent with it? If you don’t meet these two criteria of having read it completely and often and having a full and accurate understanding about it that is truthful and consistent with its legislative intent, then any statement you make on a tax return that is based on your state of mind in that instance becomes simply a matter of usually misinformed or ignorant “belief”. There’s a good word for this condition of believing something without knowing all the facts. It is called “faith” and it is the foundation of all religions in the world!:

[Heb. 11:1, Bible, NKJV]

Isn’t “faith” based on a “belief” in something which you have not seen sufficient scientific evidence to prove? If you are like most Americans who have never read or even seen any part of the Internal Revenue Code, which is the only admissible “evidence” of your legal tax obligation, then any action you might take and any statement you might make regarding your tax “liability” under such circumstances could be rationally described only as an act of “faith” and “belief”. Here’s the legal definition of “faith”:

“Faith. Confidence; credit; reliance. Thus, an act may be said to be done ‘on the faith’ of certain representations.

“Belief; credence; trust. Thus, the Constitution provides that ‘full faith and credit’ shall be given to the judgments of each state in the courts of the others.

Purpose; intent; sincerity; state of knowledge or design. This is the meaning of the word in the phrase “good faith” and “bad faith”. See Good faith.”

Even when you hire an expensive professional to prepare your tax return, you still have all of the responsibility and liability for the content and the accuracy of the return and if the IRS institutes a penalty for errors or omissions, isn’t it you rather than your tax preparer who has to pay the penalty? What exactly are you “trusting” (see the definition of “faith” above) when you sign a tax return and state under penalty of perjury that it is truthful without even reading or knowing or understanding the tax code? What you are in fact “trusting” is “man” or your “government”. You are trusting what the IRS told you in its publications, right? Or you’re trusting an ignorant and greedy and unethical tax lawyer or a misinformed accountant to tell you what your legal responsibilities are, aren’t you? That is called trusting “man” because a man wrote those publications or gave you the advice that you formed your “belief” from. The Bible says we shouldn’t trust men or a “worthless” government, and instead ought to trust only Him:

“Cursed be he that confirmeth not all the words of this law [God’s Law, not Caesar’s law] to do them. And all the people shall say, Amen.”
[Deu 27:26, Bible, NKJV]

“Behold, the nations are as a drop in the bucket, and are counted as the small dust on the scales.”
[Isaiah 40:15, Bible, NKJV]

“All nations before Him are as nothing, and they are counted by Him less than nothing and worthless.”
[Isaiah 40:17, Bible, NKJV]

“Cursed is the one who trusts in man [or by implication man-made government], who depends on flesh for his strength and whose heart turns away from the Lord. He will be like a bush in the wastelands; he will not see prosperity when it comes. He will dwell in the parched places of the desert, in a salt land where no one lives. But blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord, whose confidence is in Him. He will be like a tree planted...
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

by the water that sends out its roots by the stream. It does not fear when heat comes; its leaves are always green. It has no worries in a year of drought and never fails to bear fruit.”

[Jeremiah 17:5-8, Bible, NIV]

Now if our government had stuck to its original charter to be “a society of laws and not men”, then we wouldn’t be forced to have to depend on “men” to know what our tax responsibilities are because we would be able to read the law ourselves without consulting an “expert” and KNOW what we are supposed to do:

“The government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men.
It will certainly cease to deserve that high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right.”

[Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137, 1 Cranch 137, 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803)]

If our government had remained honorable and honest, the laws would be simple and clear and short. Read the earlier tax laws: they are very short and easy to understand. These laws were KNOWABLE by the common man. The easiest way to make the law respectable is to make it short and simple enough so that every person can read and understand it. When it grows too large and/or too complicated to be knowable by every citizen, then at that point, we have transformed our society from a society of laws to a society of men, which is the root and the foundation of tyranny and the very reason we rebelled against English monarchs to form this country! That kind of corruption of our laws began starting in around 1913, shortly after the Federal Reserve Act and the Sixteenth Amendment were passed. At that point, our government became a gigantic parasite completely unrestrained by the Constitutional limits that had kept it under control. It became a socialist bureaucracy bent on destroying our liberties and making itself into a false god.

The IRS publications are the only thing that most Americans have ever read that even comes close to claiming to represent what is in the real tax code found in the Internal Revenue Code. Because most people can’t afford a high-priced lawyer or accountant who understands the tax code completely, and don’t have the time to read the entire IRC or buy and read a comprehensive and complete book on taxes, then Americans in effect are economically coerced into relying on and having a “religious faith” in the IRS publications as their only source to understand what the tax code requires. Add to that the legal ignorance perpetuated in them by our government schools and you have additional government duress. Worst yet, the federal courts have said that none of these IRS publications are credible and that they “confer no rights”. Read the article on our website about this scam because it will blow your mind!:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm

Even the IRS says you can’t rely on their own publications in their Internal Revenue Manual:

"IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."
[IRM 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

So once again, if you haven’t personally read the entire Internal Revenue Code, don’t understand it completely, or have trusted the IRS publications, then your “faith” is ill-founded and in effect becomes “bad faith” because you are relying on a completely unaccountable, criminal, and lawless organization called the IRS to define and fulfill your purported legal responsibilities, and that can only be described as despicable, morally wrong, and biblically unsound:

"Bad faith. The opposite of “good faith,” generally implying or involving actual or constructive fraud, or a design to mislead or deceive another, or a neglect or refusal to fulfill some duty or some contractual obligation, not prompted by an honest mistake as to one’s rights or duties, but by some interested or sinister motive. Term ‘bad faith’ is not simply bad judgment or negligence, but rather it implies the conscious doing of a wrong because of dishonest purpose or moral obliquity; it is different from the negative idea of negligence in that it templates a state of mind affirmatively operating with furtive design or ill will..."

You are not alone in your compelled depravity and violation of God’s law because most Americans, including us, are just like you. But you have to trust “somebody” on this tax subject don’t you, because if you don’t file the government is going to go after you and penalize you, aren’t they? So you are compelled to have “faith” in something, right? You get to choose what that “something” is, but the result is a compelled “faith” or “trust” in “something” because of demands the government is making on you to satisfy your alleged tax responsibilities.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
Now if the Constitution says in the First Amendment that “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof”, and yet the IRS tells you under the “color of law” that you have to in effect trust or have “religious faith” in “something” in order to satisfy their criminal extortion under the “color of law”, then isn’t the government in effect “making a law respecting the establishment of a religion”? When corrupt judges make rulings on tax issues that violate the Constitution and prejudice our sacred rights, aren’t they making law? Isn’t this kind of judicial activism called “judge-made law” and isn’t Congress’ failure to discipline such tyrant judges the equivalent of allowing them to write law that will then be used as precedent in the future? Isn’t the object of that “religious faith” and “trust” that the government compels us to have the fraudulent IRS Publications directly, and the IRS who prepares them indirectly? So in effect, if the income tax is indeed an “enforced” or “compelled” tax, then the government has established “faith in the IRS” as a religion by the operation of law. And then the federal courts of that same government have turned around and said that even though the only basis for most people’s beliefs is the IRS publications, they aren’t trustworthy nor credible, and in fact, you can be penalized for relying on what the IRS told you in them! So you are in effect being compelled to trust or have “religious faith” in a lie, aren’t you? But then out of the other side of that same hypocritical and criminal government’s mouth, the U.S. supreme Court says:

“Courts, no more than the Constitutions, can intrude into the consciences of men or compel them to believe contrary to their faith or think contrary to their convictions, but courts are competent to adjudge the acts men do under the color of a constitutional right, such as that of freedom of speech or of the press or the free exercise of religion and to determine whether the claimed right is limited by other recognized powers, equally precious to mankind. So the mind and the spirit of man remain forever free, while his actions rest subject to necessary accommodation to the competing needs of his fellows.”

“Ordinances absolutely prohibiting [or penalizing] the exercise of the right to disseminate information are, a fortiori, invalid.”

And when we raise the issue in court that the payment of federal income taxes violates our religious beliefs as documented here, then the courts frequently say that our arguments are “frivolous”. See section 4.19 later and U.S. v. Lee, 455 U.S. 252 (1982) for further confirmation of how the government essentially labels our religious beliefs as being frivolous in the process of enforcing their “love for your money” in the courts. That too is a government action to create a religion, because all of the arguments here are based on the law and words right out of the mouths of the government’s own judges and lawyers. Indirectly, they are saying that their own words are frivolous! That’s religion and idolatry, and the object of worship is the almighty dollar. The result of them calling our claims “frivolous” is a maximization of federal revenues and personal retirement benefits of federal judges through illegal and unconstitutional extortion. That too violates Christian beliefs, which say that “covetousness” is idolatry, which is the religious worship of idols:

“Therefore put to death your members which are on the earth: fornication, uncleanness, passion, evil desire, and covetousness, which is idolatry.”

[Colossians 3:5, Bible, NKJV]

[1 Sam. 13:12-28, Bible, NKJV]

The implication of the above scripture is that when public servants in the government violate God’s law, they cease to be part of the government and are acting as private individuals absent the authority of law. They are no longer the sovereigns who are serving the public they are there to protect. Instead they are serving themselves mainly and thereby violating the fiduciary relationship they have as part of the public trust and federal corporation known as the “United States government” (see section 2.1 earlier for details). Christians are supposed to disobey such unlawful and immoral actions, including those of courts.

“We ought to obey God rather than men.”
[Acts 5:27-29, Bible, NKJV]

So we have a paradox, folks. Either Subtitle A income taxes are mandatory and enforced and “religious faith in the IRS” has become the new religion, or the taxes are instead entirely “voluntary” donations and therefore do not conflict with religious views or the First Amendment. We can’t have it both ways, but the government’s fraudulent way of calling them mandatory conflicts with so many aspects of our Constitution that we may as well throw the whole Bill of Rights in the toilet and tell everyone the truth: which is that all their freedoms are suspended to pay for the extravagant debts of an out-of-control government and everyone is an economic slave and a serf to the government.

In our time, government has not only become a religion, it has also become an anti-religion intent on driving Christianity out of public life so that its only competitor (God) can be eliminated and it can continue to grow in power without resistance and graduate to that of a totalitarian communist state. Christianity, it turns out, is the only competitor to government at the moment for the worship of the people, and the one thing that most minority groups focused on rights (homosexuals, women’s liberation, abortion, etc) have in common is a hate for Christianity, because Christianity is the only check on their corruption and hedonism. Christianity is the salt, the preservative, and the immune system for our society, and when you want to overtake society with sin and disease and death, the first thing you have to attack is its immune system.

The kind of idolatrous thinking that accepts the income tax as legal therefore leads to socialism ultimately, and turns the government into a tyrannical police state that robs citizens of their assets and puts them to use for the alleged "common good." It is a product of mobocracy masquerading as democracy, where less privileged or poorer groups use their voting power to compel the government to plunder the assets of wealthier people for their personal benefit. This is the central approach the demagogues (I mean democrats) use: buy votes with money extorted from hard-working citizens. The Supreme Court agreed precisely with these conclusions below in the case of Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874):

“To lay with one hand the power of government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it on favored individuals... is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation.
This is not legislation.  It is a decree under legislative forms.”

The only way a socialist state can justify its existence is to assert that the government knows better how to take care of you than you do, and past experience, especially with the Soviet Union, proves that approach doesn't work! Forcing you to have “faith” in the government is a violation of the First Amendment by establishing government as a “religion”. Worship of government as a religion is the essence of socialism. Socialism has never worked throughout all of history, because the corruption of men at the highest levels who are in charge of the public funds always leads to usury, abuse, evil, and tyrannical oppression of the people they are supposed to serve.

"Remember the word that I said to you, 'A servant is not greater than his master.' If they persecuted Me, they will also persecute you. If they kept My word, they will keep yours also. But all these things they will do to you for My name's sake, because they do not know Him who sent Me.”
[Jesus speaking in the Bible, John 15:20-21]

Our own country was formed by Christian patriots more than 200 years ago because they rejected this very thing happening to us! They founded the first country whose legal system was based entirely on Natural Law and Natural Order, which we further explain in sections 3.4 and 4.1.

Socialism also makes us into unwitting slaves of the government. Would anyone argue that we don't already have a police state, where the Gestapo are the tyrants at the IRS, and fear of the IRS is what keeps us paying our "tribute to the king" in the form of income taxes? Would anyone argue that we are not a country full of cowards when it comes to facing our oppressors? Realistically speaking: How long can cowards remain free and sovereign? Remember that the original American colonies waged an entire violent war of independence and risked everything they had to fight against Britain when their taxes to Britain were only 7%. Now some of us are paying 50% of our income in taxes without even flinching or whimpering or fighting. We’re a bunch of wimps if you ask me!
The point is that it’s much more difficult to put God first with federal income taxes because out of the remaining 50% of our income left after we pay taxes, we have to feed our families and pay our bills. Is it any wonder then that less than 1% of Christians tithe 10% of their income to the church as the Bible requires in Malachi 3:8-10? They can't afford to because they are being taxed/raped and financially enslaved by the government illegally! And then the IRS compels churches to shut up about this kind of abuse by taking away their 501(c )(3) tax-exempt status if they speak up!

But if you didn't have to pay income taxes and the IRS would honor your right to do so legally (why does the IRS call it "voluntary compliance" if we can’t choose not to pay?), wouldn't you give MUCH more to God and put God first? I certainly would! Therefore, implementing the advice found in this document will, in the long run, result in equipping you with the income you need to be more generous to your local church and to the noble causes and preservation of American liberties and freedoms that we all believe in.

HOWEVER: If your intent is to take the money you saved in taxes as a result of following the guidance in this document and spend it on your own selfish desires and not on the church (whatever church you belong to) or helping others, then you are violating the copyright on this document and acting illegally. We demand that you destroy this book and NOT read or use this document because we would submit that you are a less than honorable steward over the gracious gifts that God (whatever God you believe in) has bestowed upon you and deserve to have your income taken away by the tyrants at the IRS. Selfishness and deceit are their own best avengers, and we should rightly reap what we sow. Anything less would be to promote anarchy, hypocrisy, injustice, and oppression in our society. Recall that it was selfishness and vanity on the part of government employees which created the problems so clearly documented in this book to begin with. You can’t cure selfishness with more selfishness, and you will be maligning the tax honesty movement and other noble patriots by abusing these materials for your own selfish gain and associating yourself with them in so doing.

The above comment is based on the following scriptures:

1. “A man with an evil eye hastens after riches, and does not consider that poverty will come upon him.”
   [Prov. 28:22, Bible, NKJV]
2. “Do not lay up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust destroy and where thieves [the IRS and the government] break in and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust destroys and where thieves do not break in and steal. For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also.”
   [Matt. 6:19-21, Bible, NKJV]

Now some of you, in fear, might say that we need to obey the government and not make any noise. When should a Christian disobey the civil government? (Rom. 13:7; Acts 5:27-29) When a civil government refuses people the liberty to worship and obey God freely or violates God’s law, it has lost its mandate of authority from God. Then the Christian should feel justified and maybe even compelled in disobeying. How are we to worship God freely? With the first fruits of our labor and our income!

Ben Franklin, who incidentally was one of the attendees at the Constitutional Convention, believed that when a government began to be tyrannical, it was the right and even the DUTY of the citizens to rebel against that government. Here is what he said:

   “Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God.”
   [Alex Hamilton]

The Christian, however, is called to bear with his government whenever possible, but there must be a limit to that forbearance.

   “Those who stand for nothing will fall for anything.”
   [Alex Hamilton]
Jesus did not call for revolution against Rome, even though it was an oppressive conqueror of Israel. On the other hand, the apostles refused to obey a government order not to preach and teach in Jesus’ name (Acts 5:27-29). On that occasion, one of Jesus’ apostles said:

“We ought to obey God rather than men.”

Whenever the civil government forbids the practice of things that God has commanded us to do, or tells us to do things He has commanded us not to do, then we are on solid ground in disobeying the government. Blind obedience to government is never right or biblically sound. However difficult or costly it may be, we all must reserve the right to say no to things that we consider oppressive or immoral or sinful. If we don’t and we make government our unquestioned god, here is the future that awaits us:

The 23rd Psalm (A present-day Lamentation)

The politician is my shepherd...I am in want;
He maketh me to lie down on park benches,
He leadeth me beside still factories;
He disturbeth my soul.
Yea, thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of depression and recession,
I anticipate no recovery, for he is with me.
He prepareth a reduction in my salary in the presence of my enemies;
He anointeth my small income with great losses;
My expenses runneth over.
Surely unemployment and poverty shall follow me all the days of my life,
And I shall dwell in a mortgaged house forever.

4.3.14 Socialism is Incompatible with Christianity

"The American people will never knowingly adopt socialism. But, under the name of "liberalism", they will adopt every fragment of the socialist program, until one day America will be a socialist nation, without knowing how it happened."
[Norman Thomas, for many years the U.S. Socialist Party presidential candidate ]

"We cannot expect the Americans to jump from Capitalism to Communism, but we can assist their elected leaders in giving Americans small doses of Socialism, until they suddenly awake to find they have Communism."
[Nikita Kruschev, Premiere of the former Soviet Union, 3-1/2 months before his first visit to the United States.]

"But why, you might ask, should the richest people in the world promote a socialistic system? The answer appears to be that under socialism the state owns everything, and these people intend, quite simply, to own the state. It is the neatest and completest way of bagging the lot!"
[W.D. Chalmers in "The Conspiracy Of Truth"]

"Socialism is not in the least what it pretends to be. It is not the pioneer of a better and finer world, but the spoiler of what thousands of years of civilization have created. It does not build, it destroys. For destruction is the essence of it. It produces nothing, it only consumes what the social order based on private ownership in the means of production has created."
[Ludwig von Mises ("Socialism", 1922)]

"Freedom is the Right to Choose, the Right to create for oneself the alternatives of Choice. Without the possibility of Choice, and the exercise of Choice, a man is not a man but a member, an instrument, a thing [of a larger collective]."
[Thomas Jefferson]

The Supreme Court ruled in the case of Helvering v. Davis, 301 U.S. 619 (1937) and Flemming v. Nestor, 363 U.S. 603 (1960), that Social Security (and by implication all other government social programs!) are NOT insurance and are NOT a contract. The government isn’t obligated to pay you back anything, much less even the amount of money you put into any social (or should we say socialist?) program (see section 2.9.1 for further details on this). Because Social Security is therefore not insurance and not a trust fund, then what should Christians view it as? It is theft, plain and simple!

Social Security is socialism. Socialism is theft. Theft is a sin. There was never a promise to pay benefits. Rights can only come from responsibilities. You won't understand this yet, but those who accept public benefits cannot have rights. The Supreme Court agreed precisely with these conclusions below:

“To lay with one hand the power of government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it on favored individuals... is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.”
[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874):]

“A tax, in the general understanding of the term and as used in the constitution, signifies an exaction for the support of the government. The word has never thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another.”
[U.S. v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 (1936)]

“A statutory provision which is not a legitimate police regulation cannot be made such by being placed in the same act with a police regulation, or by being enacted under a title that declares a purpose which would be a proper object for the exercise of that power.

“It being self-evident that, unless all things are held in common, some persons must have more property than others, it is from the nature of things impossible to uphold freedom of contract and the right of private property without at the same time recognizing as legitimate those inequalities of fortune that are the necessary result of the exercise of those rights.

“The Fourteenth Amendment recognizes "liberty" and "property" as coexistent human rights, and debars the states from any unwarranted interference with either.

"Since a state may not strike down the rights of liberty or property directly, it may not do so indirectly, as by declaring in effect that the public good requires the removal of those inequalities that are but the normal and inevitable result of the exercise of those rights, and then invoking the police power in order to remove the inequalities, without other object in view.

"The Fourteenth Amendment debar the states from striking down personal liberty or property rights or materially restricting their normal exercise excepting so far as may be incidentally necessary for the accomplishment of some other and paramount object, and one that concerns the public welfare. The mere restriction of liberty or of property rights cannot, of itself, be denominated "public welfare" and treated as a legitimate object of the police power, for such restriction is the very thing that is inhibited by the Amendment."
[Coppage v. Kansas, 236 U.S. 1 (1915)]

The reason why the Supreme Court ruled the way it did above is because:

“Democracy is a form of government that cannot long survive, for as soon as the people learn that they have a voice in the fiscal policies of the government, they will move to vote for themselves all the money in the treasury, and bankrupt the nation”.
[Karl Marx, 1848 author of “The Communist Manifesto”]

What protects us as Americans from the above excesses of democracy and mobocracy is the mandate imposed in Article 4, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution to provide a Republican Government, which by implication is based on individual rather than collective sovereignty and rights as you will find out later in section 4.5:

“The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government...”

The U.S. Supreme Court in the landmark case of Pollock v. Farmers Loan and Trust, 157 U.S. 429 (1895), which outlawed income taxes legislated by Congress, said the following regarding what happens when the government becomes a Robinhood and tries to promote equality of result rather than equality of opportunity. We end up with class warfare, in society done using the force of law and a mobocracy mentality:

“The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger and more sweeping, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing intensity and bitterness.

Federal funds are not available to ordinary persons. Only indigents can qualify to receive federal benefits. It is highly unlikely that you ever qualified for a Social Security Card. Section 205(c)(2)(B)(i) of the Social Security Act allows government to assign Social Security Numbers to applicants for benefits financed with government funds. Unless you need federal benefits, Social Security Cards are not available to you. You cannot qualify for a number. That's right! SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS ARE NOT AVAILABLE TO THOSE WHO CAN PROVIDE FOR THEMSELVES. If you can still provide for yourself, or if your family or church or state can support you, it would be fraud to apply for federal benefits.

Let me repeat this essential fact is several ways, until you understand: The application for an SS Card (the SS-5 form) is a form limited to a very specific purpose. It is only for indigents who need federal funds. People who can provide for themselves cannot be indigent. Social Security Cards cannot be issued to anyone until they apply for federal benefits. The government cannot know who is destitute; they must wait for applicants desperate enough to apply for federal funds. _It must be voluntary._ Social Security has no trust fund; it is solely a handout. Only wards of the government (card carrying socialists) can receive the benefits of National Socialism.

To remain constitutional, only wards of the government can receive benefits. This is a vow of poverty. You exchanged your rights to all future wages for the false promise of future benefits. You did so voluntarily. I'll discuss labor rights and poverty vows and taxable wages in other chapters.

According to the legal definition of "Tacit Procuration", you grant them the power of attorney if you expect them to provide for you. You asked them to provide for you - To steal for you. Government does not and cannot create wealth, it must tax in order to give. Government cannot provide benefits unless it takes them from someone else. Socialism is theft of your neighbor's money. Your new master will take money from your neighbors, against their will, and over their objections. These civil servants will eventually resort to the force of guns, on your behalf, to seize property from any neighbor who stubbornly and repeatedly refuses to hand over whatever is demanded. It is theft. They call it distraint. It is not insurance.

Proverbs 1:10-19 gives us advice about those who entrap the innocent to fill their house with plunder.

In Matt 20:25-27 and Mark 10:42-43 and Luke 22:25-27 Jesus tells us to not have dominion over others, but to serve. CHRISTIANS SERVE. CHRISTIANS DON'T LORD over those who are not under them. Not by force, not by vote, not by hiring a servant and then delegating to the servant an authority to steal - an authority that you don't have. Again: Christians don't have dominion over their neighbors. You cannot tax your neighbors to fund your retirement, and that’s exactly what you are doing by collecting a Social Security Check, because the government isn’t paying back the money you put in. As a matter of fact, it pays back many times the value of the money you put in and doesn’t maintain a trust balance at all. Everything it takes in is paid right back out to beneficiaries!

Since there is no trust fund (nor can there be one) - Only by the deepest commitment to covetousness can you force others to pay for your retirement (or pay your doctor bills, or pay to educate your children). You are coveting your neighbors' goods. You are forcing your dominion over those who are not subject to your authority, contrary to Christ's command.

Conversely, if your bank account and property can be seized to pay for your neighbor's retirement (or doctor bills or tuition), then you must have somehow lost your right to keep 'your' property or money. What do you suppose that you signed to waive any right to keep 'your' property?

Have you become surety for the debts of a stranger? The security in Social Security is social. Look up "social insurance" in a law dictionary. You have become surety for your neighbor. Proverbs 11:15 "He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it: and he that hateth suretiship is sure." Also: Proverbs 17:18

Only wards of the government (card carrying socialists) can receive the benefits of National Socialism.

SS is not a trust fund or insurance, it is an excise tax on the benefits of a limited citizenship (including the government granted privilege of earning wages). This tax revenue goes into the general fund. Authority for this taxation comes from... the Buck Act, not the Internal Revenue Code. It is presumed, but not required, that congress will appropriate funds each year for maintenance of the government wards. The Supreme Court ruled in 1980 that Social Security benefits are not based on a fixed contract and therefore can change or be eliminated at any time. Fleming v. Nestor, 80 S.Ct. 1367.

In the 1891 naturalization case of Mr. Sauer, Title 81 Federal Reporter page 358 the court held that Mr. Sauer, although an industrious, law abiding man, could not become a citizen because he claimed to be a Socialista. Socialists could not become citizens. And they still cannot. I have another chapter that cites every court case where people were forced to get Social Security numbers. Every case is a welfare applicant. Social Security Numbers are only for socialists. Socialists cannot have rights. Read Appendix C of Mark of the Beast and prove to yourself that they have changed their citizenship and are not protected by the first eight amendments to your Constitution (Hague case) and do not have the right to a trial by jury (Colegate case). If you want to lose your birthright just fill out a form claiming socialist benefits. If you think you still have a right to a trial by jury, read Appendix F of Mark of the Beast.

A Christian cannot be a socialist. Christians are not to associate with freeloaders, according to 2nd Thessalonians 3:6-14:

2nd Thessalonians 3:6 (NIV): In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, we command you, brothers, to keep away from every brother who is idle and does not live according to the teaching you received from us.

3:7 For you yourselves know how you ought to follow our example. We were not idle when we were with you, nor did we eat anyone's food without paying for it. On the contrary, we worked night and day, laboring and toiling so that we would not be a burden to any of you.

3:9 We did this, not because we do not have the right to such help, but in order to make ourselves a model for you to follow.

3:10 For even when we were with you, we gave you this rule: "If a man will not work, he shall not eat." I want to interject a note here: this isn't a snobbish threat to starve the poor, it is a fundamental Biblical principle. In the same sentence where God condemned us to die, he condemned us to work for food. That's right! To acknowledge socialism is to deny God's authority. Genesis 3:19 (KJV): "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." The socialists that want you to provide not only their food but also health care, deny God's authority to sentence us to hardships.

3:11 We hear that some among you are idle. They are not busy; they are busybodies.

3:12 Such people we command and urge in the Lord Jesus Christ to settle down and earn the bread they eat.

3:13 And as for you, brothers, never tire of doing what is right.

3:14 If anyone does not obey our instruction in this letter, take special note of him. Do not associate with him, in order that he may feel ashamed.”

That the freeloader may feel ashamed. I've been told that I am too sarcastic just because I quote the Bible.

Do not confuse voluntary charity with forced socialism. Christians are often in need of charity, yet cannot accept socialism.

"We have rights, as individuals, to give as much of our own money as we please to charity; but as members of Congress we have no right so to appropriate a dollar of public money." [David Crockett, Congressman 1827-35]

Does the Bible support the notion that socialism can provide for Christians? Let's take a closer look:

- 1st Thessalonians 2:9 (NIV): "Surely you remember, brothers, our toil and hardship; we worked night and day in order not to be a burden to anyone ..."
- 1st Thessalonians 4:11-12 "work with your hands...so that you will not be dependent on anybody."
- 1st Corinthians 4:11 (NIV): "To this very hour we go hungry and thirsty, we are in rags, we are brutally treated, we are homeless." [note: they were homeless but they were not freeloaders. Even Christ was homeless, Matt 8:20, Luke 9:58.]
- Proverbs 10:26: (NKJV) “As vinegar to the teeth and smoke to the eyes, so is the lazy man to those who send him.”
- Proverbs 20:4: (NKJV): “The lazy man will not plow because of winter; he will beg during harvest and have nothing.”
- Proverbs 21:25 (KJV): "The desire of the slothful killeth him; for his hands refuse to labour."
Ephesians 4:28 (NIV): "He who has been stealing must steal no longer, but must work, doing something useful with his own hands, that he may have something to share with those in need."

Acts 14:22 (NIV): "We must go through many hardships to enter the kingdom of God," [You will understand this after you study the topic of citizenship]

Luke 19:26 (NIV): "He replied, 'I tell you that to everyone who has, more will be given, but as for the one who has nothing, even what he has will be taken away."

2 Corinthians 11:9 (NIV) "And when I was with you and needed something, I was not a burden to anyone,... I have kept myself from being a burden to you in any way, and will continue to do so."

2 Corinthians 7:2 (NIV) "... we have exploited no one."

Jesus is quoted in Matthew 25:29-30 (KJV) "For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Proverbs 13:4 (NIV) “The sluggard craves and gets nothing, but the desires of the diligent are fully satisfied.”

Proverbs 20:4 (KJV) “The sluggard will not plow by reason of the cold; therefore shall he beg in harvest, and have nothing.”

If a Christian cannot be a socialist, then a Christian cannot have an ID card available only to socialists. Theodore Roosevelt:

"The first requisite of a citizen in this Republic of ours, is that he shall be able and willing to pull his own weight."

As further proof that socialists have never had rights, in Appendix C of Social Security: Mark of the Beast read where the Articles of Confederation extended the rights of citizenship to inhabitants with the exceptions of paupers and vagabonds and fugitives. A vagrant is not a vagabond. Even Christ was homeless (Matt 8:20, Luke 9:58). A vagabond is a homeless freeloader. A pauper is a person who must be supported at public expense. Social Security partakers are supported at public expense, therefore cannot have the rights of citizens anymore than a fugitive would have.

The English word "stigma" comes from the Greek and, in English, means a mark of shame or a brand of disgrace. The third six in 666 is the Greek stigma (666= chi-xi-stigma). The mark is not necessarily a tattoo or implant. Do you have a permanent mark of shame?

Conclusions so far: There is no Social Security trust fund, there is no insurance, and there is no pension. It is plunder. It is pure orthodox socialism. Socialists are not and cannot become citizens. Socialists cannot have rights. Never could, still can’t. Christians cannot be socialists. Christians cannot have socialist ID. Did your government school teach you this?

PUBLIC EDUCATION

Karl Marx wrote the Communist Manifesto in 1848. Public schools is the 10th plank. As I said earlier: Those who accept public benefits cannot have rights. Rights can only come from responsibilities. You have no right to force others to pay your Children’s tuition. Hillary Clinton’s village will raise the children of those who forfeit their rights to their own children. Even the U.S. Supreme Court in Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390 (1923), concluded

"it is the natural duty of the parent to give his children education suitable to their station in life..."

The U.S. Supreme Court in Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202 (1982), concluded, "...education is not a fundamental right..."

"the Fourteenth Amendment's protection extends to anyone, citizen or stranger, who is subject to the laws of a State..."

US Congressman in the 1840’s Robert Dale Owen, later known as the father of American socialism, believed that the Christian faith hindered man’s evolution. An Owen associate wrote:

"The great object was to get rid of Christianity and to convert our churches into halls of science... the plan was not to make open attacks upon religion - although we might belabor the clergy and bring them into contempt where we could... but to establish a system of state - we said national - schools... from which all religion would be excluded and to which all parents were to be compelled by law to send their children."
These views influenced John Dewey at the Columbia Teacher's College, and by 1900 a socialist system of compulsory schools, which exclude religion, became a reality.

SUMMARY

The seven-headed scarlet beast is a socialist confederation of beast powers that raised up from the sea. The sea symbolizes multitudes of people (Rev 17:5). Seas of people (democracies) demand socialist benefits. These people received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. They want to be taken care of, but not by God. They won't accept the responsibility to take care of themselves, or suffer God's trials. They fabricated a counterfeit image of God [the government] to provide for them and protect them. They get their rights from their god that they created. This is without a doubt idolatry and the new god is government. Here is the way one of our readers described it:

"The people want 'Zeus' and 'Gods'?gods' --- paganism!
'They' got PAY-GUN-ISM!!!"

They expect you to worship their counterfeit image of God. In their courts, your rights come from the god they created.

"Accustomed to trampling on the rights of others, you have lost the genius of your own independence and become the fit subjects of the first cunning tyrant who rises among you."

[Abraham Lincoln, September 11, 1858]

4.3.15 All Governments are Corporations

According to the U.S. Supreme Court, all governments are corporations:

"Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politque or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals, 2 Inst. 46 - 7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."

[Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

The above quote from the U.S. Supreme Court is further confirmed by the United States Code:

United States Code
TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
CHAPTER 176 - FEDERAL DEBT COLLECTION PROCEDURE
SUBCHAPTER A - DEFINITIONS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS
Sec. 3002, Definitions

(15) "United States" means -
(A) a Federal corporation;
(B) an agency, department, commission, board, or other entity of the United States; or
(C) an instrumentality of the United States.

The fact that all governments are corporations and that the United States government is a federal corporation means that their authority is limited by their corporate charter. In the case of our federal government, that corporate charter is the Constitution of the United States of America. Any attempt to violate the corporate charter amounts to an assault on the liberties of the body politic that granted the charter, which is us as the Sovereigns, who are “We the People”.

Our federal government has obviously violated its corporate charter and thereby wreaked havoc on our society. The following Declaration was written by an enlightened legal researcher, Dessie Andrews, as a way to show not only how the legal profession has corrupted our system of government, but how we can put it back inside the box that its corporate charter was supposed to keep in. She proposes that we should convene a Third Continental Congress which should resolve to pass the following Declaration, which would dissolve the criminal government of the United States because it has violated its charter. We believe she is onto something and we urge you to read this important work. If you would like to contact her, send an email to: dessieandrews@earthlink.net:

The unanimous Declaration of Independence of the fifty united States of America,

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one nation of Sovereigns to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men and women are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness, Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of Government. The history of the present regime and all those regimes leading up to this time, from the very foundation and grant of the limited delegation of authority in the contract known as the United States Constitution is a history of repeated injuries and usurpation, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States and their People. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to an august body of advisors to Congress.

A government functions as a corporation. Inasmuch as every government is an artificial person, an abstraction, and a creature of the mind only, a government can interface only with other artificial persons. The imaginary—having neither actuality nor substance — is foreclosed from creating and attaining parity with the tangible. The legal manifestation of this is that no government, as well as any law, agency, aspect, court, etc., can concern itself with anything other than corporate artificial persons and the contracts between them.

A corporation, to remain in business, must abide by its corporate charter and can assume no more power than those granted it by its creators. The present corporation, the “government” of the United States, or United States of America, has long ago burst its corporate bonds and assumed control of its Grantors. This can no longer be tolerated and must end. The trustees of this sacred trust have run amok.

They have laid war and emergency powers over this land in order to create chaos and subject the People to military rule.

They have divested the People of their freeholds in order to steal their electoral rights in exchange for voting franchises. The Reconstruction Acts.

They have systematically and with great patience stolen the birthright of every American and state Citizen and replaced it with a yoke of duties and obligations to the created creature.

They have codified the Law and overlaid it with codes and statutes. The Revised Statutes of the United States in 1878.

They have not enacted law, as Constitutionally mandated, since 1879, but rather, have initiated “public policy”.

They have created a “government” outside the Charter and pretend to fill the offices which have remained vacant since 1871. In so doing, they ended the separation of powers guaranteed to the People, ending any responsibilities assumed under the mantle of the office of officer and became one body of employees. The Civil Service Act of 1883.
They have legislated away the Peoples’ Circuit courts. The Judiciary Act of 1911.

They have created a central bank in defiance of the Framers’ express wishes and orders. Federal Reserve Act of 1913

They have abolished the several States and State Citizens with the passage of the 17th Amendment in 1913.

They have given the substance of every state Citizen to a private corporation, the Federal Reserve, with the Glass-Steagall Act of 1933.

They have stolen the assets, energy, property and futures of every state Citizen and pledged them to foreign corporations.

They have openly declared the People to be enemies of the State.

They have initiated policies in violation of the takings clause in their Corporate charter, in order to fund social programs and redistribute wealth.

They have undermined the educational process in the several States and created a slave force with the uneducated.

They have snatched the children from their natural parents through the use of the doctrine of parens patriae.

They, by their charter, being confined to the ten mile square area known as Washington DC, have created agencies to justify their intrusion upon and into the several States.

They have eliminated the People’s courts and a duly elected Congress and left the People with no redress of grievances.

They have instituted Roman civil law on the land under the guise of Corporate courts.

They have implemented a Bar Association to still the voice of the People in their Corporate courts.

They have tricked the People into invisible contracts with guile and deceit and without full disclosure, into exchanging their Sovereign standing for that of a Corporate employee status.

They hold the People in slavery with their presumptions, their courts and their police powers.

They have waged war and committed unspeakable atrocities in my name on innocent peoples and nations, without declaring war.

They have obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing to Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers, instead they sit in administrative, corporate courts.

They have made Judges dependent on their will alone, for the tenure of their offices and the amount and payment of their salaries.

They have erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of employees, masquerading as Officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

They have kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the consent of the legislatures, by declaring constant and chronic emergencies.

They have affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil powers. They have combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving their Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation.

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us.

For protecting them, by a mock Trial or investigation, from punishment for any Murders or other atrocities they should commit on the Inhabitants of the several States.

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent.
For depriving us of the benefits of Trial by Jury.

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments.

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

They have abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of their Protection and waging War against us.

They have brought the law of the seas onto the land, bringing with it its system of taxes, fines and penalties, thus destroying the lives of our people.

They are, at this time, transporting large Armies to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy of the leaders of a civilized nation.

They have bankrupted the United States corporation too many times to count, have initiated Reorganization after Reorganization, each time being more onerous to the People and each time divesting them of more rights and replacing them with government issued privileges and benefits.

They have created worthless military scrip, removed all backing of substance of any currency and forced the People to trade with worthless scrip and credit, thereby stealing the substance of the People and eroding their worth with inflation.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms. Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Government Pretender whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the holder of the sacred trust of a free people.

The actors conspiring under color of law to undermine the integrity and substance of the People, have accomplished these acts by counterfeiting the Seals of States and Offices, to deceive the People.

For these reasons and more, I, one of the descendants of the declarers of the Declaration of Independence of 1776 do solemnly Publish and Declare, That the People of the several States are, and of Right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT PEOPLE OF THE SEVERAL STATES; that they are absolved from all Allegiance to the corporate United States of America, that they no longer have a republican, representative form of government. That the employees of the United States of America long ago exceeded their trust which was granted to them by the People with limited delegation of powers. That, as Creators of the Corporation known as the United States of America, we hereby disband and dissolve the corporate charter which was granted in trust.

That I, the undersigned, was endowed with unalienable rights from my Creator. That I rely on the Protection of divine Providence, and with this compact, pledge to my fellow men and women my Life, my Fortune and my sacred Honor.

4.3.16 How public servants eliminate or avoid or hide the requirement for “consent” to become “Masters”

“Good intentions will always be pleaded for every assumption of authority. It is hardly too strong to say that the Constitution was made to guard the people against the dangers of good intentions. There are men in all ages who mean to govern well, but they mean to govern. They promise to be good masters, but they mean to be masters.”

[Noah Webster]

Earlier in section 4.3.1, we showed how all just government authority derives from the “consent” of the governed, starting with the Declaration of Independence on down. The implication of this requirement of law is that all good governments and the public servants working within them should always remind us that they need our consent to do anything and they must explicitly ask for our consent in writing before they accomplish anything on our behalf. That consent must come in all of the following coinciding forms:

1. There must be a positive law statute which our elected representatives passed and therefore consented to authorizing absolutely everything they are doing for us.
2. There must be a regulation published in the Federal register or the state register that implements the statute and which:
    2.1. Gives due notice to the public that their rights may be adversely affected by enforcing the new law.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

2.2. Gives an opportunity for public comment and review to discern legislative intent and the proper enforcement of the law.

2.3. Reconciles the broad language of the statute against the requirements of the Bill of Rights.

3. There must be a delegation of authority for the specific government agent who is implementing the regulations and the statutes within the agency in question. Anything not explicitly in the delegation of authority order may not be accomplished.

4. If the statute and implementing regulation creates a privilege that we have to volunteer for in order to receive, there must be a form signed by us and received by the government which shows that we elected to voluntarily participate in the privilege and pay the corresponding tax. If we wish to qualify the conditions under which we consent to the program, the application for the program must also have an attachment containing additional provisions that we place upon our participation, so as to completely define the extent of our “consent”. The government application should also explicitly and completely define the specific rights we are giving up in order to procure the government privilege.

The above requirements effectively put government servants inside of a box which they cannot legally go outside of without being personally liable for a tort, which is an involuntary violation of rights to life, liberty, or property. The minute our public servants stop asking for our consent, our signature, and our permission and stop reading and obeying the regulations and delegation of authority orders that limit their authority whenever they are dealing with us is the point at which they are trying to become masters and tyrants and make us into slaves. Jesus warned us this was going to happen when he said:

"Remember the word that I said to you. "A [public] servant is not greater than his master [the American People]." If they persecuted Me, they will also persecute you [because you emphasize this relationship]. If they kept My word [God's Law], they will keep yours [the Constitution] also."

[Jesus in John 15:20, Bible, NKJV]

Positive law is essentially an agreement, a contract, a delegation of authority, and a promise by the government, in effect, to only do what we, the Sovereigns and their Master, consented explicitly to allow them to do, and to respect our sacred God-given rights while they are doing it.

"No legislative act [of the SERVANT] contrary to the Constitution [delegation of authority from the MASTER] can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy [public SERVANT] is greater than his principal [the sovereign American People]: that the servant is above the master; that the representatives of the people are superior to the [SOVEREIGN] people [as individuals]; that men, acting by virtue of [delegated] powers may do not only what their [delegated] powers do not authorize, but what they forbid…[text omitted] It is not otherwise to be supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by judges, as fundamental law [a DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY FROM THE MASTER TO THE SERVANT]. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute."

[Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper # 78]

As concerned Americans who want to preserve our liberties and freedoms, we must be ever-vigilant and watchful when our government steps outside the boundaries of the law by ignoring the requirement for consent in all the forms listed above. We must ensure that specific challenges to our sovereignty and authority by defiant public dis-servants are met with an appropriate and timely response which emphasizes in no uncertain terms “who is boss”. Parents frequently must do the same thing with their children. The Bible says we should not spare the rod for our children or our servants, because it is the only way we will ever stay free and have peace at home.

"But if that servant says in his heart 'My master is delaying his coming,' and begins to beat the male and female servants, and to eat and drink and be drunk, the master of that servant will come on a day when he is not looking for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in two and appoint him his portion with the unbelievers. And that servant who knew his master's will, and did not prepare himself or do according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes."

[Luke 12:45-47, Bible, NKJV]

"He who spares his rod [of discipline] hates his son, But he who loves him disciplines him promptly."

[Prov. 13:24, Bible, NKJV]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

In a free society with a free press, open defiance by public servants of the Constitution, the law, and their delegation of authority and open violations of our rights are more difficult to get away with than in totalitarian or communist countries where the press is state controlled. Therefore, the means of defiance must be much more subtle and made to look simply like an “accident”, or a product of “bureaucracy” or mismanagement or inefficiency, rather than what it really is: Open, rebellious, willful defiance of the law and violation of our rights. Because people will rebel against sudden changes, public servants intent on seizing and usurping power from their master, the People, are very aware of the fact that they must take baby steps to make any headway in the struggle for control. Here is how one of our readers wisely describes it:

“The devil always works in baby steps. If you put a frog in hot water, he will immediately jump out. But if you put him in cool water and then gradually raise the temperature over tens or even hundreds of years, then you can boil the frog alive and he won’t even know how it happened.”

This section will therefore focus on how to recognize very subtle and insidious but prevalent techniques that our public dis-servants commonly use to sidestep the requirement for consent and usurp authority to transform themselves from servants to masters. We already covered the more obvious and blatant means of effecting tyranny earlier in section 2.8. This section and its subsections will focus on much more subtle, devious, and insidious techniques at rebellion by our public servants. Once we are trained to recognize these techniques, we will be better equipped to meet them with an appropriate response that protects our rights and liberties and reminds them “who’s boss”. We have traced the history of many of the insidious corrupting steps taken by public dis-servants since the beginning of our country within Chapter 6 of this book. That chapter makes very interesting reading for history buffs and also provides powerful confirmation of the techniques documented in succeeding subsections.

4.3.16.1 Rigging government forms to create false presumptions and prejudice our rights

By far the most common method to hide or eliminate consent from the governance process is the insidious rigging of government forms to create false presumptions in the reader and thereby prejudice out rights. This method involves:

1. Constricting the choices offered on a government form to only those outcomes that the government wants and removing all others, even though there are other more desirable and valid legal choices.
2. Using labels that are incorrect to identify the party filling out the form in some way, such as “taxpayer”, or “resident”, or “citizen”.
3. Modifying the perjury statement at the end of the form to create false presumptions about our residency.

The above techniques most commonly appear on the following types of forms:

1. Jury summons.
2. Voter registration.
3. Tax returns.
4. Withholding forms
5. Driver’s license applications.

In an effort to prevent prejudicing our rights, we have downloaded most of the above types of forms and modified them electronically to remove false or misleading labels and to restore the missing choices from the forms. You can view the tax-related modified forms on our website below. The modified versions of the forms appear in the column entitled ”Amended form”. The page also describes the changes that have been made to the forms to remove false presumptions or restricted choices:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IRS/IRSFormsPubs.htm

4.3.16.2 Misrepresenting the law in government publications

Tyrants focus on propaganda as a major way to expand their power and influence. Propaganda is a very efficient means of political control because it is inexpensive and does not require the use of guns or force or a military. Such propaganda is implemented by three chief methods:

1. Government ownership or control or regulation of the media and press, including television stations and newspapers.
2. Eliminating private education and forcing children to be educated in government-run public schools. Teaching evolution instead of creationism to take the focus off God and religion, and to make Government a replacement for God and an idol to young minds. This breeds an atheistic society that is hostile to God.

3. Misrepresenting what the laws say in government publications.

The media and the public education system, once they are put under government control or regulation, are then used as a vehicle to deceive and brainwash the people to believe lies that expand government power and control further. This very technique, in fact, is part of the original Communist Manifesto written by Karl Marx, which calls for:

Sixth Plank: Centralization of the means of communications and transportation in the hands of the State. (read DOT, FAX, FCC etc...)

Tenth Plank: Free education for all children in public schools. Abolition of Children’s factory labor in its present form. Combination of education with industrial production.

We will focus the remainder of this section on the third approach used to implement propaganda, which is that of misrepresenting what the law says in government publications. The surest way to know whether the laws are being misrepresented in government publications is to:

1. Examine whether the people in government who are doing the misrepresentation are being held personally accountable by our legal system for their actions to deceive the people.

2. Pose pointed questions to the author of the deceiving publication that will help expose the deception. If the government responds with either silence (the Fifth Amendment response), gives a personal opinion instead of citing relevant law, or further tries to confuse or mislead the questioner, then one can safely conclude that the government knows what they are doing is wrong and is trying to cover it up.

The First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States is designed to ensure an accountable government. The Right to Petition clause of the First Amendment, in particular, demands that the government answer the petitions of the people for redress of grievances, including petitions that include questions or inquiries about government improprieties. In practice, our government ignores the First Amendment Petition for Redress clause repeatedly. This violation of our Constitution by specific public dis-servants and the refusal of the federal courts to hold specific IRS employees accountable for the content of IRS publications are the main influences that propagate and expand willful constructive fraud and deceit that permeates government tax publications. The fraud and deceit, in turn, are what maintains the high level of “voluntary compliance” currently existing.

Within government publications, the main method for fraud and deceit is to use “words of art” without clarifying that the words used are clearly different from common understanding. We pointed this out earlier in section 3.9.1, when we analyzed various words of art commonly found in the Internal Revenue Code. The key “words of art” were described in that section, and the most important ones are:

- “employee”
- “employer”
- “income”
- “taxpayer”
- “State”
- “United States”
- “trade or business”
- “nonresident alien”

We also discussed earlier in section 3.16 how both the IRS’ own Internal Revenue Manual and the courts refuse to hold the IRS accountable for the content of their publication. The section below from the IRM below clearly establishes that you can’t rely on anything on an IRS form or publication:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Consequently, you can’t trust anything the IRS puts out on a government form or a publication, and the courts have even said you can be penalized for relying on IRS advice! See the article below:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm

Is it any wonder that the author of the publications is not identified and that the lies and deception contained in IRS publications continues? Can you also see that if the IRS did tell the whole truth in their publications about the use of their “words of art”, that almost no one would participate in the federal donation program deceitfully called a “tax”? This deception and hypocrisy is unconscionable and must be righted. It can only be fixed by holding the IRS and their employees just as liable for false statements in their publications as Americans are held liable for what they put on government tax forms. If their publications are wrong or misleading, then the author should go to jail. All IRS publications must also be signed under penalty of perjury by the IRS commissioner, just like the IRS tries to force us to do on our tax forms.

4.3.16.3 Automation

Bureaucrats just love automation because it gives them a convenient excuse to blame the lack of their “ability” to satisfy the requirement to procure your consent upon an impersonal computer that they have no control over and no one person is responsible for. The most common place this happens is:

1. Mandating the use of Socialist Security Numbers. The Socialist Security Administration, for instance, said in a signed letter we received from them that there is no requirement to either have or use a Socialist Security Number, which implies that its use is “voluntary” and “consensual”. On they other hand, most government agencies when you call them up, they will tell you that you HAVE to provide a Socialist Security Number in order for them to be “able” to help you or to process your “application” and that their computer won’t work without it. If you tell them that they do not have your consent to use a Socialist Security Number to process your application, they will tell you that they have to deny you some privilege or benefit, as though them doing anything for you is a privilege and not a right.

2. In many cases you may want to protect your rights by providing a an attachment to staple to your paper government application that qualifies and defines the extent of your “consent”. We have tried this several times and they have told us that they don’t keep attachments, and in fact shred not only your attachment but also the original paper application after they enter only the relevant data into the computer. If you ask them if they scan in the application or the attachment before shredding, they will say no. This is destroying evidence! This is also a violation of the First Amendment, which guarantees us a right of free speech and to define how we communicate with our government. When you complain about it, they will typically say they do this to promote “efficiency”. When you ask them if they have a field to enter important notes on their terminal screen, they will say none is provided.

3. When a government dis-servant has violated the requirement for consent in the methods above and you call to complain and find a person accountable for the problem, your public servants will knowingly use automation to avoid personal accountability. Most large federal agencies have a “voicemail jail” front end to their phone support so that it is virtually impossible to get through to a specific person to complain or to talk to the last person who helped you. When you login to their website, you will also find that there is no way to find the identify or contact information of a specific person or their specific job function. This discourages personal responsibility by specific government servants, which in turn encourages abuse and tyranny. Bureaucrats just love this approach, because then they can say they must be doing what Americans want because they never hear any complaints! The IRS support line, for instance, is an example of that. It takes almost two hours on hold waiting to get help, when they talk to you they are trained to be rude if you bring up the law, they won’t give you their full name or direct phone number, and it is virtually impossible to talk to the same person who was handling your case on the last call. This is no accident: it is a defect in customer service deliberately engineered to frustrate, exasperate, and alienate you so that you will just pay up and go away.

4. When the government maintains records about you, they will frequently choose to code the information and then not publish the meaning of the codes, so that even if you do obtain a copy of the record, it is meaningless without the “code book”. This is the technique used both by the IRS and many state taxing authorities. The IRS’ electronic information about “taxpayers” is called the “Individual Master File” and it took us nearly a year to figure out how the codes work and then design a program to decode the content of the files. About ten days before we released the program to do the decoding called the Master File Decoder, the IRS launched an investigation of us and called us in for an audit, presumably to prevent the program from getting into the hands of the American Public.
When you complain about any of the above violations of the requirement for consent, government dis-servants will frequently say “We are just ‘clerks’ and are not empowered to change the system”, and then they will give you an address to write to, knowing that most people don’t like to write and that letters can more easily be ignored and forgotten than live phone calls. If you then write the appropriate party to complain, your letter will either be ignored or they will send you a flattering form letter that doesn’t deal substantially with any of your concerns, and in effect, blow you off and never deal with the problem. All the while, they can use the following additional standard excuses with innocent impunity, such as:

1. “Please write your Congressman if you don’t like it.”
2. “We can’t give you the benefit until you give us your Social Security Number.”
3. “Why don’t you talk to someone who cares?”
4. “We’re too busy around here to deal with your personal concerns. Can’t you see how many people there are in line behind you?”

This kind of evasion of responsibility and violation of rights and privacy using computers as the means is the similar to the kind of evasion practiced by the U.S. Congress, in fact, in the context of tax collection. When our country was founded, taxation without representation was the biggest cause for the revolution. After we won the revolution and separated from Great Britain, our new federal government put the representation and taxation function in the same place: The House of Representatives, which is part of the Legislative Branch. The House of Representatives was meant to represent the people while the Senate represented the states. As long as the “purse”, which is the responsibility and authority to collect taxes, remained under the control of the People in the House of Representatives, we had “taxation with representation”. When the exigencies of the Civil War happened in the 1860’s, the first thing the IRS did was try to move the tax collection function to the Executive Branch, thus separating the representation from the taxation function. Déjà vu all over again! The “Bureau of Internal Revenue” (BIR) was put into the Executive Branch instead of the Legislative Branch, and was assigned the responsibility to collect taxes to pay for the Civil War. When the people complained, they complained bitterly about “taxation without representation”, and about the injustice and violation of the Constitution that was being wrought by the this expediency. Instead of Congress taking responsibility for the monster they created, they blamed it on the excesses and abuses of the BIR and the Executive Branch! They turned the rogue organization they created into the whipping boy for all of the complaints and told constituents that they had no control over the Executive Branch because of the separation of powers! In fact, they were violating the Constitution and the Separation of Powers Doctrine by trying to delegate the tax collection function to the Executive Branch and they should have been impeached! No sovereign power of any branch of government can be delegated to another branch.

4.3.16.4 Concealing the real identities of government wrongdoers

In the former Soviet Union, the government terrorized the citizens using a secret police force called the KGB. They made everyone into informants to the KGB by offering rewards to people who would snitch on their “comrades”. The government, in such a scenario, becomes a terrorism organization. The secrecy surrounding the KGB was the main source of government terror because its activities were kept secret and the government-controlled press did not report on their activities. The fear that the terrorism is intended to produce comes mainly from ignorance about who or what we are up against.

Secrecy, however, is anathema to a free society and an accountable government. Wherever there is secrecy in government, there is sure to be tyranny, corruption, and abuse of power. Consequently, those governments that are knowingly engaged in illegal or criminal activities will implement security measures to keep the identity of the perpetrators of the crimes and terrorism secret. This helps maintain the deception and illusion that we have a “voluntary tax system”, as the U.S. Supreme Court said in Flora v. United States, but at the same time, generates enough fear and anxiety in Americans to keep them involuntarily paying anyway. Can it reasonably or truthfully be said that any choice or decision we make in the presence of any kind of illegal duress and the fear it produces is voluntary or consensual? Absolutely NOT! Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, says the following under the definition of the word “consent” on p. 305:

“Consent is implied in every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake.”

Is an enforcement act that is not specifically authorized by an implementing regulation published in the federal register an act of duress? You bet it is! If that act hurts someone, and more importantly, if it produces fear in all the “sheep” who observed it, then it is an act of illegal duress and terrorism. If the fear produced by the illegal act causes someone to comply with the wishes of the IRS when no law obligates them to, then their act is no longer consensual, but simply a response to illegal government terrorism, racketeering, and extortion.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Have you ever tried to find a publication or a government website that identifies everyone who works at the IRS by name and gives their mailing address, phone number, and email address? We’ll give you a clue: There is no such thing! We have spent days searching for this type of information at the law library and the public library and on the Internet and have found nothing. We even called them and they said they don’t make that kind of information public. We also wrote them a freedom of information act request to provide the information and they refused to comply. Does this cause you some concern? We hope so! The IRS is unlike any other government organization because of the secrecy it maintains about the identity of its employees, and perhaps that’s because they aren’t even part of the U.S. government! They have no lawful authority to even exist either within the Constitution or under Title 31 of the U.S. Code. The IRS even readily admits that they are not an agency of the federal government! See:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Evidence/USGovDeniesIRS/USGovDeniesIRS.htm

The IRS is, instead, a rogue private organization of financial terrorists involved in racketeering, what Irwin Schiff calls “The Federal Mafia”, that is extorting vast sums of money from the American people under the “color of law” but without the authority of law. For confirmation of this fact, look at the 1939 edition of the Internal Revenue Code (still active today and never repealed) and look at the code section dealing with the duties of IRS “Revenue Agents”:

53 State 489
Revenue Act of 1939, 53 Stat. 489

Chapter 43: Internal Revenue Agents

Section 4000 Appointment

The Commissioner may, whenever in his judgment the necessities of the service so require, employ competent agents, who shall be known and designated as internal revenue agents, and, except as provided for in this title, no general or special agent or inspector of the Treasury Department in connection with internal revenue, by whatever designation he may be known, shall be appointed, commissioned, or employed.

“Competent agents”? What a joke! If they were “competent”, then they would:

1. Know and follow the law and be fired if they didn’t.
2. Work as an “employee” for a specific Congressman in the House of Representatives who was personally accountable for their actions. “Taxation and representation” must coincide to preserve the original intent of the Constitution.

You can read the above statute yourself on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/CDs/LawCD/Federal/RevenueActs/Revenue%20Act%20of%201939.pdf

If “Revenue Agents” are not “appointed, commissioned, or employed”, then what exactly are they? I’ll tell you what they are: They are independent consultants who operate on commission. They get a commission from the property they steal from the American People, and their stolen “loot” comes from the Department of Agriculture. See the following response to a Freedom of Information Act request proving that IRS agents are paid by the Department of Agriculture:

Why would the Congress NOT want to make Revenue Agents “appointed, commissioned, or employed”? Well, if they are effectively STEALING property from the American people and if they are not connected in any way with the federal government directly, have no statutory authority to exist under Title 26, and are not statutory “employees”, then the President of the United States and all of his appointees in the Executive Branch cannot then be held personally liable for the acts and abuses of these thieves. What politician in his right mind would want to jeopardize his career by being held accountable for a mafia extortion ring whose only job is to steal money from people absent any legal authority?

Because IRS supervisors know they are involved in criminal terrorism, extortion, and racketeering, they have taken great pains to conceal the identity of their employees as follows:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

1. When you call their 800 support number, the agent who answers will only give you his first name and an employee number. If you specifically ask for his full legal name, he will refuse to provide it and cannot cite the legal or delegated authority that authorizes him to do this.

2. If you do a Freedom of Information Act request on the identity of a specific IRS employee and provide the employee number, the IRS will refuse to disclose it, even if you can prove with evidence that the employee was acting illegally and wrongfully.

3. There is no information about either the IRS organization chart or the identity of specific IRS employees anywhere on either the Department of the Treasury or the IRS websites.

4. When you go to an IRS due process meeting and ask for identification of the employees present, they will present an IRS badge that contains a “pseudo name” which is not the real name of the employee. If you ask them for something else, they will refuse to provide it. The only reasonable explanation for this is that the Pocket Commissions issued by the IRS are fraudulent.

5. You can visit the library or any public library and spend days looking for any information about the identity of anyone in the IRS below the upper management level, and you will not find anything. The closest thing we found was the Congressional Quarterly, which only publishes information about the identity of a handful of IRS upper management types.

6. Collection notices coming from the IRS that might adversely affect your rights to property are conspicuously missing signatures and the identity of the sender. There is frequently no phone number to call or person to write, and if the letter has a signature, it is the signature of a fictitious person who doesn’t even exist. If you write a response to the collection letter and direct it to the signer of the letter, it is frequently either ignored entirely or is sent back with a statement saying that the employee doesn’t exist!

7. They will not put their last names or employee numbers in clear view on their name badges so you don’t even know who you are talking to.

8. When you call the information number and ask the legal identity of a specific number or his or her contact information and to connect you to them, they will refuse to comply.

9. When you visit the federal government building, and especially the IRS floor of the building, you will notice that there are not directories of people who work there and all doors have cipher locks so you can’t go inside and try to find someone. Their “customer service desk” will have two-inch thick bullet proof glass. Do you think they would need that kind of security if they really were conscientiously performing the only legitimate function of government in defending, protecting, and respecting our Constitutional rights? The laws and their whole work environment are designed to protect them from their “customers” and the people they work for! They may use the excuse that they are trying to prevent terrorism, but who are the real terrorists? THEM! Yes indeed, they are trying to protect from terrorists, and in their mind, any American who demands an accountable government that obeys the Constitution is a terrorist. We have a government pamphlet from the FBI that clearly says that people who promote the Constitution are terrorists! You can view this pamphlet at:
   http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/LegalEthics/ConstDefenderTerrorists.pdf

10. If you go to the IRS website and download any of their publications relating to tax scams or enforcement, notice that neither the agency nor any specific individual is identified as the author. For instance, the IRS publishes a short propaganda pamphlet called “The Truth About Frivolous Tax Arguments” at:
   http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/IRS/friv_tax.pdf

The most interesting thing about this pamphlet is not the inflammatory and accusatory and presumptuous rhetoric, but the fact that it is posted on the IRS website and no author is specifically identified. DO you think that people in the government who claim to be speaking “The Truth”, as they call it, ought to be held accountable for their statements? How can you have a reasonable basis for belief if they aren’t identified and held accountable? For instance, at a court trial, witnesses must identify themselves and swear under oath that they will tell “the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth”. There is not such affirmation at the end of the document, no IRS seal, and no author identified. This isn’t truth: its' government sponsored propaganda!

Below is the text from a real deposition of an IRS agent in a tax trial showing how IRS agents disguise their identities deliberately to protect them from the legal consequences of their criminal behavior:

A. Well, there have been several revenue officers that have worked this case, not just me.

Q. Who are the other ones?

A. There was another revenue officer that worked it prior to it being assigned to me. I don't recall his name right off the top of my head, but I know it was a male revenue officer.

Q. Is he still there at the IRS?
A. Yes, he is.
Q. You don't remember his name?
A. Well, to be quite frank with you, he changed his name over a course of time. So I'm not sure which name he was using at that time.
Q. What's his new and old name?
A. His old name was John Tucker and his new name is John Otto.
Q. Why did he change his name?
A. That was something that the Internal Revenue Service gave the employees the option to do so because taxpayers would file liens against employees, they would file judgments against employees, record them in the courthouses where they lived, and it would make it difficult for the revenue officer to sell their home or, you know, transfer property or whatever the case might be. In other words, it would encumber their own personal property.

And so the Internal Revenue Service gave us an option to use what we call pseudonyms that would protect the employees from taxpayers harassing us in that particular manner.
Q. So it's not a legal name change, it's just --
A. It's for Internal Revenue Service's purposes.
Q. Have you ever used another name?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. What other names have you used?
THE WITNESS: Do I have to answer that?
MR. SHILLING: Are you talking work name?
THE WITNESS: Are you talking work name or are you talking about my legal name?
Q. (BY MR. DROUGHT:) I'm talking about both. Are there any other names that you have ever gone by?
A. Yes. I have my maiden name and I have my married name that I use.
Q. And your maiden name is what?
THE WITNESS: Do I have to answer?
MR. SHILLING: Well, at this point she is operating under the pseudonym. Let's go off the record for a second.

(Off record 10:53 a.m. to 10:55 a.m.)
MR. SHILLING: You can give any other name. Do you have any other pseudonyms that you used?
THE WITNESS: No. I have only used Frances Jordan.
Q. (BY MR. DROUGHT:) How long have you used that name?
A. Approximately 10 years.
Q. So 1994 about?
A. That's a good ballpark. The service made that available to employees for one very specific reason. At that particular time, there was a lot of -- you know, Oklahoma City, you know, that was in reference to those individuals that were killed in that. So that became a concern that the employees have some type of protection.

A coworker that I sat next to received a letter at her home address from a taxpayer, and she had two small children, and her fear was that the taxpayer may do something to her home or to her children, and so she inquired about using a pseudonym, and I inquired about using one at the same time because we need to protect our families and our children from any harassing taxpayers.
Q. What about judges that send people to prison?
A. Sir, I can only tell you that the service made that option available to the employees.
Q. What about policemen that arrest people?
A. Sir, I can tell you -- I'm not a police officer. I'm only a judge. I'm only a revenue officer with the Internal Revenue Service. That option was made available to us because of the type of job that we have. We have to take people's money, we have to take people's property, and sometimes people become very distraught when that happens. So consequently they -- they do do things to our families and to our homes, and we need to protect ourselves as much as we can.
Q. Okay. What names have you gone by besides Frances Jordan?
A. While I worked for the Internal Revenue Service?
Q. Yes.
A. I'm going to -- like Mr. Shilling said, I'm going to not answer that question at this time until we discuss it with the judge to see whether or not he prefers -- that he allows me to use my pseudonym or if he makes me use my real name.
MR. DROUGHT: We are asking for her to give us those names, and we will agree to keep them confidential and used only for the purpose of this lawsuit, but I think it's relevant and it likely could lead to something relevant, and I don't want to have to go in front of the judge and spend these people's money. We are asking that she give us the names now so I can ask her about them now and not have to come back and re-depose her.

Do the above observations disturb you? They should! We are living in a police state and the IRS is a Gestapo organization of secret police operatives who maintain “voluntary compliance” through financial terrorism. It’s terrorism because they:

- Cannot demonstrate the authority of a specific statute AND implementing regulations AND delegation of authority order authorizing their act of enforcement. 50 U.S.C. §841, in fact, says any public servant who refuses to acknowledge and respect the Constitutional or lawful limits on their authority is a “communist”!
- Won’t reveal their identities or allow themselves to be held personally liable and accountable to the public for their illegal and fraudulent acts and statements.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.53
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
- Are allowed to institute illegal abuses of our rights completely anonymously and without having to accept personal responsibility for the abuses.

On the other hand, how long do you think the lies, the propaganda, and the willful and illegal abuses of our rights by would continue if the following reforms were instituted and enforced upon the IRS:

1. Every Revenue Agent who interacts with the public had to reveal their true, full legal identity and contact information, including their Social Security Number.  After all, if they can ask you for it, then you should be able to do the same thing.  Equal protection of the laws requires it.
2. Use of “Pseudo names” on IRS Pocket Commissions was discontinued.
3. The identities of every IRS employee down to the lowest level was published on the IRS website.
4. Every piece of correspondence from the IRS had to be signed under penalty of perjury as required by 26 U.S.C. §6065 and the complete contact information and real legal name of the originator or responsible person must be identified on the correspondence.

The answer is that the abuses would stop IMMEDIATELY.  Secrecy and the fear it produces is the only thing that keeps this house of cards standing, folks!

4.3.16.5 Making it difficult, inconvenient, or costly to obtain information about illegal government activities

Criminals, whether they are violating the Constitution or enacted statutory law, don’t want evidence about their misdeeds exposed.  A crime is simply any act that harms someone and was not done to them with their consent.  The Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act are both designed to maintain an accountable government that serves the people by ensuring that people can always find out what their government is up to.  Information about what the government is doing can then be used to prosecute specific public servants who violated the requirement for consent and your rights.

Government agencies typically maintain “Public relations” offices, and also a full-time legal staff called the “disclosure group” to deal with requests for information that come in from the Public because of these laws.  These disclosure litigation lawyers have the specific and sole function of filtering and obscuring and obfuscating information that is provided to the public about the activities and employees of the agency they work for.  The main purpose for doing the filtering is to protect from prosecution wrongdoers within the agency.  Disclosure litigation lawyers know that Fifth Amendment guarantees only biological people the right to not incriminate themselves, but corporations are not covered by the Fifth Amendment.  The U.S. Code identifies the U.S. Government as a federal corporation in 28 U.S.C. §3001(15)(A), and so the silver tongued devils have to devise more devious means to conceal the truth.  They are paid to lie and conceal and deceive the public without actually “looking” like they are doing so.  They are “poker players” for the government.

When you send in a Privacy Act Request or Freedom of Information Act request, as we have many times, that focuses on some very incriminating evidence that could be used against the government, the response usually falls into one of the following four categories:

1. The government will say the information is exempt from disclosure and cite the exemptions found in 5 U.S.C. §552a(k).
2. The government will only provide a subset of the requested information and not explain why they omitted certain key information.
3. The government will provide the information requested, but redact the incriminating parts.  For instance, they will black out the incriminating information and/or remove key pages.
4. If the government is involved in an enforcement action and the information you requested under the Privacy Act or Freedom Of Information Act could stop or interfere with the action because it exposes improprieties, they will try to drag their feet and delay providing the information until they have the result they want.  For instance, if you send in a Privacy Act request for information about your tax liability, they will delay the response until after the period of appeal or response is over.  That way , you can’t respond or defend yourself against their illegal actions in a timely fashion.

In the process of decoding the Individual Master Files of several people, we have found that the IRS very carefully conceals information that would be useful in understanding what the IRS knows about a person.  They use complicated, computerized codes in their records for which no information is presently available about what they mean.  They used to make a manual called IRS Document 6209 available on their website for use in decoding IMF’s, but it was taken down in 2003 so that no public information about decoding is available now.  A number of people have sent Freedom of Information Act Requests to the IRS requesting a copy of IRS Document 6209 and the IRS has responded by providing a very incomplete and virtually useless version of the original manual, with key chapters removed and most of the rest of the remaining information blacked out. They are obviously obstructing justice by preventing evidence of their wrongdoing from getting in the hands of the public. Some people who have requested this document under the Freedom of Information Act from the IRS, got the unbelievable response below:

“We are sorry, but under the war on terrorism, the information you requested is not available for release because it would jeopardize the security of the United States government.”

What the heck does the meaning of the codes in a persons’ IRS records have to do with the war on terrorism? The war on terror is being used as an excuse to make our own government into a terrorist organization! The needs of the public and the need for an accountable government that obeys the Constitution far outweigh such lame excuses by the IRS that have the affect of obstructing justice and protecting wrongdoers in the IRS. Such criminal acts of concealment are also illegal under the following statutes:

- 18 U.S.C. § 3: Accessory after the fact
- 18 U.S.C. Chapter 73: Obstruction of justice
- 18 U.S.C. § 241: Conspiracy against rights under

Since the IRS Document 6209 is effectively no longer available through the Freedom Of Information Act, then if a person wanted a full and complete and uncensored version of the document from the government they would then have to file a disclosure lawsuit against the government for not complying with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act. Lawsuits, lawyers, and litigation are costly, inconvenient, and demanding and therefore beyond the reach and affordability of the average busy American. Consequently, the government wins in its effort to block from public disclosure key information about its own wrongdoing. The result is that by bending the rules slightly, they in effect make it so costly, inconvenient, exasperating, and complicated to have an accountable and law-abiding government that few people will attempt to overcome the illegal barrier they have created. The few that do overcome this barrier then have to worry about finding an attorney who is brave enough to get his license to practice law pulled by the government he is litigating against for prosecuting such government wrongdoers. The system we have now is very devious and prejudicial and needs to be reformed.

4.3.16.6 Ignoring correspondence and/or forcing all complaints through an unresponsive legal support staff that exasperates and terrorizes “customers”

When your rights have been violated because a government agency or employee has tried to do something without your explicit, informed consent, then the clerk at the government agency who instituted the wrong will further obstruct redress of grievances as follows:

1. They will tell you that they can’t give you information about their supervisor to lodge a complaint, and this is especially true if you did not get their full legal name because they refused to give it to you.
2. They will say that this is an issue or problem that you must contact the “legal department” or “public affairs department” about. Then they will tell you that those organizations do not take direct calls and insist that everything must be in writing. They will not explain why, but the implications are obvious: They want to prevent spilling the beans and prevent further contact with themselves or their supervisors so they cannot be prosecuted for wrongdoing.
3. Then when you write the address the clerk gave you, most often the legal department will ignore it entirely or respond with a lame form letter that answers questions you never asked and doesn’t directly address any of the major issues you raised. This leaves you with no further recourse but to litigate, and they do it this way on purpose because they know most people won’t litigate and can’t afford the time or expense to do so. Checkmate. The government got what it wanted: a violation of your rights without legal or material consequence for the violation.

Those Americans who are familiar with the above process and the abuses it results in and who are more familiar with legal procedure can still use the above process to their advantage with a procedure we call the Notary Certificate of Default Method (NCDM), whereby the correspondence sent to the legal department establishes what you expect, provides exhaustive evidence of government wrongdoing, formats the complaint as what is called an “Admissions” in the legal field, gives the government a specific time period to respond, and states that failure to respond constitutes an affirmative admission to every question. They then send in their complaint to the legal department or “Taxpayer Advocate” via certified mail with a proof of mailing, which then develops legal evidence of what was sent and when it was sent. This approach gives them admissible evidence they can use in court to litigate against the government. You can read more about the Notary Certificate of Default Method in the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, section 3.4.4.5.

4.3.16.7 Deliberately dumbing down and propagandizing government support personnel who have to implement the law

To quote former Treasury Secretary Paul O’Neil on the subject of the Internal Revenue Code, which he says is…:

> “9,500 pages of gibberish.”

Add to this the following:

1. 22,000 pages of Treasury and IRS regulations that implement the Internal Revenue Code
2. 70,000 employees at the IRS
3. A very high turnover rate among revenue agents, and the need to constantly educate new recruits.
4. An overworked support force.
5. Contracting key functions of the IRS out to independent third party debt collectors.
6. A very unpleasant job to do that most people detest.

…and you have a recipe for disaster, abuse, and tyranny and a total disregard of the requirement for consent and respect of the rights of sovereign Americans everywhere. Several studies have been done on the hazards of this government bureaucracy by the Government Accounting Office, which show that IRS advice on their telephone support line was wrong over 80% of the time! IRS supervisors who design the training curricula for new employees have also made a concerted effort to “dumb down” revenue agents to increase “voluntary compliance”. For instance, during the We the People Truth in Taxation Hearing held in Washington D.C. on February 27-28, 2002, a former IRS Collection Agent brought his IRS Revenue Agent training materials to the hearing and proved using the materials that Revenue Agents are not properly warned that there is no law authorizes them to do Substitute For Return (SFR) assessments upon anything BUT a business or corporation located in the federal zone which consents to taxation, and that SFR’s against biological people are illegal and violate 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) and Internal Revenue Manual, Section 5.1.11.6.10. See the questions and evidence for yourself on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section%2013.htm

Do you think that an IRS Revenue Agent who meets all the following criteria is going to be “properly equipped” to follow the lawful limits on his authority, respect your rights, and help you make an informed choice based only on consent? What a joke! Most IRS employees:

1. Are never taught from the law books or taught about the law. Instead, are only taught about internal procedures developed by people who don’t read the tax code. And if they do start reading the law and asking questions of their supervisors, as former IRS Criminal Investigator Joe Banister did, then they are asked to resign or fired if they won’t resign.
2. Rely mainly upon the IRS publications for information about what to do and are not told to read the law, in spite of the fact that the IRS Internal Revenue Manual in section 4.10.7.2.8 says that IRS Publications should not be used to form an opinion about what the tax code requires.
3. Are wrong 80% of the time about the only subject they are paid to know.
4. Don’t stay at the job longer than about two years because of the very high turnover in the organization.
5. Are despised and feared by the public for what they do, mainly because they do not honor the restrictions placed on them by the law itself.
6. Have deceptive IRS formal classroom training materials that deliberately omit mention about doing Substitute For Return (SFR) assessments upon natural persons, even though it is not authorized by the law in 26 U.S.C. §6020(b).

In the legal realm, ignorance of the law is no excuse. Therefore, if anyone at the government agency can or should be held responsible for acts that violate the law and our rights, it should be the ignorant and deliberately misinformed clerk or employee who committed the act. However, the managers of these employees should also be culpable, because they deliberately developed the training and mentorship curricula of their subordinates so as to maximize the likelihood that employees would violate the laws and prejudice the rights of Americans in order to encourage “voluntary compliance” with what the agency wants, but which the law does not require. These devious managers will most often respond to accusations of culpability by trying to maintain a defense called “plausible deniability”, in which they deny responsibility for the illegal actions of their employees because they will falsely claim that they did not know about the problem. Notifying these wayward government employees personally via certified mail and posting all such correspondences on a public website for use in litigation against the government can be very helpful in fighting this kind of underhanded approach. This is the approach of Larken Rose, who has been keeping a database of all government employees at the IRS who have been notified that employees are mis-enforcing the law and yet refused to take action to remedy the wrong, concealed the fact that they were notified of the wrong, and continued to claim “plausible deniability”. This has gotten him on the bad side of the IRS to the point where they decided to raid his house and confiscate his computers, and then plant false evidence of kiddie porn on them and have him prosecuted for it violation of kiddie porn laws. Your government servants are wicked and these abuses must be stopped!

If you would like to know more about the subject of “plausible deniability” in the context of the IRS, refer to section 2.4.2 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008.

4.3.16.8 Creating or blaming a scapegoat beyond their control

As we point out later in section 6.5.1, our republic was created out of the need for taxation WITH representation. England was levying heavy taxes without giving us any representation in their Parliament, and we didn’t like it and revolted. The original Constitutional Republican model created by the founders solved this problem by giving the sovereign People in the House of Representatives the dual responsibility of both Representing us AND Collecting legitimate taxes while also limiting the term of office of these representatives to two years. This ensured that:

- The sovereign People controlled the purse of government so that it would not get out of control.
- If our tax-collecting representatives got too greedy, we could throw the bastards out immediately.
- There would be no blame-shifting between the tax collectors and our representatives, because they would be one and the same.

This scheme kept our representatives in the House who controlled the purse strings on a very short leash and prevented government from getting too big or out of control. The very first Revenue Act of 1789 found in the Statutes at Large at 1 Stat. 24-49 created the office of Collector of Revenue and imposed the very first official federal tax of our new Constitutional Republic only upon imports. This tax was called a “duty” or “impost”, or “excise”. It placed collectors at every port district and made them accountable to Congress. This type of a taxing structure remained intact until the Civil War began in 1860.

However, our system of Taxation WITH Representation was eventually corrupted, primarily by separating the Taxation and Representation functions from each other. With the start of the Civil War and as an emergency measure in the Revenue Act of 1862, the Congress through legislation shifted the tax collection to a newly created “Bureau of Internal Revenue” (BIR), which was part of the Executive Branch and came under the Department of Treasury, which was in the Executive Branch. At that point, we lost the direct relationship between Taxation and Representation because the functions were separated across two departments. All of the evils in our present tax system trace back to the corruption that occurred at that point because:

1. Specific collection agents in the IRS are not put under a member of the House of Representatives and apportioned, as all federal tax collections require in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3. This means that they are not supervised by someone who we directly control in the House.
2. Congress has a convenient “whipping boy” they created to do the tax collection function. This whipping boy is conveniently in another branch of government that they can claim they have no direct control over. This causes endless finger-pointing and eliminates all accountability on either end of the Taxation or Representation equation.
3. Those in IRS cannot be held directly accountable because most are federal employees who are hard to fire and not elected so they are not accountable to the people.

Even today, this devious tactic of separating responsibility from authority for government abuses among multiple branches is very frequently used as the only real justification for what would otherwise be flagrant disregard for the rights of the people by the government. For instance, if the government is abusing people’s rights in a way that gets negative media attention, the most common justification you will hear is that the bureaucracy has gotten too big, is out of control, and is not accountable directly to the people. The Executive branch will usually be the culprit, and no one in the Legislative Branch will want to take responsibility to pass a law to fix it. Or worst yet, the Legislative Branch will pass a “dead law”, which is a statute meant to appease the public but for which the Executive Branch positively refuses to write implementing regulations to enforce. This is what happened with the campaign finance reforms in the 2001. Sound familiar? The more layers of bureaucracy there are, the more effective this system of blame-shifting becomes. With more layers, public servants can just conveniently excuse themselves by saying “It takes forever to get X to do anything so it’s unlikely that we will be able to help you with your problem.”

To give you an example of how the IRS abuses this technique to their advantage, look at how they respond to Privacy Act requests for Assessment documents. The Privacy Act requires them to respond with the documents requested within 20 days. After several people began using the Privacy Act to demand assessment documents, and since the IRS was not doing legal assessments and wanted to hide the fact from the public, the IRS changed their Internal Revenue Manual in 2000 to essentially delay and interfere with responding. In IRM section 11.3.13.9.4, the IRS basically tells its Disclosure Officers especially to bounce a person’s Privacy Act Request for assessment documents all over its many hundreds of disclosure offices until the person gets frustrated and essentially gives up. Read this dastardly section yourself at:

4.3.16.9 Terrorizing and threatening, rather than helping, the ignorant

Another famous techniques of criminals working in public service is to terrorize the ignorant. This technique is usually only used when the financial stakes are high and a person is taking custody of a large sum of money that the government wants to steal a part of. Here is how it works:

1. Before the distribution can be made, and notice is sent to the affected party stating the conditions under which the distribution can be made without incurring tax liability.
2. If the party wants to take the distribution without tax withholding as prescribed in 26 U.S.C. §3406, they are told that they must sign a statement under penalty of perjury that they meet the conditions required for not being “liable” for federal income taxes. They will be told that if it is not under penalty of perjury, then they cannot get their money or property back.
3. The statement the party must sign will contain a dire warning that if they are wrong in signing the form, they are committing perjury and that they will violate 18 U.S.C. §1001, which carries with it a f

To give you on example of how the above tactic is used, consider the situation of a public servant who has just left federal employment voluntarily or was terminated. At that point, he usually has a large retirement nest egg in Federal Thrift Savings Plan (TSP) that he wants to take into his or her custody while also avoiding the need to pay any income tax as a consequence of the distribution. Lawyers in the District of Columbia who are running the Thrift Savings Plan (TSP) have devise a way to basically browbeat people into paying withholding taxes on direct retirement distributions using the above technique. Here is how it works:

1. Federal government workers who leave federal service and who want to withdraw their retirement savings must submit the TSP-70 form to the Thrift Savings Program. You can view this form at:
   http://tsp.gov/forms/index.html

2. Most separating federal government employees inhabit the states of the Union, are “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), are not “citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, and are “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), as we explain later in this chapter and throughout chapter 5 later. TSP publication OC-96-21 describes the procedures to be used for “nonresident aliens” who are not engaged in a “trade or business” to withdraw their entire retirement free of the 20% withholding mandated by 26 U.S.C. §3406. Here is what section 3 of that pamphlet says:

   3. How much tax will be withheld on payments from the TSP?

   The amount withheld depends upon your status, as described below. Participant. If you are a nonresident alien, your payment will not be subject to withholding for U.S. income taxes. (See Question 2.) If you are a U.S. citizen or a resident alien, your payment will be subject to withholding for U.S. income taxes. If you are a U.S. citizen or resident alien when you separate, you will receive from your employing agency the tax notice “Important Tax Information About Payments From Your TSP Account,” which explains the withholding rules that apply to your various withdrawal options.

Later on in that same pamphlet above, here is what they say about the requirement for a statement under penalty of perjury attesting that you are a “nonresident alien” with no income from within the federal “United States”:

   2. Will the TSP withhold U.S. taxes from my payments?

   This depends on whether the payment you receive is subject to U.S. income tax. If the money you receive is subject to U.S. income tax, then it is subject to withholding. In general, the only persons who do not owe U.S. taxes are nonresident alien participants and nonresident alien beneficiaries of nonresident alien participants. The TSP will not withhold any U.S. taxes if you fit into either category and you submit the certification described below. However, if you do not submit the certification to the TSP, the TSP must withhold 30% of your payment for Federal income taxes.

   Certification. To verify that no tax withholding is required on a payment you are receiving as a participant, the TSP asks that you certify under penalty of perjury that you are a nonresident alien whose contributions to the TSP were based on income earned outside the federal United States. If you are receiving a payment as a beneficiary, you must certify that you are a nonresident alien and that the deceased participant was also a nonresident alien whose contributions to the TSP were based on income earned outside the United States.
   (Certification forms are attached to this tax notice.)

3. The certification form for indicating that you are a “nonresident alien” who earned all income outside the “United States” is contained at the end of the above pamphlet. Here is the warning it contains in the perjury statement at the end:

   Warning: Any intentional false statement in this certification or willful misrepresentation concerning it is a violation of the law that is punishable by a fine of as much as $10,000 or imprisonment for as long as 5 years, or both (18 U.S.C. 1001).

4. The critical issue in the above pamphlet, of course, is their “presumed” and ambiguous definition of “United States”, which we will find out later in section 4.8 means the federal United States or “federal zone”, which is the District of Columbia Only within Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code as indicated by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). If you call the Thrift Savings Program (TSP) coordinator and ask him some very pointed questions about the definition of “United States” upon which the above pamphlet relies and the code section or regulation where it is found, you will get the run-around. If you ask for the corporate counsel phone number, they refuse to give it to you and tell you to ask in writing. If you write them, they will ignore you because they don’t want the truth to get out in black and white. If you were to corner one of these people after they left federal service and ask them for honest answers, they would probably tell you that their supervisor threatened them if they leaked out what is meant by “United States” to callers or if they put anything in writing. They are obviously holding the truth hostage for 20 pieces of silver. They will positively refuse to give you anything in writing that will help clarify the meaning of “United States” as used in the pamphlet, because they want to make it very risky and confrontational for you to keep your hard-earned money. They will refuse... to take any responsibility whatsoever to help you follow the law, and they will conveniently claim ignorance of the law, even though ignorance of the law is no excuse, according to the courts.

Note in the above the hypocrisy evident in the situation and the resulting violation of equal protection of the laws mandated by the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1:

1. You are being compelled to take a risk of spending five years in jail by signing something under penalty of perjury that they can falsely accuse you is fraudulent and wrong. All you have to do is look at them the wrong way and they will try to sick a mafia police state on you. At the same time, there is absolutely no one in government who is or can be required to take the equivalent risk by signing a determination about the meaning of “United States” in their own misleading publication.

2. Publication OC-96-21 starts off with a disclaimer of liability and advice to consult an attorney, and yet it is impossible for you to have the same kind of disclaimer if you sign their form at the end of the pamphlet.

3. They refuse to put anything in writing that they say or do and require EVERYTHING you do with them to be in writing and signed under penalty of perjury. If you do a Privacy Act request for their internal documents relating to your case to hold them accountable, they will refuse to provide them because they want to protect their coworkers from liability. This is hypocrisy.

4. All risk is thereby transferred to you and avoided by your public dis-servants. Consequently, there is no way to ensure that they do their job by genuinely helping you, even though that is the ONLY reason they even have a job to begin with.

In effect, what our public dis-servants are doing above is using ignorance, fear, deliberate ambiguity of law and publications, and intimidation as weapons to terrorize “nontaxpayers” into paying extortion money to the government. They have made every option available to you EXCEPT bribing the government into a risky endeavor, knowing full well that most people will try to avoid risk. They will not help citizens defend their property, which is the ONLY legitimate function of government. Based on the above, the only thing these thieves will help anyone do is bribe the government with money that isn’t owed and to do so under the influence of constructive fraud, malfeasance, and breach of fiduciary duty on the part of the public dis-servant. The presence of such constructive fraud makes it impossible to give informed, voluntary consent in the situation, and therefore makes it impossible to willfully make a false statement. However, it is common for federal judges to aid and abet in the persecution and terrorism of honest Americans who submit the above OC-96-21 form in order to perpetuate the federal mafia and keep the stolen loot flowing that funds their fat federal retirement checks.

4.3.17 Why good government demands more than just “obeying the law”

We should all teach our own children that legal, law-abiding behavior is desirable. However, in a civilized society, simply “obeying the law” and doing nothing more is minimal behavior and poor citizenship. Civilization cannot long endure if our conduct is merely “legal.” The Apostle Paul alluded to this when he said:

“All things are lawful for me, but all things are not helpful. All things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.”
[1 Cor. 6:12, Bible, NKJV]

For civilization to endure and expand personal liberty and happiness, human relations must be characterized by respect, courtesy, good manners, ethics, and morality - none of which are required by law. The reason they can’t be required by law is because:

“You can’t legislate morality.”

With former President Bill Clinton, "I didn't break any laws" has become the hissing cackle of false humility and hypocritical vanity displayed by the puff adder politician in the White House and his "Sit Up! Bark!” democrat emulators in the halls of Congress. He is a walking, talking contradiction of everything worthy of teaching our children about self-government. If everyone did nothing more for the benefit of our society than emulate his despicable behavior, then what kind of country do you think we would have? What we would end up with is a banana-republic where “the end justifies the means”, and we would certainly no longer desire the kind of respect and envy that many throughout the rest of the world bestow upon this country.

"I didn't break any laws" is nothing to brag about. Our ancestors were individuals and families of character as with most of the American people who do not measure their daily choices by what is merely legal. They have lived their moment-by-moment lives by respect for individuals, standards of ethics, and principles of boundary that transcend mere law. They believed this was normal and average civilized conduct. When they come of age, our children and our Children’s children will agree.

The former actor in the White House is, by repeated acts of misconduct, challenging the statistical laws of probability and the Creator’s sow-reap Laws of Certainty. Lying and cheating, and getting away with it, appears to be successful. But, like a speeder on the highway, “Success breeds failure.” He will get caught or crash - or both! Count on it.

The day is soon coming when Clinton’s former supporters will, by hindsight, speak his name as a curse. Many of us would have preferred foresight. Remember the words of former President George Bush before he lost the election to Clinton? “President Clinton has no character?” He was definitely right, in hindsight, now wasn’t he? But, after all, foresight has a prerequisite. It is called "making choices by principle."

Any civilization, if it is to endure, expand, and prosper, must be based on “making choices by principle”, rather than simply “complying with the law”. The foundation of making choices by principle rather than law is morality and ethics. Morality and ethics are summed up in one word: wisdom. The chief source of all wisdom is God:

“[The fear of respect and obedience towards] the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and the knowledge of the Holy One is understanding, for by me your days will be multiplied, and years of life will be added to you.”

[Prov. 9:10-11, Bible, NKJV]

Therefore, belief and trust in God over and above the vanity of man is the chief source of “making choices by principle” in our society. Any effort by our corrupted courts to eliminate religion from the media or public life or schools is an effort to remove “principle”, and by implication, morality and ethics and wisdom, from the decision-making process. Even the Supreme Court agrees:

“The American people have always regarded education and acquisition of knowledge as matters of supreme importance which should be diligently promoted. The Ordinance of 1787 declares: ‘Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged.”

[Meyer v. State of Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390 (1923)]

When you eliminate God and religion from society, then you end up with a society without a conscience, which is exactly what our country would be like if everyone were like former President Clinton and his Democrat imitators.

4.4 The Constitution is Supposed to Make You the Sovereign and The Government Your Servant

The premise of this section is that the purpose of our U.S. Constitution is to make the government into our servant and us into the sovereign. You as the sovereign are not bound by the Constitution, but the people who work in government are because they took an oath to support and defend it. The taking of that oath makes them the servant and you the master and creates a fiduciary relationship between the two of you that is enforceable in a court of law if your rights are injured. You never took that oath and you never signed any instrument agreeing to be bound by it.

For the subsections within this section, we rely again on the writings of Lysander Spooner and his wonderful and brilliant essay entitled No Treason: The Constitution of No Authority. Specifically, we derive most of the rest of this section and its subsections from sections IV through XIX of that essay which appears on our website at:

No Treason: The Constitution of No Authority
http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/SpoonerLysander/NoTreason.htm

Lysander Spooner’s writings will really get you thinking, and he has a unique, common sense, and lucid way of expressing himself which we enjoyed so thoroughly that we thought we would repeat it here for your reading pleasure. If his writings interest you, then we recommend a compendium of his writings entitled The Lysander Spooner Reader, ISBN 0-930073-06-1 (hc), Fox and Wilkes, 938 Howard Street, Ste 202; San Francisco, CA  94103. Incidentally, Lysander’s writings are the basis of most of contemporary Libertarian thought.

111 Adapted from The Lysander Spooner Reader, ISBN 0-930073-06-1 (hc), Fox and Wilkes, 938 Howard Street, Ste 202; San Francisco, CA  94103.
We have the liberty to edit Mr. Spooner’s remarks slightly to remove the notion that the Constitution does not in tuality bind government servants, because the result of that aspect of his conclusions in their affect on our society would be tyranny, pure chaos, anarchy, and lawlessness, and this would clearly serve the interests of no one and harm everyone as a collective. Likewise, there is nothing to be gained and everything to be lost by society in undermining the value and the virtue of a written constitution, since the Constitutional Republic we have has been quite effective to date in maintaining the blessings of liberty far better than any previous know system of government. Along those more constructive lines of inquiry, we believe that oaths of public office can and should be improved to increase the level of personal accountability that government servants have toward their constituents so as to remove the defects and complaints that Lysander expresses regarding oaths of office later in section 4.4.8. On the other hand, Lysander Spooner believes that because the Constitution does such a poor job holding our public servants accountable, that our only defense is trial by jury. He wrote an essay entitled An Essay on Trial by Jury describing this aspect of his beliefs that we have posted on our website at:

An Essay on Trial By Jury, Lysander Spooner
http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/SpoonerLysander/TrialByJury.txt

For the purposes of subsequent discussion, we use the term “citizen” only as a convenience to refer to the sovereign people inhabiting a body politic, but in a more general sense, we mean everyone who inhabits a country, including both citizens and aliens.

4.4.1 The Constitution does not bind citizens

The constitution not only binds no citizens now, but it never did bind any citizens. It never bound citizens, because it was never agreed to by citizens in such a manner as to make it, on general principles of law and reason, binding upon them.

It is a general principle of law and reason, that a written instrument binds no one until he has signed it. This principle is so inflexible a one, that even though a man is unable to write his name, he must still "make his mark," before he is bound by a written contract. This custom was established ages ago, when few men could write their names; when a clerk -- that is, a man who could write -- was so rare and valuable a person, that even if he were guilty of high crimes, he was entitled to pardon, on the ground that the public could not afford to lose his services. Even at that time, a written contract must be signed; and men who could not write, either "made their mark," or signed their contracts by stamping their seals upon wax affixed to the parchment on which their contracts were written. Hence the custom of affixing seals, that has continued to this time.

The laws holds, and reason declares, that if a written instrument is not signed, the presumption must be that the party to be bound by it, did not choose to sign it, or to bind himself by it. And law and reason both give him until the last moment, in which to decide whether he will sign it, or not. Neither law nor reason requires or expects a man to agree to an instrument, until it is written; for until it is written, he cannot know its precise legal meaning. And when it is written, and he has had the opportunity to satisfy himself of its precise legal meaning, he is then expected to decide, and not before, whether he will agree to it or not. And if he do not THEN sign it, his reason is supposed to be, that he does not choose to enter into such a contract. The fact that the instrument was written for him to sign, or with the hope that he would sign it, goes for nothing.

Where would be the end of fraud and litigation, if one party could bring into court a written instrument, without any signature, and claim to have it enforced, upon the ground that it was written for another man to sign? that this other man had promised to sign it? that he had to have signed it? that he had had the opportunity to sign it, if he would? but that he had refused or neglected to do so? Yet that is the most that could ever be said of the Constitution. [1] The very judges, who profess to derive all their authority from the Constitution -- from an instrument that nobody ever signed -- would spurn any other instrument, not signed, that should be brought before them for adjudication. [1] The very men who drafted it, never signed it in any way to bind themselves by it, AS A CONTRACT. And not one of them probably ever would have signed it in any way to bind himself by it, AS A CONTRACT.

Moreover, a written instrument must, in law and reason, not only be signed, but must also be delivered to the party (or to some one for him), in whose favor it is made, before it can bind the party making it. The signing is of no effect, unless the instrument be also delivered. And a party is at perfect liberty to refuse to deliver a written instrument, after he has signed it.
The Constitution was not only never signed by anybody, but it was never delivered by anybody, or to anybody's agent or attorney. It can therefore be of no more validity as a contract, then can any other instrument that was never signed or delivered.
4.4.2  The Constitution as a Legal Contract

As further evidence of the general sense of mankind, as to the practical necessity there is that all men’s IMPORTANT contracts, especially those of a permanent nature, should be both written and signed, the following facts are pertinent.

For nearly two hundred years -- that is, since 1677 -- there has been on the statute book of England, and the same, in substance, if not precisely in letter, has been re-enacted, and is now in force, in nearly or quite all the States of this Union, a statute, the general object of which is to declare that no action shall be brought to enforce contracts of the more important class, UNLESS THEY ARE PUT IN WRITING, AND SIGNED BY THE PARTIES TO BE HELD CHARGEABLE UPON THEM. [At this point there is a footnote listing 34 states whose statute books Spooner had examined, all of which had variations of this English statute; the footnote also quotes part of the Massachusetts statute.]

The principle of the statute, be it observed, is, not merely that written contracts shall be signed, but also that all contracts, except for those specially exempted -- generally those that are for small amounts, and are to remain in force for but a short time -- SHALL BE BOTH WRITTEN AND SIGNED.

The reason of the statute, on this point, is, that it is now so easy a thing for men to put their contracts in writing, and sign them, and their failure to do so opens the door to so much doubt, fraud, and litigation, that men who neglect to have their contracts -- of any considerable importance -- written and signed, ought not to have the benefit of courts of justice to enforce them. And this reason is a wise one; and that experience has confirmed its wisdom and necessity, is demonstrated by the fact that it has been acted upon in England for nearly two hundred years, and has been so nearly universally adopted in this country, and that nobody thinks of repealing it.

We all know, too, how careful most men are to have their contracts written and signed, even when this statute does not require it. For example, most men, if they have money due them, of no larger amount than five or ten dollars, are careful to take a note for it. If they buy even a small bill of goods, paying for it at the time of delivery, they take a receipted bill for it. If they pay a small balance of a book account, or any other small debt previously contracted, they take a written receipt for it.

Furthermore, the law everywhere (probably) in our country, as well as in England, requires that a large class of contracts, such as wills, deeds, etc., shall not only be written and signed, but also sealed, witnessed, and acknowledged. And in the case of married women conveying their rights in real estate, the law, in many States, requires that the women shall be examined separate and apart from their husbands, and declare that they sign their contracts free of any fear or compulsion of their husbands.

Such are some of the precautions which the laws require, and which individuals -- from motives of common prudence, even in cases not required by law -- take, to put their contracts in writing, and have them signed, and, to guard against all uncertainties and controversies in regard to their meaning and validity. And yet we have what purports, or professes, or is claimed, to be a contract -- the Constitution -- made eighty years ago, by men who are now all dead, and who never had any power to bind US, but which (it is claimed) has nevertheless bound three generations of men, consisting of many millions, and which (it is claimed) will be binding upon all the millions that are to come; but which nobody ever signed, sealed, delivered, witnessed, or acknowledged; and which few persons, compared with the whole number that are claimed to be bound by it, have ever read, or even seen, or ever will read, or see. And of those who ever have read it, or ever will read it, scarcely any two, perhaps no two, have ever agreed, or ever will agree, as to what it means.

Moreover, this supposed contract, which would not be received in any court of justice sitting under its authority, if offered to prove a debt of five dollars, owing by one man to another, is one by which -- AS IT IS GENERALLY INTERPRETED BY THOSE WHO PRETEND TO ADMINISTER IT -- all men, women and children throughout the country, and through all time, surrender not only all their property, but also their liberties, and even lives, into the hands of men who by this supposed contract, are expressly made wholly irresponsible for their disposal of them. And we are so insane, or so wicked, as to destroy property and lives without limit, in fighting to compel men to fulfill a supposed contract, which, inasmuch as it has never been signed by anybody, is, on general principles of law and reason -- such principles as we are all governed by in regard to other contracts -- the merest waste of paper, binding upon nobody, fit only to be thrown into the fire; or, if preserved, preserved only to serve as a witness and a warning of the folly and wickedness of mankind.

4.4.3  How the Constitution is Administered by the Government
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

It is no exaggeration, but a literal truth, to say that, by the Constitution -- NOT AS I INTERPRET IT, BUT AS IT IS INTERPRETED BY THOSE WHO PRETEND TO ADMINISTER IT -- the properties, liberties, and lives of the entire people of the United States are surrendered unreservedly into the hands of men who, it is provided by the Constitution itself, shall never be "questioned" as to any disposal they make of them.

Thus the Constitution (Art. I, Sec. 6) provides that, "for any speech or debate (or vote), in either house, they (the senators and representatives) shall not be questioned in any other place."

The whole law-making power is given to these senators and representatives (when acting by a two-thirds vote); [1] and this provision protects them from all responsibility for the laws they make. [1] And this two-thirds vote may be but two-thirds of a quorum -- that is two-thirds of a majority -- instead of two-thirds of the whole. The Constitution also enables them to secure the execution of all their laws, by giving them power to withhold the salaries of, and to impeach and remove, all judicial and executive officers, who refuse to execute them.

Thus the whole power of the government is in their hands, and they are made utterly irresponsible for the use they make of it. What is this but absolute, irresponsible power?

It is no answer to this view of the case to say that these men are under oath to use their power only within certain limits; for what care they, or what should they care, for oaths or limits, when it is expressly provided, by the Constitution itself, that they shall never be "questioned," or held to any responsibility whatever, for violating their oaths, or transgressing those limits?

Neither is it any answer to this view of the case to say that the men holding this absolute, irresponsible power, must be men chosen by the people (or portions of them) to hold it. A man is none the less a slave because he is allowed to choose a new master once in a term of years. Neither are a people any the less slaves because permitted periodically to choose new masters. What makes them slaves is the fact that they now are, and are always hereafter to be, in the hands of men whose power over them is, and always is to be, absolute and irresponsible. [2] [2] Of what appreciable value is it to any man, as an individual, that he is allowed a voice in choosing these public masters? His voice is only one of several millions.

The right of absolute and irresponsible dominion is the right of property, and the right of property is the right of absolute, irresponsible dominion. The two are identical; the one necessarily implies the other. Neither can exist without the other. If, therefore, Congress have that absolute and irresponsible law-making power, which the Constitution -- according to their interpretation of it -- gives them, it can only be because they own us as property. If they own us as property, they are our masters, and their will is our law. If they do not own us as property, they are not our masters, and their will, as such, is of no authority over us.

But these men who claim and exercise this absolute and irresponsible dominion over us, dare not be consistent, and claim either to be our masters, or to own us as property. They say they are only our servants, agents, attorneys, and representatives. But this declaration involves an absurdity, a contradiction. No man can be my servant, agent, attorney, or representative, and be, at the same time, uncontrollable by me, and irresponsible to me for his acts. It is of no importance that I appointed him, and put all power in his hands. If I made him uncontrollable by me, and irresponsible to me, he is no longer my servant, agent, attorney, or representative. If I gave him absolute, irresponsible power over my property, I gave him the property. If I gave him absolute, irresponsible power over myself, I made him my master, and gave myself to him as a slave. And it is of no importance whether I called him master or servant, agent or owner. The only question is, what power did I put in his hands? Was it an absolute and irresponsible one? or a limited and responsible one?

For still another reason they are neither our servants, agents, attorneys, nor representatives. And that reason is, that we do not make ourselves responsible for their acts. If a man is my servant, agent, or attorney, I necessarily make myself responsible for all his acts done within the limits of the power I have intrusted to him. If I have intrusted him, as my agent, with either absolute power, or any power at all, over the persons or properties of other men than myself, I thereby necessarily make myself responsible to those other persons for any injuries he may do them, so long as he acts within the limits of the power I have granted him. But no individual who may be injured in his person or property, by acts of Congress, can come to the individual electors, and hold them responsible for these acts of their so-called agents or representatives. This fact proves that these pretended agents of the people, of everybody, are really the agents of nobody.

If, then, nobody is individually responsible for the acts of Congress, the members of Congress are nobody's agents. And if they are nobody's agents, they are themselves individually responsible for their own acts, and for the acts of all whom they employ. And the authority they are exercising is simply their own individual authority; and, by the law of nature -- the highest of all laws -- anybody injured by their acts, anybody who is deprived by them of his property or his liberty, has the same right to hold them individually responsible, that he has to hold any other trespasser individually responsible. He has the same right to resist them, and their agents, that he has to resist any other trespassers.

4.4.4 If the Constitution is a Contract, why don’t we have to sign it and how can our predecessors bind us to it without our signature?

It is plain, then, that on general principles of law and reason -- such principles as we all act upon in courts of justice and in common life -- the Constitution is no contract; that it binds nobody, and never did bind anybody; and that all those who pretend to act by its authority, are really acting without any legitimate authority at all; that, on general principles of law and reason, they are mere usurpers, and that everybody not only has the right, but is morally bound, to treat them as such.

If the people of this country wish to maintain such a government as the Constitution describes, there is no reason in the world why they should not sign the instrument itself, and thus make known their wishes in an open, authentic manner; in such manner as the common sense and experience of mankind have shown to be reasonable and necessary in such cases; AND IN SUCH MANNER AS TO MAKE THEMSELVES (AS THEY OUGHT TO DO) INDIVIDUALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE ACTS OF THE GOVERNMENT. But the people have never been asked to sign it. And the only reason why they have never asked to sign it, has been that it has been known that they never would sign it; that they were neither such fools nor knaves as they must needs have been to be willing to sign it; that (at least as it has been practically interpreted) it is not what any sensible and honest man wants for himself; nor such as he has any right to impose upon others. It is, to all moral intents and purposes, as destitute of obligations as the compacts which robbers and thieves and pirates enter into with each other, but never sign.

If any considerable number of the people believe the Constitution to be good, why do they not sign it themselves, and make laws for, and administer them upon, each other; leaving all other persons (who do not interfere with them) in peace? Until they have tried the experiment for themselves, how can they have the face to impose the Constitution upon, or even to recommend it to, others? Plainly the reason for absurd and inconsistent conduct is that they want the Constitution, not solely for any honest or legitimate use it can be of to themselves or others, but for the dishonest and illegitimate power it gives them over the persons and properties of others. But for this latter reason, all their eulogiums on the Constitution, all their exhortations, and all their expenditures of money and blood to sustain it, would be wanting.

4.4.5 Authority delegated by the Constitution to Public Servants

The Constitution itself, then, being of no authority, on what authority does our government practically rest? On what ground can those who pretend to administer it, claim the right to seize men's property, to restrain them of their natural liberty of action, industry, and trade, and to kill all who deny their authority to dispose of men's properties, liberties, and lives at their pleasure or discretion?

The most they can say, in answer to this question, is, that some half, two-thirds, or three-fourths, of the male adults of the country have a TACIT UNDERSTANDING that they will maintain a government under the Constitution; that they will select, by ballot, the persons to administer it; and that those persons who may receive a majority, or a plurality, of their ballots, shall act as their representatives, and administer the Constitution in their name, and by their authority.

But this tacit understanding (admitting it to exist) cannot at all justify the conclusion drawn from it. A tacit understanding between A, B, and C, that they will, by ballot, depute D as their agent, to deprive me of my property, liberty, or life, cannot at all authorize D to do so. He is none the less a robber, tyrant, and murderer, because he claims to act as their agent, than he would be if he avowedly acted on his own responsibility alone.

Neither am I bound to recognize him as their agent, nor can he legitimately claim to be their agent, when he brings no WRITTEN authority from them accrediting him as such. I am under no obligation to take his word as to who his principals may be, or whether he has any. Bringing no credentials, I have a right to say he has no such authority even as he claims to have: and that he is therefore intending to rob, enslave, or murder me on his own account.

This tacit understanding, therefore, among the voters of the country, amounts to nothing as an authority to their agents. Neither do the ballots by which they select their agents, avail any more than does their tacit understanding; for their ballots are given in secret, and therefore in such a way as to avoid any personal responsibility for the acts of their agents.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

No body of men can be said to authorize a man to act as their agent, to the injury of a third person, unless they do it in so open and authentic a manner as to make themselves personally responsible for his acts. None of the voters in this country appoint their political agents in any open, authentic manner, or in any manner to make themselves responsible for their acts. Therefore these pretended agents cannot legitimately claim to be really agents. Somebody must be responsible for the acts of these pretended agents; and if they cannot show any open and authentic credentials from their principals, they cannot, in law or reason, be said to have any principals. The maxim applies here, that what does not appear, does not exist. If they can show no principals, they have none.

But even these pretended agents do not themselves know who their pretended principals are. These latter act in secret; for acting by secret ballot is acting in secret as much as if they were to meet in secret conclave in the darkness of the night. And they are personally as much unknown to the agents they select, as they are to others. No pretended agent therefore can ever know by whose ballots he is selected, or consequently who his real principles are. Not knowing who his principles are, he has no right to say that he has any. He can, at most, say only that he is the agent of a secret band of robbers and murderers, who are bound by that faith which prevails among confederates in crime, to stand by him, if his acts, done in their name, shall be resisted.

Men honestly engaged in attempting to establish justice in the world, have no occasion thus to act in secret; or to appoint agents to do acts for which they (the principals) are not willing to be responsible.

The secret ballot makes a secret government; and a secret government is a secret band of robbers and murderers. Open despotism is better than this. The single despot stands out in the face of all men, and says:

1. I am the State.
2. My will is law.
3. I take the responsibility of my acts.
4. The only arbiter I acknowledge is the sword.
5. If anyone denies my right, let him try conclusions with me.

But a secret government is little less than a government of assassins. Under it, a man knows not who his tyrants are, until they have struck, and perhaps not then. He may GUESS, beforehand, as to some of his immediate neighbors. But he really knows nothing. The man to whom he would most naturally fly for protection, may prove an enemy, when the time of trial comes.

This is the kind of government we have; and it is the only one we are likely to have, until men are ready to say: We will consent to no Constitution, except such an one as we are neither ashamed nor afraid to sign; and we will authorize no government to do anything in our name which we are not willing to be personally responsible for.

4.4.6 Voting by Congressmen

What is the motive to the secret ballot? This, and only this: Like other confederates in crime, those who use it are not friends, but enemies; and they are afraid to be known, and to have their individual doings known, even to each other. They can contrive to bring about a sufficient understanding to enable them to act in concert against other persons; but beyond this they have no confidence, and no friendship, among themselves. In fact, they are engaged quite as much in schemes for plundering each other, as in plundering those who are not of them. And it is perfectly well understood among them that the strongest party among them will, in certain contingencies, murder each other by the hundreds of thousands (as they lately did do) to accomplish their purposes against each other. Hence they dare not be known, and have their individual doings known, even to each other. And this is avowedly the only reason for the ballot: for a secret government; a government by secret bands of robbers and murderers. And we are insane enough to call this liberty! To be a member of this secret band of robbers and murderers is esteemed a privilege and an honor! Without this privilege, a man is considered a slave; but with it a free man! With it he is considered a free man, because he has the same power to secretly (by secret ballot) procure the robbery, enslavement, and murder of another man, and that other man has to procure his robbery, enslavement, and murder. And this they call equal rights!

If any number of men, many or few, claim the right to govern the people of this country, let them make and sign an open compact with each other to do so. Let them thus make themselves individually known to those whom they propose to govern. And let them thus openly take the legitimate responsibility of their acts. How many of those who now support the Constitution, will ever do this? How many will ever dare openly proclaim their right to govern? or take the legitimate responsibility of their acts? Not one!

4.4.7  Our Government is a band of criminal extortionists acting without legal authority!

It is obvious that, on general principles of law and reason, there exists no such thing as a government created by, or resting upon, any consent, compact, or agreement of "the people of the United States" with each other; that the only visible, tangible, responsible government that exists, is that of a few individuals only, who act in concert, and call themselves by the several names of senators, representatives, presidents, judges, marshals, treasurers, collectors, generals, colonels, captains, etc., etc.

On general principles of law and reason, it is of no importance whatever that these few individuals profess to be the agents and representatives of "the people of the United States"; since they can show no credentials from the people themselves; they were never appointed as agents or representatives in any open, authentic manner; they do not themselves know, and have no means of knowing, and cannot prove, who their principals (as they call them) are individually; and consequently cannot, in law or reason, be said to have any principals at all.

It is obvious, too, that if these alleged principals ever did appoint these pretended agents, or representatives, they appointed them secretly (by secret ballot), and in a way to avoid all personal responsibility for their acts; that, at most, these alleged principals put these pretended agents forward for the most criminal purposes, viz.: to plunder the people of their property, and restrain them of their liberty; and that the only authority that these alleged principals have for so doing, is simply a TACIT UNDERSTANDING among themselves that they will imprison, shoot, or hang every man who resists the exactions and restraints which their agents or representatives may impose upon them.

Thus it is obvious that the only visible, tangible government we have is made up of these professed agents or representatives of a secret band of robbers and murderers, who, to cover up, or gloss over, their robberies and murders, have taken to themselves the title of "the people of the United States"; and who, on the pretense of being "the people of the United States," assert their right to subject to their dominion, and to control and dispose of at their pleasure, all property and persons found in the United States.

4.4.8  Oaths of Public Office

On general principles of law and reason, the oaths which these pretended agents of the people take "to support the Constitution," are of no validity or obligation. And why? For this, if for no other reason, viz., THAT THEY ARE GIVEN TO NOBODY in particular. There is no privity (as the lawyers say) -- that is, no mutual recognition, consent, and agreement -- between those who take these oaths, and any other persons.

If I go upon Boston Common, and in the presence of a hundred thousand people, men, women and children, with whom I have no contract upon the subject, take a verbal but not written oath that I will enforce upon them the laws of Moses, of Lycurgus, of Solon, of Justinian, or of Alfred, that oath is, on general principles of law and reason, of no obligation. It is of no obligation, not merely because it is intrinsically a criminal one, BUT ALSO BECAUSE IT IS GIVEN TO NOBODY, and consequently pledges my faith to nobody. It is merely given to the winds.

It would not alter the case at all to say that, among these hundred thousand persons, in whose presence the oath was taken, there were two, three, or five thousand male adults, who had SECRETLY -- by secret ballot, and in a way to avoid making themselves INDIVIDUALLY known to me, or to the remainder of the hundred thousand -- designated me as their agent to rule, control, plunder, and, if need be, murder, these hundred thousand people. The fact that they had designated me secretly, and in a manner to prevent my knowing them individually, prevents all privity between them and me; and consequently makes it impossible that there can be any contract, or pledge of faith, on my part towards them; for it is impossible that I can pledge my faith, in any legal sense, to a man whom I neither know, nor have any means of knowing, individually.

So far as I am concerned, then, these two, three, or five thousand persons are a secret band of robbers and murderers, who have secretly, and in a way to save themselves from all responsibility for my acts, designated me as their agent; and have, through some other agent, or pretended agent, made their wishes known to me. But being, nevertheless, individually unknown to me, and having no open, authentic contract with me, my oath is, on general principles of law and reason, of no validity as a pledge of faith to them. And being no pledge of faith to them, it is no pledge of faith to anybody. It is mere idle wind. At most, it is only a pledge of faith to an unknown band of robbers and murderers, whose instrument for plundering and murdering other people, I thus publicly confess myself to be. And it has no other obligation than a similar oath given to any other unknown body of pirates, robbers, and murderers.

For these reasons the oaths taken by members of Congress, "to support the Constitution," are, on general principles of law and reason, of no validity based on the way they are administered now. They are not only criminal in themselves, and therefore void; but they are also void for the further reason THAT THEY ARE GIVEN TO NOBODY.

It cannot be said that, in any legitimate or legal sense, they are given to "the people of the United States"; because neither the whole, nor any large proportion of the whole, people of the United States ever, either openly or secretly, appointed or designated these men as their agents to carry the Constitution into effect. The great body of the people -- that is, men, women, and children -- were never asked, or even permitted, to signify, in any FORMAL manner, either openly or secretly, their choice or wish on the subject. The most that these members of Congress can say, in favor of their appointment, is simply this: Each one can say for himself:

I have evidence satisfactory to myself, that there exists, scattered throughout the country, a band of men, having a tacit understanding with each other, and calling themselves "the people of the United States," whose general purposes are to control and plunder each other, and all other persons in the country, and, so far as they can, even in neighboring countries; and to kill every man who shall attempt to defend his person and property against their schemes of plunder and dominion. Who these men are, INDIVIDUALLY, I have no certain means of knowing, for they sign no papers, and give no open, authentic evidence of their individual membership. They are not known individually even to each other. They are apparently as much afraid of being individually known to each other, as of being known to other persons. Hence they ordinarily have no mode either of exercising, or of making known, their individual membership, otherwise than by giving their votes secretly for certain agents to do their will. But although these men are individually unknown, both to each other and to other persons, it is generally understood in the country that none but male persons, of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, can be members. It is also generally understood that ALL male persons, born in the country, having certain complexions, and (in some localities) certain amounts of property, and (in certain cases) even persons of foreign birth, are PERMITTED to be members. But it appears that usually not more than one half, two-thirds, or in some cases, three-fourths, of all who are thus permitted to become members of the band, ever exercise, or consequently prove, their actual membership, in the only mode in which they ordinarily can exercise or prove it, viz., by giving their votes secretly for the officers or agents of the band. The number of these secret votes, so far as we have any account of them, varies greatly from year to year, thus tending to prove that the band, instead of being a permanent organization, is a merely PRO TEMPORE affair with those who choose to act with it for the time being. \ The gross number of these secret votes, or what purports to be their gross number, in different localities, is occasionally published. Whether these reports are accurate or not, we have no means of knowing. It is generally supposed that great frauds are often committed in depositing them. They are understood to be received and counted by certain men, who are themselves appointed for that purpose by the same secret process by which all other officers and agents of the band are selected. According to the reports of these receivers of votes (for whose accuracy or honesty, however, I cannot vouch), and according to my best knowledge of the whole number of male persons "in my district," who (it is supposed) were permitted to vote, it would appear that one-half, two-thirds or three-fourths actually did vote. Who the men were, individually, who cast these votes, I have no knowledge, for the whole thing was done secretly. But of the secret votes thus given for what they call a "member of Congress," the receivers reported that I had a majority, or at least a larger number than any other one person. And it is only by virtue of such a designation that I am now here to act in concert with other persons similarly selected in other parts of the country. \ It is understood among those who sent me here, that all persons so selected, will, on coming together at the City of Washington, take an oath in each other's presence "to support the Constitution of the United States." By this is meant a certain paper that was drawn up eighty years ago. It was never signed by anybody, and apparently has no obligation, and never had any obligation, as a contract. In fact, few persons ever read it, and doubtless much the largest number of those who voted for me and the others, never even saw it, or now pretend to know what it means. Nevertheless, it is often spoken of in the country as "the Constitution of the United States"; and for some reason or other, the men who sent me here, seem to expect that I, and all with whom I act, will swear to carry this Constitution into effect. I am therefore ready to take this oath, and to cooperate with all others, similarly selected, who are ready to take the same oath.

This is the most that any member of Congress can say in proof that he has any constituency; that he represents anybody; that his oath "to support the Constitution," IS GIVEN TO ANYBODY, or pledges his faith to ANYBODY. He has no open, written, or other authentic evidence, such as is required in all other cases, that he was ever appointed the agent or representative of anybody. He has no written power of attorney from any single individual. He has no such legal knowledge as is required in all other cases, by which he can identify a single one of those who pretend to have appointed him to of law and reason, it would be a sufficient answer for him to say, to all individuals, and to all members individually, or as an association, responsible for his acts, done by their authority. Until all this can be shown, one can say that, in any legitimate sense, there is any such association; or that he is their agent; or that he ever gave his oath to them; or ever pledged his faith to them.

On general principles of law and reason, it would be a sufficient answer for him to say, to all individuals, and to all pretended associations of individuals, who should accuse him of a breach of faith to them:

I never knew you. Where is your evidence that you, either individually or collectively, ever appointed me your attorney? that you ever required me to swear to you, that, as your attorney, I would support the Constitution?
or that I have now broken any faith that I ever pledged to you? You may, or you may not, be members of that secret band of robbers and murderers, who act in secret; appoint their agents by a secret ballot; who keep themselves individually unknown even to the agents they thus appoint; and who, therefore, cannot claim that they have any agents; or that any of their pretended agents ever gave his oath, or pledged his faith to them. I repudiate you altogether. My oath was given to others, with whom you have nothing to do; or it was idle wind, given only to the idle winds. Begone!

By no means are we suggesting, based on this section, that we should scrap our current system of government based on written Constitutions and go back to the stone age. We don’t mean to be hypercritical without offering concrete solutions to the systemic defects that we describe. The fiduciary duty created by written Constitutions between public officers and their constituents is a very useful legal tool that should be exploited to its fullest to ensure a high degree of accountability for public officers and public servants to the their constituents. On the other hand, this section raises some very serious defects and issues within our current system of government relating to public oaths and we can’t know how to fix something until we know what is broke. Based on the discussion in this section, we therefore suggest the following remedies to address the deficiencies noted and to improve our system of republican government:

- Public records of individual voters and how they voted should be maintained. This will allow the public officer to know who he is accountable to. This would also help to ensure that vote fraud can easily be verified by individual voters. The information system that maintains this information should carefully protect the privacy of individuals and it should be accessible on the world wide web.
- Affidavits containing oaths of public office should be a matter of public record which is maintained by a public recorder and should be made available to the public on the world wide web without charge
- Oaths of public office should clearly state that public officers and public servants have a fiduciary relationship with the persons they serve and define the terms of that fiduciary relationship. See section 4.1 earlier for further details on fiduciary relationships. They should also clearly identify the specific laws at the time of the oath that describe and circumscribe the limits of the authority delegated to the officer or agent.
- Any public official caught destroying or ordering the destruction of affidavit evidence of their oath of public office should be promptly fired from office, surrender their retirement, be prosecuted criminally, and disbarred from ever holding public office again.
4.4.9 Tax Collectors

For the same reasons, the oaths of all the other pretended agents of this secret band of robbers and murderers are, on general principles of law and reason, equally destitute of obligation. They are given to nobody; but only to the winds.

The oaths of the tax-gatherers and treasurers of the band, are, on general principles of law and reason, of no validity. If any tax gatherer, for example, should put the money he receives into his own pocket, and refuse to part with it, the members of this band could not say to him: You collected that money as our agent, and for our uses; and you swore to pay it over to us, or to those we should appoint to receive it. You have betrayed us, and broken faith with us.

It would be a sufficient answer for him to say to them:

I never knew you. You never made yourselves individually known to me. I never came by oath to you, as individuals. You may, or you may not, be members of that secret band, who appoint agents to rob and murder other people; but who are cautious not to make themselves individually known, either to such agents, or to those whom their agents are commissioned to rob. If you are members of that band, you have given me no proof that you ever commissioned me to rob others for your benefit. I never knew you, as individuals, and of course never promised you that I would pay over to you the proceeds of my robberies. I committed my robberies on my own account, and for my own profit. If you thought I was fool enough to allow you to keep yourselves concealed, and use me as your tool for robbing other persons; or that I would take all the personal risk of the robberies, and pay over the proceeds to you, you were particularly simple. As I took all the risk of my robberies, I propose to take all the profits. Begone! You are fools, as well as villains. If I gave my oath to anybody, I gave it to other persons than you. But I really gave it to nobody, I only gave it to the winds. It answered my purposes at the time. It enabled me to get the money I was after, and now I propose to keep it. If you expected me to pay it over to you, you relied only upon that honor that is said to prevail among thieves. You now understand that that is a very poor reliance. I trust you may become wise enough to never rely upon it again. If I have any duty in the matter, it is to give back the money to those from whom I took it; not to pay it over to villains such as you.

4.4.10 Oaths of naturalization given to aliens

On general principles of law and reason, the oaths which foreigners take, on coming here, and being "naturalized" (as it is called), are of no validity. They are necessarily given to nobody; because there is no open, authentic association, to which they can join themselves; or to whom, as individuals, they can pledge their faith. No such association, or organization, as "the people of the United States," having ever been formed by any open, written, authentic, or voluntary contract, there is, on general principles of law and reason, no such association, or organization, in existence. And all oaths that purport to be given to such an association are necessarily given only to the winds. They cannot be said to be given to any man, or body of men, as individuals, because no man, or body of men, can come forward WITH ANY PROOF that the oaths were given to them, as individuals, or to any association of which they are members. To say that there is a tacit understanding among a portion of the male adults of the country, that they will call themselves "the people of the United States," and that they will act in concert in subjecting the remainder of the people of the United States to their dominion; but that they will keep themselves personally concealed by doing all their acts secretly, is wholly insufficient, on general principles of law and reason, to prove the existence of any such association, or organization, as "the people of the United States"; or consequently to prove that the oaths of foreigners were given to any such association.

4.4.11 Oaths given to secessionists and corporations

On general principles of law and reason, all the oaths which, since the war, have been given by Southern men, that they will obey the laws of Congress, support the Union, and the like, are of no validity. Such oaths are invalid, not only because they were extorted by military power, and threats of confiscation, and because they are in contravention of men's natural right to do as they please about supporting the government, BUT ALSO BECAUSE THEY WERE GIVEN TO NOBODY. They were nominally given to "the United States." But being nominally given to "the United States," they were necessarily given to nobody, because, on general principles of law and reason, there were no "United States," to whom the oaths could be given. That is to say, there was no open, authentic, avowed, legitimate association, corporation, or body of men, known as "the United States," or as "the people of the United States," to whom the oaths could have been given. If anybody says there was such a corporation, let him state who were the individuals that composed it, and how and when they became a corporation. Were Mr. A, Mr. B, and Mr. C members of it? If so, where are their signatures? Where the evidence of their membership? Where the record? Where the open, authentic proof? There is none. Therefore, in law and reason, there was no such corporation.
On general principles of law and reason, every corporation, association, or organized body of men, having a legitimate corporate existence, and legitimate corporate rights, must consist of certain known individuals, who can prove, by legitimate and reasonable evidence, their membership. But nothing of this kind can be proved in regard to the corporation, or body of men, who call themselves "the United States." Not a man of them, in all the Northern States, can prove by any legitimate evidence, such as is required to prove membership in other legal corporations, that he himself, or any other man whom he can name, is a member of any corporation or association called "the United States," or "the people of the United States," or, consequently, that there is any such corporation. And since no such corporation can be proved to exist, it cannot of course be proved that the oaths of Southern men were given to any such corporation. The most that can be claimed is that the oaths were given to a secret band of robbers and murderers, who called themselves "the United States," and extorted those oaths. But that is certainly not enough to prove that the oaths are of any obligation.

4.4.12 Oaths of soldiers and servicemen

On general principles of law and reason, the oaths of soldiers, that they will serve a given number of years, that they will obey the orders of their superior officers, that they will bear true allegiance to the government, and so forth, are of no obligation. Independently of the criminality of an oath, that, for a given number of years, he will kill all whom he may be commanded to kill, without exercising his own judgment or conscience as to the justice or necessity of such killing, there is this further reason why a soldier's oath is of no obligation, viz., that, like all the other oaths that have now been mentioned, IT IS GIVEN TO NOBODY. There being, in no legitimate sense, any such corporation, or nation, as "the United States," nor, consequently, in any legitimate sense, any such government as "the government of the United States," a soldier's oath given to, or contract made with, such a nation or government, is necessarily an oath given to, or contract made with, nobody. Consequently such an oath or contract can be of no obligation.

4.4.13 Treaties

On general principles of law and reason, the treaties, so called, which purport to be entered into with other nations, by persons calling themselves ambassadors, secretaries, presidents, and senators of the United States, in the name, and in behalf, of "the people of the United States," are of no validity. These so-called ambassadors, secretaries, presidents, and senators, who claim to be the agents of "the people of the United States" for making these treaties, can show no open, written, or other authentic evidence that either the whole "people of the United States," or any other open, avowed, responsible body of men, calling themselves by that name, ever authorized these pretended ambassadors and others to make treaties in the name of, or binding upon any one of, "the people of the United States," or any other open, avowed, responsible body of men, calling themselves by that name, ever authorized these pretended ambassadors, secretaries, and others, in their name and behalf, to recognize certain other persons, calling themselves emperors, kings, queens, and the like, as the rightful rulers, sovereigns, masters, or representatives of the different peoples whom they assume to govern, to represent, and to bind.

The "nations," as they are called, with whom our pretended ambassadors, secretaries, presidents, and senators profess to make treaties, are as much myths as our own. On general principles of law and reason, there are no such "nations." That is to say, neither the whole people of England, for example, nor any open, avowed, responsible body of men, calling themselves by that name, ever, by any open, written, or other authentic contract with each other, formed themselves into any bona fide, legitimate association or organization, or authorized any king, queen, or other representative to make treaties in their name, or to bind them, either individually, or as an association, by such treaties.

Our pretended treaties, then, being made with no legitimate or bona fide nations, or representatives of nations, and being made, on our part, by persons who have no legitimate authority to act for us, have intrinsically no more validity than a pretended treaty made by the Man in the Moon with the king of the Pleiades.

4.4.14 Government Debts

On general principles of law and reason, debts contracted in the name of "the United States," or of "the people of the United States," are of no validity. It is utterly absurd to pretend that debts to the amount of twenty-five hundred millions of dollars are binding upon thirty-five or forty millions of people [the approximate national debt and population in 1870], when there is not a particle of legitimate evidence -- such as would be required to prove a private debt -- that can be produced against any one of them, that either he, or his properly authorized attorney, ever contracted to pay one cent.
Certainly, neither the whole people of the United States, nor any number of them, ever separately or individually contracted to pay a cent of these debts.

Certainly, also, neither the whole people of the United States, nor any number of them, every, by any open, written, or other authentic and voluntary contract, united themselves as a firm, corporation, or association, by the name of "the United States," or "the people of the United States," and authorized their agents to contract debts in their name.

Certainly, too, there is in existence no such firm, corporation, or association as "the United States," or "the people of the United States," formed by any open, written, or other authentic and voluntary contract, and having corporate property with which to pay these debts.

How, then, is it possible, on any general principle of law or reason, that debts that are binding upon nobody individually, can be binding upon forty millions of people collectively, when, on general and legitimate principles of law and reason, these forty millions of people neither have, nor ever had, any corporate property? never made any corporate or individual contract? and neither have, nor ever had, any corporate existence?

Who, then, created these debts, in the name of "the United States"? Why, at most, only a few persons, calling themselves "members of Congress," etc., who pretended to represent "the people of the United States," but who really represented only a secret band of robbers and murderers, who wanted money to carry on the robberies and murders in which they were then engaged; and who intended to extort from the future people of the United States, by robbery and threats of murder (and real murder, if that should prove necessary), the means to pay these debts.

This band of robbers and murderers, who were the real principals in contracting these debts, is a secret one, because its members have never entered into any open, written, avowed, or authentic contract, by which they may be individually known to the world, or even to each other. Their real or pretended representatives, who contracted these debts in their name, were selected (if selected at all) for that purpose secretly (by secret ballot), and in a way to furnish evidence against none of the principals INDIVIDUALLY; and these principals were really known INDIVIDUALLY neither to their pretended representatives who contracted these debts in their behalf, nor to those who lent the money. The money, therefore, was all borrowed and lent in the dark; that is, by men who did not see each other's faces, or know each other's names; who could not then, and cannot now, identify each other as principals in the transactions; and who consequently can prove no contract with each other.

Furthermore, the money was all lent and borrowed for criminal purposes; that is, for purposes of robbery and murder; and for this reason the contracts were all intrinsically void; and would have been so, even though the real parties, borrowers and lenders, had come face to face, and made their contracts openly, in their own proper names.

Furthermore, this secret band of robbers and murderers, who were the real borrowers of this money, having no legitimate corporate existence, have no corporate property with which to pay these debts. They do indeed pretend to own large tracts of wild lands, lying between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and between the Gulf of Mexico and the North Pole. But, on general principles of law and reason, they might as well pretend to own the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans themselves; or the atmosphere and the sunlight; and to hold them, and dispose of them, for the payment of these debts.

Having no corporate property with which to pay what purports to be their corporate debts, this secret band of robbers and murderers are really bankrupt. They have nothing to pay with. In fact, they do not propose to pay their debts otherwise than from the proceeds of their future robberies and murders. These are confessedly their sole reliance; and were known to be such by the lenders of the money, at the time the money was lent. And it was, therefore, virtually a part of the contract, that the money should be repaid only from the proceeds of these future robberies and murders. For this reason, if for no other, the contracts were void from the beginning.

In fact, these apparently two classes, borrowers and lenders, were really one and the same class. They borrowed and lent money from and to themselves. They themselves were not only part and parcel, but the very life and soul, of this secret band of robbers and murderers, who borrowed and spent the money. Individually they furnished money for a common enterprise; taking, in return, what purported to be corporate promises for individual loans. The only excuse they had for taking these so-called corporate promises of, for individual loans by, the same parties, was that they might have some apparent excuse for the future robberies of the band (that is, to pay the debts of the corporation), and that they might also know what shares they were to be respectively entitled to out of the proceeds of their future robberies.
Finally, if these debts had been created for the most innocent and honest purposes, and in the most open and honest manner, by the real parties to the contracts, these parties could thereby have bound nobody but themselves, and no property but their own. They could have bound nobody that should have come after them, and no property subsequently created by, or belonging to, other persons.

4.4.15 Our rulers are a secret society!

The Constitution having never been signed by anybody; and there being no other open, written, or authentic contract between any parties whatever, by virtue of which the United States government, so called, is maintained; and it being well known that none but male persons, of twenty-one years of age and upwards, are allowed any voice in the government; and it being also well known that a large number of these adult persons seldom or never vote at all; and that all those who do vote, do so secretly (by secret ballot), and in a way to prevent their individual votes being known, either to the world, or even to each other; and consequently in a way to make no one openly responsible for the acts of their agents, or representatives, -- all these things being known, the questions arise: WHO compose the real governing power in the country? Who are the men, THE RESPONSIBLE MEN, who rob us of our property? Restraine us of our liberty? Subject us to their arbitrary dominion? And devastate our homes, and shoot us down by the hundreds of thousands, if we resist? How shall we find these men? How shall we know them from others? How shall we defend ourselves and our property against them? Who, of our neighbors, are members of this secret band of robbers and murderers? How can we know which are THEIR houses, that we may burn or demolish them? Which THEIR property, that we may destroy it? Which their persons, that we may kill them, and rid the world and ourselves of such tyrants and monsters?

These are questions that must be answered, before men can be free; before they can protect themselves against this secret band of robbers and murderers, who now plunder, enslave, and destroy them.

The answer to these questions is, that only those who have the will and power to shoot down their fellow men, are the real rulers in this, as in all other (so-called) civilized countries; for by no others will civilized men be robbed, or enslaved.

Among savages, mere physical strength, on the part of one man, may enable him to rob, enslave, or kill another man. Among barbarians, mere physical strength, on the part of a body of men, disciplined, and acting in concert, though with very little money or other wealth, may, under some circumstances, enable them to rob, enslave, or kill another body of men, as numerous, or perhaps even more numerous, than themselves. And among both savages and barbarians, mere want may sometimes compel one man to sell himself as a slave to another. But with (so-called) civilized peoples, among whom knowledge, wealth, and the means of acting in concert, have become diffused; and who have invented such weapons and other means of defense as to render mere physical strength of less importance; and by whom soldiers in any requisite number, and other instrumentalities of war in any requisite amount, can always be had for money, the question of war, and consequently the question of power, is little else than a mere question of money. As a necessary consequence, those who stand ready to furnish this money, are the real rulers. It is so in Europe, and it is so in this country.

In Europe, the nominal rulers, the emperors and kings and parliaments, are anything but the real rulers of their respective countries. They are little or nothing else than mere tools, employed by the wealthy to rob, enslave, and (if need be) murder those who have less wealth, or none at all.

The Rothschilds, and that class of money-lenders of whom they are the representatives and agents -- men who never think of lending a shilling to their next-door neighbors, for purposes of honest industry, unless upon the most ample security, and at the highest rate of interest -- stand ready, at all times, to lend money in unlimited amounts to those robbers and murderers, who call themselves governments, to be expended in shooting down those who do not submit quietly to being robbed and enslaved.

They lend their money in this manner, knowing that it is to be expended in murdering their fellow men, for simply seeking their liberty and their rights; knowing also that neither the interest nor the principal will ever be paid, except as it will be extorted under terror of the repetition of such murders as those for which the money lent is to be expended.

These money-lenders, the Rothschilds, for example, say to themselves: If we lend a hundred millions sterling to the queen and parliament of England, it will enable them to murder twenty, fifty, or a hundred thousand people in England, Ireland, or India; and the terror inspired by such wholesale slaughter, will enable them to keep the whole people of those countries in subjection for twenty, or perhaps fifty, years to come; to control all their trade and industry; and to extort from them large amounts of money, under the name of taxes; and from the wealth thus extorted from them, they (the queen and parliament) can afford to pay us a higher rate of interest for our money than we can get in any other way. Or, if we lend this sum to the emperor of Austria, it will enable him to murder so many of his people as to strike terror into the rest, and thus enable him to keep them in subjection, and extort money from them, for twenty or fifty years to come. And they say the same in regard to the emperor of Russia, the king of Prussia, the emperor of France, or any other ruler, so called, who, in their judgment, will be able, by murdering a reasonable portion of his people, to keep the rest in subjection, and extort money from them, for a long time to come, to pay the interest and the principal of the money lent him.

And why are these men so ready to lend money for murdering their fellow men? Solely for this reason, viz., that such loans are considered better investments than loans for purposes of honest industry. They pay higher rates of interest; and it is less trouble to look after them. This is the whole matter. The question of making these loans is, with these lenders, a mere question of pecuniary profit. They lend money to be expended in robbing, enslaving, and murdering their fellow men, solely because, on the whole, such loans pay better than any others. They are no respecters of persons, no superstitious fools, that reverence monarchs. They care no more for a king, or an emperor, than they do for a beggar, except as he is a better customer, and can pay them better interest for their money. If they doubt his ability to make his murders successful for maintaining his power, and thus extorting money from his people in future, they dismiss him unceremoniously as they would dismiss any other hopeless bankrupt, who should want to borrow money to save himself from open insolvency.

When these great lenders of blood-money, like the Rothschilds, have loaned vast sums in this way, for purposes of murder, to an emperor or a king, they sell out the bonds taken by them, in small amounts, to anybody, and everybody, who are disposed to buy them at satisfactory prices, to hold as investments. They (the Rothschilds) thus soon get back their money, with great profits; and are now ready to lend money in the same way again to any other robber and murderer, called an emperor or king, who, they think, is likely to be successful in his robberies and murders, and able to pay a good price for the money necessary to carry them on.

This business of lending blood-money is one of the most thoroughly sordid, cold-blooded, and criminal that was ever carried on, to any considerable extent, amongst human beings. It is like lending money to slave traders, or to common robbers and pirates, to be repaid out of their plunder. And the men who loan money to governments, so called, for the purpose of enabling the latter to rob, enslave, and murder their people, are among the greatest villains that the world has ever seen. And they as much deserve to be hunted and killed (if they cannot otherwise be got rid of) as any slave traders, robbers, or pirates that ever lived.

When these emperors and kings, so-called, have obtained their loans, they proceed to hire and train immense numbers of professional murderers, called soldiers, and employ them in shooting down all who resist their demands for money. In fact, most of them keep large bodies of these murderers constantly in their service, as their only means of enforcing their extortions. There are now [1870], I think, four or five millions of these professional murderers constantly employed by the so-called sovereigns of Europe. The enslaved people are, of course, forced to support and pay all these murderers, as well as to submit to all the other extortions which these murderers are employed to enforce.

It is only in this way that most of the so-called governments of Europe are maintained. These so-called governments are in reality only great bands of robbers and murderers, organized, disciplined, and constantly on the alert. And the so-called sovereigns, in these different governments, are simply the heads, or chiefs, of different bands of robbers and murderers. And these heads or chiefs are dependent upon the lenders of blood-money for the means to carry on their robberies and murders. They could not sustain themselves a moment but for the loans made to them by these blood-money loan-mongers. And their first care is to maintain their credit with them; for they know their end is come, the instant their credit with them fails. Consequently the first proceeds of their extortions are scrupulously applied to the payment of the interest on their loans.

In addition to paying the interest on their bonds, they perhaps grant to the holders of them great monopolies in banking, like the Banks of England, of France, and of Vienna; with the agreement that these banks shall furnish money whenever, in sudden emergencies, it may be necessary to shoot down more of their people. Perhaps also, by means of tariffs on competing imports, they give great monopolies to certain branches of industry, in which these lenders of blood-money are engaged. They also, by unequal taxation, exempt wholly or partially the property of these loan-mongers, and throw corresponding burdens upon those who are too poor and weak to resist.

Thus it is evident that all these men, who call themselves by the high-sounding names of Emperors, Kings, Sovereigns, Monarchs, Most Christian Majesties, Most Catholic Majesties, High Mightinesses, Most Serene and Potent Princes, and the like, and who claim to rule "by the grace of God,” by "Divine Right" -- that is, by special authority from Heaven -- are intrinsically not only the merest miscreants and wretches, engaged solely in plundering, enslaving, and murdering their fellow men, but that they are also the merest hangers on, the servile, obsequious, fawning dependents and tools of these blood-money loan-mongers, on whom they rely for the means to carry on their crimes. These loan-mongers, like the Rothschilds, laugh in their sleeves, and say to themselves: These despicable creatures, who call themselves emperors, and ingons, and majesties, and most serene and potent princes; who profess to wear crowns, and sit on thrones; who deck themselves with ribbons, and feathers, and jewels; and surround themselves with hired flatterers and licksptittles; and whom we suffer to strut around, and palm themselves off, upon fools and slaves, as sovereigns and lawgivers specially appointed by Almighty God; and to hold themselves out as the sole fountains of honors, and dignities, and wealth, and power -- all these miscreants and impostors know that we make them, and use them; that in us they live, move, and have their being; that we require them (as the price of their positions) to take upon themselves all the labor, all the danger, and all the odium of all the crimes they commit for our profit; and that we will unmake them, strip them of their gewgaws, and send them out into the world as beggars, or give them over to the vengeance of the people they have enslaved, the moment they refuse to commit any crime we require of them, or to pay over to us such share of the proceeds of their robberies as we see fit to demand.

4.4.16 The agenda of our public servants is murder, robbery, slavery, despotism, and oppression

Now, what is true in Europe, is substantially true in this country. The difference is the immaterial one, that, in this country, there is no visible, permanent head, or chief, of these robbers and murderers who call themselves "the government." That is to say, there is no ONE MAN, who calls himself the state, or even emperor, king, or sovereign; no one who claims that he and his children rule "by the Grace of God," by "Divine Right," or by special appointment from Heaven. There are only certain men, who call themselves presidents, senators, and representatives, and claim to be the authorized agents, FOR THE TIME BEING, OR FOR CERTAIN SHORT PERIODS, OF ALL "the people of the United States": but who can show no credentials, or powers of attorney, or any other open, authentic evidence that they are so; and who notoriously are not so;
but are really only the agents of a secret band of robbers and murderers, whom they themselves do not know, and have no means of knowing, individually; but who, they trust, will openly or secretly, when the crisis comes, sustain them in all their usurpations and crimes.

What is important to be noticed is, that these so-called presidents, senators, and representatives, these pretended agents of all "the people of the United States," the moment their exactions meet with any formidable resistance from any portion of "the people" themselves, are obliged, like their co-robbers and murderers in Europe, to fly at once to the lenders of blood money, for the means to sustain their power. And they borrow their money on the same principle, and for the same purpose, viz., to be expended in shooting down all those "people of the United States" -- their own constituents and principals, as they profess to call them -- who resist the robberies and enslavements which these borrowers of the money are practicing upon them. And they expect to repay the loans, if at all, only from the proceeds of the future robberies, which they anticipate it will be easy for them and their successors to perpetrate through a long series of years, upon their pretended principals, if they can but shoot down now some hundreds of thousands of them, and thus strike terror into the rest.

Perhaps the facts were never made more evident, in any country on the globe, than in our own, that these soulless blood-money loan-mongers are the real rulers; that they rule from the most sordid and mercenary motives; that the ostensible government, the presidents, senators, and representatives, so called, are merely their tools; and that no ideas of, or regard for, justice or liberty had anything to do in inducing them to lend their money for the war [i.e, the Civil War]. In proof of all this, look at the following facts.

Nearly a hundred years ago we professed to have got rid of all that religious superstition, inculcated by a servile and corrupt priesthood in Europe, that rulers, so called, derived their authority directly from Heaven; and that it was consequently a religious duty on the part of the people to obey them. We professed long ago to have learned that governments could rightfully exist only by the free will, and on the voluntary support, of those who might choose to sustain them. We all professed to have known long ago, that the only legitimate objects of government were the maintenance of liberty and justice equally for all. All this we had professed for nearly a hundred years. And we professed to look with pity and contempt upon those ignorant, superstitious, and enslaved peoples of Europe, who were so easily kept in subjection by the frauds and force of priests and kings.

Notwithstanding all this, that we had learned, and known, and professed, for nearly a century, these lenders of blood money had, for a long series of years previous to the war, been the willing accomplices of the slave-holders in perverting the government from the purposes of liberty and justice, to the greatest of crimes. They had been such accomplices FOR A PURELY PECUNIARY CONSIDERATION, to wit, a control of the markets in the South; in other words, the privilege of holding the slave-holders themselves in industrial and commercial subjection to the manufacturers and merchants of the North (who afterwards furnished the money for the war). And these Northern merchants and manufacturers, these lenders of blood-money, were willing to continue to be the accomplices of the slave-holders in the future, for the same pecuniary considerations. But the slave-holders, either doubting the fidelity of their Northern allies, or feeling themselves strong enough to keep their slaves in subjection without Northern assistance, would no longer pay the price which these Northern men demanded. And it was to enforce this price in the future -- that is, to monopolize the Southern markets, to maintain their industrial and commercial control over the South -- that these Northern manufacturers and merchants lent some of the profits of their former monopolies for the war, in order to secure to themselves the same, or greater, monopolies in the future. These -- and not any love of liberty or justice -- were the motives on which the money for the war was lent by the North. In short, the North said to the slave-holders: If you will not pay us our price (give us control of your markets) for our assistance against your slaves, we will secure the same price (keep control of your markets) by helping your slaves against you, and using them as our tools for maintaining dominion over you; for the control of your markets we will have, whether the tools we use for that purpose be black or white, and be the cost, in blood and money, what it may.

On this principle, and from this motive, and not from any love of liberty, or justice, the money was lent in enormous amounts, and at enormous rates of interest. And it was only by means of these loans that the objects of the war were accomplished.

And now these lenders of blood-money demand their pay; and the government, so called, becomes their tool, their servile, slavish, villainous tool, to extort it from the labor of the enslaved people both of the North and South. It is to be extorted by every form of direct, and indirect, and unequal taxation. Not only the nominal debt and interest -- enormous as the latter was -- are to be paid in full; but these holders of the debt are to be paid still further -- and perhaps doubly, triply, or quadruply paid -- by such tariffs on imports as will enable our home manufacturers to realize enormous prices for their commodities; also by such monopolies in banking as will enable them to keep control of, and thus enslave and plunder, the industry and trade of the great body of the Northern people themselves. In short, the industrial and commercial slavery of the great body of the people, North and South, black and white, is the price which these lenders of blood money demand, and insist upon, and are determined to secure, in return for the money lent for the war.

This programme having been fully arranged and systematized, they put their sword into the hands of the chief murderer of the war, [undoubtedly a reference to General Grant, who had just become president] and charge him to carry their scheme into effect. And now he, speaking as their organ, says, "LET US HAVE PEACE."

The meaning of this is: Submit quietly to all the robbery and slavery we have arranged for you, and you can have "peace."

But in case you resist, the same lenders of blood-money, who furnished the means to subdue the South, will furnish the means again to subdue you.

These are the terms on which alone this government, or, with few exceptions, any other, ever gives "peace" to its people.

The whole affair, on the part of those who furnished the money, has been, and now is, a deliberate scheme of robbery and murder; not merely to monopolize the markets of the South, but also to monopolize the currency, and thus control the industry and trade, and thus plunder and enslave the laborers, of both North and South. And Congress and the president are today the merest tools for these purposes. They are obliged to be, for they know that their own power, as rulers, so-called, is at an end, the moment their credit with the blood-money loan-mongers fails. They are like a bankrupt in the hands of an extortioner. They dare not say nay to any demand made upon them. And to hide at once, if possible, both their servility and crimes, they attempt to divert public attention, by crying out that they have "Abolished Slavery!" That they have " Saved the Country!" That they have "Preserved our Glorious Union!" and that, in now paying the "National Debt," as they call it (as if the people themselves, ALL OF THEM WHO ARE TO BE TAXED FOR ITS PAYMENT, had really and voluntarily joined in contracting it), they are simply "Maintaining the National Honor!"

By "maintaining the national honor," they mean simply that they themselves, open robbers and murderers, assume to be the nation, and will keep faith with those who lend them the money necessary to enable them to crush the great body of the people under their feet; and will faithfully appropriate, from the proceeds of their future robberies and murders, enough to pay all their loans, principal and interest.

The pretense that the "abolition of slavery" was either a motive or justification for the war, is a fraud of the same character with that of "maintaining the national honor." Who, but such usurpers, robbers, and murderers as they, ever established slavery? Or what government, except one resting upon the sword, like the one we now have, was ever capable of maintaining slavery? And why did these men abolish slavery? Not from any love of liberty in general -- not as an act of justice to the black man himself, but only "as a war measure," and because they wanted his assistance, and that of his friends, in carrying on the war they had undertaken for maintaining and intensifying that political, commercial, and industrial slavery, to which they have subjected the great body of the people, both black and white. And yet these imposters now cry out that they have abolished the chattel slavery of the black man -- although that was not the motive of the war -- as if they thought they could thereby conceal, atone for, or justify that other slavery which they were fighting to perpetuate, and to render more rigorous and inexorable than it ever was before. There was no difference of principle -- but only of degree -- between the slavery they boast they have abolished, and the slavery they were fighting to preserve; for all restraints upon men's natural liberty, not necessary for the simple maintenance of justice, are of the nature of slavery, and differ from each other only in degree.

If their object had really been to abolish slavery, or maintain liberty or justice generally, they had only to say: All, whether white or black, who want the protection of this government, shall have it; and all who do not want it, will be left in peace, so long as they leave us in peace. Had they said this, slavery would necessarily have been abolished at once; the war would have been saved; and a thousand times nobler union than we have ever had would have been the result. It would have been a voluntary union of free men; such a union as will one day exist among all men, the world over, if the several nations, so called, shall ever get rid of the usurpers, robbers, and murderers, called governments, that now plunder, enslave, and destroy them.

Still another of the frauds of these men is, that they are now establishing, and that the war was designed to establish, "a government of consent." The only idea they have ever manifested as to what is a government of consent, is this -- that it is one to which everybody must consent, or be shot. This idea was the dominant one on which the war was carried on; and it is the dominant one, now that we have got what is called "peace."

Their pretenses that they have "Saved the Country," and "Preserved our Glorious Union," are frauds like all the rest of their pretenses. By them they mean simply that they have subjugated, and maintained their power over, an unwilling people. This they call "Saving the Country"; as if an enslaved and subjugated people -- or as if any people kept in subjection by the sword (as it is intended that all of us shall be hereafter) -- could be said to have any country. This, too, they call "Preserving our Glorious Union"; as if there could be said to be any Union, glorious or inglorious, that was not voluntary. Or as if there could be said to be any union between masters and slaves; between those who conquer, and those who are subjugated.

All these cries of having "abolished slavery," of having "saved the country," of having "preserved the union," of establishing "a government of consent," and of "maintaining the national honor," are all gross, shameless, transparent cheats -- so transparent that they ought to deceive no one -- when uttered as justifications for the war, or for the government that has succeeded the war, or for now compelling the people to pay the cost of the war, or for compelling anybody to support a government that he does not want.

The lesson taught by all these facts is this: As long as mankind continue to pay "national debts," so-called -- that is, so long as they are such dupes and cowards as to pay for being cheated, plundered, enslaved, and murdered -- so long there will be enough to lend the money for those purposes; and with that money a plenty of tools, called soldiers, can be hired to keep them in subjection. But when they refuse any longer to pay for being thus cheated, plundered, enslaved, and murdered, they will cease to have cheats, and usurpers, and robbers, and murderers and blood-money loan-mongers for masters.

4.5 The U.S.A. is a Republic, not a Democracy

"The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government..."

Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution is particularly interesting because it's one of the few sections of the Constitution which expressly mandate specific obligations for the Federal Government. In contrast, read Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1:

United States Constitution
Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1

112 Derived and adapted from Suspicions magazine, Vol. 11. No. 3 in an article by Alfred Adask entitled "A 'Republican Form of Government'". See http://www.antishyster.net/.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

“...The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, duties, Imposts and Excises to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defense and general Welfare of the United States...”

Note that while this section grants Congress the power to “lay and collect Taxes,” etc., it does not mandate that Congress shall do so. If Congress wants to “lay and collect taxes,” they can; they have the power to do so. But if Congress doesn’t want to “lay and collect taxes,” they don’t have to; they can refuse to exercise their power of taxation.

But under Article 4, Section 4, Congress has no such discretion. They must “guarantee every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government...” The federal mandate for a “Republican Form of Government” is echoed in Article 1, Section 2 of the Texas Constitution which reads:

“INHERENT POLITICAL POWER; REPUBLIC FORM OF GOVERNMENT. All political power is inherent in the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority, and instituted for their benefit. The faith of the people of Texas stands pledged to the preservation of a republican form of government, and subject to this limitation only, they have at all times the inalienable right to alter, reform or abolish their government in such manner as they may think expedient.”

In other words, the only form of government that can ever be lawful in Texas is a “republican form of government”. Texans can change their State government any way we please, any time we please, “subject to one limitation only”—that we preserve a “republican form of government”—no matter what. Several other state constitutions include similar guarantees of a “republican form of government”. It seems that early Texans also thought a “republican form of government” was absolutely vital.

4.5.1 Republican mystery

Problem is, what is a “republican form of government”? I’ve been intrigued by that question for several years, but a clear definition of the concept has persistently eluded me. For example, according to the 1st Edition of Black’s Law Dictionary (published in 1891):

“REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT. A government in the republican form; a government of the people; a government by representatives chosen by the people. Cooley, Const. Law 194.”

[Black’s Law Dictionary, 1891]

Gee, that’s about as helpful as defining “black” as a “dark color”. You’d think they could be a bit more precise, no? If there was a concise definition there, I wasn’t smart enough to see it. I kept wondering why such an important concept was so poorly defined. After all, isn’t it a fundamental rule of lexicography that definitions don’t include the word being defined? If so, why did Black’s use “republican form” to define “republican government”? Were they merely negligent or intentionally trying to obscure the concept?

Black’s Fourth Edition (published in 1968) provide virtually the same definition of “republican government” as Black’s 1st (1891). Once again, we’re essentially told that “republics” are very “republican”. That’s not very elucidating. I couldn’t believe that “representation” was all the founders sought to guarantee in Article 4 Section 4 of the Constitution. After all, virtually every form of government—even dictatorships and communists—have some kind of “representation” for the people.

I simply couldn’t believe the Founders wasted quill and ink on Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution to simply mandate that the government allow the people to have representatives. A “Republican Form of Government” had to mean much more. Further, the mysterious failure to concisely define a concept as fundamental and mandatory as “Republican Form of Government” implied that the meaning might be so important that it was intentionally obscured.

4.5.2 Military Intelligence

I read comparative definitions of “democracy” and “republic” in U.S. Government Training Manual No. 2000-25 for Army officers (published by the War Department on November 30, 1928). Those definitions illustrate that in 1928, democracy was officially viewed as dangerous and our military was sworn to defend our “Republic”:

DEMOCRACY: A government of masses. Authority derived through mass meeting or any other form of "direct" expression. Results in mobocracy. Attitude toward property is communistic—negating property rights. Attitude toward law is that the will of the majority shall regulate, whether it be based upon deliberation...
These military definitions were improvements over Black’s 1st and Fourth Editions. We can tell that the Army regarded “democracy” as contemptible and “republic” as noble, but otherwise, the essential meaning of “republican form of government” remained elusive.

4.5.3 Sovereign Power

My search for the meaning of “republic”, “democracy” and “republican form of government” ended with Black’s 7th Edition (1999). Unlike previous editions, Black’s 7th doesn’t even define “republican government”—but it does offer an illuminating definition of:

> “REPUBLIC. N. A system of government in which the people hold sovereign power and elect representatives who exercise that power. It contrasts on the one hand with a pure democracy, in which the people or community as an organized whole wield the sovereign power of government, and on the other with the rule of one person (such as a king, emperor, czar, or sultan).”

Ohh, that’s a beauty! I’d read that definition several times since 1999 without recognizing the inherent implications. But once I saw the implied meaning, I was electrified. First, note that definition focuses on “sovereign power”. Who “holds” sovereign power? The answer to that question provides the essential distinction between a republic, a democracy, and a monarchy (and probably all other forms of government).

But what is “sovereign power”? It’s pretty obvious that the words “sovereign,” “king” and “monarchy” are so closely associated as to be almost synonymous. Further, in Western civilization, whenever one or more individuals hold “sovereign power,” it’s almost certain that such power flows from God. For example, to be an earthly “sovereign” (King), one must gain the authority of sovereignty from God. This is the fundamental premise for the “divine right of kings” (sovereigns). God is the source of all “divine” rights. All other sources of authority are transient and simply based on raw power, survival of the fittest, and the idea that “might makes right” (“right” meaning “sovereign power”). Without a claim of divine origin of right, such “sovereign” powers are subject to constant challenge by anyone who believes his personal power is comparable or superior to that of the existing King. But gilded with the presumption of divine origin and implied Godly approval, “sovereign powers” can’t be lawfully challenged by any mortal man. Such powers are, by definition, superior to any form of man-made (secular) political powers.

The idea that sovereign powers flow directly from God is consistent with the “Declaration of Independence” which reads in part:

> “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights…” [Emph. Added]

Clearly, just as the “divine rights” of English kings flowed from God, so did our “unalienable Rights”. Further, if “all men [including kings] are created equal,” then it follows that whatever “divine rights” were accorded to kings by God in 1776 must be equal to whatever “unalienable Rights” were simultaneously granted to “all men” by God as established by the “Declaration of Independence”. After all, if all men (kings and commoners) are created equal, their God-given rights must likewise be equal. Ergo, “unalienable Rights” and “divine rights” should be synonymous. If so, any “divine right” that was recognized in English law as belonging to English kings in 1776 should also be included among the bundle of “unalienable Rights” accorded to Americans by the 1776 Declaration.

4.5.4 Government’s Purpose

The third sentence of the “Declaration of Independence” reads:
"That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." [Emph. add.]

Here we see the primary purpose of our “Form of Government”: “to secure these rights”. What “rights”?

Answer: The “unalienable Rights” (including Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness) mentioned in the Declaration’s previous (second) sentence. Thus—if “unalienable,” “divine,” and “sovereign” rights are virtually synonymous—then the primary legitimate purpose for our government is “to secure” our God-given, unalienable (sovereign) Rights.

And who, pray tell, is the recipient of the Declaration’s sovereign/unalienable Rights? Is it We the People in a collective sense? Or is it We the People in an individual sense? The correct answer is “individual”. Below is a U.S. Supreme Court cite that backs this conclusion up from Penhallow v. Doane’s, 3 U.S. 54, 3 Dall. 54, 1 L.Ed. 507 (1795):

"The great distinction between Monarchies and Republics (at least our Republics) in general is, that in the former the monarch is considered as the sovereign, and each individual of his nation a subject to him, though in some countries with many important special limitations: This, I say, is generally the case, for it has not been so universally. But in a Republic, all the citizens, as such, are equal, and no citizen can rightfully exercise any authority over another, but in virtue of a power constitutionally given by the whole community, and such authority when exercised, is in effect an act of the whole community which forms such body politic. In such governments, therefore, the sovereignty resides in the great body of the people, but it resides in them not as so many distinct individuals, but in their politic capacity only."

[Penhallow v. Doane's, 3 U.S. 54, 3 Dall. 54, 1 L.Ed. 507 (1795)]

God endows me with “certain unalienable Rights,” and He endows you with “certain unalienable Rights” and He endows each of our neighbors with “certain unalienable Rights”. At the moment of creation, each of us—as individuals—are equally “endowed by our Creator” with “certain unalienable Rights”. The idea that we are endowed individually (rather than collectively) with identical sets of sovereign/unalienable Rights is further supported by the State constitutions and the Bill of Rights which make it clear that virtually all of our sovereign/unalienable Rights are held as individuals.

4.5.5 Who holds the sovereign power?

OK—big deal, hmm? We hold our unalienable Rights as “individuals”. Someone alert the media. Well, actually, it is a big deal because—if you’ll recall—the Black’s 7th definition of “republic” implies that the essential distinction between a monarchy, a republic and a democracy is determined by who holds the “sovereign powers”:

"REPUBLIC. n. A system of government in which the people hold sovereign power and elect representatives who exercise that power. It contrasts on the one hand with a pure democracy, in which the people or community as an organized whole wield the sovereign power of government, and on the other with the rule of one person (such as a king, emperor, czar, or sultan)."

[Emph. added]

Therefore, what is a republic and (by implication) a “Republican Form of Government”? Black’s 7th does not expressly answer that question but it does provide enough contrasting definitions to allow us to deduce the mysterious meaning of “republic”.

First, a monarchy is the most easily understood form of government since the sovereign powers are held exclusively by one individual—the king. He alone has God-given, unalienable Rights. All others are “subjects” who have no legal authority or right to resist the King’s will. However, distinguishing between a democracy and a republic is more subtle. Black’s 7th explains that in both a democracy and a republic, the sovereign powers are held by the people. Therefore, the first time you read that definition, you may be both confused and reassured. In either case, you see that the “people” hold the sovereign powers. OK, sounds great. We the People. Of the people, by the people, for the people. People, people, people. Sounds just like the all-American answer we’d expect to hear because we’ve been told all our lives that, in this country, the people are sovereign.

Uh-huh. But if you read the phrase defining a democracy again, you’ll see that “people” is qualified by “as an organized whole”. I believe that qualification is the key to understanding republic. If the “people” in a democracy hold sovereign power as an “organized whole,” they hold that power as a collective. Unlike a monarchy where one individual (the king) holds all sovereign power, in a democracy the sovereign power is held by the collective or as a group. But—in a democracy no individual holds any sovereign power.
OK. Black’s 7th defines “republic” as a system of government in which the “people hold sovereign power.” So if a monarchy has one sovereign individual…and a democracy no sovereign individuals.. then it would seem to follow that in a republic…all individuals hold sovereign power! Do you see the difference between a democracy and a republic? In both forms of government, the people hold the sovereign power—but in the democracy those powers are held by the people as a collective, while in the republic, those powers are held by the people as individuals.

4.5.6 Individually-held God-given unalienable Rights

Thus, a “republic” is a system of government which recognizes that each person is individually “endowed by his Creator with certain unalienable Rights.” I am individually endowed, you are individually endowed, our neighbors are each individually endowed. Why is this individual endowment important? Because it doesn’t matter how the majority votes in a republic—they can’t arbitrarily deprive a single individual of his sovereign/unalienable Rights to “Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness” unless some of those unalienable Rights have been expressly delegated to government through the Constitution.

In a republic, the majority can’t vote to incarcerate (or execute) all the Jews, Blacks’ Japanese or patriots. Why? Because in a republic “All men are created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights”—and no man or collection of men (not even a massive democratic majority) can arbitrarily deprive any individual (even if he’s a “kike,” “nigger,” “gook,” “political extremist” or “religious fundamentalist”) of his God-given, unalienable Rights. Why? Because in the American republic, every man holds the position of “sovereign” (one who enjoys the “divine rights of kings”). The American republic is essentially a nation of kings. Thus, as per the Declaration of Independence, a “Republican Form of Government” is one which recognizes and “secures” each individual’s “sovereign powers”—his individually-held, God-given, unalienable Rights.\(^{113}\)

4.5.7 A republic’s covenant

In a republic, every individual’s unalienable Rights cannot be violated or arbitrarily denied by any mortal man or democratic majority—unless that individual first violates his covenant with God. This principle is based on the premise that our “unalienable Rights” are conditional; they are given to each of us by God on condition that we obey the balance of God’s laws (like “Thou shalt not kill”, “thou shalt not steal”, etc). If an individual chooses to violate God’s law, he breaches his covenant with God, and his claim to God’s protections, blessings, and endowment of “unalienable Rights” is forfeit. For example, if it can be proved in a court of law that a particular individual has broken his covenant with God to “not kill,” that individual forfeits his own unalienable Right to Life and may be lawfully executed. An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth…do unto others as you would have government do unto you.

However, in a republic, execution cannot be lawfully imposed on isolated individuals or groups who haven’t individually breached their covenant with God. Why? Because that individual has God-given, unalienable Rights. Those individually-held rights are the basis for his defense. That’s the foundation for his presumption of innocence. Why? Because the votes and opinions of all mankind taken together are trivialities when compared to God. If God endows an individual with a particular Right, the whole of mankind lacks sufficient collective authority to arbitrarily revoke or violate that right—unless that individual has first breached his covenant with God.

4.5.8 Divine endowment

This Biblical interpretation may seem like so much “holy rolling,” but it has great significance in a “Republican Form of Government”. For example, in a republic, you can only be charged with a crime if you injure the person or property of another sovereign individual. So long as you don’t injure, rob or kill another sovereign (and thereby violate his God-given, unalienable Rights), there is no crime. In a republic, there can be no crimes “against the state” (the collective)—only against God. Likewise, except for certain biblical prohibitions (like working on the Sabbath), there are no “victimless crimes” in a republic. However, in a democracy, the majority (or their presumed agent, the government) can vote that any act is a crime (hate speech, for example) even if no individual’s life, person or property is damaged. Thus, “victimless crimes” and “crimes against the state” (which are almost impossible in a true republic) are common under democracy.

\(^{113}\) Not every “republic” conforms to this definition. For example, the former “Union of Soviet Socialist Republics” claimed to be composed of “Republics,” but merely used that word as a political label. Those “republics” were actually collectives where sovereign power was held by the collective, not individuals.
Why? Because there are no legitimate victims in a democracy. Why? Because, in a democracy, no individual has any unalienable Rights.

Without rights, you can’t be a victim; there’s nothing to damage. For example, to shoot a homo sapien without unalienable Rights is legally indistinguishable from killing a cow. Without God-given, unalienable Rights, there’s nothing intrinsic to violate. Sure, the democracy may vote that murder is wrong (at least when committed against the majority). But that democratic collective can likewise vote that murdering Jews, Blacks, homosexuals, patriots—or even specific individuals like Jesus Christ—is quite alright. As citizens of a democracy, we each have no more individual rights than cows. Without individually-held, God-given rights “secured” by a “Republican Form of Government,” we have no intrinsic value and may be fairly characterized as “human resources”. In a democracy, we have no individually-held, unalienable Rights to shield us against the arbitrary will of the majority or their agents: government.

Think not? Ask Vickie Weaver about her unalienable Right to Life in our fair “democracy”. FBI hitman Lon Horiuchi simply shot her in the head like any other dumb animal. Why? Because, as a citizen of a democracy (where the sovereign powers are held by the collective), Vickie Weaver had no individual right to Life. Same was true for the Branch Davidians. Same is true for you and for me. In a democracy, there are no individually-held, unalienable Rights so we are all individually defenseless against the major and/or the government. Look at the ranchers and farmers in Klamath Falls, Oregon. They’re losing their homes to save some suckerfish. They’re shocked to learn that our government doesn’t recognize or secure their “unalienable Rights to Life, Liberty and pursuit of Happiness” (property).

But the truth is that—as citizens of a democracy—those individual ranchers don’t have any unalienable Rights to their property. The democracy has “spoken” (if only by its silence). The majority has presumptively ruled (at least, they haven’t complained loudly) that endangered suckerfish are more important than the “suckers” who allowed themselves to become citizens of a democracy. The citizens of Klamath Falls are learning that, as a tiny minority in a national democracy, they are as defenseless as Jews in a Nazi concentration camp.

4.5.9 Democracies must by nature be deceptive to maintain their power

This doesn’t mean that a democratic government can do virtually anything it wants. It has to be careful and crafty. It can’t murder so many citizens or steal so much property that the majority of citizens of the democracy wake up and vote to stop government from killing or robbing individuals. So a democratic government has to be sneaky. It has to control public opinion. It has to follow (almost worship) the public opinion polls. It can only implement so much abuse as the public will endure without actually getting angry enough to vote the S.O.B.’s out. As a result, the only thing a democracy fears is public exposure.

Conversely, in a republic, it’s simply unlawful for an FBI hitman to kill a woman holding a baby and get away with it. In a republic, government officials can’t fla nce a bunch of kids in Waco and walk away with promotions and a fat pension. In a republic, you can’t effectively “seize” another person’s property by declaring that property can no longer be used to raise cattle if that use adversely affects the lowly suckerfish. In a republic, individuals have unalienable Rights; suckerfish don’t. Thus, the rights of individuals are superior to the interests of suckerfish. In a republic, neither a 99% democratic majority nor the Gates of Hell can lawfully prevail over the God-given, unalienable Rights with which every individual is endowed. See the difference?

In a monarchy, one individual holds the sovereign powers. In a democracy, no individual holds sovereign powers. But in a republic only, all individuals hold “sovereign powers” (God-given, unalienable Rights).

Where would you rather live? Where only one individual had sovereign powers? Where no individual had sovereign powers? Or where all individuals (including you) have sovereign powers?

4.5.10 Democratic disabilities

“The very purpose of a Bill of Rights was to withdraw certain subjects from the vicissitudes of political controversy, to place them beyond the reach of majorities and officials and to establish them as legal principles to be applied by the courts. One’s right to life, liberty, and property, to free speech, a free press, freedom of worship and assembly, and other fundamental rights may not be submitted to vote; they depend on the outcome of no elections.”

Black’s Law Dictionary, 7th Edition defines “democracy” as a system of government in which, “the people or community as an organized whole wield the sovereign power”—but do so in the capacity of a single, artificial collective—not as an association of individual “sovereigns”. Thus, democracy is a collectivist political philosophy characterized by a lack of individually-held, God given, “unalienable Rights”. In other words, it is socialism or worst yet communism, at its extreme. Also note that the logical correlative of the collective rights of the “group” is the absence of rights for each individual. This absence of individually-held, God-given rights is the central feature of all collectivist philosophies (communism, socialism, etc.) since these systems presume that “sovereign power” is held by the collective, but not by any individuals. Therefore, by definition, no citizen of a democracy can hold God-given, “unalienable Rights” to Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness as an individual. Why? Because if a democracy recognized the legitimacy of individual rights as God-given and thus superior to any claim of “collective” rights, the power of the democracy and majority rule over specific individuals or minorities would disappear. By simply invoking his God-given, unalienable Rights, any individual could thumb his nose at virtually any vote by the democratic majority. So long as I have an unalienable Right to Life, it matters not if 250 million Americans all vote to hang me. So long as I am individually “endowed by my Creator with certain unalienable Rights,” I can tell the whole world to “stuff it” by simply invoking my individually-held, unalienable Rights.

The implications of who holds sovereignty within our system of republican government forms the basis for our system of jurisprudence. Because individuals rather than collective groups or the government, are the holders of divinely endowed rights, then they are the only ones who can have a legal remedy in the courts for an invasion or injury of those rights. Groups and government cannot be identified in a republic as an “injured party”. This is why you can go into court in our country and demand a verified affidavit from an injured party, and if the state cannot produce one, then they cannot prosecute you for a crime. Stated another way, there must be a real, flesh and blood victim of a crime in order for the state to prosecute for a violation of a criminal law. If the state prosecutes someone for any other type of crime, it is called a malum prohibitum:

Malum prohibitum. A wrong prohibited; a thing which is wrong because prohibited; an act which is not inherently immoral, but becomes so because its commission is expressly forbidden by positive law; an act involving an illegality resulting from positive law. Compare Malum in se.

As we will explain later in section 4.8, the Supreme Court has ruled in the case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1902) that Constitutional rights (the Bill of Rights) and direct taxes on natural people are mutually exclusive and cannot coexist. We believe this is because the entire Bill of Rights would have to be destroyed to eliminate all the conflicts of law that would result. On the other hand, ask yourself if a tax crime can have a real, flesh and blood individual victim for a tax that is voluntary to begin with? The answer is no, and that is one of many reasons why income tax laws consistent with the Constitution and the Bill of Rights can never be lawfully imposed against real flesh and blood people, who are the sovereigns in our society. Furthermore, citizens simply can’t be the sovereigns unless they have individual rights. Consequently, public servants in our government simply can never be greater than the sovereigns they serve because that would turn the bedrock of our political system upside down. The Federalist Paper No. 78 written by Alexander Hamilton, one of our founding fathers, clearly explains these observations:

“No legislative act contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy (agent) is greater than his principal; that the servant is above the master; that the representatives of the people are superior to the people; that men, acting by virtue of powers may do not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid...[text omitted] It is not otherwise to be supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by judges, as fundamental law. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute.” — [Alexander Hamilton (Federalist Paper # 78)]

Do you now see our point about the implications of who holds sovereign power? By definition, a democracy can’t work—can’t exercise the arbitrary authority of the majority over the minority—can’t even exist where unalienable Rights are granted to individuals by the supreme authority of God. And at least coincidentally, according to Brock Chisholm, former Director of the UN’s World Health Organization,

“To achieve world government, it is necessary to remove from the minds of men, their individualism, loyalty to family traditions, national patriotism and religious dogmas.”
Do you see how a democracy—which denies both individual rights and the God that granted them—could diminish the republican forces of individualism and faith that would naturally resist one world government? Do you see how a “democratic form of government” might be ideal for implementing a New World Order? In fact, if you’ll read the United Nation’s “Universal Declaration of Human Rights” (adopted Dec. 10, 1948), you’ll see that Article 21(b) explains the basis of the U.N.’s one-world government:

“The will of the people shall be the basis of the authority of government; this shall be expressed in periodic and genuine elections which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and shall be held by secret vote or by equivalent free voting procedures.” [Emph. added]

The basis for the authority of all U.N. governments isn’t God, but the “will of the people” as expressed in “periodic elections” (rather than fixed constitutions). That’s democracy, folks. And that 1948 U.S. “Declaration” is probably the political foundation for the world’s 20th century march toward our “beloved” democracy. Think not? Read Article 29(2) of the same U.N. “Declaration”:

“In the exercise of his rights and freedoms, everyone shall be subject only to...the rights and freedoms of others...in a democratic society.”

In other words, despite the considerable list of rights which the U.N.’s “Declaration” claims to provide for all individuals, those individually-held “human rights” are absolutely subject to the “rights and freedoms of others”. Note that “others” is plural. Thus, the individual’s rights are always subject to that of the group, of the collective. In other words, whenever two or more are gathered in the U.N.’s name, a single person’s claim to “individual rights” is meaningless.

A collectivist form of government, the U.N. democracy is fundamentally indistinguishable from communism and socialism. More importantly, by rejecting the concept of individually-held, unalienable Rights, every democracy (including the U.N., the New World Order and/or the United States) must likewise reject the source of those unalienable Rights: God.

Like all collectivist political systems, democracies must be atheistic. Although a particular democracy may allow its subjects to engage in some religious activity, none of those religious principles can be officially recognized or given any authority by the collectivist state. (Can you say “separation of church and state,” boys and girls?)

4.5.11 Collective self-destruction

“Do not follow the crowd [majority] in doing wrong. When you give testimony in a lawsuit, do not pervert justice by siding with the crowd, and do not show favoritism to a poor man in his lawsuit.”

[Exodus 23:2, Bible, NIV]

But democracies aren’t merely dangerous to individuals, they’re even dangerous to the collective because—without individually-held, unalienable Rights—there is no defense against unlimited government growth, taxation, regulation or oppression. A massive, unlimited New World Order (or American bureaucracy) is the inevitable expression and consequence of the principles of democracy.

Consider: In 1978, William E. Simon (Secretary of the Treasury in the Nixon and Ford administrations) complained that the federal expenditures exceeded $1 billion a day. Twenty-three years later, our federal government spends about $56 billion per day. Of course, our economy has grown since 1978, and inflation has reduced the value of $56 billion in today’s dollars to about $20 billion in 1978 dollars.

Still, did federal expenditures (and taxes, regulations, and intrusion into private lives) grow at least ten-fold in the last quarter century because the citizens of our “democracy” voted for that growth? Or did it grow because in a democracy, we have no claim to the individual rights that would automatically inhibit such extraordinary government growth?

In a “Republican Form of Government”—where individually held, God-given rights are presumed and “secured”—government can’t grow except by the express will of the people as demonstrated through constitutional amendments. But 114 If you read Article 22 of the U.N.’s “Declaration”: “Everyone, as a member of society, has the right to social security...” Does this imply that modern “social security” is a U.N. program? Is it possible that mere possession of a Social Security card is construed as evidence of your status as subject in an international democracy?

in a democracy, where there are no God-given, individual rights to inhibit government growth, the will of the collective is expressed only every two years in the form of elections. Once elected, our “representatives” are endowed to vote for virtually anything and everything they want since they’re presumed to enjoy the support of the majority of the collective. Unless the people complain bitterly and even vote against incumbents—without individually-held, God-given rights, there is not restriction on government growth in a democracy.

In a democracy, government can take your guns. They can take your kids, your property and your cash. In fact, they can take your life. Every one of those “ takings” (and thousands more) are possible and absolutely legal because subjects of a democracy have no individually-held, unalienable Rights to protect them against arbitrary exercise of government power.

If it’s lawful for government to take virtually anything it wants from subjects of the democratic collective, then it’s certainly lawful for government to create and enlarge as many bureaucracies and enforcement agencies as it deems necessary to implement the unrestricted takings. Do you see my point? God-given, unalienable Rights don’t merely protect us as individuals from government oppression, they are the fundamental bulwarks that protects the whole country against the growth of massive, government bureaucracies. The road to world democracy without the restraining influences of republican government is a road to totalitarian socialism and communism and self-destruction. Below is just one example of how that might happen:

“A democracy cannot exist as a permanent form of government. It can only exist until the voters discover that they can vote themselves money from the Public Treasury. From that moment on, the majority always votes for the candidate promising the most benefits from the Public Treasury with the result that a democracy always collapses over loose fiscal policy always followed by dictatorship.”

[Alexander Fraser Tyler, “The Decline and Fall of the Athenian Republic”]

4.5.12 The “First” Bill of Rights?

So what is the “Republican Form of Government” that’s mandated by Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution?

Answer: A system of government that recognizes the God-given, unalienable Rights of individuals. And what did the “Declaration of Independence” say was the fundamental purpose for all just government? “To secure these rights ….” Which rights? The “unalienable Rights” given to each individual by God and referenced in the previous sentence of the Declaration.

Thus, the first obligation of the “Republican Form of Government” mandated by Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution is to secure God-given, unalienable Rights to individuals. Not to secure rights to the collective or some king—but to secure unalienable Rights to every individual. And note that while, “among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness”—this general list of unalienable Rights is not exhaustive. It is obvious that there are other, unspecified unalienable Rights which must also be “secured” by government. If so, Article 4, section 4 of the Federal Constitution might be viewed as the original “Bill of Rights”.

Consider: The Federal Constitution was adopted in 1789. The Bill of Rights (first ten amendments) was adopted in 1791. But, in 1791, some people argued against adopting the Bill of Rights because 1) all unalienable Rights were protected under the Constitution; and 2) by expressly specifying some Rights, government might later be able to argue that other rights which were not specified did not exist or were not protected.

Until recently, I viewed those 18th century arguments as unconvincing. But now that I see that a “Republican Form of Government” is one that recognizes and “secures” all God-given, unalienable Rights, I also see that Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution (and similar sections in State constitutions) seem to guarantee all unalienable Rights to all individuals.

Thus, the 1791 Bill of Rights may have truly been unnecessary, redundant or even counterproductive. Worse, by focusing on the specific rights enumerated in the first ten amendments, we may have lost sight of the “mother lode” of unalienable Rights: the Article 4, Section 4 guarantee of a “Republican Form of Government” (one that “secures” our unalienable Rights).

By focusing on each specific right in the Bill of Rights, it’s become possible for democratic government to whittle away at each right whenever political conditions allow them to do so. They don’t attack all our rights at once; they simply whittle away a little at “due process” today, “freedom of speech” tomorrow, and the right to “keep and bear arms” next month. In a sense, it’s arguable that the Bill of Rights might allow government to “divide and conquer” our rights on a one-by-one basis and thereby slowly “cook” our freedoms like so many frogs. However, such cannibalism seems strictly prohibited under Article 4, Section 4 guarantee of a “Republican Form of Government”.

4.5.13 The mandate remains

So far as we know, the last President to refer to this country as a “republic” was John F. Kennedy. Since then, all presidents have referred to the United States only as a “democracy”—a political system which, by definition, cannot recognize the unalienable Rights and sovereign powers of individuals. Does our current government secure our God-given, unalienable Rights? Obviously not.

Obvious conclusion? We no longer live in a republic. Instead, we’re entrapped in a democracy where unalienable Rights are not recognized or “secured” and no individual or minority is safe from the majority’s arbitrary exercise of power or oppression. Nevertheless, Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution is still there, un-amended, and mandating that “The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government…”

So we seem to have a constitutional conflict. Our Federal and (some) State constitutions mandate a republic, but our government only provides a democracy. This conflict between the Article 4, Section 4 mandate for a “Republican Form of Government” and our modern democracy can successfully be exploited as a defense against government oppression. We suspect that a defendant who 1) understands the full meaning of a “Republican Form of Government” and 2) demands that the Article 4, Section 4 guarantee of such government be enforced—may raise a constitutional conflict or “political question” too embarrassing for most prosecutors to face. If so, cases against defendants might “disappear” if those defendants essentially argued that, as individuals “endowed with certain unalienable Rights,” they could not be subject to the statutes, regulations and enforcement activities of a democracy—which, by definition, denies unalienable Rights.

More importantly, any government official who has taken an Oath of Office to support and defend the Constitution is duty bound to “guarantee” a “Republican Form of Government” and the attendant “unalienable Rights”. Therefore, if an official sought to impose rules or regulation upon you that were based on democratic principles rather than unalienable Rights—that official might violate his Oath of Office and incur personal liability.

So, if you claim you still have the unalienable Rights referenced in the “Declaration of Independence” and seemingly guaranteed by Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution, will government publicly admit that it’s not so? Even if government can prove that you don’t have unalienable Rights, you’re not in a “state of this Union,” or the Republic is long dead, they’d be unlikely to make those admissions publicly since doing so could alert the democratic majority that they’ve been betrayed. Once “officially alerted of their loss of individual rights, the public might rise up and vote (the democracy’s one remaining “right”) to restore the Republican Form of Government.115

Ironically, democracy only works if the public has no idea of what kind of mess they’re really in. If your courtroom defense threatens to “sound the alarm,” gov-co may decline to prosecute. Further, I suspect that most government prosecutions for minor offenses (traffic, family law, etc.) take place in courts of equity rather than law. One axiom of equity jurisdiction is that the plaintiff must have “clean hands” to initiate a case in equity. So what would happen if the government tried to sue or indict you in a court of equity and you advised the court that the government’s “hands” were “unclean” since it was operating as a democracy rather than the “Republican Form of Government” mandated by the Federal and (possibly) State constitutions? Could failure to provide a “Republican Form of Government” cost government its standing to sue in equity?

Similarly, Article 4, Section 4 might not only offer an intriguing defense against government prosecution, it might even provide a basis for aggressively suing a governmental entity or official that violated or refused to “secure” our unalienable Rights. Until Federal and State constitutions are amended to remove the republican mandate, there appears to be no wiggle-room, no excuse for not providing the People with a “Republican Form of Government”. If so, any governmental agent or agency that’s put on proper notice of their constitutionally-mandated duty to provide us with a “Republican Form of Government”—and nevertheless continues to prosecute us as a subject of the unauthorized democracy—might be personally exposed to financial and even criminal liability. More, intentional failure to provide a “Republican Form of 115 The “right to vote” is the only right guaranteed to the citizens of a democracy. Hence the importance of the Federal Election Commission and enforcement of “voting rights”.

Government” is arguably treason (a hanging offense). In fact, it’s arguable that (like all collectivist political systems) democracy itself is anathema to the Declaration of Independence, treason to the Constitution, and blasphemy to God.

Faced with charges that they’ve knowingly refused to provide a “Republican Form of Government” and “secure” our “Unalienable Rights,” what could government agents do? Admit to a jury that the American people haven’t had any unalienable Rights since the 1930’s? I don’t think so. But even if they made that admission, would the jury believe them? Probably not. And therein lies the great vulnerability of a democracy imposed through deceit and enforced public ignorance. Government secretly imposed the democracy, because they knew the American people would never accept it, if they understood that abandoning the republic meant abandoning their unalienable Rights. As a result, government is in the awkward position of a teenage boy who brings a hooker home while his folks are on vacation. If his parents come home early, the kid must either hide the whore or pass her off as his history teacher—but he can’t possibly admit that he’s got a whore in the house. Likewise, our government can’t openly admit it’s brought the disease-bearing whore of democracy into our republic. Ohh, she’s here alright, but all gov-co can do is act innocent, keep a big supply of condoms handy and hope we don’t find out she’s not our long-lost Aunt.

4.5.14 What shall we do?

How can we eject the democratic bitch? The “Declaration of Independence” offers guidance:

“That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends [securing our unalienable Rights], it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. [Emph. and bracket added]

In short, we have an unalienable Right (some say, “duty”) to abolish the democracy which denies our individually-held, God-given Rights. Based on the Article 4, Section 4 “guarantee,” we can demand restoration of the “Republican Form of Government” that secures our unalienable Rights. Such overthrow won’t happen soon since a successful referendum against democracy is a “political question” that will require a massive effort to educate the public to the blessings of a Republic and the disabilities of democracy.

However, for now, we can begin that educational process by simply challenging government to provide the “Republican Form of Government” that’s guaranteed by our Federal and (some) State constitutions. As our understanding grows, and more people begin to defend themselves based on the constitutional guarantee of a “Republican Form of Government,” we might see atheist democracy begin to crack, then crumble like the Berlin wall did when Communism fell.

4.5.15 Sorry, Mr. Franklin, “We’re All Democrats Now”

This section was derived from a speech by Congressman Ron Paul delivered in the House of Representatives on January 29, 2003. It very powerfully illustrates the disabilities of democracies, how we have violated the intent of the founding fathers in our retreat from the Constitutional Republic they endowed us with, and what we need to do to fix the problem. You can visit Ron Paul’s Liberty Committee website at the address below:

http://www.thelibertycommittee.org/

4.5.15.1 Introduction

At the close of the Constitutional Conventional in 1787, Benjamin Franklin told an inquisitive citizen that the delegates to the Constitutional Convention gave the people “a Republic, if you can keep it.” We should apologize to Mr. Franklin. It is obvious that the Republic is gone, for we are wallowing in a pure democracy against which the Founders had strongly warned.

Madison, the father of the Constitution, could not have been more explicit in his fear and concern for democracies. “Democracies,” he said, “have ever been spectacles of turbulence and contention; have ever been found incompatible with personal security or the rights of property; and have in general been as short in their lives as they have been violent in their death.”
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

If Madison’s assessment was correct, it behooves those of us in Congress to take note and decide, indeed, whether the Republic has vanished, when it occurred, and exactly what to expect in the way of “turbulence, contention, and violence.” And above all else, what can we and what will we do about it?

The turbulence seems self-evident. Domestic welfare programs are not sustainable and do not accomplish their stated goals. State and federal spending and deficits are out of control. Terrorism and uncontrollable fear undermine our sense of well-being. Hysterical reactions to dangers not yet seen prompt the people— at the prodding of the politicians— to readily sacrifice their liberties in vain hope that someone else will take care of them and guarantee their security. With these obvious signs of a failed system all around us, there seems to be more determination than ever to antagonize the people of the world by pursuing a world empire. Nation building, foreign intervention, preemptive war, and global government drive our foreign policy. There seems to be complete aversion to defending the Republic and the Constitution that established it.

The Founders clearly understood the dangers of a democracy. Edmund Randolph of Virginia described the effort to deal with the issue at the Constitutional Convention:

“The general object was to produce a cure for the evils under which the United States labored; that in tracing these evils to their origins, every man had found it in the turbulence and follies of democracy.”

These strongly held views regarding the evils of democracy and the benefits of a Constitutional Republic were shared by all the Founders. For them, a democracy meant centralized power, controlled by majority opinion, which was up for grabs and therefore completely arbitrary.

In contrast, a Republic was decentralized and representative in nature, with the government’s purpose strictly limited by the Constitution to the protection of liberty and private property ownership. They believed the majority should never be able to undermine this principle and that the government must be tightly held in check by constitutional restraints. The difference between a democracy and a republic was simple. Would we live under the age-old concept of the rule of man or the enlightened rule of law?

A constitution in and by itself does not guarantee liberty in a republican form of government. Even a perfect constitution with this goal in mind is no better than the moral standards and desires of the people. Although the United States Constitution was by far the best ever written for the protection of liberty, with safeguards against the dangers of a democracy, it too was flawed from the beginning. Instead of guaranteeing liberty equally for all people, the authors themselves yielded to the democratic majority’s demands that they compromise on the issue of slavery. This mistake, plus others along the way, culminated in a Civil War that surely could have been prevented with clearer understanding and a more principled approach to the establishment of a constitutional republic.

Subsequently, the same urge to accommodate majority opinion, while ignoring the principles of individual liberty, led to some other serious errors. Even amending the Constitution in a proper fashion to impose alcohol prohibition turned out to be a disaster. Fortunately this was rectified after a short time with its repeal.

But today, the American people accept drug prohibition, a policy as damaging to liberty as alcohol prohibition. A majority vote in Congress has been enough to impose this very expensive and failed program on the American people, without even bothering to amend the Constitution. It has been met with only minimal but, fortunately, growing dissent. For the first 150 years of our history, when we were much closer to being a true republic, there were no federal laws dealing with this serious medical problem of addiction.

The ideas of democracy, not the principles of liberty, were responsible for passage of the 16th Amendment. It imposed the income tax on the American people and helped to usher in the modern age of the welfare/warfare state. Unfortunately, the 16th Amendment has not been repealed, as was the 18th. As long as the 16th Amendment is in place, the odds are slim that we can restore a constitutional republic dedicated to liberty. The personal income tax is more than symbolic of a democracy; it is a predictable consequence.

4.5.15.2 Transition to Democracy

The transition from republic to democracy was gradual and insidious. It seeds were sown early in our history. In many ways, the Civil War and its aftermath laid the foundation for the acute erosion that took place over the entire 20th century. Chronic concern about war and economic downturns— events caused by an intrusive government’s failure to follow the binding restraints of the Constitution—allowed majority demands to supersede the rights of the minority. By the end of the 20th century, majority opinion had become the determining factor in all that government does. The rule of law was cast aside, leaving the Constitution a shell of what it once was—a Constitution with rules that guaranteed a republic with limited and regional government and protection of personal liberty. The marketplace, driven by voluntary cooperation, private property ownership, and sound money was severely undermined with the acceptance of the principles of a true democracy.

Unfortunately, too many people confuse the democratic elections of leaders of a republic for democracy by accepting the rule of majority opinion in all affairs. For majorities to pick leaders is one thing. It is something quite different for majorities to decide what rights are, to redistribute property, to tell people how to manage their personal lives, and to promote undeclared, unconstitutional wars.

The majority is assumed to be in charge today and can do whatever it pleases. If the majority has not yet sanctioned some desired egregious action demanded by special interests, the propaganda machine goes into operation, and the pollsters relay the results back to the politicians who are seeking legitimacy in their endeavors. The rule of law and the Constitution have become irrelevant, and we live by constant polls.

This trend toward authoritarian democracy was tolerated because, unlike a military dictatorship, it was done in the name of benevolence, fairness, and equity. The pretense of love and compassion by those who desire to remodel society and undermine the Constitution convinced the recipients, and even the victims, of its necessity. Since it was never a precipitous departure from the republic, the gradual erosion of liberty went unnoticed.

But it is encouraging that more and more citizens are realizing just how much has been lost by complacency. The resolution to the problems we face as a result of this profound transition to pure democracy will be neither quick nor painless. This transition has occurred even though the word “democracy” does not appear in the Constitution or in the Declaration of Independence, and the Founders explicitly denounced it.

Over the last hundred years, the goal of securing individual liberties within the framework of a constitutional republic has been replaced with incessant talk of democracy and fairness.

Rallying support for our ill-advised participation in World War I, Wilson spoke glowingly of “making the world safe for democracy,” and never mentioned national security. This theme has, to this day, persisted in all our foreign affairs. Neo-conservatives now brag of their current victories in promoting what they call “Hard Wilsonism.”

A true defense of self-determination for all people, the necessary ingredient of a free society, is ignored. Self-determination implies separation of smaller government from the larger entities that we witnessed in the breakup of the Soviet Union. This notion contradicts the goal of pure democracy and world government. A single world government is the ultimate goal of all social egalitarians who are unconcerned with liberty.

4.5.15.3 Current Understanding

Today the concepts of rights and property ownership are completely arbitrary. Congress, the courts, presidents and bureaucrats arbitrarily “legislate” on a daily basis, seeking only the endorsement of the majority. Although the republic was designed to protect the minority against the dictates of the majority, today we find the reverse. The republic is no longer recognizable.

Supporters of democracy are always quick to point out one of the perceived benefits of this system is the redistribution of wealth by government force to the poor. Although this may be true in limited fashion, the champions of this system never concern themselves with the victims from whom the wealth is stolen. The so-called benefits are short-lived, because democracy consumes wealth with little concern for those who produce it. Eventually the programs cannot be funded, and the dependency that has developed precipitates angry outcries for even more “fairness.” Since reversing the tide against liberty is so difficult, this unworkable system inevitably leads to various forms of tyranny.

As our republic crumbles, voices of protest grow louder. The central government becomes more authoritarian with each crisis. As the quality of education plummets, the role of the federal government is expanded. As the quality of medical care collapses, the role of the federal government in medicine is greatly increased. Foreign policy failures precipitate cries for more intervention abroad and an even greater empire. Cries for security grow louder, and concern for liberty languishes.
Attacks on our homeland prompt massive increase in the bureaucracy to protect us from all dangers, seen and imagined. The prime goal and concern of the Founders, the protection of liberty, is ignored. Those expressing any serious concern for personal liberty are condemned for their self-centeredness and their lack of patriotism.

Even if we could defeat al Qaeda- which surely is a worthwhile goal- it would do little to preserve our liberties, while ignoring the real purpose of our government. Another enemy would surely replace it, just as the various groups of barbarians never left the Roman Empire alone once its internal republican structure collapsed.

4.5.15.4 Democracy Subverts Liberty and Undermines Prosperity

Once it becomes acceptable to change the rules by majority vote, there are no longer any limits on the power of the government. When the Constitution can be subverted by mere legislative votes, executive orders or judicial decrees, constitutional restraints on the government are eliminated. This process was rare in the early years of our history, but now it is routine.

Democracy is promoted in the name of fairness in an effort to help some special-interest group gain a benefit that it claims it needs or is entitled to. If only one small group were involved, nothing would come of the demands. But coalitions develop, and the various groups band together to form a majority to vote themselves all those things that they expect others to provide for them.

Although the motivating factor is frequently the desire for the poor to better themselves through the willingness of others to sacrifice for what they see as good cause, the process is doomed to failure. Governments are inefficient and the desired goals are rarely achieved. Administrators, who benefit, perpetuate the programs. Wealthy elites learn to benefit from the system in a superior fashion over the poor, because they know how to skim the cream off the top of all the programs designed for the disadvantaged. They join the various groups in producing the majority vote needed to fund their own special projects.

Public financing of housing, for instance, benefits builders, bureaucrats, insurance companies, and financial institutions, while the poor end up in drug-infested, crime-ridden housing projects. For the same reason, not only do business leaders not object to the system, but they also become strong supporters of welfare programs and foreign aid. Big business strongly supports programs like the Export/Import Bank, the IMF, the World Bank, farm subsidies, and military adventurism. Tax-code revisions and government contracts mean big profits for those who are well-connected. Concern for individual liberty is pushed to the bottom of the priority list for both the poor and rich welfare recipients.

Prohibitions placed in the Constitution against programs that serve special interests are the greatest threat to the current system of democracy under which we operate. In order for the benefits to continue, politicians must reject the rule of law and concern themselves only with the control of majority opinion. Sadly, that is the job of almost all politicians. It is clearly the motivation behind the millions spent on constant lobbying, as well as the billions spent on promoting the right candidates in each election. Those who champion liberty are rarely heard from. The media, banking, insurance, airlines, transportation, financial institutions, government employees, the military-industrial complex, the educational system, and the medical community are all dependent on government appropriations, resulting in a high-stakes system of government.

Democracy encourages the mother of all political corruption- the use of political money to buy influence. If the dollars spent in this effort represent the degree to which democracy has won out over the rule of law and the Constitution, it looks like the American republic is left wanting. Billions are spent on the endeavor.

Money in politics is the key to implementing policy and swaying democratic majorities. It is seen by most Americans, and rightly so, as a negative and a danger. Yet the response, unfortunately, is only more of the same. More laws tinkering with freedom of expression are enacted, in hopes that regulating sums of private money thrown into the political system will curtail the abuse. But failing to understand the cause of the problem, lack of respect for the Constitution, and obsession with legislative relativity dictated by the majority serve only to further undermine the rule of law.

We were adequately warned about the problem. Democracies lead to chaos, violence and bankruptcy. The demands of the majority are always greater than taxation alone can provide. Therefore, control over the monetary and banking system is required for democracies to operate. It was no accident in 1913, when the dramatic shift toward a democracy became pronounced, that the Federal Reserve was established. A personal income tax was imposed as well. At the same time, popular election of Senators was instituted, and our foreign policy became aggressively interventionist. Even with an income tax, the planners for war and welfare (a guns and butter philosophy) knew that it would become necessary to eliminate restraints on the printing of money. Private counterfeiting was a heinous crime, but government counterfeit and fractional-reserve banking were required to seductively pay for the majority’s demands. It is for this reason that democracies always bring about currency debasement through inflation of the money supply.

Some of the planners of today clearly understand the process and others, out of ignorance, view central-bank money creation as a convenience with little danger. That’s where they are wrong. Even though the wealthy and the bankers support paper money-believing they know how to protect against its ill effects—many of them are eventually dragged down in the economic downturns that always develop.

It’s not a new era that they have created for us today, but more of the same endured throughout history by so many other nations. The belief that democratic demands can be financed by deficits, credit creation and taxation is based on false hope and failure to see how it contributes to the turbulence as the democracy collapses.

Once a nation becomes a democracy, the whole purpose of government changes. Instead of the government’s goal being that of guaranteeing liberty, equal justice, private property, and voluntary exchange, the government embarks on the impossible task of achieving economic equality, micromanaging the economy, and protecting citizens from themselves and all their activities. The destruction of the wealth-building process, which is inherent in a free society, is never anticipated.
Once it’s realized that it has been undermined, it is too late to easily reverse the attacks against limited government and personal liberty.

Democracy, by necessity, endorses special-interest interventionism, inflationism, and corporatism. In order to carry out the duties now expected of the government, power must be transferred from the citizens to the politicians. The only thing left is to decide which group or groups have the greatest influence over the government officials. As the wealth of the nation dwindles, competition between the special-interest groups grows more intense and becomes the dominant goal of political action. Restoration of liberty, the market and personal responsibility are of little interest and are eventually seen as impractical.

Power and public opinion become crucial factors in determining the direction of all government expenditures. Although both major parties now accept the principles of rule by majority and reject the rule of law, the beneficiaries for each party are generally different—although they frequently overlap. Propaganda, demagoguery, and control of the educational system and the media are essential to directing the distribution of the loot the government steals from those who are still honestly working for a living.

The greater problem is that nearly everyone receives some government benefit, and at the same time contributes to the Treasury. Most hope they will get back more than they pay in and, therefore, go along with the firmly entrenched system.
Others, who understand and would choose to opt out and assume responsibility for themselves, aren’t allowed to and are forced to participate. The end only comes with a collapse of the system, since a gradual and logical reversal of the inexorable march toward democratic socialism is unachievable.

Soviet-style communism dramatically collapsed once it was recognized that it could no longer function and a better system replaced it. It became no longer practical to pursue token reforms like those that took place over its 70-year history.

The turmoil and dangers of pure democracy are known. We should get prepared. But it will be the clarity with which we plan its replacement that determines the amount of pain and suffering endured during the transition to another system.
Hopefully, the United States Congress and other government leaders will come to realize the seriousness of our current situation and replace the business-as-usual attitude, regardless of political demands and growing needs of a boisterous majority. Simply stated, our wealth is running out, and the affordability of democracy is coming to an end.

History reveals that once majorities can vote themselves largesse, the system is destined to collapse from within. But in order to maintain the special-interest system for as long as possible, more and more power must be given to an ever-expanding central government—which of course only makes matters worse.

The economic shortcomings of such a system are easily understood. What is too often ignored is that the flip side of delivering power to government is the loss of liberty to the individual. This loss of liberty causes exactly what the government doesn’t want—less productive citizens who cannot pay taxes.
Even before 9/11, these trends were in place and proposals were abundant for restraining liberty. Since 9/11, the growth of centralized government and the loss of privacy and personal freedoms have significantly accelerated.

It is in dealing with homeland defense and potential terrorist attacks that the domestic social programs and the policy of foreign intervention are coming together and precipitating a rapid expansion of the state and erosion of liberty. Like our social welfarism at home, our foreign meddling and empire building abroad are a consequence of our becoming a pure democracy.

4.5.15.5 Foreign Affairs and Democracy

The dramatic shift away from republicanism that occurred in 1913, as expected, led to a bold change of purpose in foreign affairs. The goal of “making the world safe for democracy” was forcefully put forth by President Wilson. Protecting national security had become too narrow a goal and selfish in purpose. An obligation for spreading democracy became a noble obligation backed by a moral commitment, every bit as utopian as striving for economic equality in an egalitarian society here at home.

With the growing affection for democracy, it was no giant leap to assume that majority opinion should mold personal behavior. It was no mere coincidence that the 18th Amendment—alcohol prohibition—was passed in 1919.

Ever since 1913, all our presidents have endorsed meddling in the internal affairs of other nations and have given generous support to the notion that a world government would facilitate the goals of democratic welfare or socialism. On a daily basis, we hear that we must be prepared to spend our money and use our young people to police the entire world in order to spread democracy. Whether in Venezuela or Columbia, Afghanistan or Pakistan, Iraq or Iran, Korea or Vietnam, our intervention is always justified with a tone of moral arrogance that “it’s for their own good.”

Our policymakers promote democracy as a cure-all for the various complex problems of the world. Unfortunately, the propaganda machine is able to hide the real reasons for our empire building. “Promoting democracy” overseas merely becomes a slogan for doing things that the powerful and influential strive to do for their own benefit. To get authority for these overseas pursuits, all that is required of the government is that the majority be satisfied with the stated goals—no matter how self-serving they may be. The rule of law, that is, constitutional restraint, is ignored. But as successful as the policy may be on the short run and as noble as it may be portrayed, it is a major contributing factor to the violence and chaos that eventually come from pure democracy.

There is abundant evidence that the pretense of spreading democracy contradicts the very policies we are pursuing. We preach about democratic elections, but we are only too willing to accept some for-the-moment friendly dictator who actually overthrew a democratically elected leader or to interfere in some foreign election.

This is the case with Pakistan’s Mushariff. For a temporary alliance, he reaps hundreds of millions of dollars, even though strong evidence exists that the Pakistanis have harbored and trained al Qaeda terrorists, that they have traded weapons with North Korea, and that they possess weapons of mass destruction. No one should be surprised that the Arabs are confused by our overtures of friendship. We have just recently promised $28 billion to Turkey to buy their support for Persian Gulf War II.

Our support of Saudi Arabia, in spite of its ties to al Qaeda through financing and training, is totally ignored by those obsessed with going to war against Iraq. Saudi Arabia is the furthest thing from a democracy. As a matter of fact, if democratic elections were permitted, the Saudi government would be overthrown by a bin Laden ally.

Those who constantly preach global government and democracy ought to consider the outcome of their philosophy in a hypothetical Mid-East regional government. If these people were asked which country in this region possesses weapons of mass destruction, has a policy of oppressive occupation, and constantly defies UN Security council resolutions, the vast majority would overwhelmingly name Israel. Is this ludicrous? No, this is what democracy is all about and what can come from a one-man, one-vote philosophy.

U.S. policy supports the overthrow of the democratically elected Chavez government in Venezuela, because we don’t like the economic policy it pursues. We support a military takeover as long as the new dictator will do as we tell him.
There is no creditability in our contention that we really want to impose democracy on other nations. Yet promoting democracy is the public justification for our foreign intervention. It sounds so much nicer than saying we’re going to risk the lives of our young people and massively tax our citizens to secure the giant oil reserves in Iraq.

After we take over Iraq, how long would one expect it to take until there are authentic nationwide elections in that country? The odds of that happening in even a hundred years are remote. It’s virtually impossible to imagine a time when democratic elections would ever occur for the election of leaders in a constitutional republic dedicated for protection of liberty any place in the region.

4.5.15.6 Foreign Policy, Welfare, and 9/11

The tragedy of 9/11 and its aftermath dramatize so clearly how a flawed foreign policy has served to encourage the majoritarians determined to run everyone’s life.

Due to its natural inefficiencies and tremendous costs, a failing welfare state requires an ever-expanding authoritarian approach to enforce mandates, collect the necessary revenues, and keep afloat an unworkable system. Once the people grow to depend on government subsistence, they demand its continuation.

Excessive meddling in the internal affairs of other nations and involving ourselves in every conflict around the globe has not endeared the United States to the oppressed of the world. The Japanese are tired of us. The South Koreans are tired of us. The Europeans are tired of us. The Central Americans are tired of us. The Filipinos are tired of us. And above all, the Arab Muslims are tired of us.

Angry and frustrated by our persistent bullying and disgusted with having their own government bought and controlled by the United States, joining a radical Islamic movement was a natural and predictable consequence for Muslims.

We believe Bin Laden when he takes credit for an attack on the West, and we believe him when he warns us of an impending attack. But we refuse to listen to his explanation of why he and his allies are at war with us.

Bin Laden’s claims are straightforward. The U.S. defiles Islam with military bases on holy land in Saudi Arabia, its initiation of war against Iraq, with 12 years of persistent bombing, and its dollars and weapons being used against the Palestinians as the Palestinian territory shrinks and Israel’s occupation expands. There will be no peace in the world for the next 50 years or longer if we refuse to believe why those who are attacking us do it.

To dismiss terrorism as the result of Muslims hating us because we’re rich and free is one of the greatest foreign-policy frauds ever perpetrated on the American people. Because the propaganda machine, the media, and the government have restated this so many times, the majority now accept it at face value. And the administration gets the political cover it needs to pursue a “holy” war for democracy against the infidels who hate us for our goodness.

Polling on the matter is followed closely and, unfortunately, is far more important than the rule of law. Do we hear the pundits talk of constitutional restraints on the Congress and the administration? No, all we ever hear are reassurances that the majority supports the President; therefore it must be all right.

The terrorists’ attacks on us, though never justified, are related to our severely flawed foreign policy of intervention. They also reflect the shortcomings of a bureaucracy that is already big enough to know everything it needs to know about any impending attack but too cumbersome to do anything about it. Bureaucratic weaknesses within a fragile welfare state provide a prime opportunity for those whom we antagonize through our domination over world affairs and global wealth to take advantage of our vulnerability.

But what has been our answer to the shortcomings of policies driven by manipulated majority opinion by the powerful elite? We have responded by massively increasing the federal government’s policing activity to hold American citizens in check and make sure we are well-behaved and pose no threat, while massively expanding our aggressive presence around the world. There is no possible way these moves can make us more secure against terrorism, yet they will accelerate our march toward national bankruptcy with a currency collapse.
Relying on authoritarian democracy and domestic and international meddling only move us sharply away from a constitutional republic and the rule of law and toward the turbulence of a decaying democracy, about which Madison and others had warned.

Once the goal of liberty is replaced by a preconceived notion of the benefits and the moral justifications of a democracy, a trend toward internationalism and world government follows.

We certainly witnessed this throughout the 20th century. Since World War II, we have failed to follow the Constitution in taking this country to war, but instead have deferred to the collective democratic wisdom of the United Nations.

Once it’s recognized that ultimate authority comes from an international body, whether the United Nations, NATO, the WTO, the World Bank, or the IMF, the contest becomes a matter of who holds the reins of power and is able to dictate what is perceived as the will of the people (of the world). In the name of democracy, just as it is done in Washington, powerful nations with the most money will control UN policy. Bribery, threats, and intimidation are common practices used to achieve a “democratic” consensus-no matter how controversial and short-lived the benefits.

Can one imagine what it might be like if a true worldwide democracy existed and the United Nations were controlled by a worldwide, one man/one vote philosophy? The masses of China and India could vote themselves whatever they needed from the more prosperous western countries. How long would a world system last based on this absurdity? Yet this is the principle that we’re working so hard to impose on ourselves and others around the world.

In spite of the great strides made toward one-world government based on egalitarianism, I’m optimistic that this utopian nightmare will never come to fruition. I have already made the case that here at home powerful special interests take over controlling majority opinion, making sure fairness in distribution is never achieved. This fact causes resentment and becomes so expensive that the entire system becomes unstable and eventually collapses.

The same will occur internationally, even if it miraculously did not cause conflict among the groups demanding the loot confiscated from the producing individuals (or countries). Democratic socialism is so destructive to production of wealth that it must fail, just as socialism failed under Soviet Communism. We have a long way to go before old-fashioned nationalism is dead and buried. In the meantime, the determination of those promoting democratic socialism will cause great harm to many people before its chaotic end and we rediscover the basic principle responsible for all of human progress.

4.5.15.7 Paying for Democracy

With the additional spending to wage war against terrorism at home, while propping up an ever-increasing expensive and failing welfare state, and the added funds needed to police the world, all in the midst of a recession, we are destined to see an unbelievably huge explosion of deficit spending. Raising taxes won’t help. Borrowing the needed funds for the budgetary deficit, plus the daily borrowing from foreigners required to finance our ever-growing current account deficit, will put tremendous pressure on the dollar.

The time will come when the Fed will no longer be able to dictate low interest rates. Reluctance of foreigners to lend, the exorbitant size of our borrowing needs, and the risk premium will eventually send interest rates upward. Price inflation will accelerate, and the cost of living for all Americans will increase. Under these conditions, most Americans will face a decline in their standard of living.

Facing this problem of paying for past and present excess spending, the borrowing and inflating of the money supply has already begun in earnest. Many retirees, depending on their 401k funds and other retirement programs, are suffering the ill-effects of the stock market crash- a phenomenon that still has a long way to go. Depreciating the dollar by printing excessive money, like the Fed is doing, will eventually devastate the purchasing power of those retirees who are dependent on Social Security. Government cost-of-living increases will never be able to keep up with this loss. The elderly are already unable to afford the inflated costs of medical care, especially the cost of pharmaceuticals.

The reality is that we will not be able to inflate, tax, spend or borrow our way out of this mess that the Congress has delivered to the American people. The demands that come with pure democracy always lead to an unaffordable system that ends with economic turmoil and political upheaval. Tragically, the worse the problems get, the louder is the demand for more of the same government programs that caused the problems in the first place- both domestic and international.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Weaning off of government programs and getting away from foreign meddling because of political pressure are virtually impossible. The end comes only after economic forces make it clear we can no longer afford to pay for the extravagance that comes from democratic dictates.

Democracy is the most expensive form of government. There is no “king” with an interest in preserving the nation’s capital. Everyone desires something, and the special-interest groups, banding together, dictate to the politicians exactly what they need and want. Politicians are handsomely rewarded for being “effective,” that is, getting the benefits for the groups that support them. Effectiveness is never measured by efforts and achievements in securing liberty, even though it’s the most important element in a prosperous and progressive world.

Spending is predictable in a democracy, especially one that endorses foreign interventionism. It always goes up, both in nominal terms and in percentage of the nation’s wealth. Paying for it can be quite complicated. The exact method is less consequential than the percent of the nation’s wealth the government commands. Borrowing and central-bank credit creation are generally used and are less noticeable, but more deceitful, than direct taxation to pay as we go. If direct taxation were accomplished through monthly checks written by each taxpayer, the cost of government would immediately be revealed. And the democratic con game would end much more quickly.

The withholding principle was devised to make paying for the programs the majority demanded seem less painful. Passing on debt to the next generation through borrowing is also a popular way to pay for welfare and warfare. The effect of inflating a currency to pay the bills is difficult to understand, and the victims are hard to identify. Inflation is the most sinister method of payment for a welfare state. It, too, grows in popularity as the demands increase for services that aren’t affordable.

Although this appears to be a convenient and cheap way to pay the bills, the economic consequences of lost employment, inflated prices, and economic dislocation make the long-term consequences much more severe than paying as we go. Not only is this costly in terms of national wealth, it significantly contributes to the political chaos and loss of liberty that accompany the death throes of a doomed democracy.

This does not mean that direct taxes won’t be continuously raised to pay for out-of-control spending. In a democracy, all earned wealth is assumed to belong to the government. Therefore any restraint in raising taxes, and any tax cuts or tax credits, are considered “costs” to government. Once this notion is established, tax credits or cuts are given only under condition that the beneficiaries conform to the democratic consensus. Freedom of choice is removed, even if a group is merely getting back control of that which was rightfully theirs in the first place.

Tax-exempt status for various groups is not universal but is conditioned on whether their beliefs and practices are compatible with politically correct opinions endorsed by the democratic majority. This concept is incompatible with the principles of private-property ownership and individual liberty. By contrast, in a free society all economic and social decision-making is controlled by private property owners without government intrusion, as long as no one is harmed in the process.

4.5.15.8 Confusion Regarding Democracy

The vast majority of the American people have come to accept democracy as a favorable system and are pleased with our efforts to pursue Wilson’s dream of “making the world safe for democracy.” But the goals of pure democracy and that of a constitutional republic are incompatible. A clear understanding of the difference is paramount, if we are to remain a free and prosperous nation.

There are certain wonderful benefits in recognizing the guidance that majority opinion offers. It takes a consensus or prevailing attitude to endorse the principles of liberty and a Constitution to protect them. This is a requirement for the rule of law to succeed. Without a consensus, the rule of law fails. This does not mean that the majority or public opinion measured by polls, court rulings, or legislative bodies should be able to alter the constitutional restraints on the government’s abuse of life, liberty, and property. But in a democracy, that happens. And we know that today it is happening in this country on a routine basis.

In a free society with totally free markets, the votes by consumers through their purchases, or refusals to purchase, determine which businesses survive and which fail. This is free-choice “democracy” and it is a powerful force in producing and bringing about economic efficiency. In today’s democracy by decree, government laws dictate who receives the benefits and who gets shortchanged. Conditions of employment and sales are taxed and regulated at varying rates, and success or failure is too often dependent on government action than by consumers’ voting in the marketplace by their spending habits. Individual consumers by their decisions should be in charge, not governments armed with mandates from the majority.

Even a system of free-market money (a redeemable gold-coin standard) functions through the principle of consumers always voting or withholding support for that currency. A gold standard can only work when freely converted into gold coins, giving every citizen a right to vote on a daily basis for or against the government money.

4.5.15.9 The Way Out

It’s too late to avoid the turbulence and violence that Madison warned about. It has already started. But it’s important to minimize the damage and prepare the way for a restoration of the republic. The odds are not favorable, but not impossible. No one can know the future with certainty. The Soviet system came to an abrupt end with less violence than could have ever been imagined at the height of the Cold War. It was a pleasant surprise.

Interestingly enough, what is needed is a majority opinion, especially by those who find themselves in leadership roles—whether political, educational, or in the media that rejects democracy— and support the rule of law within the republic. This majority support is essential for the preservation of the freedom and prosperity with which America is identified.

This will not occur until we as a nation once again understand how freedom serves the interests of everyone. Henry Grady Weaver, in his 1947 classic, “The Mainspring of Human Progress,” superbly explains how it works. His thesis is simple. Liberty permits progress, while government intervention tends always to tyranny. Liberty releases creative energy; government intervention suppresses it. This release of energy was never greater than in the time following the American Revolution and the writing of the U.S. Constitution.

Instead of individual activity being controlled by the government or superstitious beliefs about natural and mystical events, activity is controlled by the individual. This understanding recognizes the immense value in voluntary cooperation and enlightened self-interests. Freedom requires self-control and moral responsibility. No one owes anyone else anything and everyone is responsible for his or her own acts. The principle of never harming one’s neighbor, or never sending the government to do the dirty work, is key to making the system tend toward peaceful pursuits and away from the tyranny and majority-induced violence. Nothing short of a reaffirmation of this principle can restore the freedoms once guaranteed under the Constitution. Without this, prosperity for the masses is impossible, and as a nation we become more vulnerable to outside threats.

In a republic, the people are in charge. The Constitution provides strict restraints on the politicians, bureaucrats and the military. Everything the government is allowed to do is only done with explicit permission from the people or the Constitution. Today, it’s the opposite. The American people must get permission from the government for their every move, whether it’s use of their own property or spending their own money.

Even the most serious decision, such as going to war, is done while ignoring the Constitution and without a vote of the people’s representatives in the Congress. Members of the global government have more to say about when American troops are put in harm’s way than the U.S. Congress.

The Constitution no longer restrains the government. The government restrains the people in all that they do. This destroys individual creative energy, and the "mainspring of human progress" is lost. The consequences are less progress, less prosperity, and less personal fulfillment.

A system that rejects voluntary contracts, enlightened self interest, and individual responsibilities permits the government to assume these responsibilities. And the government officials become morally obligated to protect us from ourselves, attempting to make us better people and setting standards for our personal behavior. That effort is already in full swing. But if this attitude prevails, liberty is lost.

When government assumes the responsibility for individuals to achieve excellence and virtue, it does so at the expense of liberty, and must resort to force and intimidation. Standards become completely arbitrary, depending on the attitude of those in power and the perceived opinion of the majority. Freedom of choice is gone. This leads to inevitable conflicts with the government dictating what one can eat, drink or smoke. One group may promote abstinence, the other tax-supported...
condom distribution. Arguments over literature, prayer, pornography, and sexual behavior are endless. It is now not even permissible to mention the word “God” on public property. A people who allows its government to set personal moral standards, for all non-violent behavior, will naturally allow it to be involved in the more important aspects of spiritual life. For instance, there are tax deductions for churches that are politically correct, but not for those whose beliefs that are considered out of the mainstream. Groups that do not meet the official politically correct standards are more likely to be put on a “terrorist” list.

This arbitrary and destructive approach to solving difficult problems must be rejected if we ever hope to live again in a society where the role of government is limited to that of protecting liberty.

The question that I’m most often asked when talking about this subject is, “Why do our elected leaders so easily relinquish liberty and have such little respect for the Constitution?” The people of whom I speak are convinced that liberty is good and big government is dangerous. They are also quite certain that we have drifted a long way away from the principles that made America great, and their bewilderment continuously elicits a big “Why?”

There’s no easy answer to this and no single explanation. It involves temptation, envy, greed, and ignorance, but worst of all, humanitarian zeal. Unfortunately, the greater the humanitarian outreach, the greater the violence required to achieve it. The greater the desire to perform humanitarian deeds through legislation, the greater the violence required to achieve it. Few understand this. There are literally no limits to the good deeds that some believe need to be done. Rarely does anyone question how each humanitarian act by government undermines the essential element of all human progress—individual liberty.

Failure of government programs prompts more determined efforts, while the loss of liberty is ignored or rationalized away. Whether it’s the war against poverty, drugs, terrorism, or the current Hitler of the day, an appeal to patriotism is used to convince the people that a little sacrifice of liberty, here and there, is a small price to pay.

The results, though, are frightening and will soon become even more so. Poverty has been made worse, the drug war is a bigger threat than drug use, terrorism remains a threat, and foreign wars have become routine and decided upon without congressional approval.

Most of the damage to liberty and the Constitution is done by men and women of good will who are convinced they know what is best for the economy, for others, and foreign powers. They inevitably fail to recognize their own arrogance in assuming they know what is the best personal behavior for others. Their failure to recognize the likelihood of mistakes by central planners allows them to ignore the magnitude of a flawed central government directive, compared to an individual or a smaller unit of government mistake.

C. S. Lewis had an opinion on this subject:

“Of all tyrannies a tyranny sincerely exercised for the good of its victim may be the most oppressive. It may be better to live under robber barons than under omnipotent moral busybodies. The robber baron’s cruelty may sometimes sleep, his cupidity may at some point be satiated, but those who torment us for our own good will torment us without end for they do so with the approval of their own conscience.”

A system that is based on majority vote rather than the strict rule of law encourages the few who thrive on power and exerting authority over other people’s lives, unlike the many driven by sincere humanitarian concerns. Our current system rewards those who respond to age-old human instincts of envy and greed as they gang up on those who produce. Those individuals who are tempted by the offer of power are quick to accommodate those who are the most demanding of government-giveaway programs and government contracts. These special-interest groups notoriously come from both the poor and the rich, while the middle class is required to pay.

It’s not just a coincidence that, in the times of rapid monetary debasement, the middle class suffers the most from the inflation and job losses that monetary inflation brings. When inflation is severe, which it will become, the middle class can be completely wiped out. The stock market crash gives us a hint as to what is likely to come as this country is forced to pay for the excesses sustained over the past 30 years while operating under a fiat monetary system.

Eric Hoffer, the longshoreman philosopher, commented on this subject as well: “Absolute power corrupts even when exercised for humane purposes. The benevolent despot who sees himself as a shepherd of the people still demands from others the submissiveness of sheep.”

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOOU) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
Good men driven by a desire for benevolence encourage the centralization of power. The corruptive temptation of power is made worse when domestic and international interventions go wrong and feed into the hate and envy that invade men’s souls when the love of liberty is absent.

Those of good will who work to help the downtrodden do so not knowing they are building a class of rulers who will become drunk with their own arrogance and lust for power. Generally only a few in a society yield to the urge to dictate to others, and seek power for the sake of power and then abuse it. Most members of society are complacent and respond to propaganda, but they unite in the democratic effort to rearrange the world in hopes of gaining benefits through coercive means and convince themselves they are helping their fellow man as well. A promise of security is a powerful temptation for many.

A free society, on the other hand, requires that these same desires be redirected. The desire for power and authority must be over one’s self alone. The desire for security and prosperity should be directed inward, rather than toward controlling others. We cannot accept the notion that the gang solution endorsed by the majority is the only option. Self-reliance and personal responsibility are crucial.

But there is also a problem with economic understanding. Economic ignorance about the shortcomings of central economic planning, excessive taxation and regulations, central bank manipulation of money, and credit and interest rates is pervasive in our nation’s capital. A large number of conservatives now forcefully argue that deficits don’t matter. Spending programs never shrink, no matter whether conservatives or liberals are in charge. Rhetoric favoring free trade is canceled out by special-interest protectionist measures. Support of international government agencies that manage trade, such as the IMF, the World Bank, the WTO, and Nafta politicizes international trade and eliminates any hope that free-trade capitalism will soon emerge.

The federal government will not improve on its policies until the people coming to Washington are educated by a different breed of economists than those who dominate our government-run universities. Economic advisors and most officeholders merely reflect the economics taught to them. A major failure of our entire system will most likely occur before serious thought is given once again to the guidelines laid out in the Constitution.

The current economic system of fiat money and interventionism (both domestic and international) serves to accommodate the unreasonable demands for government to take care of the people. And this, in turn, contributes to the worst of human instincts: authoritarian control by the few over the many.

We, as a nation, have lost our understanding of how the free market provides the greatest prosperity for the greatest number. Not only have most of us forgotten about the invisible hand of Adam Smith, few have ever heard of Mises and Hayek- two individuals who understood exactly why all the economic ups and downs of the 20th century occurred, as well as the cause of the collapse of the Soviet Union.

But worst of all, we have lost our faith in freedom. Materialistic concerns and desire for security drive all national politics. This trend has sharply accelerated since 9/11.

Understanding the connection between liberty, prosperity, and security has been lost. The priorities are backwards. Prosperity and security come from liberty. Peace and the absence of war come as a consequence of liberty and free trade. The elimination of ignorance and restraints on do-goodism and authoritarianism in a civilized society can only be achieved through a contractual arrangement between the people and the government- in our case, the U.S. Constitution. This document was the best ever devised for releasing the creative energy of a free people while strictly holding in check the destructive powers of government. Only the rule of law can constrain those who, by human instinct, look for a free ride while delivering power to those few, found in every society, whose only goal in life is a devilish desire to rule over others.

The rule of law in a republic protects free-market activity and private-property ownership and provides for equal justice under the law. It is this respect for law and rights over government power that protects the mainspring of human progress from the enemies of liberty. Communists and other socialists have routinely argued that the law is merely a tool of the powerful capitalists. But they have it backwards. Under democracy and fascism, the pseudo-capitalists write the laws that undermine the Constitution and jeopardize the rights and property of all citizens. They fail to realize it is the real law, the Constitution itself, which guarantees rights and equal justice and permits capitalism, thus guaranteeing progress.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Arbitrary, ever-changing laws are the friends of dictators. Authoritarians argue constantly that the Constitution is a living document, and that rigid obedience to ideological purity is the enemy we should be most concerned about. They would have us believe that those who cherish strict obedience to the rule of law in the defense of liberty are wrong merely because they demand ideological purity. They fail to mention that their love of relative rights and pure democracy is driven by a rigid obedience to an ideology as well. The issue is never rigid beliefs versus reasonable friendly compromise. In politics, it’s always competition between two strongly held ideologies. The only challenge for men and women of good will is to decide the wisdom and truth of the ideologies offered.

Nothing short of restoring a republican form of government with strict adherence to the rule of law, and curtailing illegal government programs, will solve our current and evolving problems.

Eventually the solution will be found with the passage of the Liberty Amendment. Once there is serious debate on this amendment, we will know that the American people are considering the restoration of our constitutional republic and the protection of individual liberty.

4.5.16 Summary and Conclusion

"Democracy is indispensable to socialism."
[V.I. Lenin]

"Democracy is the road to socialism."
[Karl Marx]

"The goal of socialism is communism."
[V.I. Lenin]

To summarize what we have just learned in this section:

1. Unlike monarchies and democracies, only a true Republic can “secure” God-given, unalienable Rights to all individuals.
2. A “Republican Form of Government” is guaranteed to every “State of the Union” by Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution (and also some current State constitutions).
3. Contrary to those constitutional guarantees, our current government operates as a democracy which, by definition, recognizes the people’s rights as a single collective, but denies their God-given unalienable Rights as individuals.
4. The conflict between the de jure constitutionally-mandated “Republican Form of Government” and our de facto democracy may provide a powerful strategy for challenging government enforcement programs which—implemented under the guise of democracy—ignore any individual’s claim of God-given, unalienable Rights under the mandatory Republic.
5. It is in the best interests of our elected officials to claim we have a democracy rather than a Republic, because this allows them to expand their power and influence and control without the constraints imposed by a constitution that limits their power.
6. When transforming a Christian republic into a totalitarian democracy, the sequence of events is as follows:
   a. Eliminate religious references from public life, politics, and public schools.
   b. Disconnect us with our Christian heritage and the source of our sovereignty: God
   c. Eliminate school choice and vouchers and provide financial incentives to put children in public schools.
   d. Institute laws to punish individuals for practicing law without a license to make the legal profession into a priesthood and a monopoly that can charge whatever the market will stand for their services. This will also effectively deny legal representation to the 2/3 of individuals on average who can’t afford lawyers, so that when the government legally terrorizes individuals for insisting on their rights, they will be defenseless in court.
   e. Institute high taxes so that both parents have to work, which leaves the government free to brainwash the kids in public schools and keep the parents in financial slavery so they don’t have time to watch their government and litigate to protect their rights.
   f. Appoint corrupt judges who will ignore constitutional rights and protections, especially as it pertains to collection and enforcement of taxes.
   g. Institute public policy through tax legislation (social engineering).
h. Punish those who challenge government authority in court by sanctions, fines, and attorney fee awards, even though this amounts to a violation of the First Amendment right to petition government for a redress of grievances.

i. Undermine sovereignty of jurors by making them legally ignorant and preventing discussing law in the courtroom, in order to transform our government from a government of laws to a government of men.

And now let’s summarize the strategy we suggest based on the above information and conclusions:

1. The “unalienable Rights” granted by God and declared in the “Declaration of Independence” are the constitutionalist’s “holy grail”. These are the rights to travel, to own firearms, to raise your children without government interference, to engage in any occupation that you desire, to worship God without restriction and to enjoy the “freedom” that every patriot seeks but hasn’t found since the 1930’s.
2. A “Republican Form of Government” is one that “secures” our God-given, individually-held “unalienable Rights”.
3. Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution mandates that, “The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government…”
4. Virtually every government official has taken an Oath of Office to support and defend the Federal Constitution.
5. The Oath of Office should obligate all government officials to support and defend a “Republican Form of Government” that “secures” our “unalienable Rights”.
6. Any official who knowingly supports and defends a democracy that denies your unalienable Rights may be personally liable for violating his Oath of Office, violating the Constitution, and committing criminal acts including treason. If two or more officials knowingly work together to deny or deprive you of your unalienable Rights and a Republican Form of Government, they may be guilty of conspiracy.
If the analysis in this section is generally correct, legal arguments based on a thoroughly researched and properly presented demand for a “Republican Form of Government” may be powerful. More research must be done, but for now, it’s likely that this argument will stand up in court.

4.6 The Three Definitions of “United States”

Most of us are completely unaware that the term “United States” has several distinct and separate legal meanings and that it is up to us to know and understand these differences, to use them appropriately, and to clarify exactly which one we mean whenever we sign any government or financial form (including voter registration, tax documents, etc.). If we do not, we could unknowingly, unwillingly and involuntarily be creating false presumptions that cause us to surrender our Constitutional rights and our sovereignty. The fact is, most of us have unwittingly been doing just that for most, if not all, of our lives. Much of this misunderstanding and legal ignorance has been deliberately “manufactured” by our corrupted government in the public school system. It is a fact that our public dis-servants want docile sheep who are easy to govern, not “high maintenance” sovereigns capable of critical and independent thinking and who demand their rights. We have become so casual in our use of the term “United States” that it is no longer understood, even within the legal profession, that there are actually three different legal meanings to the term. In fact, the legal profession has contributed to this confusion over this term by removing its definitions from all legal dictionaries currently in print that we have looked at. See section 6.10.1 later for details on this scam.

Most of us have grown up thinking the term United States indicates and includes all 50 states of the Union. This is true in the context of the U.S. Constitution but it is not true in all contexts. As you will see, this is the third meaning assigned to the term “United States” by the United States Supreme Court. But, usually when we (Joe six pack) use the term United States we actually think we are saying the United States, as we are generally thinking of the several states or the union of States. There are times when you could be mistaken and as you will come to realize, this could be a very costly assumption.

First, it should be noticed that the term United States is a noun. In fact, it is the proper name and title “We the people...” gave to the corporate entity (non-living thing) of the federal (central) government created by the Constitution. This in turn describes where the “United States” federal corporation was to be housed as the Seat of the Government - In the District of Columbia, not to exceed a ten mile square.

Constitution
Article I, Section 8, Clause 17

> To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States; and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other needful Buildings;—And [underlines added]

Below is how the United States Supreme Court addressed the question of the meaning of the term “United States” (see Black’s Law Dictionary) in the famous case of Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945). The Court ruled that the term United States has three uses:

> ‘The term ‘United States’ may be used in any one of several senses. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations. It may designate the territory over which the sovereignty of the United States extends, or it may be the collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution.’
> [Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)]

We will now break the above definition into its three contexts and show what each means.
The U.S. Supreme Court helped to clarify which of the three definitions above is the one used in the U.S. Constitution, when it said the following. Note they are implying the THIRD definition above and not the other two:

"The earliest case is that of Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L.Ed. 332, in which this court held that, under that clause of the Constitution limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not maintain an action in the circuit court of the United States. It was argued that the word 'state,' in that connection, was used simply to denote a distinct political society. 'But,' said the Chief Justice, 'as the act of Congress obviously used the word 'state' in reference to that term as used in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to inquire whether Columbia is a state in the sense of that instrument. The result of that examination is a conviction that the members of the American confederacy only are the states contemplated in the Constitution, . . . and excludes from the term the signification attached to it by writers on the law of nations.' This case was followed in Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L.Ed. 825, and quite recently in Hoos v. Jamieson, 166 U.S. 395, 41 L.Ed. 1049, 17 Sup.Ct. Rep. 596. The same rule was applied to citizens of territories in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L.Ed. 44, in which an attempt was made to distinguish a territory from the District of Columbia. But it was said that 'neither of them is a state in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution.' In Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L.Ed. 181, and in Miners' Bank v. Iowa ex rel. District Prosecuting Attorney, 12 How. 1, 13 L.Ed. 867, it was held that under the judiciary act, permitting writs of error to the supreme court of a state in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, an act of a territorial legislature was not within the contemplation of Congress.

[DowSES v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

The Supreme Court further clarified that the Constitution implies the third definition above, which is the United States when they said the following. Notice that they say "not part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution" and that the word "the" implies only ONE rather than multiple meanings:

"As the only judicial power vested in Congress is to create courts whose judges shall hold their offices during good behavior, it necessarily follows that, if Congress authorizes the creation of courts and the appointment of judges for limited time, it must act independently of the Constitution upon territory which is not part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution."
Another important distinction needs to be made. Definition 3 above refers to the confederation of states under the constitution, but this country is not a “nation”, in the sense of international law. This very important point was made clear by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1794 in the case of Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793), when it said:

This is a case of uncommon magnitude. One of the parties to it is a State; certainly respectable, claiming to be sovereign. The question to be determined is, whether this State, so respectable, and whose claim soars so high, is amenable to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States? This question, important in itself, will depend on others, more important still; and, may, perhaps, be ultimately resolved into one, no less radical than this ‘do the people of the United States form a Nation?’

A cause so conspicuous and interesting, should be carefully and accurately viewed from every possible point of sight. I shall examine it; 1st. By the principles of general jurisprudence. 2nd. By the laws and practice of particular States and Kingdoms. From the law of nations little or no illustration of this subject can be expected. By that law the several States and Governments spread over our globe, are considered as forming a society, not a NATION. It has only been by a very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the Fourth Henry, that this last great idea has been even contemplated. 3rdly. and chiefly, I shall examine the important question before us, by the Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable instrument.

[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

Black’s Law Dictionary further clarifies the distinction between a nation and a society by clarifying the differences between a national government and a federal government, and keep in mind that our government is called “federal government”:

“NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. The government of a whole nation, as distinguished from that of a local or territorial division of the nation, and also as distinguished from that of a league or confederation.

“A national government is a government of the people of a single state or nation, united as a community by what is termed the ‘social compact,’ and possessing complete and perfect supremacy over persons and things, so far as they can be made the lawful objects of civil government. A federal government is distinguished from a national government by its being the government of a community of independent and sovereign states, united by compact.” Piqua Branch Bank v. Knoup, 6 Ohio St. 393”

So the “United States” the country is a “society” and a “sovereignty” but not a “nation” under the law of nations, by the Supreme Court’s own admission. Because the supreme Court has ruled on this matter, it is now incumbent upon each of us to always remember it and to apply it in all of our dealings with the Federal Government. If not, we lose our individual Sovereignty by default and the Federal Government assumes jurisdiction over us. So, while a sovereign American will want to be the third type of Citizen and on occasion the first, he would never want to be the second. A person who is a “citizen” of the second is called a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, and he is treated in law as occupying a place not protected by the Bill of Rights, which is the first ten amendments of the United States Constitution. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court described this “other” United States, which we call the “federal zone”:

“The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments: one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

Let us pause at this point to discuss WHAT exactly is a “nation” in the context of our country historically. As the U.S. Supreme Court ruled, “the word citizen is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.” Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874). Merriam-Webster dictionary defines a nation as: “a community of people composed of one or more nationalities and possessing a more or less defined territory and government” Going by this

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The U.S. Supreme Court, in fact, has admitted that all governments are corporations when it said:

"Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made [the Constitution is the corporate charter]. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be dispossessed,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution.”

[Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

If we are acting as a federal statutory “employee”, then we are representing the “United States federal corporation”. That corporation is a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 which is completely subject to all federal law. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says that when we are representing that corporation as “officers” or statutory “employees”, we therefore become statutory “U.S. citizens” completely subject to federal territorial law:

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §§86]

Yet on every government (any level) document we sign (e.g. Social Security, Marriage License, Voter Registration, Drivers License, BATF 4473, etc.) they either require you to be a “citizen of the United States” or they ask “are you a resident of Illinois?”. They are in effect asking you to assume or presume the second definition, the “United States”, when you fill out the form, but they don’t want to tell you this because then you would realize they are asking you to lie on a government form. They in effect are asking you if you wish to act in the official capacity of a public statutory “employee” and public officer of the federal corporation. The form you are filling out therefore is serving the dual capacity of a federal job application and an application for benefits. The reason this must be so, is that they are not allowed to pay “benefits” to private citizens and can only lawfully pay them to public statutory “employees”. Any other approach makes the government into a thief. See the article below for details on this scam:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a “Public Officer” for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

If you accept their false presumption, or you answer “Yes” to the question of whether you are a “citizen of the United States” or a “U.S. citizen” on a federal or state form, usually under penalty of perjury, then you have committed perjury under penalty of perjury and also voluntarily placed yourself under their jurisdiction as a public official/”employee” and are therefore subject to Federal & State Codes and Regulations (Statutes). The Social Security Number they ask for on the form, in fact, is prima facie evidence that you are a federal statutory “employee”, in fact. Look at the proof for yourself:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Most laws passed by government are, in effect, law only for government. They are private law or contract law that act as the equivalent of a government employment agreement. We the People, as the Sovereigns, are not subject to it unless we sign an employment agreement that can take many different forms: W-4, SS-5, 1040, etc. The W-4 is a federal election form and you are the only voter. They are asking you if you want to elect yourself into “public office”, and if you say “yes”, then you got the job and a cage is reserved for you on the federal plantation:

“The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v. Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O’Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job. Gardner v. Broderick, [497 U.S. 62, 95], 392 U.S. 273, 277-278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fined for that reason. Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138, 147 (1983). Private citizens cannot be punished for partisan political activity, but federal and state employees can be dismissed and otherwise punished for that reason. Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 101 (1947); Civil Service Comm’n v. Letter Carriers, 413 U.S. 548, 556 (1973); Broadrick v. Oklahoma, 413 U.S. 601, 616-617 (1973).”

By making you into a public official or statutory “employee”, they are destroying the separation of powers that is the main purpose of the Constitution and which was put there to protect your rights.

[New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144 (1992)]

They are causing you to voluntarily waive sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1601-1611. 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) of the act says that those who conduct “commerce” within the legislative jurisdiction of the “United States” (federal zone), whether as public official or federal benefit recipients, surrender their sovereign immunity.

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial [employment or federal benefit] activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;
They are also destroying the separation of powers by fooling you into being a statutory U.S. citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401. 28 U.S.C. §1332(c) and (d) specifically excludes such statutory “U.S. citizens” from being foreign sovereigns who can file under diversity of citizenship. This is confirmed by the Department of State Website:

“Section 1603(b) defines an "agency or instrumentality" of a foreign state as an entity (1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and (2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof; or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and (3) which is neither a citizen of the a state of the United States as defined in Sec. §1332(c) and (d) nor created under the laws of any third country.”

[Department of State Website, http://travel.state.gov/law/info/judicial/judicial_693.html]

In effect, they kidnapped your legal identity and made you into a resident alien statutory “employee” working in the “king’s castle”, the District of Columbia, and changed your status from “foreign” to “domestic” by creating false presumptions about citizenship and using the Social Security Number, W-4, and SS-5 forms to make you into a “subject citizen” and a public statutory “employee” with no constitutional rights.

The nature of most federal law as private law is carefully explained below:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

As you will soon read, the government uses various ways to mislead and trick us into their private laws (outside our Constitutional protections) and make you into the equivalent of their statutory “employee”, and thereby commits a great fraud on the American People.

The essentials of their deception include the following, to which this document is dedicated to exposing:

1. Which United States are they talking about (this article)?
2. What is a “person”?
3. What is an “individual”?
4. How can there be two of you?
5. What constitutes “foreign income” and “domestic income”
6. What is the SOLUTION?

I hope you will take the time to STUDY this information thoroughly, then commence to use it, in an effort to untangle yourself from this web of deceit. It is the only sure, nonviolent way to regain your Constitutional Rights as it guarantees you your individual sovereignty as a freeman.

4.7 Two Political Jurisdictions: “National Government” vs. “Federal/general government”

Many people are blissfully unaware that there are actually two mutually exclusive political jurisdictions within United States the country. Your citizenship status determines which of the two political jurisdictions you are a member of and you have an option to adopt either. This book describes how to regain the model on the right, the “Federal government”, which we also call the “United States of America” throughout this book. We have prepared a table to compare the two and explain what we mean. The vast majority of Americans fall under the model on the left, and their own ignorance, fear, and apathy has put them there. The model on the left treats everyone as part of the federal corporation called the “United States”, which is how the law defines it in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). This area is also called “the federal zone” throughout this book. The “United States” first became a federal corporation in 1871 and you can read this law for yourself right from the Statutes at Large:

|                         | To cover the debt in 1933 and future debt, the corporate government determined and established the value of the future labor of each individual in its jurisdiction to be $630,000. A bond of $630,000 is set on each Certificate of Live Birth. The certificates are bundled together into sets and then placed as securities on the open market. These certificates are then purchased by the Federal Reserve and/or foreign bankers. The purchaser is the "holder" of "Title." BENEFITS

Benefits

Inalienable rights

Government given rights that are really “Privileges” that can be taken away at any time

So-called “privileges”/Benefits are as follows:

1. Social Security (You paid all your working life and there are no guarantees that there will be money for you)
2. Medicare
3. Medicaid
4. Grants
5. Disaster relief
6. Food Stamps
7. Licenses and Registration
   (Permission)
8. Privileges only, no Rights

Unalienable rights

God given rights

"...incapable [emphasis added] of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred.”

Enjoy:

1. Life
2. Liberty
3. pursuit of Happiness
4. full property ownership.

No U.S. benefits--Every living soul is responsible for themselves and has the option of helping others.

Each living soul gives accordingly to help others in need and receives the credit or gives the credit to his Maker and Provider.

No tax burdens or government debt obligations.

Some of our readers have written us to inquire about our use of the term “United States of America” in the above table by reporting that they studied the term “United States of America” in federal statutes and implementing regulations and could not find where it is legally defined. In fact, it is not defined but is referenced in federal law within the following contexts:

- 28 CFR §0.64-1
- 28 CFR §0.96b

Even though the term “United States of America” is nowhere defined in federal law, we use it to refer to the collection of sovereign states of the Union which form our “republic”. The federal zone is technically not part of our “republic” because the Bill of Rights, which is the first ten Amendments to the Constitution, forms the essence of the republic and it does not apply within the federal zone.

4.8 The Federal Zone

In 1818, the Supreme Court stated that:

> "The exclusive jurisdiction which the United States have in forts and dock-yards ceded to them, is derived from the express assent of the states by whom the cessions are made. It could be derived in no other manner; because without it, the authority of the state would be supreme and exclusive therein," 3 Wheat., at 350, 351.

The above case establishes that the federal government only has jurisdiction over federal property that it owns within the states or coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution. In other places, it has no legislative or judicial jurisdiction. Places coming under the sovereignty or exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government under 1:8:17 of the Constitution include the District of Columbia, federal territories, and enclaves within the state and we call these areas “the federal zone” throughout this book. When Congress is operating in its exclusive jurisdiction over the “federal zone”, it is important to remember that the U.S. Government has full authority to enact legislation as private acts pertaining to its boundaries, and it is not a state of the union because it exists solely by virtue of the compact/constitution that created it. The U.S. Constitution does not say that the District of Columbia must guarantee a Republican form of Government to its own subject citizens within its territories. (See Hepburn & Dundas v. Ellzey, 6 U.S. 445(1805); Glaeser v. Acacia Mut. Life Ass’n, 55 F.Supp., 925 (1944); Long v. District of Columbia, 820 F.2d. 409 (D.C. Cir. 1987); Americana of Puerto Rico, Inc. v. Kaplus, 368 F.2d. 431 (1966), among others).
Within the federal zone, there are areas where the Bill of Rights (the first ten amendments) applies and areas where it does not. The best place to go for a clarification of where it applies is the Supreme Court case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901). Below are quotes from that case establishing that we have two national governments:

"The idea prevails with some -- indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar -- that we have in this country substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution, with all its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise."

Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), supra.

The U.S. Constitution limits federal government jurisdiction over the state Citizens using the Bill of Rights. The federal government has unlimited powers over federal citizens within territories of the United States because it is acting outside of the Constitution. Administrative laws are private acts, also called "special law", and are not applicable to state Citizens. The Internal Revenue Code is administrative law and "special law". Here are some more quotes from Downes that reinforce our point:

"Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could act in a double capacity; in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, imports, and excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no part of the United States. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1, 2, declares that 'representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective numbers' furnished a standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from their operation. The words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are represented, or shall be apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states, shall be apportioned to numbers.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the census, was applicable to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it its just and equal share of the burden, with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this proportion, it is within the very words of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration referred to.' It was further held that the words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that it shall be extended to all the states. They therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when the territories shall be taxed, without imposing the necessity of taxing them.'"

There could be no doubt as to the correctness of this conclusion, so far, at least, as it applied to the District of Columbia. This District had been a part of the states of Maryland and [182 U.S. 244, 261] Virginia. It had been subject to the Constitution, and was a part of the United States[]. The Constitution had attached to it irrevocably. There are steps which can never be taken backward. The tie that bound the states of Maryland and Virginia to the Constitution could not be dissolved, without at least the consent of the Federal and state governments to a formal separation. The mere cession of the District of Columbia to the Federal government relinquished the authority of the states, but it did not take it out of the United States or from under the aegis of the Constitution. Neither party had ever consented to that construction of the cession. If, before the District was set off, Congress had passed an unconstitutional act affecting its inhabitants, it would have been void. If done after the District was created, it would have been equally void; in other words, Congress could not do indirectly, by carving out the District, what it could not do directly. The District still remained a part of the United States, protected by the Constitution. Indeed, it would have been a fanciful construction to hold that territory which had been once a part of the United States ceased to be such by being ceded directly to the Federal government."

"Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to 'guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government' (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of Webster, 'a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them,' Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America; and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President.

Based on the above and further reading of Downes, we can reach the following conclusions about the applicability of the Constitution within United States the country:

1. That the District of Columbia and the territories are not states within the judicial clause of the Constitution giving jurisdiction in cases between citizens of different states;
2. That territories are not states within the meaning of Rev. Stat. 709, permitting writs of error from this court in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question;
3. That the District of Columbia and the territories are states as that word is used in treaties with foreign powers, with respect to the ownership, disposition, and inheritance of property;
4. That the territories are not within the clause of the Constitution providing for the creation of a supreme court and such inferior courts as Congress may see fit to establish;
5. That the Constitution does not apply to foreign countries or to trials therein conducted, and that Congress may lawfully [182 U.S. 244, 271] provide for such trials before consular tribunals, without the intervention of a grand or petit jury;
6. That where the Constitution has been once formally extended by Congress to territories, neither Congress nor the territorial legislature can enact laws inconsistent therewith, or retract the applicability of the Constitution to those territories.
7. That Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 of the Constitution authorizing duties, imposts, and excises (indirect taxes) empowers congress to apply these taxes throughout the sovereign 50 Union states, and not just on federal land. Here is the quote from Downes confirming that:

"In delivering the opinion [Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98], however, the Chief Justice made certain observations which have occasioned some embarrassment in other cases. 'The power,' said he, 'to lay and collect duties, imposts, and excises may be exercised, and must be exercised, throughout the United States. Does this term designate the whole, or any particular portion of the American empire? Certainly this question can admit but of one answer. It is the name given to our great Republic which is composed of states and territories. The District of Columbia, or the territory west of the Missouri, is not less within the United States than Maryland or Pennsylvania; and it is not less necessary, on the principles of our Constitution, that uniformity in the imposition of imports, duties, and excises should be observed in the one than in the other. Since, then, the power to lay and collect taxes, which includes direct taxes, is obviously coextensive with the power to lay and collect duties, imposts, and excises, and since the latter extends throughout the United States, it follows that the power to impose direct taxes also extends through-[182 U.S. 244, 262] out the United States. So far as applicable to the District of Columbia, these observations are entirely sound. So far as they apply to the territories, they were not called for by the exigencies of the case."

The only limitation on the above powers to impose indirect excise taxes throughout the United States* (the country) is that appearing in the statutes and the requirement of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution. The Constitution only authorizes federal jurisdiction over foreign commerce with other countries and not intrastate commerce (commerce within a state). The Constitution forbids federal jurisdiction over exports from states under Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 of the Constitution. The only thing left for the federal government to tax and regulate under the Constitution, under these circumstances, is imports from outside the country, which is what "foreign commerce" means. The feds can impose duties, import, and excises only on imports or profit derived from imports. The imports, however, must be done by corporations or else they are not taxable.

8. Once a state is accepted into the union of states united under the Constitution, all lands in the state at that time are then covered by the Constitution in perpetuity excepting land under federal jurisdiction (enclaves). If the federal government then chooses to purchase state lands back after the state joins the union to set up a federal enclave, such as a military base or federal courthouse or national park, then the land that facility resides on that formerly was governed by the Constitution continues in perpetuity to be governed by the Constitution, even though it then becomes subject to the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution.

9. States east of the Mississippi had very little land that continued under federal jurisdiction at the time they were admitted to the union as states of the Union. Therefore, nearly the entire state in these cases is covered by the Constitution. The opposite is true in states west of the Mississippi, where large portions continued under federal jurisdiction after these territories were admitted as states. Those areas that were federal enclaves at the date of admission which continue to this day to be under federal jurisdiction are not subject to the Constitution or the Bill of Rights.

10. Direct federal taxes and rights conferred by the Bill of Rights are mutually exclusive. You will note that when a new state is admitted to the Union, its lands then irrevocably have the Constitution attached to them and are covered by the Bill of Rights while at the same time, a new requirement to apportion all direct taxes is added in the former territory. The reason is that once people have rights, they become sovereign and at that point, it becomes impossible for the federal government under the Bill of Rights and Constitutional protections to encroach on those rights by trying to collect direct taxes because direct taxes then must be apportioned to each state as required under Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3, and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the Constitution. This is consistent with the Supreme Court’s ruling in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900):

> "Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange."

[Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900)]

We now summarize the above findings graphically to make them crystal clear and useful in front of a judge and jury in court:

IMPORTANT: Those areas listed above where there are no Constitutional rights are the only areas where direct income taxes under Subtitle A can be applied to individuals without apportionment and without violating (clauses 1:9:4 and 1:2:3 of) the Constitution. Everyplace else, it isn’t a tax, but a donation.

The federal zone, or federal “United States”, is the area of land over which the Congress exercises an unrestricted, exclusive legislative jurisdiction. The Congress, however, does not have unrestricted, exclusive legislative jurisdiction over any of the 50 sovereign states. It is bound by the chains of the Constitution. This point is so very important, it bears repeating throughout the remaining chapters of this book and it also explains why the use of the word “State” in the Internal Revenue Code doesn’t by default (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (10)) mean one of the 50 sovereign states of the union. As in the apportionment rule for direct taxes and the uniformity rule for indirect taxes, Congress cannot join or divide any of the 50 sovereign states without the explicit approval of the Legislatures of the state(s) involved. This means that Congress cannot unilaterally delegate such a power to the President. Congress cannot lawfully exercise (nor delegate) a power which it simply does not have.

For further evidence of what constitutes the “federal zone” and a “State” within the IRC, we refer you to the fascinating analysis found in section 5.2.8 entitled “‘State’ in the Internal Revenue Code means ‘federal State’ and not a Union State’”.

Lastly, let us carefully clarify the important distinctions between “States”, “territories”, and “states” in the context of federal statutes to make our analysis crystal clear. Remember that federal “territories” and “States” are synonymous as per 4 U.S.C. §110(d). Keep in mind also that Indian reservations, while considered “sovereign nations” are also federal “States”:

Your ZIP Code determines which ZIP Code region you live in. ZIP Code regions are federal areas and are part of the federal zone. The IRS has adopted the ZIP Code regions as IRS regions. If you accept mail that has a ZIP Code on it, you are treated as though you reside in a federal territory and thus are subject to the IRS and all other municipal laws of the District of Columbia.

4.9 Police Powers

To fully understand our Constitutional government of balanced and limited powers, you must understand the concept of “police powers”. First, let’s define the term:

Police power. An authority conferred by the American constitutional system in the Tenth Amendment, U.S. Const., upon the individual states, and, in turn, delegated to local governments, through which they are enabled to establish a special department of police; adopt such laws and regulations as tend to prevent the commission of fraud and crime, and secure generally the comfort, safety, morals, health, and prosperity of the citizens by preserving the public order, preventing a conflict of rights in the common intercourse of the citizens, and insuring to each an uninterrupted enjoyment of all the privileges conferred upon him or her by the general laws.

The power of the State to place restraints on the personal freedom and property rights of persons for the protection of the public safety, health, and morals or the promotion of the public convenience and general prosperity. The police power is subject to limitations of the federal and State constitutions, and especially to the requirement of due process. Police power is the exercise of the sovereign right of a government to promote order, safety, security, health, morals and general welfare within constitutional limits and is an essential attribute of government. Marshall v. Kansas City, Mo., 355 S.W.2d. 877, 883.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1156]

Police powers:

1. Attach to the territory of the sovereign power who provides them.
2. Are designed to prevent harmful acts which injure the equal rights of all.
3. Are always implemented using the criminal and not civil laws.
4. Cannot be delegated to or shared with any other government or abrogated to private companies.
5. Do not require the “consent” of those against whom the criminal laws are enforced. Civil laws, on the other hand, do require “consent of the governed”.

“That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.”

[Declaration of Independence]

6. Do not require “domicile” or “residence” in order to be enforced against those who are protected.

In nearly all cases, “police powers” and “legislative jurisdiction” are synonymous terms. Nearly all “Acts of Congress” are “private laws” or “special laws” that only apply within federal territories and not to states of the Union. This is discussed in greater detail in section 5.4 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 and its subsections.

Both state and the federal governments under our Constitutional system possess police powers within their own respective jurisdictions:

1. States within their own borders, but generally not on land ceded to the federal government, including any area within the “federal zone”.
2. Federal government to all its territories and possessions and the enclaves that it owns within the union states consisting of lands ceded by the state legislature to the federal government. These areas are called the “federal zone” in this book.

The states of the union are not regarded as “territories” of the federal government. Instead, they are the equivalent of sovereign nations who have delegated a portion of their power to the federal government but who collectively reserve sovereignty over that government.

Below is one of many statements made by the Supreme court confirming the limited nature of federal police powers within the sovereign states of the Union:

"By the Tenth Amendment, 'the powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states, respectively, or to the people.' Among the powers thus reserved to the several states is what is commonly called the 'police power,' that inherent and necessary power, essential to the very existence of civil society, and the safeguard of the inhabitants of the state against disorder, disease, poverty, and crime. 'The police power belonging to the states in virtue of their general sovereignty,' said Mr. Justice STORY, delivering the judgment of this court, 'extends over all subjects within the territorial limits of the states, and has never been conceded to the United States.' Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 625. This is well illustrated by the recent adjudications that a statute prohibiting the sale of illuminating oils below a certain fire test is beyond the constitutional power of congress to enact, except so far as it has effect within the United States (as, for instance, in the District of Columbia) and without the limits of any state; but that it is within the constitutional power of a state to pass such a statute, even as to oils manufactured under letters patent from the United States. U.S. v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41; Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U.S. 501. [135 U.S. 100, 128] The police power includes all measures for the protection of the life, the health, the property, and the welfare of the inhabitants, and for the promotion of good order and the public morals. It covers the suppression of nuisances, whether injurious to the public health, like unwholesome trades, or to the public morals, like gambling-houses and lottery tickets. Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 62, 87; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U.S. 599; Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 168; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 814. This power, being essential to the maintenance of the authority of local government, and to the safety and welfare of the people, is inalienable. As was said by Chief Justice WAITE, referring to earlier decisions to the same effect: 'No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it, much less their servants. The supervision of both these subjects of governmental power is continuing in its nature, and they are to be dealt with as the special exigencies of the moment may require. Government is organized with a view to their preservation, and cannot divest itself of the power to provide for them. For this purpose the largest legislative discretion is allowed, and the discretion cannot be parted with any more than the power itself.' Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 814. See, also, Butchers' Union, etc., v. Crescent City, etc., Co., 111 U.S. 746, 753; 4 S.Sup.Ct.Rep. 652; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U.S. 650, 672, 6 S.Sup.Ct.Rep. 252; New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U.S. 265, 275, 7 S.Sup.Ct.Rep. 198.”

[Lexis v. Hardin, 135 U.S. 100 (1890)]

An example of the exercise of police powers is the enactment of criminal laws to protect citizens and inhabitants from crime and other injurious activities. Exercise of police powers encompasses such things as the regulation of intoxicating liquors, public health, vaccination programs, healthcare, and many other subjects. Within the federal government, the function of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (BATF), for instance, is to exercise general police powers within the federal government, including any area within the “federal zone”.
the federal zone only over alcohol, tobacco, and firearms and this power is conferred under Title 27 of the U.S. code. At one time, federal police powers over alcohol extended into states of the Union under the Eighteenth Amendment, but this amendment was subsequently repealed with the passage of the 21st Amendment. The Drug Enforcement Agency, or DEA, has exclusive federal jurisdiction over drug trafficking inside the federal zone. These federal agencies, however, have no jurisdiction over such activities that are exclusively within a state. The minute that such activities cross state borders and become interstate commerce, these agencies obtain jurisdiction under the Commerce Clause found in the Constitution under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3.

In some cases, a delegation of authority to enforce criminal or tax code may occur by the federal government, whereby federal legislation is enacted to permit the laws of federal “States” laws to apply to federal enclaves within a federal “State”. These federal “States” are in fact territories of the United States, as shown in 4 U.S.C. §110(d). An example of such legislation is the Buck Act of 1940, codified in 5 U.S.C. §105-113. This Act gave authority to federal territories (called federal “States” in federal law) only to impose their income taxes on business activities exclusively within federal enclaves located within federal territories. The act DID NOT and CANNOT authorize states of the Union to impose direct taxes within federal enclaves, because this would:

1. Break down the separation of powers between the state and federal governments.
2. Violate the mandate in Article 4, Section 4 of the Constitution to provide a “Republican form of government”.
4. Create collusion and conspiracy against the rights of people in federal territories by the state and federal government. It also incentivizes states of the Union to pretend like their citizens live in federal enclave so that they can steal money from them. This coordinated theft of the sovereign people’s income is done using the Agreements on Coordination of Tax Administration (ACTA) between the Secretary of the Treasury and states of the Union. All the states now have been bribed by the federal government to pretend like their citizens live in federal territories and come under the Buck Act.

The Buck Act, in fact, is the exclusive authority for the income and sales taxes in most states of the Union. That’s right, income and sales taxes in most states are only authorized inside the federal zone on nonresidents of each state! A person who lives in a federal enclave within a state is “nonresident” to the state.

The important thing that you need to know about police powers is that they are required in order to enforce tax laws. You can’t outlaw something by passing a criminal statute against it unless you have police powers within the region you are trying to tax. An example of such criminal statutes are 26 U.S.C. §§7201-7217, which are the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code that most people in the states of the union “think” apply to them but in fact do not. Why? Because the federal government has no police powers within the borders of the states unless they are exercising powers specifically granted to them by the Constitution. Even the Supreme Court agrees with this conclusion:

“It should never be held that Congress intends to supersede or by its legislation suspend the exercise of the police powers of the States, even when it may do so, unless its purpose to effect that result is clearly manifested.”
[Reid v. Colorado, 187 U.S. 137, 148 (1902)]

“The principle thus applicable has been frequently stated. It is that the Congress may circumscribe its regulation and occupy a limited field, and that the intention to supersede the exercise by the State of its authority as to matters not covered by the federal legislation is not to be implied unless the Act of Congress fairly interpreted is in conflict with the law of the State. See Savage v. Jones, 225 U.S. 501, 533.”

“If Congress is authorized to act in a field, it should manifest its intention clearly. It will not be presumed that a federal statute was intended to supersede the exercise of the power of the state unless there is a clear manifestation of intention to do so. The exercise of federal supremacy is not lightly to be presumed.”
[Schwartz v. Texas, 344 U.S. 190, 202-203 (1952)]

“While states are not sovereign in true sense of term but only quasi sovereign, yet in respect of all powers reserved to them they are supreme and independent of federal government as that government within its sphere is independent of the states.”
With regard to that last quote, the Internal Revenue Code is classified as “legislation”. The ability to directly tax natural persons within the 50 states of the union was never conferred upon the federal government anywhere in the Constitution, Sixteenth Amendment or otherwise. As a matter of fact, in Chapter 3, we cited several Supreme Court rulings stating specifically that the Sixteenth Amendment “conferred no new powers of taxation” (see Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916) and many others). We will reiterate this fact for you later in section 5.2.11 and we will also show in section 5.1.1 that the only type of taxation authorized by the Constitution within states of the Union is indirect excise taxes on privileged artificial entities such as corporations and partnerships who are involved only in foreign or interstate commerce under Art. 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution.

To summarize the findings of this section on police powers, we will present in the table below a list of definitions. This table clarifies the distinctions between the various terms relating to “States”, “states”, and “United States” in the various state and federal laws so that the impact of the separation of police powers between federal and state governments can be clearly seen in a meaningful way:

4.10 “Resident”, “Residence”, and “Domicile”

4.10.1 “Resident” defined

118 See, for instance, U.S. Constitution Article IV, Section 2.
We are all the time being asked “are you a resident of the state of Illinois?” (or whatever State) and we always answer “yes”. But are we really? Let us take a much closer look and see.

Black’s Law Dictionary Sixth Edition, page 1309:

Resident. “Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence within the State, together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one who resides or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240

Did you notice the distinct use of “the State” in the above definition? That was no accident. Below are a few clues to its meaning from federal statutes, which is where the above definition says we should look:

- 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701(a)(10): State
  - The term “State” shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

- 8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101(a)(36): State [citizenship and naturalization]
  - The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

- 8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101(a)(36)
  - The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.

The above cites are definitions of “State” from federal law, but even most state income tax statutes agree with this definition! Below is the California Revenue and Taxation Code definition of “State”:

- California Revenue and Taxation Code
  - “In this State” or “in the State” means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign] state of California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

The sovereign 50 Union states are NOT territories or possessions of the “United States”. The states are sovereign over their own territories. The “State” mentioned above in the California Revenue and Taxation Code is a federal enclave within the exterior boundaries of the California Republic. People living within these areas are “residents” under the Internal Revenue Code and in that condition, they live in the “federal zone”.

The document upon which the founders wrote our Constitution, and which is mentioned in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10, confirms that the term “resident” refers ONLY to aliens domiciled within the territory of a nation. Below is what it says in Book 1, Chapter 19, section 213, page 87:

> "Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens."
They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.”

[The Law of Nations, Vattel, Book 1, Chapter 19, Section 213, p. 87]

You can read excerpts from the above book pertaining to the term “resident” for yourself at:

4.10.2 “Resident” in the Internal Revenue Code

The only type of “resident” defined in the Internal Revenue Code is a “resident alien”, as demonstrated below:

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) Resident alien

(b) Definition of resident alien and nonresident alien

(1) In general

For purposes of this title (other than subtitle B)

(A) Resident alien

An alien individual shall be treated as a resident of the United States with respect to any calendar year if (and only if) such individual meets the requirements of clause (i), (ii), or (iii):

(i) Lawfully admitted for permanent residence

Such individual is a lawful permanent resident of the United States at any time during such calendar year.

(ii) Substantial presence test

Such individual meets the substantial presence test of paragraph (3).

(iii) First year election

Such individual makes the election provided in paragraph (4).

Therefore, the terms “resident”, “alien”, and “resident alien” are all synonymous terms within the Internal Revenue Code. Most state income taxation statutes also use the same definition of “resident”, and therefore the same definition applies for state income taxes as well.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you believe we are wrong, then please show us a definition of the term “resident” within either the Internal Revenue Code or the implementing regulations that includes “citizens of the United States” as defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401. There simply isn’t one! You are not free to “presume” or “assume” that “citizens of the United States” are also “residents” without the authority of a positive law that authorizes it. We’ll also give you the hint, as you will learn later in sections 5.4.1 through 5.4.1.5, that even the Internal Revenue Code is neither “law” nor “positive law”, so you can’t use it as evidence of anything. To make this or any other assumption in a court of law would violate our right to “due process or law”, because “presumption” or “assumption” of anything in the legal realm is a violation of due process. Everything must be proven with evidence, and that which is neither law nor which is explicitly stated cannot be presumed.

The only way you can come under the jurisdiction of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is to meet one or more of the following criterias below:

1. A “U.S. person” domiciled within the “federal zone” as defined under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30):

The term “United States person” means -

(A) a citizen or resident of the United States,

(B) a domestic partnership,

(C) a domestic corporation,

(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and

(E) any trust if -

(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and

(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.
The above “U.S. person” is technically either an “alien” or a federal corporation only. A corporation can also be an “alien” if it was incorporated outside of federal jurisdiction but has a presence inside the federal zone. Under 26 CFR §301.6109-1, these are the only entities who are required to provide any kind of identifying number on their tax return! That regulation requires the furnishing of a “Taxpayer Identification Number” for these legal “persons”, but 26 CFR §301.6109-1(d)(3) says that Social Security Numbers are not to be treated as “Taxpayer Identification Numbers”. Consequently, natural persons with a Social Security Number do not have to provide any kind of identifying number on their return because they aren’t the proper subject of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. See section 5.4.17 later for further details on this scandal.

Under item 1 above, the term “citizen of the United States” is used in describing a “U.S. person”, but that “person” is technically only a federal corporation, as confirmed by the following:

1. The legal encyclopedia, Corpus Juris Secundum confirms that corporations are treated in law as “citizens of the United States”:

   “A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”

   [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §§886]

2. The definition of “income” as including only “corporate profit” under our Constitution limits the entire Internal Revenue Code to corporations only. See section 5.6.5 later for complete details on this subject.

Natural persons (people) who are “citizens of the United States” under the provisions of 8 U.S.C. §1401 are born only in the District of Columbia or federal territories or possessions. Federal territories and possessions are the only “States” within the Internal Revenue Code as confirmed by 4 U.S.C. §110(d). These statutory “citizens of the United States” cannot legally be classified as “residents”/"aliens" under the Internal Revenue Code and are not authorized by the code to “elect” to be treated as one either. The reason is because the purpose of law is to protect, and a person cannot elect to lose their constitutional rights and protection, even if they want to! However, by filing an IRS form 1040 or 1040A, they in effect make this illegal election anyway, and the IRS looks the other way and does not prosecute such unintentional deceit because they benefit financially from it. The pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court also identify this kind of constructive fraud on the part of the IRS as an invalid election if this unwitting choice did not involve fully informed consent. Did you know that you were agreeing to be treated as an “alien” by the IRS when you signed and sent in your first Form 1040 or 1040A?:

   "Waivers of Constitutional rights not only must be voluntary, but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."

The reason Constitutional rights are being waived is because people who are “residents”/"aliens" within the federal zone have no constitutional rights in law. The only way to avoid this involuntary election is to instead either file nothing or to file a 1040NR form with the IRS instead of a 1040 or 1040A form. You will learn starting in the next section that people who are born in states of the Union are not “citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but are instead the equivalent of “non-citizen nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) who are in fact “nonresident aliens” under the Internal Revenue Code who should file only the 1040NR form if they file anything with the IRS. The rules for electing to be treated as a “resident” or “resident alien” are found in IRS Publication 54: Tax Guide for U.S. citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad. See the following sections for amplification on this subject: 5.5.2, 5.5.3, and 5.4.12.

IMPORTANT: If you were born in a state of the Union, NEVER, EVER file a 1040, 1040A, or 1040EZ form unless you want to throw your Constitutional rights in the toilet! If you determine that you must file a tax form with the IRS, then only send in a 1040NR form in order to preserve your status as a “non-citizen national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and a “nonresident alien” who is outside of federal jurisdiction! Nonresident aliens cannot be penalized under the Internal Revenue Code because they don’t reside there! When you send in the 1040NR form, make sure to change the perjury statement at the end to put yourself outside of federal jurisdiction as follows:

“I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America in accordance with 28 U.S.C. §1746(1) that the foregoing facts are true, correct, and complete to the best of my knowledge and ability, but only when litigated with a jury in a court of a state of the Union and not a federal court.”

You will learn later in section 5.4.5 that the IRS has no legal authority to institute penalties against natural persons because of the prohibition against Bills of Attainder found in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution, but they will try to illegally do it anyway. Since IRS likes to try to illegally penalize people for changing the “jurat” or perjury statement at the end of the 1040NR form, then you can accomplish the equivalent of physically modifying the words in the perjury statement by redefining the words in the statement or redefining the whole statement in it's entirety in an attached letter. Physically changing the words in the statement is the only thing IRS incorrectly “thinks” they can penalize for, and especially if the return was completed and submitted outside of federal jurisdiction in a state of the Union and the perjury statement accurately reflects that fact. Remember that crimes can only be punished based on where they are committed, and if your perjury statement reflects the fact that you are outside of federal jurisdiction, then IRS can’t penalize you no matter how hard they try or how many threats they make.

So being a “resident of the State” under federal statutes above makes you a nonresident alien in your own state and an “alien” under federal jurisdiction who is the proper subject of both state and federal income taxes codes! Because as a “resident of the State” you are presumed to reside inside the federal zone, you don’t have any constitutional rights according to the U.S. supreme Court. Listen to the dissenting opinion from Justice Harlan in the case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) which ruled that the federal zone doesn’t have constitutional protections:

“The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution. [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

When you accept the false notion that you are “liable” for federal income taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code and subsequently file a 1040 tax return (bad idea!), you are admitting under penalty of perjury that you are an alien “individual” of your own country (not a “national” or “citizen”) who lives in the federal zone. The only definitions of “individual” found in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3) and 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) confirm that the only people who are “individuals” in the context of federal income taxes are “aliens”/“residents” residing in the federal “United States” or “nonresident aliens”. That lie or mistake on the tax return you never should have submitted to begin with caused you to become the equivalent of a “virtual inhabitant” of the federal zone in law and from that point on you are treated as such by both the federal government and the state government, even if you don’t want to be and never intended to do this! Here is more proof showing that even if you weren’t located in the federal zone when you submitted the false 1040 return, you gave your tacit permission to be treated as a resident of the District of Columbia:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
Sec. 7701. – Definitions
(a)(39) Persons residing outside [the federal] United States
If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to -
(A) jurisdiction of courts, or
(B) enforcement of summons.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights! 4-251

What the above means is that if you filed a 1040 or 1040A form, you are telling the federal government that you are an “alien”/”resident” who lives in the federal zone and consequently, the courts will treat you like you have a domicile in the District of Columbia, which we call the District of Criminals. A similar provision appears under 26 U.S.C. §7408(d):

TITLE 26 > Subtitle E > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter A > § 7408
§7408. Action to enjoin promoters of abusive tax shelters, etc.

(d) Citizens and residents outside the United States If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

Here is what the 2003 IRS Published Products Catalog says about the proper use of the form 1040A on page F-15, and notice is says it is only for “citizens” and “residents”, neither of which describe those born in and inhabiting states of the Union on land not under federal ownership:

Those who file that false 1040 form are admitting that they are living in the King’s Castle and from that point on, they better bow down to the king as slaves by paying “tribute” with all their earnings! Important about the above is the fact that “nationals” and “nonresident aliens” are not included in the phrase “citizens or residents”, because they are outside the jurisdiction of the federal courts! One more big reason why we don’t want to be a “U.S. citizen” in the context of federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401! That false 1040 tax return they submitted, which said “U.S. individual” at the top, became a contract with criminals from the “District of Criminals” (the “D.C.” in “Washington D.C.”) to take themselves out of the Constitutional Republic and out of the protections of the Bill of Rights. They united with or “married” Babylon the Great Harlot mentioned in Rev. 17 and 18 and they live where she lives: inside of a totalitarian socialist democracy devoid of constitutional rights and predicated solely on the love of money and luxury. They declared themselves to be an “employee” of the Harlot, and the false W-4 form they submitted proves that, because the upper left corner says “employee”, and the only people who are statutory “employees” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c ) work for the federal government. It is repugnant to the constitution, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court and therefore they can only be referring to PUBLIC “employees”. They have therefore joined the “Matrix” and become a socialist federal serf. Welcome, comrade!”

“You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men” [and remember that government is made up of men].”
[1 Cor. 7:23, Bible, NKJV]

Who says we don’t live in a police state, and not many people even know about this because we have been so deceived by our public “dis-servants”. Can you see how insidious this lawyer deception is? The American people and our media are asleep at the wheel folks!...and it’s going to take a lot more to fix than blind and ignorant patriotism and putting an idiotic flag or bumper sticker on your car. That’s right: if you are a “resident of the United States” or of “the State”, then you’re a federal serf and a ward of the socialist government who is nonresident to his own state! You better to do what you’re told, pay your taxes, and shut up, BOY, or we’ll confiscate all your property, give you 40 lashes and send you to bed without dinner or a blanket. Watch out!

To summarize the preceding discussion of “resident”, for the purposes of taxation, one establishes that they are a “resident” of the federal zone by any of the following techniques:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

1. Filing a form 1040 or 1040a or 1040EZ
2. Filling out a W-4 form, which is only for use by federal statutory “employees”, all of whom work only in the federal zone.
3. Claiming to be “U.S. citizen”, “U.S. resident”, or “U.S. person” on any federal form.

If you never did any of the above, then it can’t be said that you ever consented to participate in the federal income tax system and the federal government has no jurisdiction or proof of jurisdiction over you for the purposes of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. If they wrongfully proceed at that point over your objections by attempting unlawful collection and/or assessment actions against you in violation of 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) or the Constitution, then they:

1. Are involved in identity theft because they moved your legal identity under the I.R.C. to a physical place where you neither intend to live or actually live, which is the District of Columbia.
2. Are involved in:

4.10.3 “Domicile” and “residence” compared

Now we’ll examine and compare the word “domicile” with “residence” to put it into context within our discussion:

domicile. A person’s legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one’s home are the requisites of establishing a “domicile” therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges. The established, fixed, permanent, or ordinary dwellingplace or place of residence of a person, as distinguished from his temporary and transient, though actual, place of residence. It is his legal residence, as distinguished from his temporary place of abode; or his home, as distinguished from a place to which business or pleasure may temporarily call him. See also Abode; Residence.

"Citizenship," "habitancy," and "residence" are severally words which in particular cases may mean precisely the same as "domicile," while in other uses may have different meanings.

"Residence" signifies living in particular locality while "domicile" means living in that locality with intent to make it a fixed and permanent home. Schreiner v. Schreiner, Tex.Civ.App., 502 S.W.2d. 840, 843.

For purpose of federal diversity jurisdiction, "citizenship" and "domicile" are synonymous. Hendry v. Masonite Corp., C.A.Miss., 455 F.2d. 955.

Note the word “permanent” used in several places above. Note also that in the above definition that the taxes one pays are based on their “domicile” and “residence”. Here is what it says again:

“The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.”

Below is what a famous legal publisher has to say about the term “residence” in relation to “domicile” and “citizenship”:

The general rule is that a person can maintain as many residences in as many states or nations as he pleases, and can afford, but that only place can qualify as that person’s “domicile”. This is because the law must often have, or in any event has come to insist on, one place to point to for any of a variety of legal purposes.

A person’s “domicile” is almost always a question of intent. A competent adult can, in our free society, live where she pleases, and we will take her “domicile” to be wherever she does the things that we ordinarily associate with “home”: residing, working, voting, schooling, community activity, etc.
One resides in one’s domicile indefinitely, that is, with no definite end planned for the stay. While we hear “permanently” mentioned, the better word is “indefinitely”. This is best seen in the context of a change of domicile.

In the United States, “domicile” and “residence” are the two major competitors for judicial attention, and the words are almost invariably used to describe the relationship that the person has to the state rather than the nation. We use “citizenship” to describe the national relationship, and we generally eschew “nationality” (heard more frequently among European nations) as a descriptive term.

These issues are very important. To summarize the meaning of “domicile” succinctly then, one’s “domicile” is their “legal home”. One’s “domicile” is the place where we claim to have political and legal allegiance to the courts and the laws. Since allegiance must be exclusive, then we can have only one “domicile”, because no man can serve more than one master as revealed in Luke 16:13. Since the first four Commandments of the Ten Commandments say that Christians can only have allegiance to “God” and His laws in the Holy Book, then their only “domicile” is Heaven based on allegiance alone.

4.10.4 “resident”=employee or contractor

The discussion in the preceding section brings out a very subtle point we would like to further expound upon, which is that “residence” is created ONLY through the operation of private law and your right to contract. We allege that the term “permanent” found in the definition of “domicile” in the previous section really means “consent” to the jurisdiction of the government. Below is the proof, right from the definitions within Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which is entitled “Aliens and Nationality”:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > § 1101

§ 1101. Definitions

(a) As used in this chapter—

(31) The term “permanent” means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

Note that the term “permanent” as used above has no relationship as to time, but instead can exist only in the presence of your voluntary consent. This is one of the implications of the Declaration of Independence, which states that “to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their JUST powers from the CONSENT of the governed.” What they are pointing out above is that what really makes the relationship “permanent” is your voluntary consent. This consent, the courts call “allegiance”. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the practical affect of choosing or consenting to a “domicile” within the jurisdiction of a specific “state”:

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a [STATUTORY] citizen of the state wherein he resides [IS DOMICILED], the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties [e.g. CONTRACTUAL DUTIES!!] of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”

[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

The only legitimate purpose of all law and government is “protection”. A person who selects or consents to have a “domicile” or “residence” has effectively contracted to procure “protection” of the “sovereign” or “state” within its jurisdiction. In exchange for the promise of protection by the “state”, they are legally obligated to give their allegiance and support. All allegiance must be voluntary and any consequences arising from compelled allegiance may not be enforced in a court of law. When you revoke your voluntary consent to the government’s jurisdiction and the “domicile” or “residence” contract, you change your status from that of a “domiciliary” or “resident” or “inhabitant” or “U.S. person” to that of a “transient foreigner”. Transient foreigner is then defined below:

"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Note again the language within the definition of “domicile” from Black’s Law Dictionary found in the previous section relating to the word “transient”, which confirms that what makes your stay “permanent” is consent to the jurisdiction of the “state” located in that place:

“Domicile. [.] The established, fixed, permanent, or ordinary dwellingplace or place of residence of a person, as distinguished from his temporary and transient, though actual, place of residence. It is his legal residence, as distinguished from his temporary place of abode; or his home, as distinguished from a place to which business or pleasure may temporarily call him. See also Abode; Residence.”

Since your Constitutional right to contract is unlimited, then you can have as many “residences” as you like, but you can have only one legal “domicile”, because your allegiance must be undivided or you will have a conflict of interest and allegiance.

[Mat. 6:24, Bible, NKJV]

Remember, “resident” is a combination of two word roots: “res”, which is legally defined as a “thing”, and “ident”, which stands for “identified”.

Res. Lat. The subject matter of a trust or will. In the civil law, a thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. By “res,” according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to “persona,” which is regarded as a subject of rights. “Res,” therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions.

Res is everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status. In re Riggle’s Will, 11 A.D.2d 51 205 N Y S 2d 19, 21, 22. The term is particularly applied to an object, subject-matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as an object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is “the res”; and proceedings of this character are said to be in rem. (See In personam; In Rem.) “Res” may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, is entitled “In re ______.”

When you become a “resident” in the eyes of the government, you become a “thing” that is now “identified” and which is within their legislative jurisdiction and completely subject to it. Notice that a “res” is defined as the object of a trust above. That trust is the “public trust” created by the Constitution and all laws passed pursuant to it.

Executive Order 12731

“Part 1 -- PRINCIPLES OF ETHICAL CONDUCT

"Section 101. Principles of Ethical Conduct. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the integrity of the Federal Government, each Federal employee shall respect and adhere to the fundamental principles of ethical service as implemented in regulations promulgated under sections 201 and 301 of this order:

"(a) Public service is a public trust, requiring employees to place loyalty to the Constitution, the laws, and ethical principles above private gain.

TITLE 5—ADMINISTRATIVE PERSONNEL

CHAPTER XVI—OFFICE OF GOVERNMENT ETHICS

PART 2635—STANDARDS OF ETHICAL CONDUCT FOR EMPLOYEES OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH—Table of Contents

Subpart A—General Provisions

Sec. 2635.101 Basic obligation of public service.

(a) Public service is a public trust. Each employee has a responsibility to the United States Government and its citizens to place loyalty to the Constitution, laws and ethical principles above private gain. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the integrity of the Federal Government, each employee shall respect and adhere to the principles of ethical conduct set forth in this section, as well as the implementing standards contained in this part and in supplemental agency regulations.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

All those who swear an oath as “public officers” are also identified as “trustees” of the “public trust”:

“As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer.”

Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain from a discharge of their trusts. That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political entity on whose behalf he or she serves, and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. It has been said that the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.

[63C Am.Jur.2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247]

A person who is “subject” to government jurisdiction cannot be a “sovereign”, because a sovereign is not subject to the law, but the AUTHOR of the law. Only citizens are the authors of the law because only “citizens” can vote.

“Soeverignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts. And the law is the definition and limitation of power.”

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

The implication is that you cannot be sovereign if you have a “domicile” or “residence” in any earthly place or in any place other than Heaven or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. If you choose a “domicile” or “residence” any place on earth, then you become a “subject” in relation to that place and voluntarily forfeit your sovereignty. This is NOT the status you want to have! A “resident” by definition MUST therefore be within the legislative jurisdiction of the government, because the government cannot lawfully write laws that will allow them to recognize or act upon anything that is NOT within their legislative jurisdiction. All law is territorial in nature, and can act only upon the territory under the exclusive control of the government or upon its franchises and contracts, which are “property” under its management and control. The only lawful way that government laws can reach beyond the territory of the sovereign who controls them is through explicit, informed, mutual consent of the individual parties involved, and this field of law is called “private law”.

‘Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First ‘that every nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory’; secondly, ‘that no state or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural born subjects or others.’ The learned judge then adds: ‘From these two maxims or propositions there follows a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.” Story on Conflict of Laws §23.”

The very same principles as government operates under with respect to “resident” also apply to Christianity as well. When we become Christians, we consent to the contract or covenant with God called the Bible. That covenant requires us to...

accept Jesus Christ as our Lord and Savior. This makes us a “resident” of Heaven and “pilgrims and sojourners” (transient foreigners) on earth:

“For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ”
[Philippians 3:20, Bible, NKJV]

“Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God.”
[Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

[Hebrews 11:13, Bible, NKJV]

“Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul…”
[1 Peter 2:11, Bible, NKJV]

For those who consent to the Bible covenant with God the Father, Jesus becomes our protector, spokesperson, Counselor, and Advocate before the Father. We become a Member of His family!

Jesus’ Mother and Brothers Send for Him

While He was still talking to the multitudes, behold, His mother and brothers stood outside, seeking to speak with Him. Then one said to Him, “Look, Your mother and Your brothers are standing outside, seeking to speak with You.”

But He answered and said to the one who told Him, “Who is My mother and who are My brothers?” 49 And He stretched out His hand toward His disciples and said, “Here are My mother and My brothers! For whoever does the will of My Father in heaven is My brother and sister and mother.”
[Matt. 12:46-50, Bible, NKJV]

By doing God’s will on earth and accepting His covenant or private contract with us, which is the Bible, He becomes our Father and we become His children. The law of domicile says that children assume the same domicile as their parents and are legally dependent on them:

A person acquires a domicile of origin at birth. The law attributes to every individual a domicile of origin, which is the domicile of his parents, or of the father, or of the head of his family: or of the person on whom he is legally dependent, at the time of his birth. While the domicile of origin is generally the place where one is born or reared, may be elsewhere. The domicile of origin has also been defined as the primary domicile of every person subject to the common law.

The legal dependence they are talking about is God’s Law, which then becomes our main source of protection and dependence on God. We as believers then recognize Jesus’ existence as a “thing” we “identify” in our daily life and in return, He recognizes our existence before the Father. Here is what He said on this subject as proof:

Confess Christ Before Men

132 Ky.—Johnson v. Harvey, 88 S.W.2d. 42, 261 Ky. 522.
Let’s use a simple example to illustrate our point in relation to the world. You want to open a checking account at a bank. You go to the bank to open the account. The clerk presents you with an agreement that you must sign before you open the account. If you won’t sign the agreement, then the clerk will tell you that they can’t open an account for you. Before you sign the account agreement, the bank doesn’t know anything about you and you don’t have an account there, so you are the equivalent of an “alien”. An “alien” is someone the bank will not recognize or interact with or help. They can only lawfully help “customers”, not “aliens”. After you exercise your right to contract by signing the bank account agreement, then you now become a “resident” of the bank. You are a “resident” because:

1. You are a “thing” that they can now “identify” in their computer system and their records because you have an “account” there. They now know your name and “account number” and will recognize you when you walk in the door to ask for help.
2. They issued you an ATM card and a PIN so you can control and manage your “account”. These things that they issued you are the “privileges” associated with being party to the account agreement. No one who is not party to such an agreement can avail themselves of such “privileges”.
3. The account agreement gives you the “privilege” to demand “services” from the bank of one kind or another. The legal requirement for the bank to perform these “services” creates the legal equivalent of “agency” on their part in doing what you want them to do. In effect, you have “hired” them to perform a “service” that you want and need.
4. The account agreement gives the bank the legal right to demand certain behaviors out of you of one kind or another. For instance, you must pay all account fees and not overdraw your account and maintain a certain minimum balance. The legal requirement to perform these behaviors creates the legal equivalent of “agency” on your part in respect to the bank.
5. The legal obligations created by the account agreement give the two parties to it legal jurisdiction over each other defined by the agreement or contract itself. The contract fixes the legal relations between the parties. If either party violates the agreement, then the other party has legal recourse to sue for exceeding the bounds of the “contractual agency” created by the agreement. Any litigation that results must be undertaken consistent with what the agreement authorizes and in a mode or “forum” (e.g. court) that the agreement specifies.

The government does things exactly the same way. The only difference is the product they deliver. The bank delivers financial services, and the government delivers “protection” and “social” services. The account number is the social security number. You can’t have or use a social security number and avail yourself of its benefits without consenting to the jurisdiction of the “contract” that authorized its’ issuance, which is the Social Security Act found in Title 42 of the U.S. Code.

CALIFORNIA CIVIL CODE
DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
PART 2. CONTRACTS
CHAPTER 3. CONSENT
Section 1589

1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a [government benefit] transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations [and legal liabilities] arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

Therefore, you can’t avail yourself of the “privileges” associated with the Social Security account agreement without also being a “resident” of the “United States”, which means an alien who has signed a contract to procure services from the government. That contract can be explicit, which means a contract in writing, or implicit, meaning that it is created through your behavior. For instance, if you drive on the roads within a state, that act implied your consent to be bound by the vehicle code of that state. In that sense, driving a car became a voluntary exercise of your right to contract.

A mere innocent act can imply or trigger “constructive consent” to a legal contract, and in many cases, you may not even be aware that you are exercising your right to contract. Watch out! For instance, the criminal code in your state behaves like a contract. The “police” are simply there to enforce the contract. As a matter of fact, their job was created by that contract. This is called the “police power” of the state. If you do not commit any of the acts in the criminal or penal code, then you are not subject to it and it is “foreign” to you. You become the equivalent of a “resident” within the criminal code and subject to the legislative jurisdiction of that code ONLY by committing a “crime” identified within it. That “crime” triggers “constructive consent” to the terms of the contract and all the obligations that flow from it, including prison time and a court trial. This analysis helps to establish that in a free society, all law is a contract of one form or another, because it can only be passed by the consent of the majority of those who will be subject to it. The people who will be subject to the laws of a “state” are those with a “domicile” or “residence” within the jurisdiction of that “state”. Those who don’t have such a “domicile” or “residence” and who are therefore not subject to the civil laws of that state are called “transient foreigners”. We will build extensively upon this concept further, in sections 5.4 though 5.4.4.5 later. This is a very interesting subject that we find most people are simply fascinated with, because it helps to emphasize the “voluntary nature” of all law.

4.10.5 Christians cannot have an earthly “domicile” or “residence”

We said earlier that the word “domicile” implied a “permanent legal home”. Now for the $64,000 question: “If you are a Christian and God says you are a citizen of heaven and not of earth, then where is your permanent domicile from a legal perspective? Where is it that you should ‘intend’ to live as a Christian?“ The answer is that it is in heaven, and not anywhere on earth! Here are some reasons why:

“For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ”
[Philippians 3:20]

“If you are a Christian, you can’t have a ‘domicile’ or a ‘residence’ anywhere on the present earth from a legal perspective without blaspheming God. Consequently, it also means that you can’t be subject to taxes upon your person based on having a “domicile” or “residence” in any earthly jurisdiction: state or federal. You are a child of God and you are His ‘bondservant’ and ‘fiduciary’ while you are here. Unless the government can tax “God”, then it can’t tax you acting as His agent and fiduciary:

“For this is the will of God, that by doing good you may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men— as free, yet not using liberty as a cloak for vice, but as bondservants of God.”
[1 Peter 2:15-16, Bible, NKJV]

You are “just passing through”. This life is only a temporary test to see whether you will evidence by your works the saving faith you have which will allow you to gain entrance into Heaven and the new earth God will create for you to dwell in mentioned in Rev. 21:1.

The definition of “domicile” above establishes also that “intent” is an important means of determining domicile as follows:

“...the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere”.

So once again as a Christian, the only place you should want to inhabit or “intend” to return to is Heaven, because the present earth is a temporary place full of sin and death that is ruled exclusively by Satan. Your proper biblical and legal “intent” as a person whose exclusive allegiance is to God should therefore be to return to Heaven and to leave the present corrupted earth as soon as possible and as God in His sovereignty allows. God has prepared a mansion for you to live in with the Father, and that mansion cannot be part of the present corrupted earth:

“In My [Jesus’] Father’s house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to Myself; that where I am, there you may be also. And where I go you know, and the way you know.”

[John 14:2-4, Bible, NKJV]

So why don’t they teach these things in school? Remember who runs the public schools?: Your wonderful state government. Do you think they are going to volunteer to clue you in to the fact that you’re the sovereign in charge of the government and don’t have to put up with being their slave, which is what their legal treachery has made you into? The only kind of volunteering they want you to do is to volunteer to be subject to their corrupt laws and become a “taxpayer”, which is a person who voluntarily enlisted to become a whore for the government as you will find out in chapter 5. Even many of our Christian schools have lost sight of the great commission and awesome responsibility they have to teach our young people the profound truths in the Bible and this book in a way that honors and glorifies God and allows them to be the salt and light of the world.

4.10.6 You’re NOT a “resident” if you were born in America

There is much which can be said about our earlier legally acceptable definition of the term “resident” from Black’s Law Dictionary, but one thing which is perfectly clear, nowhere does it say a word about a “resident” being a Citizen, of anything. As a matter of fact if you are not a citizen, then there is only one other thing you can be, and that is an alien. It does not matter what other name they might decide to call it. Here then is an example of its usage:

Let’s say, for whatever reason, you move to France for a time. First, it is obvious you are an alien to France. Right? After having moved to France you then become a resident of France.

Why are you a resident of France? Because you are now living there, but you still are not a citizen. Why are you not a citizen of France? Because you are an alien. So, it goes that a resident is an alien. Why? Because he is not a citizen, hence the term resident alien. Get it?

Now, the question becomes: what are you when you answer to the question “are you a resident of the state of Illinois?” like we do when we go to the Motor Vehicle Dept. Are you not declaring that you are an privileged person domiciled on federal territory or representing an office domiciled on federal territory and therefore devoid of rights? Well that is exactly what you are doing. Why is this important? Because, by either wrongfully declaring your domicile or citizenship or signing up for franchises only available to those who are ALREADY public offices in the government, we are surrendering all of our constitutional rights. [Whoops]

So, if you are a Citizen of any one of the several states of the Union, then you are not an alien and therefore not a “resident”. You then have your full Constitutional Rights, which includes the Right to “Liberty”, which is the Right to travel FREELY amongst the several States, untaxed and unlicensed.

You simply can not regulate a Right. If you could it wouldn’t be a Right, it would be a privilege. Our Creator granted these Rights to us, and no man or government can legislate or regulate an (unalienable) Right. The government can only legislate and regulate the exercise of benefits offered by their “statutes”, which can only offer immunities and privileges, but not bona fide Rights. Hence all the trickery to coerce you into saying you are something you are not.

We must stop looking to Webster’s Dictionary for the legal definitions. Buy a copy of Black’s Law Dictionary – it is there that you will find a whole new world of meaning. The biggest trick of all has been to redefine common, every day terms to mean something else within the statute-laws, and you didn’t know they did it [to you], did you.. that is, until you read this book?

[State v. Manuel, North Carolina, Vol. 20, Page 121 (1838)] [Underline added]
Think about it. The Constitution talks about Citizens. Why then do state governments feel the need to change it to “residents”? It just seems that to be clear and unambiguous, they would have used the same words and phrases already understood and accepted and stated as part of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

Oh, by the way, here is the definition of a resident alien:

Resident alien, “One, not yet a citizen of this country, who has come into the country from another with the intent to abandon his former citizenship and to reside here.”

Remember the phrase “transitory in nature” in the above definition of a resident? The nature part is the Creator. As a child of God we are merely traveling through life (“Liberty”), hopefully on our way to the great beyond, which is the transitory part. But, if you claim to be a “resident” you are not a child of God and therefore not a Sovereign American of the State, and therefore an alien of God, who has NO CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS. This is accomplished when we accept the term “person” as underlined in the above definition of the term “resident”, and as you will also come to realize, this too is a trick to coerce you into subjection to government regulation.

4.10.7 Convertibility between “resident” and “citizen” status

Below is a table that succinctly summarizes everything we have learned in this section in tabular form. The left column shows what you are now and the two right columns show what you can “elect” or “volunteer” to become under the authority of the Internal Revenue Code based on that status:

It amounts to constructive fraud for a “citizen” to file as an “alien”, which is what submitting a 1040 or 1040A form does. No “citizen of the United States” can be a “nonresident alien”, nor is he authorized under the I.R.C. to “elect” to become one. 4.11 Citizenship

Citizenship is something that very few Americans fully understand. We’ll therefore devote the next twelve subsections to covering this most important subject. The Supreme Court has said about citizenship the following, to emphasize the importance of learning about this most important subject:

“Nobody can deny that the question of citizenship in a nation is of the most vital importance. It is a precious heritage, as well as an inestimable acquisition;”

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

Before we begin, let us clarify some important aspects about citizenship in general, whether it be state or federal. First of all, statutory citizenship results directly from a combination of two coinciding and interacting factors: domicile and intent. In order to legally be a statutory “citizen”, we must simultaneously be domiciled within the jurisdiction of a political body and do so with the specific intent of becoming a statutory “citizen” of that political body. Here is how one early federal court describes it:

“The fourteenth amendment does not make a resident in a state a citizen of such state, unless he intends, by residence therein, to become a citizen.”

“‘Citizenship’ and ‘residence,’ as has often been declared by the courts, are not convertible terms. Parker v. Overman 18 How. 141; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 648; Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 109 U.S. 283; S.C. 3 Sup.Ct.Rep. 207; Prentiss v. Barton, 1 Brock. 389. Citizenship is a status or condition, and is the result of both act and intent. An adult person cannot become a citizen of a state by simply intending to, nor does any one become such citizen by mere residence. The residence and the intent must co-exist and correspond; and though, under ordinary circumstances, the former may be sufficient evidence of the latter, it is not conclusive, and the contrary may always be shown; and when the question of citizenship turns on the intention with which a person has resided in a particular state, his own testimony, under ordinary circumstances, is entitled to great weight on the point.

[...]”

“But, certainly, it was not the intention of the [Fourteenth] amendment to make any citizen of the United States a citizen of any particular state against his will, in which the exigencies of his business, his social relations or obligations, or other cause, might require his presence for a greater or less length of time, without any intention on his part to become such citizen.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

"The better opinion seems to be that a citizen of the United States is, under the amendment, prima facie a citizen of the state wherein he resides, and cannot arbitrarily be excluded therefrom by such state, but that he does not become a citizen of the state against his will, and contrary to his purpose and intention to retain an already acquired citizenship elsewhere. The amendment is a restraining on the power of the state, but not on the right of the person to choose and maintain his citizenship or domicile; but it protects him in the exercise of that right by making him a citizen of that state in which he may choose to reside with such intention. In Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 648, the court held that, for the purpose of giving the jurisdiction to the circuit court, an allegation that a party is a resident of a particular state is not equivalent to an allegation that he is a citizen thereof, for the reason, as suggested by Mr. Justice Harlan, that, even under the amendment, mere residence in a state does not necessarily or conclusively prove one to be a citizen thereof. And if an allegation of residence in a state is not necessarily, even under the amendment, the equivalent of an allegation of citizenship, then the mere fact of residence in a state is not necessarily the equivalent of citizenship."

[Sharon v. Hill, 26 F. 337 (1885), Emphasis added]

The most important aspect of the citizenship equation above is intent, which is synonymous with consent, and the reason there must be intent is because citizenship must result from a voluntary and free choice. There is a lot of needless contention in the freedom movement revolving around a misunderstanding of this fundamental issue of the voluntary nature of citizenship. People in the freedom movement argue all the time about being “subject to the jurisdiction of the United States” and how the Fourteenth Amendment forced them to become “citizens of the United States” as defined in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment. This is all hogwash if you ask us, because in America, you are entitled by law to acquire and maintain whatever citizenship status you choose as an adult and can voluntarily renounce whatever aspects of your citizenship that you don’t want without the consent of your government, as long as you properly notify them of your choice with the appropriate forms and correspondence. This isn’t true in many other countries such as England, where subjects of the Queen cannot renounce their British citizenship, but it is true here. The bottom line is that in America, you can be whatever type of citizen you choose so it’s meaningless to argue that the government forced you to do anything or invaded your rights. The ability to choose one’s citizenship status, as a matter of fact, is the essence of what it means to live in a free country. The only basis that people have to complain in the context of citizenship is usually that their relative ignorance about citizenship issues has eliminated choices that they thought they were entitled to by right, and we have no one to blame but ourselves for that problem.

Citizenship cannot be compelled and cannot be either accepted or expatriated under duress, because it amounts to a voluntary personal commitment of allegiance to a political body called a “state”. Those who are minors or mentally incompetent are technically unable to legally make such an informed and voluntary choice to have allegiance. Consequently, the citizenship of minors who are traveling with their parents or family is legally “presumed” to be the same as that of their parents. However, one important exception to this rule is that for the purposes of federal diversity jurisdiction, citizenship and domicile are equivalent:

[Hendry v. Masonite Corp., 455 F.2d 955 (1972)]

Based on what we just learned, if we simply live somewhere but do not intend to be a “citizen” or a “resident”, then we are considered to be an “foreigner” or sometimes an “alien” where we are living and a “citizen” in the state we “intend” to live. For instance, if we are citizens of California but not a “citizen of the United States” and then we take temporary employment in Arizona but intend to remain California citizens, then we are “aliens” in Arizona and “citizens” in California so far as our state citizenship. Understanding this critical distinction will become important in later sections.

After reading about the “federal zone” and the terms “United States” v. “United States of America” in the last few sections, you may be a little confused. You may, for instance, now be saying to yourself:

“This is all just a little crazy. How can there be two jurisdictions within the a single federal government? How can these two distinct jurisdictions have their own types of citizenship?"

The fact is, even most of the legal profession doesn't know or fully understand this simple truth. There are those who do understand this, for as you will come to see and realize, this is part of the scheme to trick us into accepting federal regulation, which in turn gives them federal jurisdiction over us in the courts. This causes us to be outside the protection of our Constitutional Rights and destroys the separation of powers between the States and the federal government that our founding fathers put there for the protection of our liberties.

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

First, we must look at the legal facts of the matter. So, let us take a moment to review the Constitution. For a legally acceptable copy please refer to the back of Black’s Law Dictionary (6th addition) (available at your local library or courthouse law library and sold at most bookstores).

Note the capitalization of the term Citizen all the way through the Constitution and the first thirteen Amendments. Thereafter (from the Fourteenth Amendment on), it is shown in lower case only. Why? Some people explain this by saying that the former is a sovereign American of the several States (“We the People...”) with Unalienable Rights granted to us by our Creator and protected by the Constitution, while the latter is a Federal citizen of the United States with legislative Immunities and Privileges only (No Rights). We do not agree with this assessment, however, because the term “United States” is not redefined in the Fourteenth or subsequent amendments to mean something different.

Our federal government knows and understands this difference and so should we. Again, refer to Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, for the definition of the Fourteenth Amendment:

“The Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, ratified in 1868, creates or at least recognizes for the first time a citizenship of the United States, as distinct from that of the states; for bids the making or enforcement by any state of any law abridging the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States; and secures all “persons” against any state action which results in either deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law,...”

[Underlines added]

Some people believe that the Fourteenth Amendment created a new and inferior status of citizenship (that of the federal United States) but this is simply untrue, as you will learn by reading the following subsections. In fact, people born in states of the Union are and always were “citizens of the United States” under the Constitution and the Fourteenth Amendment because of the following very significant consideration that most freedom fighters overlook:

The term “United States” in the Constitution means the states of the Union collectively and excludes the federal zone whereas “United States” in federal statutes and “acts of Congress”, including the Internal Revenue Code, means the federal zone and excludes the states of the Union in most cases.

Most of the confusion that people have over their citizenship status derives very simply from a difference in meaning between the term “United States” in the Constitution and “United States” in federal statutes. These two contexts have completely different and opposing meanings. The context is so very important and is most often overlooked. This ignorance of the law leads the freedom community to many irrational and unwarranted conclusions that have made it the deserving object of ridicule and defeat in courts, the media, and political communities for decades. We must eliminate this ignorance and confusion and demonstrate unity of purpose and understanding if we are to make any headway in the future to restore our society to its de jure Constitutional foundation.

The implications of the confusion over the term “United States” appearing in the Constitution and federal statutes leads people to false and very damaging conclusions, such as the following, none of which are true:

1. If a person is a “citizen of the United States” under section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment, then they must also be a “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under the Internal Revenue Code. In fact, these two types of citizens are completely different and opposite, even though they have the same name.
2. If a person lives in a state of the Union, then they reside in the “United States” under the Internal Revenue Code and under Title 8 of the U.S. Code.

Note: It is significant that the word “persons” is in quotations. You will come to notice that they use the word “person” in all government (local, state and federal) applications and other documents to insinuate a living being, when in fact they are referring to a legislative, statutory entity, a “citizen of the United States”, a “federal citizen”, to be precise. It does not refer to a Sovereign American of any one of the several States. We should all remember this, because it is everywhere and it is the difference between your Rights and Freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution and those Legislative Privileges under Statute Laws, which are merely private contracts we are being coerced into with the government.

While the United States has no direct authority over a Sovereign American, neither does a state of the Union have authority over a “U.S. citizen” as defined in the federal statutes. This in part explains the difference in the term “STATE of ILLINOIS” with respect to the term Illinois Republic. The former is also a corporate entity created under the Buck Act of 1940 and is a possession of the United States. Meanwhile, the Illinois Republic is the Sovereign State, one amongst the several states.

When Cornwallis surrendered on Oct 17, 1781 at the end of the Revolutionary War, did he surrender to THE UNITED STATES? No, in fact he surrendered 13 times, to the regiment leaders of each of the states. In 1783, Benjamin Franklin went to France. There, a treaty was signed by King George’s representative, which came to be known as The Treaty of Paris. In it, King George relinquished his sovereignty and passed it to The 13 FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES, THE PEOPLE AND THEIR POSTERITY, FOREVER! Independent from England, and Independent from each other. They were then, and are now, Republics, technically NATIONS. I recently found a copy of the Treaty of Paris on the United States Congress web page of international treaties. It is STILL recognized by International Law!

The Articles of Confederation had been written and approved in June of 1776. One month before Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence. Here is how some have described the purpose of both the Articles of Confederation and the Constitution which followed it:

"The idea of State sovereignty was to ensure that the federal government would be kept in a box. The power of the United States was to be scattered to the four corners of the country, to ensure that no man would have enough power to be a tyrant."
[Howard, Webmaster of Freedom Hall]

"The capital and leading object of the Constitution was to leave with the States all authorities which respected their citizens only, and to transfer to the United States those which respected citizens of foreign or other States, to make us several as to ourselves, but one as to all others"
[Thomas Jefferson; Letter to Judge William Johnson June 12, 1823]

The important thing to note about the Articles of Confederation is that the sovereign states were referred to collectively as the “United States of America” while the federal government they created was referred to as the “United States”. The sovereign states, however, subsequently deemed that the Articles of Confederation needed refinement, so they convened the First Constitutional Convention. After the Constitution was written, 9 of the 13 states were required to ratify it. Eleven ratified it in 1787, two did not until 1789.

In the Constitution, congress was GRANTED 17 specific powers having to do with the states. Things like lay and collect taxes, coin money, declare war, establish post offices, and regulate commerce. For some of these items, like COLLECT TAXES, there are very specific rules that congress MUST follow.

There was another power granted to the congress, having to do with the seat of government. The continental congress did not want the federal government located in a particular state, lest that state gain some advantage. So it was written, that a ten mile square area of land be the seat of government, which is what we call today, the District of Columbia.

Congress was granted EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY over this area. This meant that, for District of Columbia, congress was kind of like a city government. It could pass laws, speed limits or what have you, but these laws were not binding on ordinary Americans outside the District.

But something SINISTER happened..

In 1884 there had been a case dealing with citizenship. The Fourteenth amendment had been ratified, and said, in part: All persons born or naturalized in the United States, AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. The case was called Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884) and the court said:

"The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED STATES AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but COMPLETELY SUBJECT..."
[Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]
Got that? COMPLETELY SUBJECT! What does “completely subject” mean? It means subject to the POLITICAL and not LEGISLATIVE jurisdiction:

“To be 'completely subject' to the political jurisdiction of the United States is to be in no respect or degree subject to the political jurisdiction of any other government.”

[United States v. Wong Kim Ark 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

As we said in section 4.6, in 1901 there was a case that came up in front of the Supreme Court called Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901). It was a case about exports from Puerto Rico, which was a territory, and part of the area congress had exclusive legislative authority over. The Court said:

"CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE to the areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION"

"The idea prevails with some -- indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar -- that we have in this country substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution, with all its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise."

Note that they are not talking here about Constitutional protections for the land, the Constitution protects PEOPLE! This was confirmed by another case called Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945).

SO, IF YOU ARE DOMICILED IN THE FEDERAL "UNITED STATES", OR ARE A STATUTORY "CITIZEN OF THE "UNITED STATES", THE CONSTITUTION AND BILL OF RIGHTS DO NOT APPLY TO YOU!

So I ask again... ARE YOU A “CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES”?

If you say YES(!)…you have THROWN YOUR BILL OF RIGHTS IN THE TOILET!!!

The answer most likely is NO! The Fourteenth Amendment says ... “and subject to the jurisdiction thereof”. If they meant the jurisdiction of the 50 Union states, it would have read “and subject to their jurisdiction” as the Thirteenth Amendment says regarding slavery. The jurisdiction of the United States has been held over and over by the courts to be the District of Columbia, territories, enclaves, any area of land the Federal government "OWNS". The Federal government does not "OWN" the 50 Union states, it was CREATED by these States! If you are a regular AMERICAN, born in one of the 50 Union states, you are a NATURAL BORN CITIZEN, a Citizen of the state you were born in and a national of the United States, one of "We The People".

3C Am.Jur.2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689, Who is born in United States and subject to United States jurisdiction

"A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in TERRITORY over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country."

[3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, Section 2689]

The 50 Union states ARE NOT TERRITORIES and the UNITED STATES IS NOT SOVEREIGN OVER THEM!! Why would anyone want to be a federal citizen anyway? Some people say they can’t vote in a national election without being a U.S. citizen, but if they aren’t paying income taxes, who cares if they have representation?

(If we elect people in our state to REPRESENT US in the federal government anyway!!)

"Since in common usage the term 'person' does not include the SOVEREIGN, statutes employing that term are ordinarily construed to exclude it"

4.11.1 Introduction

The purpose of the following subsections relating to citizenship is to establish with evidence the following facts:

1. That deception is often times caused by abuse, misuse, and purposeful misapplication of “words of art” and failing to distinguish the context in which such words are used on government forms and in legal proceedings.
2. That there are two different jurisdictions and contexts in which the word “citizen” can be applied: statutory v. constitutional.
3. That the government purposefully tries to deceive constitutional citizens into falsely identifying themselves through willful abuse of “words of art” into declaring themselves as statutory citizens on government forms and in legal pleadings. This causes a surrender of all constitutional rights and operates to their extreme detriment by creating lifetime indentured financial servitude and surety in relation to the government. This occurs because a statutory citizen maintains a domicile on federal territory, and the Bill of Rights does not apply on federal territory.

“CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE to the areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION”

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

4. That once you falsely or improperly declare your status as that of statutory citizen, you are also declaring your domicile to be within the District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d).
6. That the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 defines a constitutional “citizen of the United States”, where “United States” means states of the Union and excludes federal zone.
7. That the term “citizen of the United States” as used in the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 of the constitution is NOT equivalent and mutually exclusive to the statutory “citizen of the United States” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. Another way of restating this is that you cannot simultaneously be a constitutional “citizen of the United States” (Fourteenth Amendment) and a statutory “citizen of the United States” (8 U.S.C. §1401).

“The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[]. but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.”

[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

8. That the term “U.S. citizen” as used on federal and state forms means a statutory “citizen of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

9. That a person born within and domiciled within a state of the Union and not within a federal territory or possession is:

9.1. A Fourteenth Amendment section 1 constitutional “citizen of the United States”.

“It is impossible to construe the words 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' in the opening sentence, as less comprehensive than the words 'within its jurisdiction,' in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons 'within the jurisdiction' of one of the states of the Union are not 'subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[].”

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

10. That a person born within and domiciled within a state of the Union is a “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) and a “foreign sovereign” and part of a “foreign state” with respect to the United States Government.

11. That the federal government uses the exceptions to the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act found in 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) to turn “nonresident aliens” into “resident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). It does this by offering commercial benefits to persons outside its jurisdiction and thereby making them “residents”.

12. That our government has a financial interest to deceive us about our true citizenship status in order to:

12.1. Encourage and expand the flow of unlawfully collected income tax revenues (commerce).

12.2. Expand its jurisdiction and control over the populace.

13. That the purpose of deliberate government deceptions about citizenship is to destroy the separation of powers between the states and the federal government that is the foundation of the Constitution of the United States of America and to destroy the protections of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act. It does this by:

13.1. Using “social insurance” as a form of commerce that makes Americans into “resident aliens” of the District of Columbia, which is what “United States” is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

13.2. Misleading Americans into falsely declaring their status on government forms as that of a “U.S. citizen”, and thereby losing their status as a “foreign state” under the provisions of 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3).

14. That if you are a concerned American, you cannot let this fraud continue and must act to remedy this situation immediately by taking some of the steps below.

4.11.2 Sovereignty

Sovereignty is the status fought for and won by our forefathers from the British Empire, and has since become the birthright of all Natural Born Americans, and via our Constitution, we extend this status to foreign-born persons as well through our naturalization laws.

The term Sovereign is defined in Webster’s Dictionary as:

"Sovereign. 1. a: one possessing or held to possess sovereignty b: one that exercises supreme authority within a limited sphere c: an acknowledged leader: ARBITER"

In Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, the word “Sovereign” is defined as "Sovereign. A person, body, or state in which independent and supreme authority is vested; a chief ruler with supreme power; a king or other ruler in a monarchy."

At the time of the Revolution, the King of England was the sovereign and the people within the Colonies were his subjects. After the colonies won the war with Britain, the people wanted a different status, which did not call for them to serve any man, King or body government:

"The sovereignty has been transferred from one man to the collective body of the people - and he who before was a 'subject of the king' is now 'a citizen of the State.'"
[State v. Manuel, North Carolina, Vol. 20, Page 121 (1838)]

There is a movement within our country by persons who are reclaiming the sovereignty that is rightfully inherent in the people of this land. By definition, as sovereigns, we are free to be and do anything we want. At first glance this seem to imply that the sovereign is free of all social and moral constraints. Without qualification this could lead to what might be termed Sovereign Immunity Syndrome, i.e., a condition whereby one believes he/she is the only sovereign and therefore is above the law, as opposed to a sovereign who is surrounded by a whole world of other sovereigns, each having been endowed with the same unalienable rights.

Common Law has two major governing precepts. First, as a sovereign one is free to be and do anything he/she pleases as long as whatever is done does not injure another sovereign in his/her person, character or property; and second, that the sovereign honor all contracts and agreements that were entered into knowingly, voluntarily and willingly. Here is the way one spirited Libertarian party member described this responsibility of those who are “sovereign”:

"Your freedom to use your fist ends where my nose begins."

To have freedom as a sovereign requires ultimate personal responsibility. Because one becomes aware of his/her sovereignty does not grant license to ride rough shod over whoever gets in the way or whoever doesn’t have the same awareness of his/her sovereignty. The genuine sovereign will give respect to all other sovereigns, even those who may not be currently aware that they are sovereign. There is no asking permission to be sovereign. If you were born and are a real flesh and blood human, you are sovereign. That does not however guarantee that the sovereignty potential has been actualized. There is a Latin term in law, res ipsa loquitur, which means the thing speaks for itself. If one is truly living as a sovereign, it will speak for itself. Unfortunately, in our land the vast majority are sovereigns who have yet to realize and actualize their potential.

The Constitution was adopted and made by people in their capacity as Sovereigns. They described themselves as “We the People” in the document, and they capitalized all references to their name. Sovereigns are always capitalized within written law. The words “We the People”, “Person”, and “Citizen” are all capitalized throughout the Constitution of the United States. Therefore, as a whole, the United States emanates from the people and the laws and constitutions of the several states are subordinate to the Constitution of the United States and the laws made pursuant to it.

The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...”

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

"Here [in America] sovereignty rests with the People."

[Chisholm v. Georgia, (2 Dall) 415, 472]

"To the Constitution of the United States the term SOVEREIGN is totally unknown. There is but one place where it could have been used with propriety. But, even in that place it would not, perhaps, have comported with the delicacy of those who ordained and established that Constitution. They might have announced themselves 'SOVEREIGN' people of the United States. But serenely conscious of the fact, they avoided the ostentatious declaration."

[Chisholm v. Georgia, (2 Dall) 440, 455]

Thus, the People themselves, both singly or collectively, are sovereign, supra at 456, over both the State and the federal government and are the true SOVEREIGNS within our society.

"It will be admitted on all hands that with the exception of the powers granted to the states and the federal government, through the Constitutions, the people of the several states are unconditionally sovereign within their respective states."

[Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L.Ed. 997]

"The people of the state, as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the king by his own prerogative."

[Lansing v. Smith, (1829) 4 Wendell 9, (NY)]

"(a) The Court of Claims is available to foreign nationals (or their governments)...

The Executive Branch’s agency, the Internal Revenue Service, has also recognized this by stating in the Internal Revenue Manual, Section 35.18.10.1 that those who are “nationals” and therefore “nonresident aliens” and who wish to sue the government for violations of the tax code MUST do so only in the Court of Claims and cannot file suit in Federal District Court:

Internal Revenue Manual, Section 35.18.10.1 (08-31-1982) District Courts

Section 1402(a)(1) of the Judicial Code (28 U.S.C. §1402(a)(1)) provides that if an action is brought against the United States under section 1346(a) of the Judicial Code by an entity other than a corporation, it must be brought in the judicial district where the plaintiff resides. Accordingly, where an individual resides outside of the [federal] United States (e.g., a nonresident alien), he or she may not bring a refund suit in a district court. Malajalian v. United States,504 F.2d. 842 (1st Cir. 1974). These cases may be brought only in the Court of Claims.

This premise is based on the legal maxim that Sovereigns enjoy judicial immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA) and that no enforceable right exists against the Sovereign [the people] who makes the laws:
"A sovereign is exempt from suit, not because of any formal conception or obsolete theory, but on the logical and practical ground that there can be no legal right as against the authority that makes the law on which the right depends."

Kawananakoa v. Polybank, 205 U.S. 349, 353

It is undisputable that the Citizens of the several states United granted limited powers to the federal government, because the people are vested with complete sovereignty. The Constitution of each state created the state, and the federal Constitution created the federal government. The creation, which is the government so formed, cannot be greater than the Creator, which is the sovereign People. State and federal governments, through the IRS or state revenue agencies, cannot destroy or embarrass the sovereign people, whether it be their property, by takings, or their credit ratings, by manufacturing false debts without legal authority. Only by voluntary consent and no enforcement authority whatsoever may they proceed against the Sovereign People, or they proceed unlawfully and commit a tort.

"The great principle is this: because the constitution will not permit a state to destroy, it will not permit a law involving the power to destroy."

Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514 (1830)

Those who are truly “sovereign” cannot be the subject of any federal statute or “act of Congress” and, in fact, their rights can’t even be defined or circumscribed by any law. The main purpose of law is to protect people’s rights by controlling and limiting and defining the delegated authority of public servants. Laws keep our “public servants” inside a box, but do not regulate or control the People, who are their Masters. To even define rights is to limit them. Furthermore, all federal statutes that apply to these public servants only have jurisdiction inside the federal zone anyway by default. Recall from our earlier discussion that the federal zone is not covered by the Bill or Rights, so Congress had to write federal laws as a substitute for the Bill Of Rights within the federal zone only. We should always remember who those laws exclusively apply to: those domiciled in the federal zone, federal instrumentalities, public officers, and federal statutory “employees”. This isn’t you, my friend! Laws control, and sovereigns can’t be controlled, because according to the Supreme Court as stated above in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886), sovereignty is the source of law, not the object of it.

"When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles on which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power. Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts. And the law is the definition and limitation of power. It is, indeed, quite true that there must always be lodged somewhere, and in some person or body, the authority of final decision; and in many cases of mere administration, the responsibility is purely political, no appeal lying except to the ultimate tribunal of the public judgment, exercised either in the pressure of opinion, or by means of the suffrage. But the fundamental rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, considered as individual possessions, are secured by those maxims of constitutional law which are the monuments showing the victorious progress of the race in securing to men the blessings of civilization under the reign of just and equal laws, so that, in the famous language of the Massachusetts bill of rights, the government of the commonwealth ‘may be a government of laws and not of men.’ For the very idea that one man may be compelled to hold his life, or the means of living, or any material right essential to the enjoyment of life, at the mere will of another, seems to be intolerable in any country where freedom prevails, as being the essence of slavery itself."

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)

Remember who wrote the Constitution: “We the People”. The Constitution is law, and you are a part of the group of sovereign people it was written by and for: We the People.

"And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law—the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible. ‘We the People of the United States,’ it says, ‘do ordain and establish this Constitution.’ Ordain and establish! These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but provided explicitly—The Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.’ (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior statute. [298 U.S. 238, 297] Use whenever the two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

You are a Sovereign. The constitution excludes you from federal jurisdiction in all but a very few minor cases and protects your rights with the Bill of Rights. As you will learn later in section 4.11.10 et seq, this condition of “sovereign immunity” is exactly a condition of citizenship called “national” or “state national”, which is defined in section 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The rights and privileges of “nationals” are nowhere limited in title 8 of the U.S. Code, and this is definitely no accident. Nowhere in the U.S. Code are duties or liabilities imposed upon “nationals” because they are sovereign. Do a search of the U.S. Code for the word “national” of the United States and verify this for yourself if you like. The method for becoming a “national” and a “nonresident alien” under federal law as a person born outside of federal jurisdiction (the “United States” in federal law) and in a state of the Union is nowhere described in federal law and this is no accident. These people are NOT subject to federal law or federal jurisdiction! That is what makes them sovereign to begin with. The only way a sovereign can ever lose his or her sovereignty is one of the following four methods:

1. By injuring the equal rights of another sovereign, thereby forfeiting their own rights in the process, which then subjects them to criminal and civil liability only towards the person they injured, and not towards the government.
2. By electing as a “nonresident alien” to be treated as an “alien” subject to federal jurisdiction, who is called a “resident” within the Internal Revenue Code. This election is done under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g).
3. By misrepresenting our status to the government, and claiming to be “U.S. citizens” or “resident” on a government form, both of which do not describe those born in states of the Union. Under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA), 28 U.S.C. §§1602-1611, “U.S. citizens” are exempted from being classified as “foreign sovereigns” and enjoying the benefits of sovereign immunity. See 28 U.S.C. §1603(b) and 28 U.S.C. §1332(c) and (d).
4. Signing or consenting verbally to any contract with the government that causes us to surrender our rights. For instance, anyone who has or uses a Social Security Number is “presumed” to be a “U.S. citizen”:

26 CFR §301.6109-1(g)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons--(1) General rule--(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

The last three methods of losing our sovereignty above are usually done because of ignorance or stupidity. The first one is accomplished through malice and violation of God’s Holy laws. When we violate God’s laws, our punishment is an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, just as the Bible says. When you take away or violate other people’s equal rights, you lose yours also. This loss of rights executed in the interests of public protection is the main source of most government jurisdiction over sovereigns. This approach, in fact, is the essence of equal protection of the laws that is the foundation of our system of jurisprudence and of Jesus’ “Golden Rule”:

"Therefore, whatever you want men to do to you, do also to them, for this is the Law and the Prophets.”
[Jesus in Matt. 7:12, Bible, NKJV]

“But if any harm follows, then you shall give life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, burn for burn, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.”
[Exodus 21:23-25, Bible, NKJV]

When we injure the rights of a fellow sovereign, then we violate our contract or covenant with God Himself in the Bible to love our neighbor. Those who love their neighbor don’t hurt him. The essence of justice is not hurting our neighbor, and its purpose is making sure we take responsibility when we do. This is a duty owed to God. Since our rights come from God and He protects them as the Divine judge, then we owe allegiance and have a personal duty to love and honor Him. As attorney Eduardo Rivera said:

“All rights come from duties.”
[Eduardo Rivera]
Therefore, don’t foolishly go searching in federal statutes for a statute that limits or even defines your rights or duties as a Sovereign. The closest any federal statute can come is to give a name to your status. You don’t need a federal statute to define your rights. The Bill of Rights and the Constitution afford all the definition necessary for your rights, and no vain statute (written by a covetous politician) is necessary to file a claim in any court for invasion of those rights by any government official. Remember? Your rights as a Sovereign don’t come from any vain law passed by a bunch of greedy lawyers in the District of Columbia (Washington, D.C.) who sit around all day trying to invent new ways to steal more of your money. They come from God Himself!

“A fool and his money are soon parted.” [Benjamin Franklin]

That is why it is absolutely crucial for you to read and understand at least chapters 3 through 5 of this book: as protection for your rights:

"Only the educated are free."
[Epicurus, Discourses]

"Knowledge will forever govern ignorance, and people who mean to be their own governors, must arm themselves with the power which knowledge gives.”
[James Madison]

"...the greatest menace to freedom is an inert [passive, ignorant, and uneducated] people [who refuse, as jurists and voters and active citizens, to expose and punish evil in our government]"

[Whitney v. California, 274 U.S. 357 (1927)]

"The American people have always regarded education and acquisition of knowledge as matters of supreme importance which should be diligently promoted [in order to maintain and protect their liberty]. The Ordinance of 1787 declares: ‘Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness [and liberty] of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged.”
[Meyer v. State of Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390 (1923)]

And thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws [of both God and man], and shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, and the work [of obedience to God] that they must do.”
[Exodus 18:20, Bible, NKJV]

"My [God’s] people are destroyed [and enslaved] for lack of knowledge [and the lack of education that produces it].”
[Hosea 4:6, Bible, NKJV]
Understanding the distinction between nationality and domicile is absolutely critical.

1. Nationality:
   1.1. Is a political status.
   1.2. Is defined by the Constitution, which is a political document.
   1.3. Is synonymous with being a “national” within statutory law.
   1.4. Is associated with a specific COUNTRY.

2. Domicile:
   2.1. Is a civil status.
   2.2. Is not even addressed in the constitution.
   2.3. Is defined by civil statutory law RATHER than the constitution.
   2.4. Is in NO WAY connected with one’s nationality.
   2.5. Is usually connected with the word “citizen”, “resident”, or inhabitant in statutory law.
   2.6. Is associated with a specific COUNTY and a STATE rather than a COUNTRY.

Nationality and domicile, TOGETHER determine the political AND civil status of a human being. These important distinctions are recognized in Black’s Law Dictionary:

“nationality – That quality or character which arises from the fact of a person’s belonging to a nation or state. Nationality determines the political status of the individual, especially with reference to allegiance; while domicile determines his civil [statutory] status. Nationality arises either by birth or by naturalization.”

The U.S. Supreme Court also confirmed the above when they held the following. Note they key phrase “political jurisdiction”, which is NOT the same as legislative/statutory jurisdiction. One can have a political status of “citizen” under the constitution while NOT being a “citizen” under federal statutory law because not domiciled on federal territory. To have the status of “citizen” under federal statutory law, one must have a domicile on federal territory:

“This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only—birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.’ The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”

“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are indistinguishable.”

[Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

Notice in the last quote above that they referred to a foreign national born in another country as a “citizen”. THIS is the “citizen” that judges and even tax withholding documents are really talking about, rather than the “national” described in the constitution.

Domicile and NOT nationality is what imputes a status under the tax code and a liability for tax. Tax liability is a civil liability that attaches to civil statutory law, which in turn attaches to the person through their choice of domicile. When you CHOOSE a domicile, you elect or nominate a protector, which in turn gives rise to an obligation to pay for the civil protection demanded. The method of providing that protection is the civil laws of the municipal (as in COUNTY) jurisdiction that you chose a domicile within.

"domicile, A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place
Later versions of Black’s Law Dictionary attempt to cloud this important distinction between nationality and domicile in order to unlawfully and unconstitutionally expand federal power into the states of the Union and to give federal judges unnecessary and unwarranted discretion to kidnap people into their jurisdiction using false presumptions. They do this by trying to make you believe that domicile and nationality are equivalent, when they are EMPHATICALLY NOT. Here is an example:

“nationality – The relationship between a citizen of a nation and the nation itself, customarily involving allegiance by the citizen and protection by the state; membership in a nation. This term is often used synonymously with citizenship.”

We establish later in section 4.11.14 that federal courts regard the term “citizenship” as equivalent to domicile, meaning domicile on federal territory.

“The words “citizen” and citizenship,” however, usually include the idea of domicile, Delaware, L.&W.R.Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557.”

Hence:

1. The term “citizenship” is being stealthily used by government officials as a magic word that allows them to hide their presumptions about your status. Sometimes they use it to mean NATIONALITY, and sometimes they use it to mean DOMICILE.
2. The use of the word “citizenship” should therefore be AVOIDED when dealing with the government because its meaning is unclear and leaves too much discretion to judges and prosecutors.
3. When someone from any government uses the word “citizenship”, you should:
   3.1. Tell them NOT to use the word, and instead to use “nationality” or “domicile”.
   3.2. Ask them whether they mean “nationality” or “domicile”.
   3.3. Ask them WHICH political subdivision they imply a domicile within: federal territory or a constitutional state of the Union.

A failure to either understand or apply the above concepts can literally mean the difference between being a government pet in a legal cage called a franchise, and being a free and sovereign man or woman.

4.11.3.1 Statutory citizen status is entirely voluntary and discretionary. Constitutional citizen status is NOT

An important distinction that needs to be understood by the reader is that no one can force you to acquire or retain statutory “national and citizen of the United States” civil status. That status is entirely voluntary and discretionary. That is one of the conclusions of the following pamphlet.

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Why? Because the LEGAL status you use to describe yourself is how you:

1. Contract with other parties, including the government. The purpose of establishing government, in fact, is to protect your right to both CONTRACT and NOT CONTRACT as you see fit. You don’t become a “person” under a private contract until you SIGN or consent in some way to the contract or agreement.
2. Politically and legally associate with groups you choose to associate with. The right of freedom of association and freedom from COMPELLED association is protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.
3. Choose or nominate the civil government that you want to protect your right to life, liberty, and property.
   3.1. Choosing a domicile is an act of political association that has legal consequences in which you nominate a specific municipal government to protect your rights and property.
3.2. If you never nominate such a government, then you retain the right to protect yourself and are not entitled to the protection of a specific municipal government protector. This is why the Declaration of Independence says that all just powers of government are derived from the consent of the people. Those who don’t consent can’t be civilly governed. Yes, they are still liable for criminal infractions because the criminal laws do not require consent. Civil laws, however DO require consent of the governed, and all such civil laws attach to and associate with your choice of legal domicile.

Domicile is how you exercise right numbers 2 and 3 above. You can’t be a statutory citizen without CHOOSING and CONSENTING TO a civil domicile in the federal zone. You get to decide where your domicile is and you can change it at ANY TIME! If you don’t want to be a statutory citizen under federal law, change your domicile to a state of the Union and correctly reflect that fact on government forms and correspondence.

The legal definition of “citizen” confirms that the status is voluntary. Notice the phrase “in their associated capacity”, which is a First Amendment, voluntary act of political association. What the government doesn’t want you to know is WHAT status would you describe yourself with if you DO NOT consent to volunteer and yet did not expatriate your nationality to become a constitutional alien?

citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States[], or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights.

All persons born or naturalized in the United States[], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States[] and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship, "Citizens" are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government [by giving up their rights] for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herrriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

The “full civil rights” they are talking about above are enforced through municipal CIVIL law, which in turn can only attach to one’s choice of legal domicile. Here is how the courts describe this process of volunteering to become a statutory “citizen”:

"The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other does not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one whole, and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all their rights at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions for one and the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the process of the courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the sovereignty of the United States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the assault. So, too, if one passes counterfeited coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against the United States and the State: the United States, because it discredits the coin; and the State, because of the fraud upon him to whom it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments possess powers in common, or bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a citizenship [92 U.S. 542, 551] which owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both. The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction. [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)] [emphasis added]

If the status is voluntary, then there MUST be some way to “un-volunteer”, right? How is it that the “citizen” CANNOT complain? Because if he DIDN’T voluntarily submit himself to a specific state or national government by choosing a civil domicile within that specific government and thereby become subject to the civil laws of that place, he wouldn’t call himself a statutory “citizen” under the civil law to begin with! Instead, he would call himself or herself any of the following terms in relation to that specific government and on all government forms he or she fills out. This is the HUGE secret that no one in the government or the courts want to talk about, in fact and will HIDE at every opportunity, because it renders them COMPLETELY powerless to govern you civilly.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

The state courts recognize that calling oneself a “U.S. citizen” is voluntary and hence, that you can instead refer to yourself as simply a “non-citizen national” so as to avoid being confused with a statutory citizen as follows:

"[W]e find nothing…which requires that a citizen of a state must also be a citizen of the United States, if no question of federal rights or jurisdiction is involved."

[Cros v. Bd. of Sup'rs of Elections, 221 A.2d. 431 (1966)]

The U.S. Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual also confirms that calling oneself a “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” is voluntary with the following language:

"7 Foreign Affairs Manual Section 012(a)

a. U.S. Nationals Eligible for Consular Protection and Other Services:

Nationality is the principal relationship that connects an individual to a State. International law recognizes the right of a State to afford diplomatic and consular protection to its nationals and to represent their interests. Under U.S. law the term "national" is inclusive of citizens but "citizen" is not inclusive of nationals. All U.S. citizens are U.S. nationals. Section 101(a)(22) INA (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22)) provides that the term "national of the United States" means (A) a citizen of the United States, or (B ) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States. U.S. nationals are eligible for U.S. consular protection.

Below is an example of a case involving a party who had no civil domicile in either a statutory “States”, meaning federal territory, or a constitutional state of the Union, and hence was classified by the court as a “stateless person” who had to be dismissed from a class action lawsuit because he was BEYOND the civil jurisdiction of federal court.

In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3).

Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]

When a plaintiff sues more than one defendant in a diversity action, the plaintiff must meet the requirements of the diversity statute for each defendant or face dismissal. Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Curch. 267 (1806).[1]

Here, Bettison's "stateless" status destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(3), and his United States citizenship destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). Instead of dismissing the case, however, the Court of Appeals panel granted Newman-Green's motion, which it had invited, to amend the complaint to drop Bettison as a party, thereby producing complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). 832 F.2d. 417 (1987). The panel, in an opinion by Judge Easterbrook, relied both on 28 U.S.C. §1653 and on Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as sources of its authority to grant this motion. The panel noted that, because the guarantors are jointly and severally liable, Bettison is not an indispensable party, and dismissing him would not prejudice the remaining guarantors. 832 F.2d. at 420, citing Fed.Rule Civ.Proc. 19(b). The panel then proceeded to the merits of the case, ruling in Newman-Green's favor in large part, but remanding to allow the District Court to quantify damages and to resolve certain minor issues.[2]

Only those who are constitutional aliens WHEN PHYSICALLY PRESENT WITHIN A FOREIGN COUNTRY can be forced to submit themselves to the civil jurisdiction of that country absent their consent and voluntary choice of domicile. Those who are not constitutional aliens, such as a non-citizen nationals, CANNOT be forced and must consent to be governed by choosing a domicile. The U.S. Supreme Court describes the process of FORCING aliens into a privileged status to have a residence in that place and be subject to the civil laws as an “implied license”:

The reasons for not allowing to other aliens exemption 'from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found' were stated as follows: When private individuals of one nation [states of the Unions are "nations]
If you are not physically present in a legislatively foreign civil jurisdiction, even if you are a constitutional alien in relation to that jurisdiction, then the above method of enfancisement and enslavement CANNOT be employed. Only a corrupt government can or would waive these rules and make EVERYONE privileged. Furthermore, under the concept of equal protection and equal treatment, if they can force anyone to be subject to THEIR civil laws, then you are allowed to make your own law and force ANYONE else, including the court, to be subject to YOUR laws against their consent.

NATIONALITY, on the other hand, is NOT discretionary. Nationality is a product of the circumstances of your birth or the requirements for naturalization, which you in turn have no control over and cannot change. One can be a “national” of a country under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) without being a statutory citizen because their nationality discretionary. Nationality is a product of the circumstances of your birth or the requirements for naturalization, which you in turn have no control over and cannot change. One can be a “national” WITHOUT being a statutory citizen because their political status is separate and distinct from their civil status. YES, you can “expatriate” your constitutional citizenship and abandon your nationality, so your GIVING UP your nationality discretionary.

“...municipal [civil] law determines how citizenship may be acquired...”

But acquiring nationality and constitutional citizen status, for most of us, is NOT discretionary in most cases because:

1. You have no control over WHERE you were born or the citizenship of your parents at the time of birth.
2. You HAVE to be a “national” and constitutional citizen of SOME country on Earth. Otherwise, you would be an “alien” in EVERY country on Earth akin to a fugitive whose rights would be protected by NO ONE.

4.11.3.2 Comparison

Congress enjoys two species of legislative power, and each has its own “citizens”:

“It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power; the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union; the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?”

[Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265; 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821)]

The above distinction is a product of what is called the separation of powers doctrine that is the heart of the United States Constitution and which is thoroughly described in the document below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Based on the above and the foregoing section, there are TWO mutually exclusive and independent types of “citizens”: Statutory v. Constitutional. The U.S. Supreme Court sternly warned Americans not to confuse the two jurisdictions when it held the following:

“The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.”

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

Constitutional citizenship derives from and is dependent upon being a constitutional citizen within your state, which the U.S. Supreme Court also calls a state citizen.

“It would be the vainest show of learning to attempt to prove by citations of authority, that up to the adoption of the recent Amendments [the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendment], no claim or pretense was set up that those rights depended on the Federal government for their existence or protection, beyond the very few express limitations which the Federal Constitution imposed upon the states—such as the prohibition against ex post facto laws, bill of attainder, and laws impairing the obligation of contracts. But with the exception of these and a few other restrictions, the entire domain of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the states, as above defined, lay within the constitutional and legislative power of the states, and without that of the Federal government. Was it the purpose of the 14th Amendment, by the simple declaration that no state should make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, to transfer the security and protection of all the civil rights which we have mentioned, from the states to the Federal government? And where it is declared that Congress shall have the power to enforce that article, was it intended to bring within the power of Congress the entire domain of civil rights heretofore belonging exclusively to the states?

We are convinced that no such result was intended by the Congress which proposed these amendments, nor by the legislatures of those states, which ratified them. Having shown that the privileges and immunities relied on in the argument are those which belong to citizens of the states as such, and that they are left to the state governments for security and protection, and not by this article, placed under the special care of the Federal government, we may hold ourselves excused from defining the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States which no state can abridge, until some case involving those privileges may make it necessary to do so.”

[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873); emphasis added]

Statutory citizenship, however, does not derive from citizenship under the constitution of a state of the Union. The types of “citizens” spoken of in the United States Constitution are biological people and not artificial creations such as corporations. Here is what the Annotated Fourteenth Amendment published by the Congressional Research Service has to say about this subject:

“Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States.”
14 Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 13 Fed. Cas. 67 (C.C.D.La. 1870). Not being citizens of the United States, corporations accordingly have been declared unable "to claim the protection of that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment which secures the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States against abridgment or impairment by the law of a State," Orient Ins. Co. v. Duggs, 172 U.S. 557, 561 (1899). This conclusion was in harmony with the earlier holding in Paal v. Virginia, 75 U.S. (8 Wall.) 168 (1869), to the effect that corporations were not within the scope of the privileges and immunities clause of state citizenship set out in Article IV, Sec. 2. See also Selover, Bates & Co. v. Walsh, 226 U.S. 112, 126 (1912); Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U.S. 45 (1908); Liberty Warehouse Co. v. Tobacco Growers, 276 U.S. 71, 89 (1928); Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 244 (1936).

Fourteenth Amendment Conspiracy Theorists who deny that they are "citizens of the United States" as described in the Fourteenth Amendment, indirectly, are admitting that the ONLY thing they can be or are is a corporation or artificial entity. Why? Because:

1. There are only two types of American citizens: Statutory and Constitutional.
2. The ONLY one of the two types of "citizens" who is, in fact, expressly identified by the U.S. Supreme Court as a human being and emphatically NOT an artificial entity or corporation IS a constitutional or Fourteenth Amendment "citizen of the United States.
3. If you are born or naturalized here and deny being a constitutional citizen, the only other thing you can be is a statutory citizen.

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Section 8.1 http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Seems ironic that ignorant freedom lovers who don’t read the law and who even want to avoid being associated with a corporation would do that to themselves, don’t you think? Some people might try to escape this logic by saying that there are TWO types of Constitutional citizens: "citizen of the United States" as identified in the Fourteenth Amendment and the "Citizen" of the original Constitution. However, the following case holds that the Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States” is a SUPERSET that includes EVERYONE, including the white capital “C” males of the original constitution, so this assertion is clearly flawed:

"By the language 'citizens of the United States' was meant all such citizens; and by 'any person' was meant all persons within the jurisdiction of the state. No distinction is intimated on account of race or color. This court has no authority to interpolate a limitation that is neither expressed nor implied. Our duty is to execute the law, not to make it. The protection provided was not intended to be confined to those of any particular race or class, but to embrace equally all races, classes, and conditions of men.' Id. 128, 129.

The fourteenth amendment, by the language, 'all persons born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' was intended to bring all races, without distinction of color, within the rule which prior to that time pertained to the white race.

[United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

The U.S. Supreme Court also described WHAT is meant by “subject to the jurisdiction”, and it means DOMICILED somewhere within the country or what they call the “territory of the nation” rather than the statutory “United States”:

"The amendment, in clear words and in manifest intent, includes the children born within the territory of the United States of all other persons, of whatever race or color, domiciled within the United States. Every citizen or subject of another country, while domiciled here [the COUNTRY, not the statutory "United States"], is within the allegiance and the protection, and consequently subject to the jurisdiction, of the United States. His allegiance to the United States is direct and immediate, and, although but local and temporary, continuing only so long as he remains within our territory, is yet, in the words of Lord Coke in Calvin's Case, 7 Coke, 6a, 'strong enough to make a natural subject, for, if he hath issue here, that issue is a natural-born subject'; and his child, as said by Mr. Binney in his essay before quoted, 'If born in the country, is as much a citizen as the natural-born child of a citizen, and by operation of the same principle,' It can hardly be denied that an alien is completely subject to the political jurisdiction of the country in which he resides, seeing that, as said by Mr. Webster, when secretary of state, in his report to the president on Thrasher’s case in 1851, and since repeated by this court: ‘Independently of a residence with intention to continue such residence; independently of any domiciliation; independently of the taking of any oath of allegiance, or of renouncing any former allegiance. — it is well known that by the public law an alien, or a stranger born, for so long a time as he continues within the dominions of a foreign government, owes obedience to the laws of that government, and may be punished for treason or other crimes as a native-born subject might be, unless his case is varied by some treaty stipulations’; Executive Documents H. R. No. 10, 1st Sess. 32d Cong. p. 4; 6 Webster’s Works, 526 — 4 Bl. Comm.

The case below is talking about constitutional and not statutory citizenship:

"As the mind cannot conceive an army without the men to compose it, on the face of the Constitution the objection that it does not give power to provide for such men would seem to be too frivolous for further notice. It is said, however, that since under the Constitution as originally framed state citizenship was primary and United States citizenship but derivative and dependent thereon, therefore the power conferred upon Congress to raise armies was only coterminous with United States citizenship and could not be exerted so as to cause that citizenship to lose its dependent character and dominate state citizenship. But the proposition simply denies to Congress the power to raise armies which the Constitution gives. That power by the very terms of the Constitution, being delegated, is supreme. Article 6. In truth the contention simply assails the wisdom of the framers of the Constitution in conferring authority on Congress and in not retaining it as it was under the Confederation in the several states."

[Arver v. United States, 245 U.S. 366 (1918)]

Below are a few additional case cites that prove that those who are NOT citizens of a state of the Union such as those domiciled on federal territory in the District of Columbia, are Statutory and not Constitutional citizens:

"... citizens of the District of Columbia were not granted the privilege of litigating in the federal courts on the ground of diversity of citizenship. Possibly no better reason for this fact exists than such citizens were not thought of when the judiciary article [III] of the federal Constitution was drafted. ... citizens of the United States[]... were also not thought of; but in any event a citizen of the United States[], who is not a citizen of any state, is not within the language of the [federal] Constitution."

[Pannill v. Roanoke, 252 F. 910, 914]

"There are, then, under our republican form of government, two classes of citizens, one of the United States[] and one of the state. One class of citizenship may exist in a person, without the other, as in the case of a resident of the District of Columbia; but both classes usually exist in the same person."

[Gardina v. Board of Registrars, 160 Ala. 155]

Below is a table comparing the two contexts to make the differences perfectly clear. We will build on these distinctions throughout the remainder of this pamphlet.

4.11.3.3 How one transitions from being a constitutional citizen to a statutory citizen/resident

The U.S. Supreme Court indirectly identified how one transitions from being a Constitutional to a Statutory citizen in the following holdings.

1. First they said and continue to say that a corporation is NOT a citizen as used in the CONSTITUTION:

   “That by no sound or reasonable interpretation, can a corporation—a mere faculty in law, be transformed into a citizen, or treated as a citizen [within the Constitution]. 2d. That the second section of the third article of the Constitution, investing the courts of the United States with jurisdiction in controversies between citizens of different States, cannot be made to embrace controversies to which corporations and not citizens are parties; and that the assumption, by those courts, of jurisdiction in such cases, must involve a palpable infraction of the article and section just referred to. 3d. That in the case before us, the party defendant in the Circuit Court having been a corporation aggregate, created by the State of New Jersey, the Circuit Court could not properly take cognizance thereof; and, therefore, this case should be remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions that it be dismissed for the want of jurisdiction.”

   [Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Co., 55 U.S. 80 (1852)]

2. But on the OTHER hand, they held that a corporation IS a citizen under federal STATUTORY law.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The Great Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.5

So, in the CONSTITUTION, corporations or other artificial entities are NOT “citizens”, but under federal STATUTORY law granting jurisdiction to federal courts, they ARE. And what statutory law is THAT? See 28 U.S.C. §1332:

We can see from the above that the “State” they are talking about is NOT a constitutional state of the Union, but rather is identified in 28 U.S.C. §1332(e) as a federal territory NOT within any state of the Union. Hence, this is obviously a STATUTORY rather than CONSTITUTIONAL “State”, and hence a STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL “citizen”. Therefore, a person who claims to be a constitutional citizen or a human being could not partake of the statutory “privilege” granted by the above franchise. And YES, that is what it is: A franchise, “Congressionally created right”, or “public right”. All franchises presume that the actors, who are all public officers of “U.S. Inc.”, are domiciled upon and therefore citizens of federal territory and NOT a state of the Union. This analysis also clearly explains the following, because you can’t be a “citizen” under federal statutory law unless you are domiciled on federal territory not within a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union:

All federal District Courts are Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 franchise courts that manage government territory, property, and franchises. This is proven with thousands of pages of evidence in the following. Therefore, the ONLY type of “domicile” they could mean above is domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union.

We also know based on the previous section that corporations are not constitutional citizens, so they can’t be “born or naturalized” like a human being. BUT they are “born or naturalized” by other methods to become citizens of a particular jurisdiction. For instance:

1. The act of FORMING a corporation gives it “birth”, in a legal sense.
2. The place or jurisdiction that the corporation is legally formed becomes the effective civil domicile of that corporation.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)  Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship  http://famguardian.org/
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

3. A corporation can only be domiciled in ONE place at a time. Hence, it can only be a “citizen” of one jurisdiction at a time. The place where the corporate headquarters is located usually is treated as the effective domicile of the corporation.

4. If a corporation is formed in a specific state of the Union, then it is a statutory but not constitutional citizen in THAT state only and a statutory alien in every OTHER state AND also alien in respect to federal jurisdiction.

“A foreign corporation is one that derives its existence solely from the laws of another state, government, or country, and the term is used indiscriminately, sometimes in statutes, to designate either a corporation created by or under the laws of another state or a corporation created by or under the laws of a foreign country.”

“A federal corporation operating within a state is considered a domestic corporation rather than a foreign corporation. The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state.”

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §883]

Therefore, whenever you hear a judge or government prosecutor use the word “citizen” in federal court, they really are referring to domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union. They are setting a trap to exploit your legal ignorance using “words of art”. If they referring to your “nationality” rather than whether you are a “citizen”, they are referring to CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship and whether you are a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). If they ask you whether you are a “citizen” or a “citizen of the United States”, you should always respond by asking:

1. Which of the three “United States” defined by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945) do you mean?
2. Do you mean my nationality or my domicile in that place?

…and then you should say you are:

1. Domiciled outside the statutory “United States” and therefore a statutory alien in relation to federal jurisdiction.
2. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen
3. NOT a STATUTORY citizen under any federal statute or regulation, including but not limited to 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 CFR §1.1-1(c), all of which are STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL citizens:

   TITLE 26 > Subtitle C > CHAPTER 21 > Subchapter C > § 3121

   §3121. Definitions

   (e) State, United States, and citizen

   For purposes of this chapter—

   (1) State

   The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

   (2) United States [FEDERAL TERRITORY NOT PART OF ANY STATE]

   The term “United States” when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

We should point out that 18 U.S.C. §911 makes it a CRIME for a constitutional citizen to claim to be the statutory citizen described in 8 U.S.C. §1401. People who begin as a “constitutional” citizen commonly commit this crime and unwittingly in most cases transform themselves into a privileged “statutory” citizen by performing any one of the following unlawful acts. These unlawful acts at least make them appear to be a legal “person” under federal law with an effective domicile in the District of Columbia/federal zone and a “SUBJECT citizen”:

1. Opening up bank or financial accounts WITHOUT using the proper form, which is an AMENDED IRS Form W-8 BEN. If you don’t use this form or a derivative and invoke the protection of the law for your status as a nonresident alien not engaged in a “trade or business”, the financial institution will falsely and prejudicially “presume” that you are both a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 and a “U.S. person” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30). To prevent this problem, see the following article:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

2. Filing the WRONG tax form, the IRS Form 1040, rather than the correct 1040NR form. This constitutes an election to become a “resident alien” engaged in a “trade or business”, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4)(B) and 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h). This can be prevented using the following form, for instance:

Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government, Form #15.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

3. Applying for or accepting a government benefit, privilege, or license, such as Social Security, Medicare, or TANF. This would require them to fill out an SSA form SS-5. This causes a waiver of sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) and makes you into a “resident alien” who is a “public officer” within the government granting the privilege or benefit. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4. Filling out a federal or state government form incorrectly by describing yourself as a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 rather than a “national but not a citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452. This can be prevented by attaching the following form:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. Improperly declaring your citizenship status to a federal court or not declaring it at all. If you describe yourself as a “citizen” or a “U.S. citizen” without further clarification, or if you don’t describe your citizenship at all in court pleadings, then federal courts will self-servingly “presume” that you are a statutory rather than constitutional citizen pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 who has a domicile on federal territory. This is also confirmed by the following authorities:

“The term ‘citizen’, as used in the Judiciary Act with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, is substantially synonymous with the term ‘domicile’. Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, 2 Cir., 250 F. 554, 557.”

To prevent this problem, use the following attachment to all the filings in the court:

Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002
http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm

6. Accepting employment with the federal government. This causes you to act in a representative capacity representing the federal corporation called the “United States” as defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), you assume the same domicile and citizenship of the party you represent. All corporations are “citizens” with a domicile where they were created, which is the District of Columbia in the case of the United States.

7. Failing to rebut false information returns filed against you reflecting nonzero earnings, such as any of the following forms:

7.1. Correcting Erroneous Information Returns, Form #04.001. See
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.2. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1042’s, Form #04.003. See:

7.4. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1099’s, Form #04.005. See:
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7.5. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form W-2’s, Form #04.006. See:
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

All of the above information return forms connect you with a “trade or business” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041(a). A “trade or business” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public office”. Engaging in a “trade or business” makes you into a “resident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). See older versions of 26 CFR §301.701-5 for proof at the link below:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

4-286

4.11.3.4 Who started the STATUTORY v. CONSTITUTIONAL citizen confusion SCAM

The deliberate scheme to confuse STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL “persons” was first enacted by none other than Franklin Delano Roosevelt immediately after he took office in 1933. The law he enacted to confiscate all gold was the Emergency Banking Relief Act, 48 Stat. 1 and that act ONLY applied to STATUTORY “persons” WITHIN the EXCLUSIVE jurisdiction of the national government and NOT to CONSTITUTIONAL “persons” or “citizens”. Of course, none of the thieves in government were honest enough to admit the differences in these two types of “persons” or “citizens” and they exploited this confusion to STEAL all the gold of Americans, and move it to the then new Fort Knox in seven railcars packed to the brim with gold.

Let’s go back to March 6-9, 1933 and find out what FDR did. Instead of formulating a plan demanding that the Federal Reserve honor their contractual obligations to the People he instead consulted the Federal Reserve as to how they believed the crisis should be solved! Remember the REAL emergency was that the bankers did not want to honor their contractual obligation to convert the People’s gold certificates to gold. The cats were consulted about what their punishment should be for eating mice. Of course, the cats ruled that they should be fed more mice! What did the private federal reserve conclude that their punishment should be for embezzling the People’s gold and dishonoring their fiduciary responsibilities and legitimate contractual obligations? The cats at the FED decided that they should be fed more mice and the President was instructed to pass a law demanding that the People return ALL of their gold to the bankers or be subjected to a stiff fine and jail time. Roosevelt’s Proclamations were taken word for word from the Resolution adopted by Federal Reserve.

Resolution Adopted by the Federal Reserve Board of New York.

“Whereas, in the opinion of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the continued and increasing withdrawal of currency and gold from the banks of the country has now created a national emergency…”

Remember, the controllers of the Federal Reserve were extremely well educated in law. History has shown them to be the brains behind all major Wars throughout the world. They create a conflict and then fund all sides. War is big business for banks. The fed understood how Congress can legislate for its Territorial subject “persons” or “citizens” and they were well aware of the War Powers. Following is the original October 6, 1917 combined with the Amendments of March 9, 1933:

Note: Bold faced and single underlines are added by the author for emphasis and understanding. Double underlines and strike through deletions are Amendments to the original “Trading With the Enemy Act” made in the Act of March 9, 1933.

SIXTY FIFTH CONGRESS Sess. I Chapter 106, Page 411, October 6, 1917, 48 Stat. 1

CHAP 106—An Act To define, regulate, and punish trading with the enemy, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that this Act shall be known as the “Trading With the Enemy Act.”

SEC. 2 That the word “enemy” as used herein shall be deemed to mean, for the purposes of such trading and of this Act—

(a) Any individual, partnership, or other party of individuals, or any nationality, resident within the territory (including that occupied by the military and naval forces of any nation with which the United States is at war or resident outside the United States and doing business within such territory and any corporation incorporated within any country other than the United States and doing business with such [enemy] territory, and any corporation incorporated within such territory with which the United States is at war, or incorporated within any country other than the United States.

(b) The government of any nation with which the United States is at war, or any political or municipal subdivision thereof.

(c) Such other individuals or body or class of individuals, as may be natives, citizens, or subjects of any nation with which the United States is at war, other than citizens of the United States, wherever resident or wherever doing business, as the President, if he shall find the safety of the United States or the successful prosecution of the war shall so require may, by proclamation, include within the term enemy”

][this section then continues to define an “ally of an enemy” in the same terms as the “enemy” and again states, “other than citizens of the United States.”]

Public Laws of the Seventy-Third Congress, Chapter 1, Title I, March 9, 1933 Sec. 2

Subdivision (b) of Section 5 of the Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. L. 411), as amended, is hereby amended to read a follows:

SEC. 5(b) “During time of war or during any other period of national emergency declared by the President, the President may through any agency that he may designate, or otherwise, investigate, regulate, or prohibit, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, by means of licenses or otherwise, any transactions of foreign exchange, export or earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency, transfers of credit in any form other than credit relating solely to transactions to be executed wholly within the United States, between or payments by banking institutions as defined by the President, and export, hoarding melting, or earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency by any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof; and transfers of evidences of indebtedness or of ownership of property between the United States and any foreign country, whether enemy, ally of enemy or otherwise, or between residents of one or and be the President may require any such person engaged in any such transaction referred to in this subdivision to furnish under oath, complete information relative thereto, including the production of any books of account, contracts, letters or other papers, in connection therewith in the custody or control of such person, either before or after such transaction is completed. Whoever willfully violates any of the provisions of this subdivision or of any license, order, rule or regulation issued thereunder, shall, upon conviction be fined not more than $10,000, or, if a natural person, may be imprisoned for not more than ten years, or both.”

Following the above act, socialist FDR then signed Executive Order 6102 ordering “citizens of the United States” to turn in their gold. Information on Executive Order 6102:

1. Wikipedia Article: Executive Order 6102
2. Text of Executive Order 6102

The only “individuals” or “persons” he could lawfully be referring to in Executive Order 6102 are STATUTORY citizens who are ALSO public officers in the government, because the ability to regulate exclusively private rights is repugnant to the Constitution. Furthermore, even in times of national emergency, it is illegal to violate such a constitutional limitations:

THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION IS NON-SUSPENDIBLE!

“No emergency justifies the violation of any of the provisions of the United States Constitution. An emergency, however, while it cannot create power, increase granted power, or remove or diminish the restrictions imposed upon the power granted or reserved, may allow the exercise of power already in existence, but not exercised except during an emergency.”

The circumstances in which the executive branch may exercise extraordinary powers under the Constitution are very narrow. The danger must be immediate and impending, or the necessity urgent for the public service, such as will not admit of delay, and where the action of the civil authority would be too late in providing the means which the occasion calls for. For example, there is no basis in the Constitution for the seizure of 4.11.4  Proof that Statutory citizens/residents are a franchise status that has nothing to do with your domicile

The following subsections will prove that statutory “U.S. citizen” or “citizen and national of the United States” status found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 CFR §1.1-1(c ) is a franchise status that has nothing to do with one’s domicile. If you would like to know more about the devious abuse of franchises to destroy your rights and break the chains of the Constitution that bind your public servants and protect your rights, see:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

4.11.4.1  Legal Dictionary

The legal dictionary confirms that statutory “citizen” status equates with being a “subject”, AND that said “subject” status is, indeed a voluntary franchise:

“Subject. Constitutional law. One that owes allegiance to a sovereign and is governed by his laws. The natives of Great Britain are subjects of the British government. Men in free governments are subjects as well as citizens; as citizens they enjoy rights and franchises; as subjects they are bound to obey the laws. The term is little used, in this sense, in countries enjoying a republican form of government. Swiss Nat. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 267 U.S. 42, 45 S.Ct. 213, 214, 69 L.Ed. 504.

Legislation. The matter of public or private concern for which law is enacted. Thing legislated about or matters on which legislature operates to accomplish a definite object or objects reasonably related one to the other. Crouch v. Benet, 198 S.C. 185, 17 S.E.2d. 320, 322. The matter or thing forming the groundwork of the act. McCombs v. Dallas County, Tex.Civ.App., 136 S.W.2d. 975,982.

The constitutions of several of the states require that every act of the legislature shall relate to but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title of the statute. But term “subject” within such constitutional provisions is to be given a broad and extensive meaning so as to allow legislature full scope to include in one act all matters having a logical or natural connection. Jaffee v. State, 76 Okl.Cr. 95, 134 P.2d. 1027, 1032.

Note from the above that:

1. Republican governments such as that in America DO NOT have “subjects”. You cannot be a “taxpayer” WITHOUT being a “subject”.

2. Being a statutory “citizen” is identified as a voluntary franchise:

“The term is little used, in this sense, in countries enjoying a republican form of government, Swiss Nat. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 267 U.S. 42, 45 S.Ct. 213, 214, 69 L.Ed. 504. “

Men in free governments are subjects as well as citizens; as citizens they enjoy rights and franchises.”

The above admissions are deliberate double speak to cloud the issues, but they do state some of the truth plainly. They are using double speak because they know they are abusing the law to destroy rights and enslave people who are supposed to be protecting through the abuse of “words of art” and oxymorons.

Here is some of the double speak designed to enforce the stealthful and unconstitutional GOVERNMENT PLUNDER of your rights and property using “words of art”:

1. They say “men in free governments”, implying that the GOVERNMENT is free but the “men” are NOT. No “subject” who is subservient to anyone can ever truly be “free”. In any economic system, there are only two roles you can fill: predator or prey, sovereign or subject.

2. They admit that governments that are “republican in form” cannot have “subjects”, but:
   2.1. They don’t mention America, in Constitution Article 4, Section 4, is republican in form.
   2.2. They deliberately don’t explain how you can “govern” people who are not “subjects” but sovereigns such as those in America.

In fact, if they dealt with the above two issues, their FRAUD would have to come to an IMMEDIATE end. It is a maxim of law that when TWO rights exist in the same person, it is as if there were TWO PERSONS. This means that the statutory “citizen” or “subject” they are REALLY talking about is a SEPARATE LEGAL PERSON who is, in fact, a public office in the U.S. government. 4 U.S.C. §72 says that office cannot lawfully exist in a constitutional state of the Union without permission from Congress and that has never expressly been given and CANNOT lawfully be given without violating the separation of powers doctrine which is the foundation of the U.S. Constitution:

“When duo juro concurrunt in und personâ, aequum est ac si essent in diversis.
When two rights [or a RIGHT and a PRIVILEGE] concur in one person, it is the same as if they were in two separate persons. 4 Co. 118.”
[Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856; SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

3. They use the phrase “rights and franchises”. These two things cannot rationally coexist in the same person. Rights are unalienable, meaning that they cannot lawfully be surrendered or bargained away. Franchises are alienable and can be taken away at the whim of the legislature. You cannot sign up for a franchise without alienating an unalienable right.

Therefore, no one who has rights can also at the same time have privileges, and the only people who can lawfully sign up for franchises are those who HAVE no rights because domiciled on federal territory not protected by the constitution and not within any state of the Union.

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.--”
[Declaration of Independence]

“Unalienable. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred.”

4. They don’t address how the national government can lawfully implement franchises within a Constitutional state, and therefore deliver the “rights and franchises” associated with being a statutory but not constitutional “citizen”. The U.S. Supreme Court has held more than once that Congress CANNOT lawfully establish or enforce ANY franchise within the borders of a constitutional state of the Union. The following case has NEVER been overruled.

“Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coating licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects; Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it;’” [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

And here is yet another example from Black’s Law Dictionary proving that statutory citizenship is a franchise:

FRANCHISE. A special privilege conferred by government on individual or corporation, and which does not belong to citizens of country generally of common right. Elliott v. City of Eugene, 135 Or. 108, 294 P. 358, 360. In England it is defined to be a royal privilege in the hands of a subject.

A “franchise,” as used by Blackstone in defining quo warranto, (3 Com. 262 [4th Am. Ed.] 322), had reference to a royal privilege or branch of the king’s prerogative subsisting in the hands of the subject, and must arise from the king’s grant, or be held by prescription, but today we understand a franchise to be some special privilege conferred by government on an individual, natural or artificial, which is not enjoyed by its citizens in

In this country a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature, which cannot be legally exercised without legislative grant. To be a corporation is a franchise. The various powers conferred on corporations are franchises. The execution of a policy of insurance by an insurance company [e.g. Social Insurance/Socialist Security], and the issuing a bank note by an incorporated bank [such as a Federal Reserve the property acquired by the exercise of the franchise. Bridgeport v. New York & N. H. R. Co., 36 Conn. 255, 4
Arn.Rep. 63. Nor involve interest in land acquired by grantee. Whitbeck v. Funk, 140 Or. 70, 12 P.2d. 1019, 1020. In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage, etc. Pierce v. Emery, 32 N.H. 484; State v. Black Diamond Co., 97 Ohio.St. 24, 119 N.E. 195, 199, L.R.A.918E, 352.

Elective Franchise. The right of suffrage: the right or privilege of voting in public elections.

Note the phrase “a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature”, meaning that those who exercise it are public officers. They also say “In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage” and by this:

1. They refer to franchises as having a “public nature”, meaning that those who exercise them are public officers.
2. They can only mean STATUTORY citizens and not CONSTITUTIONAL citizens.
3. They are referring to a “Congressionally created right” and therefore statutory privilege available only to those subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress because domiciled on federal territory.

It therefore appears to us that:

1. The only “subjects” within a republican form of government are public officers IN the government and not private human beings.
2. In order to create “subjects” within a republican form of government, you must create a statutory franchise called “U.S.
citizen” or “U.S. resident” that is a public office in the government, and fool people through the abuse of “words of art” into volunteering into the franchise.
3. A government that abuses its legislative authority to create franchises that alienate rights that are supposed to be unalienable is engaging in TREASON and violating the Constitution. Any government that makes a profitable business or franchise out of alienating rights that are supposed to be unalienable is not a de jure government, but a de facto government.

4.11.4.2 Criminalization of being a “citizen of the United States” in 18 U.S.C. §911

You may also wonder as we have how it is that Congress can make it a crime to falsely claim to be a statutory “U.S.

Whoever falsely and willfully represents himself to be a citizen of the United States[] shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.
The reason is that you cannot tax or regulate something until abusing it becomes harmful. A “license”, after all, is legally defined as permission from the state to do that which is otherwise illegal or harmful or both. And of course, you can only tax or regulate things that are harmful and licensed. Hence, they had to:

1. Create yet another franchise.
2. Attach a “status” to the franchise called “citizen of the United States”, where “United States” implies the GOVERNMENT and not any geographical place.
3. Criminalize the abuse of the “status” and the rights that attach to the status. See, for instance, 18 U.S.C. §911, which makes it a crime to impersonate a statutory “citizen of the United States”.
4. Make adopting the status entirely discretionary on the part of those participating. Hence, invoking the “status” and the “benefits” and “privileges” associated with the status constitutes constructive consent to abide by all the statutes that regulate the status.

5. Impose a tax or fine or “licensing fee” for those adopting or invoking the status. That tax, in fact, is the federal income tax codified in I.R.C. Subtitle A.

Every type of franchise works and is implemented exactly the same way, and the statutory “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” franchise is no different. This section will prove that being a “citizen of the United States” under the I.R.C. is, in fact, a franchise, that the franchise began in 1924 by judicial pronouncement, and that because the status is a franchise and all franchises are voluntary, you don’t have to participate, accept the “benefits”, or pay for the costs of the franchise if you don’t consent.

As you will learn in the next section, one becomes a “citizen” in a statutory sense by being born or naturalized in a country and exercising their First Amendment right of political association by voluntarily choosing a national and a municipal domicile in that country. How can Congress criminalize the exercise of the First Amendment right to politically and legally associate with a “state” and thereby become a citizen? After all, the courts have routinely held that Congress cannot criminalize the exercise of a right protected by the Constitution.

"It is an unconstitutional deprivation of due process for the government to penalize a person merely because he has exercised a protected statutory or constitutional right. United States v. Goodwin, 457 U.S. 368, 372, 102 S.Ct. 2485, 2488, 73 L.Ed.2d. 74 (1982)."

[People of Territory of Guam v. Fegurgur, 800 F.2d. 1470 (9th Cir. 1986)]

Even the U.S. Code recognizes the protected First Amendment right to not associate during the passport application process. Being a statutory and not constitutional “citizen” is an example of type of membership, because domicile is civil membership in a territorial community usually called a county, and you cannot be a “citizen” without a domicile:

"A passport may not be denied issuance, revoked, restricted, or otherwise limited because of any speech, activity, belief, affiliation, or membership, within or outside the United States, which, if held or conducted within the United States, would be protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

The answer to how Congress can criminalize the exercise of a First Amendment protected right of political association that is the foundation of becoming a “citizen” therefore lies in the fact that the statutory “U.S. citizen” mentioned in 18 U.S.C. §911 is not a constitutional citizen protected by the Constitution, but rather is:

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

1. Not a human being or a private person but a statutory creation of Congress. The ability to regulate private conduct, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, is repugnant to the U.S. Constitution and therefore Congress can ONLY regulate public conduct and the public offices and franchises that it creates.

“The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress’ §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned.”

2. A statutory franchise and a federal corporation created on federal territory and domiciled there. Notice the key language “Whenever the public and private acts of the government seem to comingle [in this case, through the offering and enforcement of PRIVATE franchises to the public at large such as income taxes], a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place...” What Congress did was perform this substitution in the franchise agreement itself (the I.R.C.) BEFORE the controversy ever even reached the court such that this judicial doctrine could be COVERTLY applied! They want to keep their secret weapon secret.

See also Clearfield Trust Co. v. United States, 318 U.S. 363, 369 (1943) (“The United States does business on business terms”) (quoting United States v. National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, 270 U.S. 527, 534 (1926)); Perry v. United States, supra at 352 (1935) (“When the United States, with constitutional authority, makes contracts [or franchises], it has rights and incurs responsibilities similar to those of individuals who are parties to such instruments. There is no difference... except that the United States cannot be sued without its consent”) (citation omitted); United States v. Bostwick, 94 U.S. 53, 66 (1877) (“The United States, when they contract with their citizens, are controlled by the same laws that govern the citizen in that behalf”); Cooke v. United States, 91 U.S. 389, 389 (1875) (explaining that when the United States “comes down from its position of sovereignty, and enters the domain of commerce, it submits itself to the same laws that govern individuals there”).

See Jones, 1 Cl.Ct. at 85 (“Whenever the public and private acts of the government seem to comingle, a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place, and then the question be determined whether the action will lie against the supposed defendant”); O’Neill v. United States, 231 Cl.Ct. 825, 826 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, “[w]here the contracts exclusively between private parties, the party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing action”). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party.

[United States v. Winstar Corp. 518 U.S. 839 (1996)]

3. Property of the U.S. government. All franchises and statuses incurred under franchises are property of the government grantor. The government has always had the right to criminalize abuses of its property.

4. A public office in the government like all other franchisees. The sovereign acts doctrine could be COVERTLY applied! They want to keep their secret weapon secret.

Ordinarily, and especially in the case of states of the Union, domicile within that state by the state “citizen” is the determining factor as to whether an income tax is owed to the state by that citizen:

“domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a “domicile” therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an essential basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”
[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

We also establish the connection between domicile and tax liability in the following article.

*Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm*

4.11.4.3 U.S. Supreme Court: Murphy v. Ramsey

Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the political rights of those domiciled on federal territory and therefore statutory “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. residents” as follows:

The counsel for the appellants in argument seem to question the constitutional power of Congress to pass the Act of March 22, 1882, so far as it abridges the rights of electors in the territory under previous laws. But that question is, we think, no longer open to discussion. It has passed beyond the stage of controversy into final judgment. The people of the United States, as sovereign owners of the national territories, have supreme power over them and their inhabitants. In the exercise of this sovereign dominion, they are represented by the government of the United States, to whom all the powers of government over that subject have been delegated, subject only to such restrictions as are expressed in the Constitution or are necessarily implied in its terms or in the purposes and objects of the power itself, for it may well be admitted in respect to this, as to every power of society over its members, that it is not absolute and unlimited. But in ordaining government for the territories and the people who inhabit them, all the discretion which belongs to legislative power is vested in Congress, and that extends beyond all controversy to determining by law, from time to time, the form of the local government in a particular territory and the qualification of those who shall administer it. It rests with Congress to say whether in a given case any of the people resident in the territory shall participate in the election of its officers or the making of its laws, and it may therefore take from them any right of suffrage it may previously have conferred, or at any time modify or abridge it, as it may seem expedient. The right of local self-government, as known to our system as a constitutional franchise, belongs under the Constitution to the states and to the people thereof, by whom that Constitution was ordained, and to whom, by its terms, all power not conferred by it upon the government of the United States, was expressly reserved. The personal and civil rights of the inhabitants of the territories are secured to them, as to other citizens, by the principles of constitutional liberty, which restrain all the agencies of government, state and national; their political rights are franchises which they hold as privileges in the legislative discretion of the Congress of the United States. This doctrine was fully and forcibly declared by THE CHIEF JUSTICE, delivering the opinion of the Court in National Bank v. County of Yankton, 101 U.S. 129. See also American Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 511;
[Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U.S. 15 (1885)]

So in other words, those domiciled on federal territory are exercising “privileges” and franchises. The above case, however, does not refer and cannot refer to those domiciled within states of the Union.

4.11.4.4 U.S. Supreme Court: Cook v. Tait

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that the statutory “citizen of the United States” mentioned in the Internal Revenue
Code at 26 U.S.C. §911 and at 26 CFR §1.1-1(c ) is not associated with either domicile OR with constitutional citizenship (nationality) of the human being who is the “taxpayer” in the following case. The party they mentioned, Cook, was domiciled within Mexico at the time, which meant he was NOT a statutory “citizen of the United States” under the Internal Revenue Code but rather a “nonresident alien”. However, because he CLAIMED to be a statutory “citizen of the United States” and the Supreme Court colluded with that FRAUD, they treated him as one ANYWAY.

We may make further exposition of the national power as the case depends upon it. It was illustrated at once in United States v. Bennett by a contrast with the power of a state. It was pointed out that there were limitations upon the latter that were not on the national power. The taxing power of a state, it was decided, encountered at its borders the taxing power of other states and was limited by them. There was no such limitation, it was pointed out, upon the national power, and that the limitation upon the states affords, it was said, no ground for constructing a barrier around the United States, ‘shutting that government off from the exertion of powers which inherently belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty.’

“The contention was rejected that a citizen’s property without the limits of the United States derives no benefit from the United States. The contention, it was said, came from the confusion of thought in ‘mistaking the scope and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation and its relations to its citizens and their relation to it.’ And that power in its scope and extent, it was decided, is based on the presumption that government by its very nature benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and that opposition to it holds on to citizenship while it ‘belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power required to make citizenship completely beneficial.’ In other words, the principle was declared that the government, by its very nature, benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and therefore has the power to make the benefit complete. Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax.”

[Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

How can they tax someone without a domicile in the statutory United States and with no earnings from the statutory United States in the case of Cook, you might ask? Well, the REAL “taxpayer” is a public office in the U.S. government. That office REPRESENTS the United States federal corporation. All corporations are “citizens” of the place of their incorporation, and therefore under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), the effective domicile of the “taxpayer” is the District of Columbia. All taxes are a civil liability that are implemented with civil law. The only way they could have reached extraterritorially with civil law to tax Cook without him having a domicile or residence anywhere in the statutory “United States” was through a private law franchise contract in which he was a public officer. It is a maxim of law that debt and contract know no place, meaning that they can be enforced anywhere.

Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.

Locus contractus regit actum.

The place of the contract [franchise agreement, in this case] governs the act.

[Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856; SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm]

The feds have jurisdiction over their own public officers wherever they are but the EFFECTIVE civil domicile of all such offices and officers is the District of Columbia pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 17(b). Hence, the ONLY thing such a statutory “citizen of the United States” could be within the I.R.C. is a statutory creation of Congress that is actually a public office which is domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States” in order for the ruling in Cook to be constitutional or even lawful. AND, according to the Cook case, having that status is a discretionary choice that has NOTHING to do with your circumstances, because Cook was NOT a statutory “citizen of the United States” as someone not domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States”. Instead, he was a nonresident alien but the court allowed him to accept the voluntary “benefit” of the statutory status and hence, it had nothing to do with his circumstances, but rather his CHOICE to nominate a “protector” and join a franchise. Simply INVOKING the status of being a statutory “citizen of the United States” on a government form is the only magic word needed to give one’s consent to become a “taxpayer” in that case. It is what the court called a “benefit”, and all “benefits” are voluntary and the product of a franchise contract or agreement. It was a quasi-contract as all taxes are, because the consent was implied rather than explicit, and it manifested itself by using property of the government, which in this case was the STATUS he claimed.

“Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to enforce it outside the state where rendered, see Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265, 292, et seq.

8 S.Ct. 1370, compare Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U.S. 230, 28 S.Ct. 64; still the obligation to pay taxes is not penal. It is a statutory liability, quasi contractual in nature, enforceable, if there is no exclusive

You might reasonably ask of the Cook case, as we have, the following question:

“HOW did the government create the public office that they could tax and which Cook apparently occupied as a franchisee?”

Well, apparently the “citizen of the United States” status he claimed is a franchise and an office in the U.S. government that carries with it the “public right” to make certain demands upon those who claim this status. Hence, it represents a “property interest” in the services of the United States federal corporation. In law, all rights are property, anything that conveys rights is property, contracts convey rights and are therefore property, and all franchises are contracts and therefore property. A “public officer” is legally defined as someone in charge of the property of the public, and the property Cook was in possession of was the public rights that attach to the status of being a statutory “citizen of the United States”.

"Public office. The right, authority, and duty created and conferred by law, by which for a given period, either fixed by law or ending at the pleasure of the creating power, an individual is invested with some portion of the sovereign functions of government for the benefit of the public. Walker v. Rich, 79 Cal.App. 139, 249 P. 56, 58. An agency for the state, the duties of which involve in their performance the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, either great or small. Yezelli v. Goff, C.C.A., 12 F.2d. 396, 403, 56 A.L.R. 1239; Lacey v. State, 13 Ala.App. 212, 68 So. 706, 710; Curtin v. State, 61 Cal.App. 377, 214 P. 1030, 1035; Sheldrake v. City of Elkhart, 75 Ind.App. 493, 129 N.E. 878, State ex rel. Colorado River Commission v. Frohmiller, 46 Ariz. 413, 52 P.2d. 483, 486. Where, by virtue of law, a person is clothed, not as an incidental or transient authority, but for such time as de- notes duration and continuance, with independent power to control the property of the public, or with public functions to be exercised in the supposed interest of the people, the service to be compensated by a stated yearly salary, and the occupant having a designation or title, the position so created is a public office. State v. Brennan, 49 Ohio.St. 33, 29 N.E. 593, [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1235]

For Cook, the statutory status of being a “citizen of the United States” was the “res” that “identified” him within the jurisdiction of the federal courts, and hence made him a “res-ident” or “resident” subject to the tax with standing to sue in a territorial franchise court, which is what all U.S. District Courts are. In effect, he waived sovereign immunity and became a statutory “resident alien” by invoking the services of the federal courts, and as such, he had to pay for their services by paying the tax. Otherwise, he would have had no standing to sue in the first place because he would be a “stateless person” and they would have had to dismiss either his case, or him as a party to it as the U.S. Supreme Court correctly did in Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larraín, 490 U.S. 826 (1989) in the case of an American National domiciled in Venezuela and therefore OUTSIDE the statutory but not constitutional “United States”.

"At oral argument before a panel of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Easterbrook inquired as to the statutory basis for diversity jurisdiction, an issue which had not been previously raised either by counsel or by the District Court Judge. In its complaint, Newman-Green had invoked 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(3), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of one State sues both aliens and citizens of a State (or States) different from the plaintiff's. In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cense, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a [CONSTITUTIONAL] United States citizen, has no domicile in any State [FEDERAL STATE], meaning a federal TERRITORY per 28 U.S.C. §1332(a). He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3), Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [1490 U.S. 829]

When a plaintiff sues more than one defendant in a diversity action, the plaintiff must meet the requirements of the diversity statute for each defendant or face dismissal. Strawbridge v. Curtis, 3 Cranch 267 (1806),[1] Here, Bettison's "stateless" status destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(3), and his United States citizenship destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). Instead of dismissing the case, however, the Court of Appeals panel granted Newman-Green's motion, which it had invited, to amend the complaint to drop Bettison as a party, thereby producing complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2), 832 F.2d. 417 (1987). The panel, in an opinion by Judge Easterbrook, relied both on 28 U.S.C. §1653 and on Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of

Civil Procedure as sources of its authority to grant this motion. The panel noted that, because the guarantors are jointly and severally liable. Bettison is not an indispensable party, and dismissing him would not prejudice the remaining guarantors. 832 F.2d. at 420, citing Fed.Rule Civ.Proc. 19(b). The panel then proceeded to the merits of the case, ruling in Newman-Green’s favor in large part, but remaining to allow the District Court to quantify damages and to resolve certain minor issues.[2]

Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.018, Section 6
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Here is another HUGE clue about what they think a “U.S. citizen” really is in federal statutes. Look at the definition below, and then consider that you CAN’T own a human being as property. That’s called slavery:

TITLE 46 > Subtitle V > Part A > CHAPTER 505 > § 50501
§ 50501. Entities deemed citizens of the United States

(a) In General.—

In this subtitle, a corporation, partnership, or association is deemed to be a citizen of the United States only if the controlling interest is owned by citizens of the United States. However, if the corporation, partnership, or association is operating a vessel in the coastwise trade, at least 75 percent of the interest must be owned by citizens of the United States.

Now look at what the U.S. Supreme Court said about “ownership” of human beings. You can’t “own” a human being as chattel. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits that. Therefore, the statutory “U.S. citizen” they are talking about above is an instrumentality and public office within the United States. They can only tax, regulate, and legislate for PUBLIC objects and public offices of the United States under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2. The ability to regulate PRIVATE conduct of human beings has repeatedly been held by the U.S. Supreme Court to be “repugnant to the constitution” and beyond the jurisdiction of Congress.

“It [the contract] is, in substance and effect, a contract for servitude, with no limitation but that of time; leaving the master to determine what the service should be, and the place where and the person to whom it should be rendered. Such a contract, it is scarcely necessary to say, is against the policy of our institutions and laws. If such a sale of service could be lawfully made for five years, it might, from the same reasons, for ten, and so for the term of one’s life. The door would thus be opened for a species of servitude inconsistent with the first and fundamental article of our declaration of rights, which, proprio vigore, not only abolished every vestige of slavery then existing in the commonwealth, but rendered every form of it thereafter legally impossible. That article has always been regarded, not simply as the declaration of an abstract principle, but as having the active force and conclusive authority of law.” Observing that one who voluntarily subjected himself to the laws of the state must find in them the rule of restraint as well as the rule of action, the court proceeded: ‘Under this contract the plaintiff had no claim for the labor of the servant for the term of five years, or for any term whatever. She was under no legal obligation to remain in his service. There was no time during which her service was due to the plaintiff, and during which she was kept from such service by the acts of the defendants.’

Under the contract of service it was at the volition of the master to entail service upon these appellants for an indefinite period. So far as the record discloses, it was an accident that the vessel came back to San Francisco when it did. By the shipping articles, the appellants could not quit the vessel until it returned to a port of the 296 United States, and such return depended absolutely upon the will of the master. He had only to land at foreign ports, and keep the vessel away from the United States, in order to prevent the appellants from leaving his service.

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The supreme law of the land now declares that involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, of which the party shall have been duly convicted, shall not exist anywhere within the United States.

[Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 17 S.Ct. 326 (U.S. 1897)]

Federal courts also frequently use the phrase “privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States”. Below is an example:

“...The privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States do not necessarily include all the rights protected by the first eight amendments to the Federal Constitution against the powers of the Federal Government.

The trial of a person accused as a criminal by a jury of only eight persons instead of twelve, and his subsequent imprisonment after conviction do not abridge his privileges and immunities under the Constitution as a citizen of the United States and do not deprive him of his liberty without due process of law."

[Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U.S. 581 (1899)]

Note that the “citizen of the United States” described above is a statutory rather than constitutional citizen, which is why the court admits that the rights of such a person are inferior to those possessed by a “citizen” within the meaning of the United States Constitution. A constitutional but not statutory citizen is, in fact, NOT “privileged” in any way and none of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution can truthfully be called “privileges” without violating the law. It is a tort and a violation of due process, in fact, to convert rights protected by the Constitution and the common law into “privileges” or franchises or “public rights” under statutory law without at least your consent, which anyone in their right mind should NEVER give.

"...It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583, 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence [by converting them into statutory "privileges"/franchises]."

[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

It is furthermore proven in the following memorandum of law that civil statutory law pertains almost exclusively to government officers and employers and cannot and does not pertain to human beings or private persons not engaged in federal franchises/privileges:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Consequently, if a court refers to “privileges and immunities” in relation to you, chances are they are presuming, usually FALSELY, that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” and NOT a constitutional citizen. If you want to prevent them from making such false presumptions, we recommend attaching the following forms at least to your initial complaint and/or response in any action in court:

4.11.4.5 Summary

It therefore appears to us that a statutory “citizen” or “resident” is really just a public office in the U.S. government. That office is a franchisee with an effective domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union. The corrupt courts are unlawfully allowing the creation of this public office, legal “person”, “res”, and franchisee using your consent. They have thus made a profitable business out of alienating rights that are supposed to be unalienable, in violation of the legislative intent of the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution. The money changers., who are priests of the civil religion of socialism called “judges”, have taken over the civic temple called government and made it into a WHOREHOUSE for their own lucrative PERSONAL gain:
"But those who desire to be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and harmful lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition.  For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil, for which some have strayed from the faith in their greediness, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." [1 Tim. 6: 9-10, Bible, NKJV]

"franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant [privilege], with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time. In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was abolished. - Also termed courts of the franchise.

Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants ... But many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward I." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56-57 (2d ed. 1949).

Notice the above language: “private courts held by feudal lords”. Judges who enforce their own franchises within the courtroom by imputing a franchise status against those protected by the Constitution who are not lawfully allowed to alienate their rights or give them away are acting in a private capacity to benefit themselves personally. That private capacity is associated with a de facto government in which greed is the only unifying factor. Contrast this with love for our neighbor, which is the foundation of a de jure government. When judges act in such a private, de facto capacity, the following results:

1. The judge is the “feudal lord” and you become his/her personal serf.
2. Rights become privileges, and the transformation usually occurs at the point of a gun held by a corrupt officer of the government intent on enlarging his/her pay check or retirement check. And he/she is a CRIMINAL for proceeding with such a financial conflict of interest:

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 11 > § 208
§ 208. Acts affecting a personal financial interest

(a) Except as permitted by subsection (b) hereof, whoever, being an officer or employee of the executive branch of the United States Government, or of any independent agency of the United States, a Federal Reserve bank director, officer, or employee, or an officer or employee of the District of Columbia, including a special Government employee, participates personally and substantially as a Government officer or employee, through decision, approval, disapproval, recommendation, the rendering of advice, investigation, or otherwise, in a judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest, or other particular matter in which, to his knowledge, he, his spouse, minor child, general partner, organization in which he is serving as officer, director, trustee, general partner or employee, or any person or organization with whom he is negotiating or has any arrangement concerning prospective employment, has a financial or personal/privat

Shall be subject to the penalties set forth in section 216 of this title.

3. Equality and equal protection are replaced with the following consequences under a franchise:

3.1. Privilege.
3.2. Partiality.
3.3. Bribes.
3.4. Servitude and slavery.

4. The franchise statutes are the “bible” of a pagan state-sponsored religion. The bible isn’t “law” for non-believers, and franchise statutes aren’t “law” for those who are not consensually occupying a public office in the government as a franchisee called a “citizen”, “resident”, “taxpayer”, “driver”, etc. See:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

5. You join the religion by “worshipping”, and therefore obeying what are actually voluntary franchises. The essence of “worship”, in fact, is obedience to the dictates of a superior being. Franchises make your public servants into superior beings and replace a republic with a dulocracy. “Worship” and obedience becomes legal evidence of consent to the franchise.
“And the Lord said to Samuel, ’Hear the voice of the people in all that they say to you; for they have rejected me—me [God], that I should not reign over them.’ According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even to this day— with which they have forsaken Me and served as [PUBLIC OFFICERS/PARISHIONERS] other gods [Rulers or Kings, in this case]—so they are doing to you also [government becoming idolatry].”’

[1 Sam 8:4-20, Bible, NKJV]

6. “Presumption” serves as a substitute for religious “faith” and is employed to create an unequal relationship between you and your public servants. It turns the citizen/public servant relationship with the employer/employee relationship, where you are the employee of your public servant. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017

http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

7. “Taxes” serve as a substitute for “tithes” to the state-sponsored church of socialism that worships civil rulers, men and creations of men instead of the true and living God.

8. The judge’s bench becomes:

8.1. An altar for human sacrifices, where YOU and your property are the sacrifice. All pagan religions are based on sacrifice of one kind or another.

8.2. What the Bible calls a “throne of iniquity”:

“Shall the throne of iniquity, which devises evil by law, have fellowship with You? They gather together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood. But the Lord has been my defense, and my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness: the Lord our God shall cut them off.”

[Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV]

9. All property belongs to this pagan god and you are just a custodian over it as a public officer. You have EQUITABLE title but not LEGAL title to the property you FALSELY BELIEVE belongs to you. The Bible franchise works the same way, because the Bible says the Heavens and the Earth belong the LORD and NOT to believers. Believers are “trustees” over God’s property under the Bible trust indenture. Believers are the “trustees”:

“Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong to the LORD your God, also the earth with all that is in it.”

[Deut. 10:15, Bible, NKJV]

“The ultimate ownership of all property is in the State; individual so-called “ownership” is only by virtue of Government, i.e., law, amounting to mere user; and use must be in accordance with law and subordinate to the necessities of the State.”

[Senate Document #43, Senate Resolution No. 62, p. 9, paragraph 2, 1933
SOURCE: http://www.famguardian.org/Subjects/MoneyBanking/History/SenateDoc43.pdf]

10. The court building is a “church” where you “worship”, meaning obey, the pagan idol of government.

“Now, Mr. Speaker, this Capitol is the civic temple of the people, and we are here by direction of the people to reduce the tariff tax and enact a law in the interest of all the people. This was the expressed will of the people at the polls, and you promised to carry out that will, but you have not kept faith with the American people.”

[44 Cong.Rec. 4420, July 12, 1909; Congressman Heflin talking about the enactment of the Sixteenth Amendment]

11. The licensed attorneys are the “deacons” of the state sponsored civil religion who conduct the “worship services” directed at the judge at his satanic altar/bench. They are even ordained by the “chief priests” of the state supreme court, who are the chief priests of the civil religion.

12. Pleadings are “prayers” to this pagan deity. Even the U.S. Supreme Court still calls pleadings “prayers”, and this is no accident.

13. Like everything that SATAN does, the design of this state-sponsored satanic church of socialism that worships men instead of God is a cheap Imitation of God’s design for de jure government found throughout the Holy Bible.

NOW do you understand why in Britain, judges are called “your worship”? Because they are like gods:

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

4.11.5 “Citizens” v. “Nationals”

Within federal law, two words are used to describe citizenship: “citizen” and “national”. There is a world of difference between these two terms and it is extremely important to understand the distinctions before we proceed further. A “citizen” is someone who was born in and maintains a domicile within a political jurisdiction, who owes allegiance to the “sovereign” within that jurisdiction, and who participates in the functions of government by voting and serving on jury duty.

Citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.

“Citizens” are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have submitted themselves to the dominion of a government by giving up their rights for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

Under diversity statute [28 U.S.C. §1332], which mirrors U.S. Const, Article III’s diversity clause, a person is a “citizen of a state” if he or she is a citizen of the United States and a domiciliary of a state of the United States. Gibbons v. Udaras na Gaeltachtta, D.C.N.Y., 549 F.Supp. 1094, 1116. “

The key thing to notice is that those who are “citizens” within a legislative jurisdiction are also subject to all laws within that legislative jurisdiction. Note the phrase above:
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

"Citizens" are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have submitted themselves to the dominion of a government (and all its laws) for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

The only people who are "subject to" federal law, and therefore "citizens" under federal law, are those people who maintain a domicile where the federal government has exclusive legislative jurisdiction, which exists only within the federal zone, under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution and 40 U.S.C. §§3111 and 3112. Within the Internal Revenue Code, people born in the federal zone or domiciled there are described as being "subject to its jurisdiction" rather than "subject to the jurisdiction":

'(c) Who is a citizen.

Every person born or naturalized in the [federal] United States and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen.

For other rules governing the acquisition of citizenship, see chapters 1 and 2 of title III of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1401-1459).

[26 CFR §1.1-1(c)]

This area includes the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions of the United States, and the federal areas within states, which are all "foreign" with respect to states of the Union for the purposes of federal legislative jurisdiction.

If you were born in a state of the Union and are domiciled there, you are not subject to federal legislative jurisdiction unless the land you occupy was ceded by the state to the federal government. Therefore, you are not and cannot be a "citizen" under federal law. If you aren’t a "citizen", then you also can’t be claiming your children as "citizens" on IRS returns either!

A “national”, on the other hand, is simply someone who claims allegiance to the political body formed within the geographical boundaries and territory that define a “state”.

8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

(a) (21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

A “state” is then defined as follows:

"State. A people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common-law habits and custom into one body politic exercising, through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty and control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of entering into international relations with other communities of the globe. United States v. Kusche. D.C.Cal., 56 F.Supp. 201 207, 208. The organization of social life which exercises sovereign power in behalf of the people. Delany v. Moralitis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F.2d. 129, 130. In its largest sense, a “state” is a body politic or a society of men. Beagle v. Motor Vehicle Acc. Indemnification Corp., 44 Misc.2d. 636, 254 N.Y.S.2d. 763, 765. A body of people occupying a definite territory and politically organized under one government. State ex re. Maisano v. Mitchell, 155 Conn. 256, 231 A.2d. 539, 542. A territorial unit with a distinct general body of law. Restatement, Second, Conflicts, §3. Term may refer either to body politic of a nation (e.g. United States) or to an individual government unit of such nation (e.g. California).

The people of a state, in their collective capacity, considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; the public; as in the title of a cause, “The State vs. A.B.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1407]

So when we claim “allegiance” as a “national”, we are claiming allegiance to a “state”, which is the collection of all people within the geographical boundaries of a political jurisdiction, who are the sovereigns within our system of government.

Note that as a “national”, we are NOT claiming allegiance to the government or anyone serving us within the government in their official capacity as “public servants”. As a “national”, we are instead claiming allegiance to the People within the legislative jurisdiction of the geographic region. This is because in America, the People are the Sovereigns, and not the government who serves them. All sovereignty and authority emanates from We the People as individuals:

The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...” [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]
"From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens."
[Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dal. (U.S.) 419, 1 L ed. 454, 457, 471, 472(1794)]

The supreme Court of the United States described and compared the differences between “citizenship” and “allegiance” very succinctly in the case of Talbot v. Janson, 3 U.S. 133 (1795):

"Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things. Alleviance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure. Citizenship is the charter of equality; allegiance is a badge of inferiority. Citizenship is constitutional; allegiance is personal. Citizenship is freedom; allegiance is servitude. Citizenship is communicable; allegiance is repulsive. Citizenship may be relinquished; allegiance is perpetual. With such essential differences, the doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship; which it can neither serve to control, nor to elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most firmly established, the law most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the invincible power of truth, and the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the inherent rights of man… The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign..."

[Talbot v. Janson, 3 U.S. 133 (1795); From the syllabus but not the opinion; SOURCE: http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/search/display.html?terms=choice%20or%20conflict%20and%20law&amp;url=/supc/html/historics/USSC_CR_0003_0133_ZS.html]

A “national” is not subject to the exclusive legislative jurisdiction and general sovereignty of the political body, but indirectly is protected by it and may claim its protection. For instance, when we travel overseas, we are known in foreign countries as “American Nationals” or:

1. “nationals of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), if we were born in a federal possession, such as American Samoa or Swains Island.
2. “nationals”, or “state nationals”, or “nationals of the United States of America” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) if we were born in and are domiciled in a state of the Union.
3. “nationals but not citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1452 if we fit either of the previous two statuses.

Here is the definition of a “national of the United States” that demonstrates this, and note paragraph (a)(22)(B):

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101. Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a) (22) The term "national of the United States" means

(A) a citizen of the United States, or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent [but not necessarily exclusive] allegiance to the United States.

Consequently, the only time a “national” can also be described as a “citizen” is when he is domiciled within the territorial and legislative jurisdiction of the political body to which he claims allegiance. Being a “national” is therefore an attribute and a prerequisite of being a “citizen”, and the term can be used to describe “citizens”, as indicated above in paragraph (A). For instance, 8 U.S.C. §1401 describes the citizenship of those born within or residing within federal jurisdiction, and note that these people are identified as both “citizens” and “nationals”.

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1401. Sec. 1401. - Nationals and citizens of United States at birth

The following shall be nationals and citizens of the United States at birth:
When “citizens” move their domicile outside of the territorial limits of the “state” to which they are a member and cease to participate directly in the political functions of that “state”, however, they become “nationals” but not “citizens” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1452. This is confirmed by the definition of “citizen of the United States” found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment:

U.S. Constitution: Fourteenth Amendment

Section. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.

As you will learn later, the Supreme Court said in the case of U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898) that the term “subject to the jurisdiction” means “subject to the political jurisdiction”, which is very different from “subject to the legislative jurisdiction”. Note from the above that being a “citizen” has two prerequisites: “born within the [ territorial] jurisdiction” and “subject to the [ political but not legislative] jurisdiction”. The other noteworthy point to be made here is that the term "citizen" as used above is not used in the context of federal statutes or federal law, and therefore does not imply one is a “citizen” under federal law. The Constitution is what grants the authority to the federal government to write federal statutes, but it is not a “federal statute” or “federal law”. The term "citizen", in the context of the Constitution, simply refers to the political community created by that Constitution, which in this case is the federation of united states called the "United States", and not the United States government itself.

When you move your domicile outside its territorial jurisdiction of the political body and do not participate in its political functions as a jurist or a voter, then you are no longer "subject to the [political] jurisdiction". Likewise, because you are outside territorial limits of the political body, you are also not subject in any degree to its legislative jurisdiction either:

"Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind properties out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.' Story on Conflict of Laws §23."

The word “territory” above needs further illumination. States of the Union are NOT considered “territories” or “territory” under federal law. This is confirmed by the Corpus Juris Secundum legal encyclopedia, which says on this subject the following:

Volume 86, Corpus Juris Secundum Legal Encyclopedia

Territories
§1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

The word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under act of congress.”

While the term ‘territory’ is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions of a territory, and ‘territories of the’ United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which the United States exercises dominion, the word ‘territory,’ when used to designate a political organization, has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and the term ‘territory’ or ‘territories’ does not necessarily include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and exercise government functions under acts of congress. The term ‘territories’ has been defined to be political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term ‘territory’ is not a description of a definite area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question whether a particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government with which it is, more or less temporarily, invested.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

4-304

‘Territories’ or ‘territory’ as including ‘state’ or ‘states.’ While the term ‘territories of the United States’ may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution and in ordinary acts of congress ‘territory’ does not include a foreign state.

As used in this title, the term ‘territories’ generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and not within the boundaries of any of the several states.

[86 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Territories]

Notice that the above legal encyclopedia definition of “territory” refers to states of the Union as “foreign states”! A “foreign state” is a state that is not subject to the legislative jurisdiction or laws of the state in question, which in this case is the federal government. The Supreme Court also agreed with the conclusions within this section so far, in the cite next. Notice how they use the terms “citizenship” and “nationality” or “national” interchangeably, because as you will learn later in section 4.11.14, they are equivalent:

“The term 'dual nationality' needs exact appreciation. It refers to the fact that two States make equal claim to the allegiance of an individual at the same time. Thus, one State may claim his allegiance because of his birth within its territory, and the other because at the time of his birth in foreign territory his parents were its nationals. The laws of the United States purport to clothe persons with American citizenship by virtue of both principles.'

‘And after referring to the Fourteenth Amendment, U.S.C.A.Const., and the Act of February 10, 1855, R.S. 1893, 8 U.S.C.A. 6, the instructions continued: [307 U.S. 325, 345] ‘It thus becomes important to note how far these differing claims of American nationality are fairly operative with respect to persons living abroad [or in states of the Union, which are ALSO foreign with respect to federal jurisdiction], whether they were born abroad or were born in the United States of alien parents and taken during minority to reside in the territory of States to which the parents owed allegiance. It is logical that, while the child remains or resides in territory of the foreign State [a state of the Union, in this case] claiming him as a national, the United States should respect its claim to allegiance. The important point to observe is that the doctrine of dual allegiance ceases, in American contemplation, to be fully applicable after the child has reached adult years. Thereafter two States may in fact claim him as a national. Those claims are not, however, regarded as of equal merit, because one of the States may then justly assert that his relationship to itself as a national is, by reason of circumstances that have arisen, inconsistent with, and reasonably superior to, any claim of allegiance asserted by any other State. Ordinarily the State in which the individual retains his residence after attaining his majority has the superior claim. The statutory law of the United States affords some guidance but not all that could be desired, because it fails to announce the circumstances when the child who resides abroad within the territory of a State reasonably claiming his allegiance forfeits completely the right to perfect his inchoate right to retain American citizenship.’ [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

So when a person is domiciled outside the exclusive legislative jurisdiction or “general sovereignty” of a political body and does not participate directly in its political functions, then they are “nationals” but not “citizens” of that political body. This is the condition of people born in and domiciled within states of the Union in regards to their federal citizenship:

1. State citizens maintain a domicile that is outside the territorial and exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government. They are not subject to the police powers of the federal government.
2. State citizens do not participate directly in the political functions of the federal government.
   2.1. They are not allowed to serve as jurists in federal court, because they don’t reside in a federal area within their state. They can only serve as jurists in state courts. Federal district courts routinely violate this limitation by not ensuring that the people who serve on federal courts come from federal areas. If they observed the law on this matter, they wouldn’t have anyone left to serve on federal petit or grand juries! Therefore, they illegally use state DMV records to locate jurists and obfuscate the jury summons forms by asking if people are “U.S. citizens” without ever defining what it means!
   2.2. They do not participate directly in federal elections. There are no separate federal elections and separate voting days and voting precincts for federal elections. State citizens only participate in state elections, and elect representatives who go to Washington to “represent” their interests indirectly.

A prominent legal publisher, West Publishing, agrees with the findings in this section. Here is what they say in their publication entitled Conflicts in a Nutshell, Second Edition:

In the United States, “domicile” and “residence” are the two major competitors for judicial attention, and the words are almost invariably used to describe the relationship that the person has to the state rather than the nation. We use “citizenship” to describe the national relationship, and we generally eschew “nationality” (heard more frequently among European nations) as a descriptive term.

A person who is a "national" with respect to a political jurisdiction and who does not maintain a legal domicile within the exclusive legislative or "general" jurisdiction of the political body is treated as a "nonresident alien" within federal law. He is a "nonresident" because he is not "resident" within the territorial limits. He is an alien, because he is "alien" to that jurisdiction and not subject to its legislative jurisdiction.

26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) Definitions

An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

At the same time, a "national" and a "nonresident alien" who is NOT an "individual" is not an "alien" under federal law, because a "nonresident alien" is defined as a person who is neither a "citizen nor a resident", and that is exactly what a "national but not citizen" is. Further confirmation of this conclusion is found in the definition of "resident" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), which defines a "resident" as an "alien". Since the definition of "nonresident alien" above excludes "residents", then it also excludes "aliens".

A picture is worth a thousand words. We’ll now summarize the results of the preceding analysis to make it crystal clear for visually-minded readers:

The table below describes the effect that changes in domicile have on citizenship status in the case of both "foreign nationals" and "domestic nationals". A “domestic national” is anyone born anywhere within any one of the 50 states on nonfederal land or who was born in any territory or possession of the United States. A “foreign national” is someone who was born anywhere outside of these areas. The jurisdiction mentioned in the right three columns is the “federal zone”.

NOTES:

1. “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 7701(a)(39), and 7408(d), and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
2. The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm.
3. American nationals who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B). See sections 4.11.2 earlier for details.
4. Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS publications.
5. “FEDERAL ZONE”=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table.
6. The term “individual” as used on the IRS form 1040 means an “alien” engaged in a “trade or business”. All “taxpayers” are “aliens” engaged in a “trade or business”. This is confirmed by 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c )(3), 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory “U.S. citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not “individuals” unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In that capacity, statutory “U.S. citizens” interface to the I.R.C. as “aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens” through the tax treaty.

When a federal officer asks you if you are a “citizen”, consider the context! The only basis for him asking this is federal law, because he isn’t bound by state law. If you tell him you are a “citizen” or a “U.S. citizen”, then indirectly, you are admitting that you are subject to federal law, because that’s what it means to be a “citizen” under federal law! Watch out!

Therefore, as people born in and living within a state of the union on land that is not owned by the federal government, we need to be very careful how we describe ourselves on government forms. Below is what we should say in each of the various contexts to avoid misleading those asking the questions on the forms. In this context, let’s assume you were born in California and live there. This guidance also applies to questions that officers of the government might ask you in each of the two contexts as well:

In summary:

1. A “national” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as a person who has allegiance to a “state”. The existence of that allegiance provides legal evidence that a person has politically associated themselves with a “state” in order to procure its protection. In return for said allegiance, the “national” is entitled to the protection of the state. Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874).
2. The only thing you need in order to obtain a USA passport is “allegiance”. 22 U.S.C. §212. If the federal government is willing to issue you a passport, then they regard you as a “national”, because the only type of citizenship that carries with it exclusively allegiance is that of a “national”. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). See: http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/ApplyingForAPassport.htm
3. In the constitution, statutory “nationals” are called “citizens”.
4. Under federal statutory law, both “citizens” and “residents” are persons who have a legal domicile on the territory of the state to which he claims allegiance.
5. In federal statutory law, all “citizens” are also “nationals” but not all nationals are “citizens”. For proof, see:
   5.1. 8 U.S.C. §1401 defines a “citizen and national of the United States”.
   5.2. 8 U.S.C. §1452 defines a “non-citizen national”.
6. Since being a “national” is a prerequisite to being a “citizen”, then “citizens” within a country are a subset of those who are “nationals”.
7. “subject to the jurisdiction” is found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution. The Constitution is a political document and the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” means all of the following:
   7.1. Being a member of a political group. Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

7.2. Being subject to the political jurisdiction but not legislative jurisdiction of the state which we are a member of.

U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)

“This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only, birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.’ The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by proceedings under the acts of the Union, for the promotion of their general welfare.”

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

7.3. Being able to participate in the political affairs of the state by being able to elect its members as a voter or direct its activities as a jurist.

8. “subject to its jurisdiction” is found in federal statutes and regulations and it means all of the following.

8.1. Having a legal domicile within the exclusive jurisdiction of a “state”. Within federal law, this “state” means the “United States” government and includes no part of any state of the Union.

8.2. Being subject to the legislative but not political jurisdiction of a “state”.

9. Political jurisdiction and political rights are the tools we use to directly run and influence the government as voters and jurists.

10. Legislative jurisdiction, on the other hand, is how the government controls us using the laws it passes.

Now that we understand the distinctions between “citizens” and “nationals” within federal law, we are ready to tackle the citizenship issue head on.

4.11.6 Four Types of American Nationals

There are four types of American nationals recognized under federal law:

1. Statutory “nationals and citizens of the United States” (statutory “U.S. citizen”)

1.1. A statutory privileged status defined and found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, in the implementing regulations of the Internal Revenue Code at 26 CFR §1.1-1(c), and in most other federal statutes.
1.2. Born anywhere in the United States but domiciled in the federal zone only. Must inhabit the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States identified in Title 48 of the U.S. Code.

1.3. Subject to the “police power” of the federal government and all “acts of Congress”.

1.4. Treated as a citizen of the municipal government of the District of Columbia (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39))

1.5. Have no common law rights, because there is no federal common law. See Jones v. Mayer, 392 U.S. 409 (1798).

1.6. Also called “federal U.S. citizens” throughout this document.

1.7. Owe allegiance to the GOVERNMENT of the United States and NOT the PEOPLE of the States of the Union, who are called United States.

2. Statutory “nationals but not citizens of the United States” at birth (where “United States” or “U.S.” means the federal United States)

2.2. Born anywhere American Samoa or Swains Island.

2.3. May not participate politically in federal elections or as federal jurists.

2.4. Owe allegiance to the GOVERNMENT of the United States and NOT the PEOPLE of the States of the Union, who are called United States.

3. “USA nationals” (but not “citizens of the United States)

3.2. Is not equivalent to a statutory “national but not citizen of the United States by birth” identified in 8 U.S.C. §1408.

3.3. Called a “citizen of the United States” by the Supreme Court and in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment.

3.4. Born anywhere in any one of the several states of the Union but not in a federal territory, possession, or the District of Columbia.

3.5. Not subject to the “police power” of the federal government or most “acts of Congress”.

3.6. Owe allegiance to the PEOPLE of the serval constitutional states of the Union, who are called “United States” or “United States of America”.

3.7. May serve as a federal jurist or grand jurist involving only parties with his same citizenship and domicile status.

3.8. May vote in federal elections.

4. “State nationals”

4.2. Is equivalent to the term “state citizen”.

4.3. In general, born in any one of the several states of the Union but not in a federal territory, possession, or the District of Columbia.

4.4. Not subject to the “police power” of the federal government or most “acts of Congress”.

4.5. Owes Allegiance to the sovereign people, collectively and individually, within the body politic of the constitutional state residing in.

4.6. May serve as a state jurist or grand jurist involving only parties with his same citizenship and domicile status.

4.7. May vote in state elections.

4.8. At this time, all “state Nationals” are also a “USA National”. But not all “USA Nationals” are a “state National” (for example, a USA national not residing nor domiciled in a state of the Union).

4.9. Is a man or woman whose unalienable natural rights are recognized, secured, and protected by his state constitution against state actions and against federal intrusion by the Constitution for the United States of America.

Statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 have civil PRIVILEGES (not rights but privileges) under federal law that are similar but inferior to the natural rights that state Citizens have in state courts. I say almost because civil rights are created by Congress and can be taken away by Congress. “U.S. citizens” are privileged subjects/servants of Congress, under their protection as a "resident" and “ward” of a federal State, a person enfranchised to the federal government (the incorporated United States defined in Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution). The individual Union states may not deny to these persons any federal privileges or immunities that Congress has granted them within “acts of Congress” or federal statutes. Federal citizens come under admiralty law (International Law) when litigating in federal courts. As such they do not have inalienable common rights recognized, secured and protected in federal courts by the Constitutions of the States, or of the Constitution for the United States of America, such as “allodial” (absolute) rights to property, the rights to inheritance, the rights to work and contract, and the right to travel among others.

Another important element of citizenship is that artificial entities like corporations are citizens for the purposes of taxation but cannot be citizens for any other purpose.

8 U.S.C. §1452 | “national” or “state national” | This person is not necessarily the same as the “U.S. national” above, because it includes people who born in states of the Union. Notice that this term does not mention 8 U.S.C. §1408 citizenship nor confine itself only to citizenship by birth in the federal zone. Therefore, it also includes people born in states of the Union. |
| 3  | “citizens and nationals of the United States” | 1. District of Columbia
2. Puerto Rico
3. Guam

Throughout the remainder of this book, when we refer generically to “nationals”, we mean statuses 1 or 2 above, which includes “nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 or “nationals, but not citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). “Nationals but not citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1452 are a superset that includes both people born in states of the Union (“nationals”) and those born in American Samoa and Swains Island (“U.S. nationals”). “Nationals but not citizens at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 includes only those born in American Samoa and Swains Island.

It is very important to be mindful of the context whenever you hear or use the term “citizen of the United States” or “U.S. citizen”, because the term “United States” has an entirely different meaning in federal statutes or “acts of Congress” than it has in the Constitution. This is especially true when filling out government forms. The differences in meaning of these terms between the Constitution and “acts of Congress” is a direct result of the fact that the federal government has no police powers within the states, as we discussed earlier in section 4.9. In the Constitution and the rulings of the Supreme Court, the term “United States” means the collective states of the Union while in federal statutes or “acts of Congress”, it means the federal zone. Watch out! Here is a quick summary of the affects on meanings based on this very important observation:

“citizen of the United States” status under the Constitution is the equivalent of “national of the United States” status under federal statutes and it is a “privileged” status:

“To be a citizen of the United States is a political privilege which no one, not born to, can assume without its consent in some form.”

[Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

The Fourteenth Amendment did not create “citizen of the United States” status or add any restrictions to the existing citizenship laws, but simply allayed doubts and controversies that had arisen prior to that time:

“.the opening sentence of the fourteenth amendment is throughout affirmative and declaratory, intended to ally doubts and to settle controversies which had arisen, and not to impose any new restrictions upon citizenship.”

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

“U.S. citizen” or “national and citizen of the United States” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” is different from “citizen of the United States” status under the Fourteenth Amendment Section 1. “U.S.* citizen” or “national and citizen of the United States” under federal statutes pursuant 8 U.S.C. §1401 is different from the Constitutional “citizen of the United States” or statutory “USA national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §101(a)(21). Although these two nationals are different, they both came into existence as a result of the operation of The Laws of Nations. The Fourteenth Amendment didn’t create the Constitutional status of “citizen of the United States”. The only thing that the ratification of the 14th Amendment in 1868 accomplished was to:

- Extend the status of “citizen of the United States” to persons of all races, instead of only the whites who were previously the only citizens recognized under the Constitution.
- Further extend the privileges and immunities of those persons who were already “citizens of the United States”
- Clarify and further define the meaning of the term “citizen of the United States” under the Constitution

White persons born in states of the Union always were the equivalent “nationals” under federal statutes from the very beginning of our country under the Law of Nations. Book I, Section 212 and they had this status long before the creation of the 14th Amendment in 1868. This is true because a “national” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as someone who owes allegiance to a state and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) defines a “national of the United States” as someone who owes allegiance to the “United States”. Nationality and allegiance are the only thing you need in order to be regarded as a “citizen” in our country:

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Alacrity and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

“For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and ‘citizen’ have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

“Looking at the Constitution itself we find that it was ordained and established by ‘the people of the United States,’ and then going further back, we find that these were the people of the several States that had before dissolved the political bands which connected them with Great Britain, and assumed a separate and equal station among the powers of the earth, and that had by Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union, in which they took the name of ‘the United States of America,’ entered into a firm league of [88 U.S. 162, 167] friendship with each other for their common defence, the security of their liberties and their mutual and general welfare, binding themselves to assist each other against all force offered to or attack made upon them, or any of them, on account of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretence whatever.

“Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States was adopted, became ipso facto a citizen-a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the persons associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this, there has never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of persons were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were.”

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

The treatment of the term “allegiance” above is significant. We must understand exactly what this word means in order to understand the foundation of our republican form of government. Below is a definition of “allegiance” from the law dictionary:

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The person who is a “national” does not have the kind of “allegiance” as that described above. Allegiance above is to the government, while “nationals” instead have their allegiance to the “state”, which is the sovereign people (as individuals) within the territorial boundaries of the political body and not exclusively the “government”:

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions

(a) (21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

The term “state” is then defined as follows:

“State, A people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common-law habits and custom into one body politic exercising, through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty and control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of entering into international relations with other communities of the globe. United States v. Kusche, D.C.Cal., 56 F.Supp. 201
207, 208. The organization of social life which exercises sovereign power in behalf of the people. Delany v. Moraltis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F.2d. 129, 130. In its largest sense, a “state” is a body politic or a society of men. Beagle v. Motor Vehicle Acc. Indemnification Corp., 44 Misc.2d. 636, 254 N.Y.S.2d. 763, 765. A body of people occupying a definite territory and politically organized under one government. State ex re. Maisano v. Mitchell, 155 Conn. 256, 231 A.2d. 539, 542. A territorial unit with a distinct general body of law. Restatement, Second, Conflicts, §3. Term may refer either to body politic of a nation (e.g. United States) or to an individual government unit of such nation (e.g. California).

The people of a state, in their collective capacity, considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; the public; as in the title of a cause, “The State vs. A.B.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1407]

To have “allegiance” to “a state” as a “national” is to have allegiance to the sovereign within the body politic, which in a republican system of government is the people collectively and individually and not necessarily the government. We cannot “assume” or “presume” that the government represents the will of the people. This is especially true when the government has gone bad and is not representing the will of the people. When we have a rebellious government that has strayed from the Constitution and its “de jure” foundation to become a “de facto” government, then the allegiance we have to the Constitution and the people who ordained it must supersede our allegiance to the government that has violated its charter to implement the Constitution. The people, not the government, must always be regarded as the ultimate sovereigns within republican systems of governance.

Ironically, the very definition of the word “privilege” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, seems to contradict the conclusion that “citizenship” can be a privilege to begin with!:

“Privilege. A particular benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class beyond the common advantages of other citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power or exemption. A peculiar right, advantage, exemption, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, not generally possessed by others.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1197]

Note above that it says “beyond the common advantages of other citizens”, thus implying that citizenship itself cannot be a “privilege” and that you must also be accepting some kind of benefit beyond that of “citizenship” in order to be classified as “privileged”. Furthermore, if everyone accepts this “privilege” (as the government calls it) called “U.S. citizen” status in federal statutes or even if more than half of all natural persons do, then it becomes a “common advantage”, and thus no longer a special privilege granted only to a minority or a select few. This is the situation today with most Americans, where most falsely believe they are “U.S. citizens” as defined by federal statutes. By the above logic and definition, then, a reasonable man could easily conclude that “U.S. citizen” status cannot be classified as a “privilege” because it is “common” and is shared by a majority rather than a minority.

4.11.7.2 History of federal citizenship

So far we have not offered any authority other than statutes to prove that the government actually recognizes two distinct classes of federal citizenship. We will now present additional evidence by describing the 13th and 14th Amendments and the history of how they have been viewed by the Supreme Court of the United States.
Prior to the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments, all persons born in a state of the Union were “citizens of the United States” under the Constitution and under the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court, but NOT under federal statutes or “acts of Congress”:

There is no doubt that women may be citizens. They are persons, and by the fourteenth amendment 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof' are expressly declared to be 'citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.' But, in our opinion, it did not need this amendment to give them that position. Before its adoption the Constitution of the United States did not in terms prescribe who should be citizens of the United States or of the several States, yet there were necessarily such citizens without such provision.

“The fourteenth amendment did not affect the citizenship of women any more than it did of men. In this particular, therefore, the rights of Mrs. Minor do not depend upon the amendment. She has always been a citizen from her birth, and entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizenship. The [Fourteenth] Amendment prohibited the State, of which she is a citizen, from abriding any of their privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States; but it did not confer citizenship upon her. That she had before its adoption.

“The Constitution does not define the privileges and immunities of citizens. For that definition we must look elsewhere.

“The [Fourteenth] Amendment did not add to the privileges and immunities of a citizen. It simply furnished an additional guaranty for the protection of such as he already had. No new voters were necessarily made by it. Indirectly it may have had that effect, because it may have increased the number of citizens entitled to suffrage under the Constitution and laws of the States, but it operates for this purpose, if at all, through the States and the state laws, and not directly upon the citizen.

“All the States had government when the Constitution was adopted. These governments the Constitution did not change.”

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

Therefore, “citizen of the United States” status under our Constitution and under the rulings of the Supreme Court existed before the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The status of being a “citizen of the United States” under the Constitution and under Supreme Court rulings is equivalent to the status of being a “national” under federal statutes or “acts of Congress” and is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). We will cover this in greater detail later in section 4.11.14.

Towards the end of the Civil War in 1865, the 13th Amendment was ratified and thereby abolished slavery and involuntary servitude except as punishment for a crime. The Supreme Court ruled that the 13th Amendment operated to free former slaves and prohibit slavery, but it in no way conferred citizenship to the former slaves, or to those races other than white, because the founders of the Constitution were all of the white race.

Even after the end of the Civil War and the passage of the Thirteenth Amendment, Southern states were openly discriminating against blacks by denying them state citizenship and political rights. Congress was under political pressure from the northern states and had to do something about this problem. The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced as the answer to this problem because it extended citizenship to persons of all races instead of only the whites covered by our original Constitution. The "big daddy" and chief protector of blacks then became the federal government under the new Fourteenth Amendment. This protection was extended by extending national citizenship, which then made blacks "subject to the jurisdiction of the United States".

The first section of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution [169 U.S. 649, 676] begins with the words, 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside.' As appears upon the face of the amendment, as well as from the history of the times, this was not intended to impose any new restrictions upon citizenship, or to prevent any persons from becoming citizens by the fact of birth within the United States, who would thereby have become citizens according to the law existing before its adoption. It is declaratory in form, and enabling and extending in effect. Its main purpose doubtless was, as has been often recognized by this court, to establish the citizenship of free negroes, which had been denied in the opinion delivered by Chief Justice Taney in Scott v. Sandford (1857) 19 How. 393; and to put it beyond doubt that all blacks, as well as whites, born or naturalized within the jurisdiction of the United States, are citizens of the United States. Slaughter House Cases (1873) 16 Wall. 36, 73; Strader v. West Virginia (1879) 100 U.S. 303, 306; Ex parte Virginia (1879) Id. 339, 345; Neal v. Delaware (1888) 103 U.S. 370, 386; Elk v. Wilkins (1884) 112 U.S. 94, 101, 5 S.Sup.Ct. 41.
But the opening words, ‘All persons born,’ are general, not to say universal, restricted only by place and jurisdiction, and not by color or race, as was clearly recognized in all the opinions delivered in the Slaughter House Cases, above cited.”  [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

The Fourteenth Amendment approach that Congress devised would only work if it could confer national citizenship without conferring state citizenship. This approach was the only remedy available to Congress to end slavery and discrimination in the southern states because the federal government did not have the authority under our Constitution to determine if a former slave could become a Citizen of one of the several states since the 9th and 10th Amendments said that powers not granted specifically to the federal government by the Constitution are reserved to the states or to the People.

History shows that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and New York State were nationalizing blacks as State Citizens before the outbreak of the Civil War. In other southern states, blacks were not Citizens and therefore did not have standing in any court based on the privileges and immunities of “citizens of the United States”. The 14th Amendment was written primarily to afford citizenship to those of the black race that were recently freed by the 13th Amendment (Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 71), and did not include Indians and others NOT born in and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States (McKay v. Cambell, 2 Sawy. 129). Thus, the 14th Amendment recognized that an individual can be a "citizen of the United States" under the Constitution without being a Citizen of a State.” (Slaughter-House Cases, supra; cf. U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)).

The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced for ratification to the states on June 16, 1866 and ratification was completed on July 28, 1868 at the end of the Civil War by the three fourths of the states required by the Constitution. Many of the southern states that voted in favor of ratifying the amendment did so at gunpoint while they were occupied by federal troops! Their legislatures in many such cases were summarily dismissed as “rebels” by Congress and replaced with puppet legislatures hand-selected by Congress following the cessation of war. You could say that they ratified the amendment under duress because of this, and that the amendment is therefore invalid because the ratification must be entirely voluntary to be legally binding. Furthermore, before they voted on this ratification, they had no representation in Congress and were “outnumbered” until they gave in.

The blacks following the civil war therefore had to be “collectively naturalized” into the status of being “citizens of the United States” so they could then freely roam to any state and be citizens of the state they were in, even if that state refused to grant them state citizenship. In order to do this, “citizen of the United States” status under the Constitution had to be made paramount and dominant over state citizenship.

“The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government: The question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship of the United States and the citizen’s place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, [83 U.S. 36, 113] and an equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation, and a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to the Constitution, is, a surt and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to such regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he is denied one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States.” [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

“By the thirteenth amendment of the constitution slavery was prohibited. The main object of the opening sentence of the fourteenth amendment was to settle the question, upon which there had been a difference of opinion throughout the country and in this court, as to the citizenship of free negroes, (Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393;) and to put it beyond doubt that all persons, white or black, and whether formerly slaves or not, 144 See dissenting opinion of Chief Justice Fuller in U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898).
The blacks were therefore collectively naturalized without their consent following the Civil War in the Civil Rights Act of 1866 on April 9, 1866, 14 Stat. 27 so they could be protected from state government abuses of their natural rights.

To restate: In the Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 71 supra the supreme Court said:

“It is quite clear, then, that there is a citizenship of the United States and a citizenship of a state, which are distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances of the individual. Of the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the United States and of the privileges and immunities of the citizen of the state, and what they respectively are, we will presently consider; but we wish to state here that it is only the former which are placed by this clause under the protection of the Federal Constitution, and the latter, whatever they may be, are not intended to have any additional protection by this paragraph of the amendment.”

The Supreme court has also ruled that “The term United States is a metaphor [a figure of speech]”. Cunard S.S Co. V. Mellon, 262 U.S. 100, 122; and that

“The term 'United States' may be used in one of several senses. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of sovereign in a family of nations. It may designate territory over which sovereignty of the United States extends, or it may be a collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution.”

[Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652, 672-73.]

Did the Courts really say that someone could be a Citizen of a State without being a “citizen of the United States” (which means “national of the United States” in federal statutes)? Yes, they did. Who would fit this description? How about a national from another country who resides in a state of the Union and who has not yet been naturalized under the laws of this country. It's true that the cases cited above are old, some over 100 years old. None of these cases have ever been overturned by a more recent decision, so they are valid. A more recent case is Crosse v. Bd. of Supervisors, 221 A.2d. 431 (1966) which says:

“Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state.” Citing U.S. v. Cruikshank, supra.
The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, for instance, is one of the "several states" described in the Constitution. The Constitution treats the several states of the Union as independent countries and jurisdictions that are "foreign" to each other and to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction and internal "police powers". 28 U.S.C. §297 makes it very clear that the states of the Union are "foreign countries" with respect to each other, as we talk about later in section 5.2.13. Each state is on an equal footing with all the other states of the Union in terms of its sovereignty and nearly exclusive control over everything that happens internal to its borders. The Buck Act in 1940 created federal areas inside the 50 Union states. If you are domiciled in a federal area, you are subject to federal territorial laws and the municipal laws of the District of Columbia. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is internal to the federal zone. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania mentioned in the state constitution is not part of the federal zone, but the Pennsylvania Commonwealth is. PA is the name that the post office recognizes for mail sent into the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which is a federal area. Pa., Penna., and Pennsylvania are the names that the post office uses for mail sent into the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which is not a federal area. If I accept mail sent to PA, I am saying that I live in the federal zone. The same situation exists in the other states.

One important outcome of being a "U.S. citizen" under federal statutes and "acts of Congress" is that the federal government may tax only its own "U.S. citizens" when they reside outside of federal territorial jurisdiction, for instance when they are in foreign countries. See the Supreme Court case of Cook v. Tait for authorities on this subject. In the U.S. Constitution Annotated, under the Fifth Amendment (see http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/data/constitution/amendment05/13.html - 6), here is what it says about this subject:

In laying taxes, the Federal Government is less narrowly restricted by the Fifth Amendment than are the States by the Fourteenth. The Federal Government may tax property belonging to its ["U.S."] citizens, even if such property is never situated within the jurisdiction of the United States, and it may tax the income of a citizen resident abroad, which is derived from property located at his residence. The difference is explained by the fact that protection of the Federal Government follows the citizen wherever he goes, whereas the benefits of state government accrue only to persons and property within the State’s borders.

It is important, however, to point out that the Union states are exempted from direct taxes under Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution but foreign countries where “U.S. citizens” (under federal statutes) reside are not. This point is VERY important, and clearly indicates from where the tax jurisdiction of the United States government derives. It isn’t mainly a geographical jurisdiction as far as taxes internal to the federal zone go, but instead originates mainly from our “U.S. citizen” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress”. Through this devious mechanism of fooling sovereign state Citizens and “nationals” into becoming privileged “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes and “acts of Congress”, the federal government usurped the Sovereignty of the People, as well as the Sovereignty of the several Union states. They also usurped the authority of sovereign state Citizens by creating "Federal areas" within the authority of Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 in the Constitution for the United States of America which states:

"The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States, and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State."

Therefore, all “U.S. citizens” [i.e. citizens of the District of Columbia and the territories described in federal statutes] residing in one of the states of the Union, are classified as property and franchises of the federal government, and as an "individual" entity! These serfs are “completely subject to the jurisdiction of the United States” no matter where they reside because they are chattel and slaves of that government. See Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193, 80 L.Ed. 1143, 56 S.Ct. 773 (1936). Under the "Buck Act," 4 U.S.C Secs. 105-113, the federal government has created a "Federal area" or "enclave" within the boundaries of the several states. This area is similar to any territory that the federal government acquires through purchase, conquest or treaty, thereby imposing federal territorial law upon the people in this "Federal area." Federal territorial law is evidenced by the Executive Branch’s Admiralty flag (a federal flag with a gold or yellow fringe on it) flying in schools, offices and courtrooms. As you will find out in section 5.6.1 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, “acts of Congress” and all federal crimes falling under Title 18, the Criminal Code, only apply inside these federal areas and not within states of the Union.

There are actually four potential sources of federal jurisdiction over “nationals” living in a state of the Union:

147 Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924).
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

1. In personam jurisdiction
2. Citizenship
3. Territorial jurisdiction. If a person’s “domicile” is within the territorial jurisdiction, then they are subject to the jurisdiction of the sovereign.
4. Subject matter jurisdiction

“Nationals”, also called “citizens of the United States” by the Supreme Court and the Fourteenth Amendment, are subject to the political (but not legislative) jurisdiction of the “United States” even when they are outside the territorial jurisdiction of that country United States*. That is the whole reason why we have embassies in foreign countries: to protect citizens residing in foreign lands. States of the Union do not have legislative jurisdiction over their citizens when they are outside the state. However, today all state citizens are also citizens of the United States and hence all state citizens have the same protections when they are outside of the “U.S.” that was spoken of at the beginning of this paragraph, meaning outside the country United States*. Federal political jurisdiction derives from being either a “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or a “national of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). Being a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes is a privilege while being a “national of the United States” in all cases is a right. We hope this clears up all remaining doubts you might have about the nature of federal citizenship.

Now for a little history on citizenship prior to the Civil War. To begin, the "citizen of the United States" in 26 CFR §31.3121(e) -I is a citizen of a territory or possession of the United States under Title 48 of the U.S. Code and 8 U.S.C. §1401. This citizenship doesn't have anything to do with the Fourteenth Amendment. It is a special "non-constitutional" class of citizenship. This misunderstanding dates back to 1803 at the time of the Louisiana Purchase. Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 jurisdiction applies exclusively to:

1. The District of Columbia as the seat of government, and
2. Territory within states of the Union ceded to the United States for purposes specified.

The territorial clause, at Article 4, Section 3, applied only to what was known as the Northwest Territory ceded by New York and other new sovereign states in 1787 to help pay off debts of the Revolution.

In the cession treaty with France, there were two important provisions for territory ceded as a result of the Louisiana Purchase:

1. Those who lived in the territory would enjoy all rights, benefits and protections of "citizens of the United States," and
2. As the territory was settled, it would become one or more States of the Union.

Thomas Jefferson was President at the time. He knew that the Constitution makes no provision for acquisition of new territories so he drafted two proposed amendments to accommodate the Louisiana Purchase and the treaty provisions. However, Congress elected to do nothing, reasoning that territorial acquisition was implicit from the constitutional provisions relating to waging war & making treaties. As a consequence, the U.S. Government has been operating under implied rather than constitutionally enumerated powers for territorial acquisition ever since.

Until the Spanish-American War (1898), cession treaties all included the two key elements that were in the Louisiana Purchase -- the acquired territory would become one or more States of the Union, and those living in the territory would enjoy all rights, benefits and protections the Constitution affords citizens of the several States until such time as the territory was admitted to the Union. When Spain ceded Puerto Rico & the Philippines, the cession treaty did not include those provisions.

If you will read the Downes v. Bidwell case, that Supreme Court decision, and the other Insular Tax Cases decided in the same general timeframe, a distinction was made between incorporated territories such as Alaska and Hawaii (destined to become States of the Union, per cession treaties), and the new "unincorporated" insular possessions. They were deemed "foreign" to States of the Union, i.e., to the "United States," in that they were not under the "constitutional umbrella."

In 1917, Congress extended nationality ("national of the United States") status to the people of Puerto Rico; in 1927, the status was extended to the people of the Virgin Islands, etc., until citizenship was finally extended to the people of Guam, American Samoa and the Northern Mariana Islands. It appears that nationality ("national of the United States") status was also extended to the people of Alaska and Hawaii prior to the two being admitted to the Union, but in all cases it was a "non-constitutional" citizenship -- the Fourteenth Amendment didn't have a thing to do with it, because these were territories at the time and were not part of the "United States" as referred to in the Constitution.

One of the important declarations in Downes v. Bidwell is that once the Constitution has been extended to a territory, it cannot be withdrawn. The District of Columbia, federal enclaves ceded by states of the Union for Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 purposes, the Northwest Territory, and territories acquired from 1803 to 1898 all enjoyed the same benefit of falling under the constitutional umbrella without being part of the “United States” within the meaning of the Constitution. However, until admitted to the Union, people in the territories, as well as those in today’s unincorporated insular possessions:

1. Did not elect Senators and Representatives to Congress, and
2. could not vote in presidential elections. Additionally, both incorporated territories and unincorporated possessions are or were subject to Congress' plenary power, i.e., the "municipal" authority of the United States.

An essential necessary to understand the scheme is to understand that "all legislation is geographical in nature." In other words, it applies to a territory. The Social Security Act of 1935 applied to the "geographical United States," i.e., to territories and possessions of the United States. It did not apply to states of the Union, and there is no special provision that extends application to federal enclaves within States of the Union. This is one of the reasons there are some code sections that conditionally include the District of Columbia where others don't.

If you would like to study the history of citizenship further, the best and most authoritative source is the Supreme Court case of Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874).

4.11.7.3  Constitutional Basis of federal citizenship

Here is Section 1 of the 14th Amendment that confers “national” citizenship upon persons born in the United States:

Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Prior to the introduction of the Fourteenth Amendment after the Civil War, the U.S. Constitution only established the individual rights enumerated by the first eight Amendments to the U.S. Constitution at the federal level. This meant that prior to the Fourteenth Amendment, the individual rights enumerated by the first eight amendments to the U.S. Constitution were not guaranteed to Americans by the states of the Union and many state constitutions did not universally include all of these rights. The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced at the federal level to compel states to honor the first 8 amendments of the constitution in the case of all "citizens of the United States",148 These "citizens of the United States" identified by both the Fourteenth Amendment and the U.S. Supreme Court are referred to as "nationals but not citizens" or simply "nationals of the United States" within federal statutes.149 Here is how the Supreme Court of the United States described the significance of the Fourteenth Amendment in terms of its affect on federal legislative jurisdiction:

"The [Fourteenth] amendment prohibited the state, of which she is a citizen, from abridging any of her privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States, but it did not confer citizenship on her. That she had before its adoption.

"If the right of suffrage is one of the necessary privileges of a citizen of the United States, then the Constitution and laws of Missouri confining it to men are in violation of the Constitution of the United States, as amended, and consequently void. The direct question is therefore presented whether all citizens are necessarily voters.

"The Constitution does not define the privileges and immunities of citizens. For that definition we must look elsewhere. In this case, we need not determine what they are, but only whether suffrage is necessarily one of them.

[...]

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The [Fourteenth] amendment did not add to the privileges and immunities of a citizen. It simply furnished an additional guaranty for the protection of such as he already had. No new voters were necessarily made by it. Indirectly it may have had that effect because it may have increased the number of citizens entitled to suffrage under the constitution and laws of the states, but it operates for this purpose, if at all, through the states and the state laws, and not directly upon the citizen.”

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

So we can see that the Fourteenth Amendment operates exclusively through the states and state law, not through federal law. It is not a source of federal legislative jurisdiction, but simply confers membership in the political community called the “United States” by virtue of their birth in a state of the Union.

Following the introduction of the Fourteenth Amendment, it became quite common for people to confuse “citizens of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment and under Supreme Court rulings with “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” such as 8 U.S.C. §1401, which are two completely different statuses. Because of this confusion, people in states of the Union would almost universally but mistakenly identify themselves as “U.S. citizens” under the authority of federal statutes on the many government forms they would eventually submit in the context of federal taxes. This created a “false presumption” and evidence supporting the belief that they are residents of the federal zone and feudal serfs of Congress. Through this devious obfuscation mechanism, people who were victims of such confusion became “property and franchisees of the federal government” in receipt of taxable privileges who were aliens in their own state and whose “U.S. citizen” status made them into residents and citizens of the federal zone from a legal perspective. Sneaky politicians would later introduce the Buck Act of 1940 following the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment in 1868 as a way to allow states to tax this franchise and states would later introduce income tax statutes of their own to cash in on these federal slaves.

Remember the Supreme Court’s definition of the term “United States” in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945) which we talked about earlier in section 4.6 in which there were three definitions of “United States”? The key to understanding the meaning of the 14th Amendment shown above are the words “United States”, which means the collective states of the Union of states in the context of the Constitution, and “the jurisdiction”, which means the political and NOT legislative jurisdiction of these states.

“It is impossible to construe the words ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ in the opening sentence [of the Fourteenth Amendment], as less comprehensive than the words ‘within its jurisdiction,’ in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons ‘within the jurisdiction’ of one of the states of the Union are not ‘subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[].’

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

Now do you understand? Can you also understand then why your government would want you to be a federal statutory “U.S. citizen” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and who lives in the federal zone from a legal perspective? They can legally make you into a slave with no rights who is completely subject to their jurisdiction! Tricky, huh? The Supreme Court confirmed these conclusions in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), when it said in pertinent part:

“The 13th Amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude ‘within the United States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction,’ is also significant as showing that there may be places within the jurisdiction of the United States that are no part of the Union. To say that the phraseology of this amendment was due to the fact that it was intended to prohibit slavery in the seceded states, under a possible interpretation that those states were no longer a part of the Union, is to confess the very point in issue, since it involves an admission that, if these states were not a part of the Union, they were still subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

Upon the other hand, the 14th Amendment, upon the subject of citizenship, declares only that ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the state wherein they reside.’ *Here there is a limitation to persons born or naturalized in the United States, which is not extended to persons born in any place subject to their jurisdiction.

The Social Security Program Operations Manual (POM) clarifies the meaning of “subject to the jurisdiction” found in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment:

GN 00303.100 U.S. Citizenship[...]

5. SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION OF THE U.S.
Acquisition of citizenship is not affected by the fact that the alien parents are only temporarily in the U.S. at the time of the child's birth. Under international law, children born in the U.S. to foreign sovereigns or foreign diplomatic officers listed on the State Department Diplomatic List are not subject to the jurisdiction of the U.S.

The legal encyclopedia, American Jurisprudence, further clarifies the meaning of U.S. citizenship as follows:

3C Am.Jur.2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 Who is born in United States and subject to United States jurisdiction "A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country."

Therefore, an individual may not legally be a “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes or “acts of Congress” unless he or she was born on a federal territory, such as in Guam, the Virgin Islands, or Puerto Rico. States of the Union are not territories of the central government. Below is the definition of the word “territory” so you can see for yourself, right from Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473:

"Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

A portion of the United States not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the President."

The major legal encyclopedia, Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), has the following enlightening things to say about the word “territory”:

86 Corpus Juris Secundum, Territories

§1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

The word “territory,” when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under act of congress.

While the term “territory” is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions of a territory, and “territories of the” United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which the United States exercises dominion, the word “territory,” when used to designate a political organization, has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, but may include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under acts of congress. The term “territories” has been defined to be political subdivisions of the oulting dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term “territory” is not a description of a definite area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question whether a particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government with which it is, more or less temporarily invested.

“Territories” or “territory” as including “state” or “states.”

While the term “territories of the” United States may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution, and in ordinary acts of congress “territory” does not include a foreign state.

As used in this title, the term “territories” generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and not within the boundaries of any of the several states.”

[86 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Territories §1]

The U.S. Supreme Court also defined precisely what “territory” meant as follows:

"Various meanings are sought to be attributed to the term 'territory' in the phrase 'the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' We are of opinion that it means the regional areas- of land and adjacent waters-over which the United States claims and exercises plenary/exclusive dominion and control.
as a sovereign power. The immediate context and the purport of the entire section show that the term is used in a physical and not a metaphorical sense—that it refers to areas or districts having fixity of location and recognized boundaries. See United States v. Bevans, 3 Wheat. 336, 390.

'It now is settled in the United States and recognized elsewhere that the territory subject to its jurisdiction includes the land areas under its dominion and control, the ports, harbors, bays and other enclosed arms of the sea along its coast and a marginal belt of the sea extending from the coast line outward a marine league, or three geographic miles. Church v. Hubbart, 2 Cranch, 187, 234; The Ann, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 397, p. 926; United States v. Smiley, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16317, p. 1132; Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U.S. 240, 57 S., 11 Sup.Ct. 559; Louisiana v. Mississippi, 202 U.S. 1, 52, 26 S.Sup.Ct. 408; 1 Kent's Com. (12th Ed.) 292; 1 Moore, [262 U.S. 100, 123] International Law Digest, 145; 1 Hyde, International Law, 141, 142, 154; Wilson, International Law (8th Ed.) 54; Westlake, International Law (2d Ed.) p. 187, et seq; Wheaton, International Law (5th Eng. Ed. [Phillipson]) p. 282; 1 Oppenheim International Law (3d Ed.) 185-189, 252. This, we hold, is the territory which the amendment designates as its field of operation; and the designation is not of a part of this territory but of 'all' of it.” [Cunard S.S. Co. v. Mellon, 262 U.S. 100, 43 S.Ct. 504 (1923)]

It is extremely important to emphasize once again the need to consider the context of the words being used in order to properly and clearly understand federal jurisdiction. The term “subject to the jurisdiction” as used in the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution has an entirely different meaning than the term “subject to its jurisdiction” as used in federal statutes or “acts of Congress”. Below is a table that hopefully will make the distinctions clear in your mind:

An interesting and important outcome of the above analysis regarding the Fourteenth Amendment is the following very reasonable conclusion:

If you claim to be a federal “U.S. citizen” under the Internal Revenue Code and yet do not live in the federal United States/federal zone, the only way you can be subject to the jurisdiction of the United States is to yourself be property or territory of the United States! That’s right: you are a slave! The only thing subject to the jurisdiction of the United States is its territory, and if you aren’t on federal property then YOU are federal territory!

Persons born in the sovereign 50 Union states outside of the “federal zone” are technically not “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes, but “nationals” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) through (a)(22). As “nationals”, they are classified as “nonresident aliens” within the Internal Revenue Code:

26 U.S.C. §7701 Definitions
(B) Nonresident alien
An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of the [federal] United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

One of our readers took this section a step further and actually examined her passport. Below is a snapshot of what the cover of the U.S. passport says, which confirms the fact that U.S. passports recognize two classes of citizenship: “U.S. citizens” and “nationals”:

We can now apply what we have just learned above to the federal government’s definition of “U.S. citizen” found in the Internal Revenue Code and explain why they defined it the way they did. Are you a “U.S. citizen”? Here’s the only definition of “citizen of the United States” found anywhere in the I.R.C. or 26 CFR:

26 CFR 31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen.

(b) The term ‘citizen of the United States’ includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

The answer is EMPHATICALLY NO! The above definition, you will note, also depends on the definition of “United States” or “U.S.” appearing in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10), which we showed earlier in sections 3.9.1.24 and 3.9.1.20 means the federal United States in the context of the Internal Revenue Code. The context must always be examined to determine which of the two types of federal citizens (nationals or citizens) they are talking about. Therefore, the only thing “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” can mean in Subtitles A and C of the Internal Revenue Code is persons born in federal territories and possessions, which doesn’t include most of us. Based on what we just learned, we can now understand why the conniving lawyers inhabiting the District of Columbia (Washington, D.C.) defined it the way they did! Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and Guam are all federal TERRITORIES and territories are the only place that “U.S. citizens” as defined above can be born and reside! The District of Columbia is NOT a territory as the word is correctly defined!

The Fourteenth Amendment has two requirements in order to be a “citizen of the United States”:

1. Born in a state of the Union AND
2. “subject to the jurisdiction” of the federal government.

We must therefore think very clearly about what it means to be “subject to the jurisdiction” above and what context we are talking about: federal statutes versus the Constitution. You will find out later in section 4.11 that the term “subject to the jurisdiction” means the political jurisdiction, which means the ability to vote or serve on jury duty within the 50 states of the Union. If we therefore reside in the 50 Union states and outside of the federal zone, then we are technically “subject to the [political] jurisdiction” of the federal government under the Constitution, but at the same time, we are not subject to most federal statutes and regulations or to the Internal Revenue Code. The founding fathers endowed us with the ability to participate politically in voting and jury service within our country without subjecting ourselves to federal police powers or legislative jurisdiction.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

How does the government rope us into the jurisdiction of federal statutes and “acts of Congress” so they can tax and pillage us? They use confusing terms and definitions on tax and voter registration and jury duty forms to get us to “volunteer” or “elect” to be treated as though we are statutory federal “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 who are subject to federal law and who reside inside the federal zone. For instance, they scare us into filling out an IRS form 1040 that creates a false but prima facie presumption that we occupy the federal zone as a “U.S. citizen.” In effect, they trick us by abusing language into admitting that we occupy the federal zone so they can make us into financial slaves, and it’s perfectly legal because the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude doesn’t apply inside the federal zone!

4.11.7.4 The voluntary nature of citizenship: Requirement for “consent” and “intent”

As we said in section 4.11, the act of becoming a citizens is a voluntary act and requires an intent and consent on your part. The government likes to rig its forms to deceive you into admitting that you are a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes and the Internal Revenue Code, which most people aren’t. Whenever you see any kind of state or federal government form that asks you whether you are a “U.S. citizen”, remember that they are asking about your “intent” and asking for your “consent” to treat you as a “U.S. citizen.” In doing so, what are they really asking you but can’t say outright:

“Do you want to volunteer to give up all of your rights and become a slave to state and federal income taxes who is devoid of Constitutional rights? Do you want to be a Socialist puppet of your government?”

If your answer is yes, you have just volunteered into slavery and servitude to the federal government, in effect. There is absolutely no advantage whatsoever to becoming a “U.S. citizen” because as we said before, your rights don’t come from your citizenship, but from where you live. Even the U.S. Supreme Court says that citizenship is an optional and voluntary act:

“The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other does not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one whole, and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all their rights at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions for one and the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the process of the courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the sovereignty of the United States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the assault. So, too, if one passes counterfeited coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against the United States and the State: the United States, because it discredits the coin; and the State, because of the fraud upon him to whom it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments possess powers in common, or bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a citizenship which owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both.

The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction.

[United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)] [emphasis added]

Returning to the Cruikshank cite above and the meaning of the word “voluntarily” in the context of “U.S. citizen” status, you might at this point want to go forward to Chapter 14, which is Definitions, and look at the definition of “voluntary”. Here is it again:

“Voluntary: (Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575) “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed.”

The implications here are profound, because the Supreme Court is implying here that we don’t have to choose to be statutory “U.S. citizens” because it is voluntary! Voluntary citizenship and voluntary political rights are the very heart 150 See 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c)(3) for confirmation of the fact that the only “individuals” who are “subject” to the Internal Revenue Code are aliens and nonresident aliens.

and soul of what it means to live in a free country and have liberty! We can’t be citizens by compulsion or by presumption, and must do so by choice. We can simply be “free inhabitants” under the Articles of Confederation instead of statutory “citizens” if that status affords us the most protections for our God-give rights and liberties. The reason why citizenship MUST be voluntary is because of what we find in the Declaration of Independence, which states:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. —That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.” [emphasis added]

The key word here is “consent”. If you don’t want to be a “U.S. citizen” or accept the so-called “benefits” or “privileges and immunities” of a highly litigious and corrupt and greedy socialist democracy, or submit yourself to its corrupt laws that are clearly in conflict with God’s sovereign laws, then you don’t have to! Consent can’t be compelled and if it is, then the exercise of government power in such a case is no longer “just” as Thomas Jefferson says here, and represents “injustice”.

Please remember that the purpose of our court system is to effect justice, not injustice, so the courts can’t enforce that which isn’t consensual. The only exception to this rule is if a person does something that infringes on the equal rights or liberties of a bona fide, flesh and blood third party. Nonpayment of “income taxes” (which are in reality donations) does not accomplish this because the state/government isn’t a natural or real person, but an artificial legal entity that actually is a corporation. The problem is, even if your choice or consent was procured by force or fraud or trickery on the part of the government or its treacherous lawyers, as it is in most cases, the judges in our corrupt federal courts are so eager to get their hands in your pocket that they won’t give you the benefit of the doubt as their very own precedents and rulings clearly establish. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said about this subject:

“Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”
[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

“Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary, but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences.”
[Brady v. United States, 397 U.S. 742, 90 S.Ct. 1463 (1970)]

Powerful stuff, folks! By the way, there are LOTS of similar quotes like the first quote above that use the word “taxpayer” instead of “citizen”, but we positively refuse to use them because the word “taxpayer” is a due process trap and a government scam, as you will learn later in section 5.3.1. Based on the above, if most judges really were “honorable” (which is why we are supposed to call them “your honor” but also why they seldom merit that name), they would presume we are “nationals” unless and until THE GOVERNMENT meets the burden of proof that we chose to become privileged “U.S. citizens” by an informed and deliberate choice and consent rather than by presumption and by fraud because of our own legal ignorance when filling out government forms. The foundation of this is that in our system of justice, we are “innocent until proven guilty”. In the commercial world, a contract becomes valid only when there is:

1. An offer: government offers to make us “U.S. citizens”
2. Acceptance: we accept their offer voluntarily and without duress. Being deceived constitutes duress insofar as the actions of our government are concerned.
3. Consideration: receipt of the privileges and immunities of “U.S. citizen” status in our case or income tax on the part of the government
4. Mutual assent by both parties: informed choice and a full understanding of the rights that are being surrendered or waived in the process of procuring the perceived benefit.

The fourth element above is missing from the “citizenship contract” we signed when we submitted our government application for voter registration, passport, or social security benefits, and therefore the “citizenship contract” cannot and should not be legally enforced by our dishonorable courts, but it is anyway in a massive conspiracy to deprive us of rights under 18 U.S.C. §241 and in violation of the spirit and intent of the “social contract” called U.S. Constitution and that of the framers who wrote it. The goal of this document is to ensure that your consent from this day forward is fully informed so that the government can no longer use your own ignorance as a weapon against you to STEAL your property. After you have read this document, if you continue to remain a “U.S. citizen”, then you will have no one to blame but yourself for your inaction at eliminating that status and regaining your God-given rights. The choice to do NOTHING is a choice to remain a slave. As Sherry Peel Jackson, an X IRS Examination agent very powerfully said at the We The People Truth In Taxation Hearings on February 28, 2002 (http://www.bostonteaparty2.com):

“You can remain an informed slave, or you can leave the plantation entirely!”

So the question is, why on earth would anyone want to “volunteer” to be a citizen of either their state or federal government and thereby volunteer to be subject to the legislative jurisdiction of our corrupt and covetous government? What if you don’t want government “protection” as the Supreme Court describes above and want to fend for yourself or better yet have God protect you? Remember that a compelled benefit is not a benefit, but slavery disguised as government benevolence! If the government abuses its power by threatening anyone who doesn’t want protection [from harassment by IRS computers in the collection of taxes when they aren’t paid, for instance] and thereby forces you to accept protection and to pay taxes for that protection, then government becomes nothing more than a mafia protection racket under such circumstances, who charges you for protection from its own bad deeds! This kind of arrangement is no different than Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations (RICO), which is a serious crime under 18 U.S.C. §225. I certainly don’t choose to “volunteer” to be a citizen of my federal government under such compelled circumstances and you shouldn’t either.

We should never forget that God in the Bible clearly states that we should not be citizens of any state or government, because in doing so we surrender our sovereignty and the protection of God, and trade our God-given rights for taxable government “privileges” and protection, thereby becoming slaves!:

“Protection draws subjection.”

Armed with the knowledge that “U.S. citizen” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” is entirely voluntary, let’s now examine the federal government’s definition of the term “naturalization” to determine at what point we “volunteered”:

8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23) naturalization defined

(a)(23) The term “naturalization” means the conferring of nationality [NOT “citizenship” or “U.S. citizenship”, but “nationality”, which means “national”] of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever.

And here is the definition in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026 of naturalization:

Naturalization. The process by which a person acquires nationality [not citizenship, but nationality] after birth and becomes entitled to the privileges of U.S. citizenship. 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 et seq.

In the United States collective naturalization occurs when designated groups are made citizens by treaty (as Louisiana Purchase), or by a law of Congress (as in annexation of Texas and Hawaii). Individual naturalization must follow certain steps: (a) petition for naturalization by a person of lawful age who has been a lawful resident of the United States for 5 years; (b) investigation by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to determine whether the applicant can speak and write the English language, has a knowledge of the fundamentals of American government and history, is attached to the principles of the Constitution and is of good moral character; (c) hearing before a U.S. District Court or certain State courts of record; and (d) after a lapse of at least 30 days a second appearance in court when the oath of allegiance is administered.

Hmmm. Well then, if you were a foreigner who was “naturalized” to become a “national” (and keep in mind that all of America is mostly a country of immigrants), then some questions arise:

1. At what point did you become a “U.S. citizen” under federal law, because “naturalization” didn’t do it?
2. By what means did you inform the government of your “informed choice” in this voluntary process?

The answer is that when you applied for a passport or registered to vote or participated in jury duty, the government asked you whether you were a “U.S. citizen” and you lied by saying “YES”. In effect, although you never made an informed choice to surrender your sovereign status as a “national” to become a “U.S. citizen”, you created a “presumption” on their part that you were a “U.S. citizen” just because of the erroneous paperwork you sent them which they can later use as evidence in court to prove you are a “U.S. citizen”. Even worst, they ENCOURAGED you to make it erroneous because of the way they designed the forms by not even giving you a choice on the form to indicate that you were a “national” instead of a “U.S. citizen”! By you checking the “U.S. citizen” block on their rigged forms, that is all the evidence they needed to conclude, incorrectly and to their massive financial benefit I might add, that you were a “U.S. citizen” who was completely subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. BAD IDEA!

Technically and lawfully, the federal government does not have the lawful authority to confer statutory “citizen of the United States” status upon a person born inside a Union state on land that is not part of the federal zone and domiciled there. If they did, they would be “sheep poachers” who were stealing citizens from the Union states and depriving those states of control over persons born within their jurisdiction. This is so because “citizen of the United States” status is superior and dominant over state citizenship according to the Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873):

“The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government. The question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship of the United States and the citizen’s place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, 183 U.S. 36, 1131 and an equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation, and a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to The Constitution, is, a sort and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to such regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he is denied one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States.”

[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

Therefore, persons born in the Union states but outside the federal zone (federal areas or enclaves within the states) must be naturalized technically in order to become “citizens of the United States”. However, the rules for naturalization in the case of federal citizenship are so lax and transparent that people are fooled into thinking they always were “citizens of the United States”! Whenever you fill out a passport or voter registration form and claim you are a “citizen of the United States” or a “U.S. citizen”, for instance, even if you technically weren’t because you weren’t born inside the federal zone, then you have effectively and formally “naturalized” yourself into federal citizenship and given the government evidence admissible under penalty of perjury proving that you are a federal serf and slave!

I therefore like to think of the term “U.S. citizen” used by the Internal Revenue Service and the Internal Revenue Code as being like the sign that your enemies taped on your back in grammar school without you knowing which said “HIT ME!”, and the only people who can see the sign or understand what it means are those who work for the government and the IRS and the legal profession! Your own legal ignorance is the only reason that you don’t know that you have this sign on your back.

4.11.7.6 Presumptions about “citizen of the United States” status

The courts often “presume” you to be a statutory federal citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401, without even telling you that there are different classes of citizens. It is up to you dispute this.

“Unless the defendant can prove he is not a citizen of the United States, the IRS has the right to inquire and determine a tax liability.”

The legal encyclopedia, American Jurisprudence, further helps explain the nature of the above presumption as shown below:

“As a general rule, it is presumed, until the contrary is shown, that every person is a citizen of the country [nation, meaning “national”] in which he or she resides.155 Furthermore, once granted, citizenship is presumptually retained unless voluntarily relinquished,156 and the burden rests upon one alleging a change of citizenship and allegiance to establish that fact. Consequently, a person born in the United States is presumed to continue to be a citizen until the contrary is shown, and where it appears that a person was once a citizen of a particular foreign country, even though residing in another, the presumption is that he or she still remains a citizen of such foreign country, until the contrary appears.”

[3C AmJur 2d 204 Presumptions concerning citizenship]

The above quote is obviously written so that it could very easily mislead those who do not understand the separation of powers doctrine or the nature of federal jurisdiction. As we said earlier in section 4.6, the “United States*” is not a “nation”, but a “federation” of independent states. Within the context of The Law of Nations (see Vattel), the federal zone in combination with the 50 states are collectively considered a “country”, but not a nation. Politicians and judges do frequently refer to the federal government as the “national government” to deliberately mislead people, but you would be mistaken to conclude that we are a “nation” in the legal sense.157 When the above cite says we are “presumed” to be a “citizen” of the “country in which he or she resides”, what they are saying is that we are to be presumed to be a “national” but not necessarily a statutory “citizen” under the laws of that country. The US* is a country but not a nation, while both the US and the US are both a county and a nation. Therefore, if you are residing within the US you are presume to be a national of the US and if you are residing in the US you are presumed to be a national of the US. We will explain this further later in section 4.11.14, where we will show that the word “citizen” used independently of the name of a geographic region, simply implies “national”. This confusion over definitions was not our doing, but a creation of the politicians and the courts to keep you confused and enslaved to their corrupt jurisdiction.

155 Shelton v. Tiffin, 47 U.S. 163, 6 How. 163, 12 L.Ed. 387 (1848).
157 See Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)
As we covered earlier in section 2.8.2, having a Social Security Number (SSN) also creates a rebuttable presumption that you are a “U.S. citizen”, according to the Internal Revenue Code:

26 CFR §301.6109-1(g)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons—

(1) General rule—

(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual’s social security number.

The reason you can rebut this presumption is that the Social Security Administration Program Operations Manual says that both “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. nationals” can participate in the Social Security program, and because foreigners can acquire a Socialist Security Number as well using an SS-5 form.

To rebut the presumption that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, simply present your SS-5 form reflecting your correct status as a “national”, along with your birth certificate. You can also show them a copy of any of the following documents, which we show you how to prepare so as to reflect your correct citizenship status in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005:

1. Voter registration
2. Passport application
3. Government security clearance application
4. Jury summons

Using the above evidence to rebut incorrect presumptions about your citizenship status can be useful when you are filing tax returns and when you are litigating in court and you want the judge to respect your choice of citizenship status.

WARNING!: If you have a Socialist Security Number and you don’t rebut the presumption that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” with evidence in a court proceeding, then the state and federal courts will automatically presume that you are without even telling you that they are! This can have disastrous results!

4.11.7.7 Privileges and Immunities of U.S. citizens

Statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 do not have natural rights (constitutional civil rights) granted by God but instead have statutory civil rights granted by Congress. The rights that most people believe they have are not natural rights but civil rights which are actually franchise privileges granted by Congress to only statutory “citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Some of these statutory civil rights parallel the protection of the Bill of Rights (the first 10 Amendments to the Constitution), but by researching the Civil Rights Act along with case law decisions involving those rights, it can be shown that these so-called civil rights do not include the Ninth or Tenth Amendments and have only limited application with regard to Amendments One through Eight.

If you accept any benefit from the federal government or you claim any statutory civil right, you are making an “adhesion contract” with the federal government. You may not be aware of any adhesion contracts but the courts are. The other aspect of such a contract is that you will obey every statute that Congress passes. For example, if you want to be in receipt of the “privilege” of becoming a commissioned officer in the U.S. military, 10 U.S.C. §532(a)(1) requires that you must be a statutory “citizen of the United States”. That same statute in paragraph (3) requires that officers must be “of good moral character”. Does supreme ignorance fit the description of “good moral character”? No one other than either an idiot or a liar would claim to be a statutory “citizen of the United States” if they were born in a Union state outside of the federal zone and domiciled there, based on the content of this section. Does that meet the definition of “good moral character”? We think not! We must also conclude that there are an awful lot of officers in the U.S. military who don’t belong there, because the vast majority of them no doubt had to be born inside the Union states instead of inside the federal zone. Wouldn’t this make a GREAT subject for a lawsuit: getting most of the officers in the military kicked out of the military because they are not, in fact, “U.S. citizens”? Can you see just how insidious this “privilege-induced slavery” is that our government uses to trap us into their corrupt jurisdiction? The most distressing part is that it’s all based on fraud and lies, and the government in this case loves being lied to and won’t question the lies, because willfully acquiescing to lies is the only way they can manufacture “taxpayers” and idiots they can govern and have jurisdiction over!

Privileged “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 are presumed to be operating in the jurisdiction of private commercial law because that is the jurisdiction of their creator -- Congress. This is evidenced by the existence of various contracts and the use of negotiable instruments. All are products of international law or commercial law [Uniform Commercial Code]. Under Common Law your intent is important; in a court of equity and contract (commercial law) the only thing that matters is that you live up to the letter of the contract. Because you have adhesion contracts with Congress, you cannot use the Constitution or Bill of Rights as a defense because it is irrelevant to the contract. As stated previously, the contract says you will obey every Act of Congress. A federal “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 does not have access to Common Law. If you doubt this, appoint a counsel of your choice and under contract who is not licensed by the socialist state to practice law to represent you in court. Go in front of the federal court and when they ask for his state bar number, tell them the counsel isn’t licensed and doesn’t need to be licensed. If they try to dismiss your counsel for not being licensed, cite Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution says

U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 10

“No State shall . . . pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.”

By removing your counsel, they have effected a Bill of Attainder by penalizing you without a law or even a trial related to attorney licensing for exercising your right to contract. They have in effect created a Title of Nobility for all those who are licensed to practice law in the state. They have also penalized you in effect for exercising your right of free speech in the process of removing the person you chose to be your spokesperson, who is then prevented from representing you. They have done this in furtherance of the private lawyer’s labor union called the American Bar Association (ABA).

Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment says that “citizens of the United States”, which we will show later are actually “nationals” or “nationals of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452, have special “privileges and immunities” above and beyond those of purely state Citizens, but what exactly are they? The annotated Fourteenth Amendment answers this question. Below is an excerpt from the annotated Fourteenth Amendment on the “privileges and immunities” of U.S. citizens:

SECTION 1. RIGHTS GUARANTEED: PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES

Unique among constitutional provisions, the privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment enjoys the distinction of having been rendered a “practical nullity” by a single decision of the Supreme Court issued within five years of its ratification. In the Slaughter-House Cases, 15, a bare majority of the Court frustrated the aims of the most aggressive sponsors of this clause, to whom was attributed an intention to centralize “in the hands of the Federal Government large powers hitherto exercised by the States” with a view to enabling business to develop unimpeded by state interference. This expansive alteration of the federal system was to have been achieved by converting the rights of the citizens of each State as of the date of the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment into privileges and immunities of United States citizenship and thereafter perpetuating this newly defined status quo through judicial condemnation of any state law challenged as “abridging” any one of the latter privileges. To have fostered such intentions, the Court declared, would have been “to transfer the security and protection of all the civil rights . . . to the Federal Government, . . . to bring within the power of Congress the entire domain of civil rights heretofore belonging exclusively to the States,” and to “constitute this court a perpetual censor upon all legislation of the States, on the civil rights of their own citizens, with authority to nullify such as it did not approve as consistent with those rights, as they existed at the time of the adoption of this amendment. . . . [The effect of] so great a departure from the structure and spirit of our institutions . . . is to fetter and degrade the State governments by subjecting them to the control of Congress, in the exercise of powers heretofore universally conceded to them of the most ordinary and fundamental character. . . . We are convinced that no such results were intended by the Congress . . . nor by the legislatures . . . , which ratified this amendment, and that the sole “pervading purpose” of this and the other War Amendments was “the freedom of the slave race.”

Conformably to these conclusions, the Court advised the New Orleans butchers that the Louisiana statute, conferring on a single corporation a monopoly of the business of slaughtering cattle, abrogated no rights possessed by them as United States citizens; insofar as that law interfered with their claimed privilege of pursuing the lawful calling of butchering animals, the privilege thus terminated was merely one of “those which belonged to the citizens of the States as such.” Privileges and immunities of state citizenship had been “left to the state governments for security and protection” and had not been placed by this clause “under the special care of the Federal Government." The only privileges which the Fourteenth Amendment protected against state encroachment were declared to be those "which owe their existence to the Federal Government, its National character, its Constitution, or its laws." 16 These privileges, however, had been available to United States citizens and protected from state interference by operation of federal supremacy even prior to the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment. The Slaughter-House Cases, therefore, reduced the privileges and immunities clause to a superfluous reiteration of a prohibition already operative against the states.

Although the Court has expressed a reluctance to attempt a definitive enumeration of those privileges and immunities of United States citizens which are protected against state encroachment, it nevertheless felt obliged in the Slaughter-House Cases "to suggest some which owe their existence to the Federal Government, its National character, its Constitution, or its laws." 17 Among those which it then identified were the right of access to the seat of Government and to the seaports, subtreasuries, land offices, and courts of justice in the several States, the right to demand protection of the Federal Government on the high seas or abroad, the right of assembly, the privilege of habeas corpus, the right to use the navigable waters of the United States, and rights secured by treaty. In Twining v. New Jersey, 18 the Court recognized "among the rights and privileges" of national citizenship the right to pass freely from State to State, 19 the right to petition Congress for a redress of grievances, 20 the right to vote for national officers, 21 the right to enter public lands, 22 the right to be protected against violence while in the lawful custody of a United States marshal, 23 and the right to inform the United States authorities of violation of its laws. 24 Earlier, in a decision not mentioned in Twining, the Court had also acknowledged that the carrying on of interstate commerce is "a right which every citizen of the United States is entitled to exercise." 25

In modern times, the Court has continued the minor role accorded to the clause, only occasionally manifesting a disposition to enlarge the restraint which it imposes upon state action. Colgate v. Harvey, 26 which was overruled five years later, 27 represented the first attempt by the Court since adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment to convert the privileges and immunities clause into a source of protection of other than those "interests growing out of the relationship between the citizen and the national government." Here, the Court declared that the right of a citizen resident in one State to contract in another, to transact any lawful business, or to make a loan of money, in any State other than that in which the citizen resides was a privilege of national citizenship which was abridged by a state income tax law excluding from taxable income interest received on money loaned within the State. In Hague v. CIO, 28 two and perhaps three justices thought that freedom to use municipal streets and parks for the dissemination of information concerning provisions of a federal statute and to assemble peacefully therein for discussion of the advantages and opportunities offered by such act was a privilege and immunity of a United States citizen, and in Edwards v. California 29 four Justices were prepared to rely on the clause. 30 In Oyama v. California, 31 in a single sentence the Court agreed with the contention of a native-born youth that a state Alien Land Law, applied to work a forfeiture of property purchased in his name with funds advanced by his parent, a Japanese alien ineligible for citizenship and precluded from owning land, deprived him "of his privileges as an American citizen." The right to acquire and retain property had previously not been set forth in any of the enumerations as one of the privileges protected against state abridgment, although a federal statute enacted prior to the proposal and ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment did confer on all citizens the same rights to purchase and hold real property as white citizens enjoyed. 32

It is important to realize that the status of “citizen of the United States” under Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment makes state citizenship “derivative and dependent” upon federal citizenship.

"Thus, the dual character of our citizenship is made plainly apparent. That is to say, a citizen of the United States is ipso facto and at the same time a citizen of the state in which he resides. And while the Fourteenth Amendment does not create a national citizenship, it has the effect of making that citizenship 'paramount and dominant' instead of 'derivative and dependent' upon state citizenship. 1 In reviewing the subject,' Chief Justice White said, in the Selective Draft Law Cases, 345 U.S. 366, 372, 388 S., 389, 38 S.Ct. 159, 165, L.R.A. 1918C, 361, Ann.Cas. 1918B, 856: 'We have hitherto considered it as it has been argued from the point of view of the Constitution as it stood prior to the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment. But to avoid all misapprehension we briefly direct attention to that (the fourteenth) amendment for the purpose of pointing out, as has been frequently done in the past, how completely it broadened the national scope of the government under the Constitution by causing citizenship of the United States to be paramount and dominant instead of being subordinate [296 U.S. 404, 428] and derivative, and therefore operating as it does upon all the powers conferred by the Constitution leaving no possible support for the contentions made if their want of merit was otherwise not to clearly made manifest.' "

[Colgate v. Harvey, 296 U.S. 404 (1935)]

Five years later, in Madden v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 309 U.S. 83 (1940), the Supreme Court contradicted itself by overruling Colgate v. Harvey in its majority opinion, but the above does help you to understand how the courts think about statutory “nationals”. The court also ruled in Madden that the main goal of the Fourteenth Amendment was to protect Negro slaves in their freedom, and was therefore not intended to apply to the rest of the predominantly white population.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

4.11.7.8 Definitions of federal citizenship terms

We’d like to clarify one more very important point about the meaning of the term “citizen of the United States” based on the definition of “naturalization” offered earlier. Because “naturalization” is defined statutorily in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23) as the process of conferring “nationality” rather than “federal U.S. citizen” status, then some people believe that the “citizen of the United States” that section 1 of the Fourteenth is referring to must actually be that of a “national” rather than “U.S. citizen”. We agree wholeheartedly with this conclusion, and you will learn many additional reasons why this is the case later in section 4.11.14, where we show how the government has deliberately confused definitions to deceive you.

There is additional evidence found earlier in section 4.6 which corroborates the view that a “citizen of the United States” mentioned repeatedly by the Supreme Court is actually a “national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). In that section, we quoted the Black’s Law Dictionary Fourth Edition definition of “National Government” as well as the Supreme Court case of Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793) to conclusively show that the “United States” is not a “nation”, but a “federation” of sovereign states. Now if the “United States” is defined as a “federation” and not a “nation”, then what exactly does it mean to say that a person is a “national”? What “nation” are they a “citizen” of under such a circumstance if it isn’t the “United States”? Well, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) answers this question authoritatively:

(TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a)(21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

It’s important to realize that federal statutes and most “acts of Congress” are simply municipal legislation that only have force and effect over the federal zone in most cases. The term “state” in the context of federal statutes, since it is not capitalized, means a foreign state, which can either be a foreign country or a state of the Union. So it is therefore reasonable to conclude that a “national” can only mean a person born in a state of the Union or a foreign country to parents who were also “nationals” and who owes allegiance to the federation of states called the “United States”.

If you were born in a state of the Union, you are a “national” but not a “citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452, and this is so because of section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment and state law, and not because of any federal statute. The courts of your state, in fact, have the authority under the Law of Nations to declare your “citizen of the United States” status under the Fourteenth Amendment based on your birth certificate. Remember always that Congress wears two hats:

1. The equivalent of a state government over the federal zone.
2. An independent contractor for the states of the Union that handles external affairs for the entire country only.

The laws that Congress writes pertain to one of these two political jurisdictions, and it is often difficult to tell which of these two that a specific federal law applies to. The only thing that federal statutes pertain to in most cases are statutory federal “U.S. citizens” or “citizens and nationals of the United States” as defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which are people who are born anywhere in the country but domiciled on federal property that is within the federal zone, because Congress is the municipal “city hall” for the federal zone. The “States” they legislate for in this capacity are federal “States”, which are in fact territories and possessions of the United States such as Guam and Puerto Rico. Federal statutes and the U.S. Codes do not and cannot address what happens to people who are born in a state of the Union because Congress has no police power or legislative jurisdiction over states of the Union for the vast majority of subject matters. All legislation and statutes of the states, including the power of taxation of internal commerce, are “plenary” and exclusive within their own respective territorial jurisdictions. Therefore, don’t go looking for a federal statute that confers citizenship upon you as someone who was born in a state of the Union, because there isn’t one! No government is authorized to write legislation that operates outside its territory, which is called “extraterritorial legislation”.

“The Constitution of the United States [before the Fourteenth Amendment] does not declare who are and who are not its citizens, nor does it attempt to describe the constituent elements of citizenship; it leaves that quality where it found it, resting upon the fact of home birth and upon the laws of the several states.”

A “citizen” in the context of most federal statutes is someone who is either born or naturalized in federal territory within the federal “United States” (federal zone). A “national”, however, is someone who was born anywhere within the country called the “United States”. A “citizen” in state statutes and regulations usually refers to someone who is a state citizen, and not necessarily a federal citizen. These points are very important to remember as you read through this book.

So how do we conclusively relate what a “citizen of the United States” is under the Fourteenth Amendment to a specific citizenship status found in federal statutes? We have to look at Title 8, Aliens and Nationality and compare the terms they use to describe each and reach our own conclusions, because the government gives us absolutely no help doing this. Does it surprise you that the Master doesn’t want to educate the slaves how to take off their chains by eliminating their captivity to “words of art”? Title 8 of the U.S. Code does not even define “U.S. citizen” and only defines the term “citizens and nationals of the United States” in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or “nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth” in 8 U.S.C. §1408. Upon trying to resolve the distinctions between these two terms and how they relate to the term “citizen of the United States” used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment, we searched diligently for authorities and found no authority or cite in federal statutes that makes the term “citizens and nationals of the United States” used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 equivalent to the term “citizen of the United States” used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment or the term “citizen” used in the 26 CFR §1.1-1.

Both the IRC in Subtitle A of Title 26 and Title 8 of the U.S.C. use equivalent definitions for “United States” (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), and 8 CFR §215.1(f)), and all three mean the federal zone only. The “citizen” appearing in 26 CFR §1.1-1, is a federal “U.S. citizen” only, which is defined in 26 CFR §31.3121(e)-1 as a person born in Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, or American Samoa, which are all territories or possessions of the United States. The “citizens and nationals of the United States” appearing in the 8 U.S.C. §1401 are the same federal “U.S. citizens” as that appearing in Title 26 and are equivalent. If you are a “national” or “state national” born in a state of the Union, you should never admit to being a “U.S. citizen” or a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes or the Internal Revenue Code because people born in states of the Union are the equivalent of a “National” under federal statutes or “citizens of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment.

We believe the confusion the government has created by mixing up the meanings of “citizenship” and “nationality” in federal statutes and cases construing them is deliberate, and is meant to help induce ignorant Americans everywhere into falsely claiming they are “U.S. citizens” on their tax returns and voter registration, which is defined as an entirely different type of citizenship under Title 26 than the one referred to in either the Fourteenth Amendment as “citizens of the United States” or the cases construing it that we mention in this section. We will now summarize our findings and research in graphical form to make the definitions and distinctions we have just made crystal clear:

Based on the above, there is no legal basis to conclude that a “citizen of the United States” under the tax code at 26 CFR §31.3121(e)-1 and a “citizen of the United States” as used by the Supreme Court or the Fourteenth Amendment, are equivalent because nowhere in the law are they made equivalent, and each depends on a different definition of “United States”. However, if you read through court cases on citizenship, you will find that the federal courts like to create a false “presumption” that they are equivalent in order to help expand federal jurisdiction. If you want to understand the meanings of the terms provided above, you will therefore have to read through all of the authorities cited above and convince yourself of the validity of the table.

If you look closely at 26 CFR §1.1-1(c ) where income taxes are “imposed”, you will find that it does not use or define “U.S. citizen” but does refer to “citizens”. Remember that under 26 U.S.C. §7806(b), the title of a section or subsection in the Internal Revenue Code has no legal significance. Since that regulation implements 26 U.S.C. §1, which imposes the tax on “individuals”, one can “presume” but not conclusively prove that the regulation is describing what a “U.S. citizen” is under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Keep in mind, however, that the term “citizen” refers to the federal United States in the Internal Revenue Code because of the definition it depends on in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). Nowhere in Titles 8 or 26, however, are the terms “U.S. citizen” and “citizen of the United States” ever correlated or identified as being equivalent, but we must conclude that they are the same because the definition of “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) are equivalent and include only the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States.

4.11.7.9 Further Study

If you want to know who the Social Security Administration thinks is a “U.S. citizen”, refer to the link below, which is a section from the SSA’s Program Operation Manual System (POMS). Note that all the references in the POMS manual we are about to cite below use the term “State” and “United States” as meaning federal States and the federal United States only. The link below from POMS is entitled “Who is a U.S. citizen”:

http://policy.ssa.gov/poms.nsf/lnx/0200303120-A

Another useful link in the SSA’s POMS manual is the section entitled “Developing Evidence of U.S. citizenship”:

http://policy.ssa.gov/poms.nsf/lnx/0300204015

And finally, another useful section from the POMS manual on the SSA website is entitled “GN 00303.300 Establishing U.S. Citizenship for All SSA Programs” at:
In conclusion, we need not be afraid because we are not legally obligated to be federal statutory citizens or “U.S. citizens” and can choose to be a constitutional “citizen of the United States” (or natural born Sovereign). State Citizens are also called “non-citizen nationals” in federal statutes. Our right of choosing our statutory federal citizenship is absolute and cannot be abridged. One can become a “national of the United States” (a state only citizen) without being a statutory “citizen of the United States” (a federal statutory citizen). That is why we repeatedly advise expatriating from federal United States citizenship in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

WARNING: The feds apparently are so sure that you will be angry and violent after finding out the devious scam they played with “U.S. citizenship” that they made it illegal to be a gun dealer if you were once a U.S. citizen and renounced your statutory “U.S. citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 to become a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)! Take a look at 18 U.S.C. §922(g)(7) to see for yourself at: http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/18/922.html

Note that because Constitutional rights only apply in the sovereign 50 Union states, this statute can only apply inside the federal zone.

For further detailed information on federal citizenship, we refer you to section 3.8.10 on the Fourteenth Amendment.

4.11.8 State Citizens/Nationals

The term “State Citizen” and “State National” are equivalent. For instance, if you were born in California, you would be called a “California National”. The basis for this name is found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), which says in pertinent part:

"A citizen of the United States is a citizen of the federal government and of the state in which he resided, and one possessing such double citizenship owes allegiance and is entitled to protection from each sovereign to whose jurisdiction he is subject."

As used in this chapter -

(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

A State National owes permanent allegiance to his state. If he also wants to be a U.S. national, then he must also have allegiance to the confederation of states called the “United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

We also use the terms “national” or “state national” in this book. These people are those who obtained their federal citizenship by virtue of being born in a state of the Union. “state national” is a term we invented, because there is no standard term to describe these people within the legal field. Since federal statutes cannot and do not recognize events which happen within sovereign states, they do not mention this status but it certainly exists, and it exists under The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 212, which is what the founders used to write the U.S. Constitution and which is recognized in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10 of that document. The reason federal statutes do not and cannot mention the citizenship status of persons born in states of the Union is because these states are “sovereign nations” and “foreign countries” with respect to the federal government under the Law of Nations. Under the Law of Nations, the federal government does not have the authority delegated by the Constitution to prescribe or even define the citizenship status of people born in states of the Union. Here are some examples of cases from the Supreme Court which confirm this conclusion:
State Citizens cannot be subjected in state courts to any jurisdiction of law outside the Common Law without their knowing and willing consent after full disclosure of the terms and conditions, and such consent must be under agreement/contract sealed by signature. This is because the Constitution is a compact/contract created and existing in the jurisdiction of the Common Law, therefore, any rights secured thereunder or disabilities limiting the powers of government also exist in the Common Law, and in no other jurisdiction provided for in that compact!

Both State Citizens and federal citizens are Americans. Statutory “U.S. citizens” described within “acts of Congress” are “resident” in the federal zone and are privileged aliens in relation to the state of the Union wherein they reside. State statutory Citizens are domiciled in their state and not aliens in their state. They also do not “reside” in their state: they are instead Citizens domiciled in the state. The only people who are “residents” in regards to the Internal Revenue Code are usually aliens domiciled on federal territory in the state or nonresidents occupying federal enclaves within the state. The distinction may seem insignificant to you but it is not to the court. A state Citizen has the right to travel in each of the 50 Union states. He/she can file papers at any county courthouse in any state and become a Citizen of that state.

Nearly all federal statute laws do not apply to State Citizens/Nationals. If the authority for the statute can be found in the organic Constitution, then the statute is of a National character, as it applies to both state Citizens and aliens. Acts of Congress do not protect the Constitutional rights of State Citizens. Only state law serves this purpose.

“If these decisions, and many others that might be cited, before us, it is vain to contend that the Federal Constitution secures to a citizen of the United States the right to work at a given occupation or particular calling free from injury, oppression, or interference by individual citizens.

[Hodges v. United States, 203 U.S. 1, 27 S.Ct. 6 (1906)]
The terms “State” and “state” are not equivalent in federal statutes and nearly all “acts of Congress”. When we capitalize the word “State”, we are referring to the "federal zone" areas within the contiguous borders of a state that are subject to the exclusive federal jurisdiction of the U.S. Government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution. When we don’t capitalize the word “state”, we are referring to the contiguous areas of a state that are under the exclusive jurisdiction of a state government and not the federal government.

Whenever we describe ourselves as “citizens of a State” or a “citizen of the United States” in the context of federal statutes or “acts of Congress”, then we declare ourselves to live in a federal territory as statutory “U.S. citizens” or “citizens of the [federal] United States”. That puts us in the same status as the slaves who were freed after the civil war in 1868. Do you want to be a slave? We should therefore NEVER say “I am a citizen of the State of _____” or “I am a citizen of this State.” Why? Well, because, for instance, the California Revenue and Taxation Code §6017 defines the term “State” as follows:

California Revenue and Taxation Code

6017. “In this State” or “in the State” means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign union] state of California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

Now do you understand why California has the same definition of “gross income” as the federal government and why they can impose a constitutional income tax? Because by playing with the definition of words, they have deceived you into convincing them (quite incorrectly and unnecessarily) that you are a statutory “citizen of the [federal] United States” (the federal zone) under the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress and consequently you are not subject to the same Constitutional protections that other Sovereign Americans enjoy! You must rebut this presumption vigorously at all times by watching the language and the words you use. They have effectively deceived and enticed you into the “federal zone” so they could abuse and enslave you with the income tax. This amounts to “enticement into slavery”, which clearly violates 18 U.S.C. §1581 and 14 U.S.C. §1994 and is a felony!

Instead, we should always use the name of the state in our description as follows: “I am a national of California” or “I am a Citizen of the California Republic”. The word “Citizen” should always be capitalized to emphasize that we are a “Sovereign state citizen/national”, and the word “State” should not appear in the name to avoid ambiguity.

You will find out later in section 5.2.13 of this book that the states of the Union are considered to be “foreign countries” and “foreign nations” and “foreign states” with respect to the federal government.

“New states, upon their admission into the Union, become invested with equal rights and are subject only to such restrictions as are imposed upon the states already admitted. There can be no state of the Union whose sovereignty or freedom of action is in any respect different from that of any other state. There can be no restriction upon any state other than one prescribed upon all the states by the Federal Constitution. Congress, in admitting a state, cannot restrict such state by bargain. The state, by so contracting with Congress, is in no way bound by such a contract, however irrevocable it is stated to be. It is said that subject to the restraint and limitations of the Federal Constitution, the states have all the sovereign powers of independent nations over all persons and things within their respective territorial limits.”

[16 American Jurisprudence (AmJur) 2d, Sovereignty of states §281]

Because the 50 Union states are technically “nations” and “foreign states”, then people who are “state nationals” and who are not statutory “citizens and nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1401:

1. Are “nationals of California”, or simply “nationals”, for instance, and not “U.S. citizens” on their application for a U.S. passport. Several of our readers have obtained U.S. passports by claiming to be, for instance, “CALIFORNIA NATIONAL” in block 16 of their DS-011 Passport Application.
2. Can correctly claim that they are a “nonresident alien” when they file their federal income tax return if they do not live in a federal enclave within their state. Money they earn within their state as a nonresident alien will also not be under the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and need not be entered on their tax return.
3. Can correctly claim that they are nonresidents of the “United States” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9).
4. Are not subject to most federal laws or any of the criminal laws in Title 18 of the U.S. Codes unless they are physically on federal property, which most people seldom are.
5. If they sue or convict a federal employee for wrongdoing or the federal government tries to convict them under federal law, they can file their claim under “diversity of citizenship”, 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) in the federal court as “citizens of a foreign state”.

6. May not declare themselves on any federal government form to be “U.S. citizens” because they were not born in the federal “United States” as required by 8 U.S.C. §1401.

7. May declare themselves to be “nationals” or “nationals of the United States” under federal law.

8. May vote in any election that requires them to be “U.S. citizens” in order to vote, which is the case in most states. They must clarify the meaning of “U.S. citizen” on their voter application form to prevent false assumptions about their citizenship when they register.

9. May not collect any Social Security benefits, because the Social Security Program Operations Manual (POM) section GN 00303.001 states that only “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. nationals” can collect benefits.

10. May not hold a U.S. security clearance unless they become either a “U.S. citizen” or “U.S. national” under federal statutes.

Now a little history. Before the second world war, some states of the Union issued their own passports to their citizens for foreign travel. That’s right, you didn’t need a U.S. passport because each state was the equivalent of an independent nation. The states still have this status, but they act like they don’t and delegate the passport function to the federal government. Our public servants in the federal government are abusing this power to create a presumption that the applicant is a “U.S. citizen” so they can illegally obtain jurisdiction over the applicant and subject them to the Internal Revenue Code and other federal statutes. Most states even require persons who wish to vote in federal elections to be “U.S. citizens”. Such unethical tactics on the part of the states are what we call “cooperative federalism”, where the states help the federal government to “poach” sheep in the states and put them primarily under federal jurisdiction as “U.S. citizens” in a conspiracy against rights that is a federal crime under 18 U.S.C. §241.

If you don’t want to collect Socialist Security Benefits nor serve in the military nor hold a U.S. government security clearance, then citizenship as a statutory “non-citizen national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1452 is the best type of citizenship that provides the best protection for your liberties and complete immunity from both state and federal income taxes in most cases. The statutory “non-citizen national” status avoids all the disadvantages of statutory “U.S. citizen” status, including:

1. Not a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes or “acts of Congress”. The Internal Revenue Code is an “act of Congress”.

2. Not “subject to the laws” or “under the laws” of the United States or the jurisdiction of the corrupt and covetous federal courts except when on federal property.

5. Can vote in states that don’t require you to be a statutory “U.S. citizen” under “acts of Congress”.

“state nationals” are synonymously described with any of the terms below:

- Natural Born Citizens
- Natural Born Sovereigns
- nationals
- state nationals
- American Citizens
- American Nationals
- Nonresident Aliens (under the Internal Revenue Code, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)).

We will now analyze the legal foundations for state national status:

1. The term "United States" has 3 separate and distinct meanings in American Law (see Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)):
   1.1. The name of the sovereign nation, occupying the position of other sovereigns in the family of nations
   1.2. The federal government and the limited territory over which it exercises exclusive sovereign authority
   1.2.1. To be a federal citizen is to be a “citizen of the United States” in this second sense of the term
   1.3. The collective name for the States united by and under the Constitution for the United States of America
   1.3.1. To be a Natural Born state Citizen is to be a “Citizen of the United States” in this third sense of the term (i.e. a “Citizen of one of the States United”)

2. One can be a State National without also being a federal citizen
   2.1. See Crosse case from Maryland Supreme Court:
"Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state.” [Crosse v. Board of Elections, 221 A.2d 431 at 433 (1966)]

2.2. See State vs Fowler case from Louisiana Supreme Court:

“But a person may be a citizen of a particular state and not a citizen of the United States. To hold otherwise would be to deny to the state the highest exercise of its sovereignty – the right to declare who are its citizens.” [State v. Fowler, 41 La.Ann. 380 6 S. 602 (1889)]

2.3. See United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) for U.S. Supreme Court view:

“We have in our political system a Government of the United States and a government of each of the several States. Each of these governments is distinct from the others, and each has citizens of its own who owe it allegiance, and whose rights, within its jurisdiction, it must protect. The same person may be at the same time a citizen of the United States and a citizen of a State, but his rights of citizenship under one of these governments will be different from those he has under the other. Slaughter- House Cases, 16 Wall. 74. ....”

[United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

3. “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” are the object of Subtitle A federal income taxes under section 1 of the IRC; “state nationals” or “nationals” or “state nationals are not. The Internal Revenue Code is an “act of Congress”.

3.1. State Nationals are protected by constitutional limits against direct taxation by the federal government:

3.1.1. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3
3.1.2. Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4

3.2. “U.S. citizens” under “acts of Congress” are not protected by these same constitutional limits

3.2.1. Constitution for the "United States" as such does not extend beyond the boundaries of the States which are united by and under it.
3.2.1.1. The Insular Cases established this dubious precedent at the turn of the century
3.2.2. A "citizen of the United States" under "acts of Congress" is, effectively, a citizen of the District of Colombia, which never joined the Union
3.2.3. Congress can enact local, "municipal" law for D.C. which is not constrained by the federal Constitution.

See Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) for further information.

4.11.9 Citizenship and all political rights are INVOLUNTARILY exercised and therefore CANNOT be taxable and cannot be called “privileges”

Earlier in section 4.11.7 on Federal (U.S.) citizens, we quoted the U.S. Supreme Court as saying that federal and state citizenship were “voluntary”. Here is the quote:

“The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government, He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction.”

[United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) [emphasis added]]

And here is another similar quote by the same U.S. Supreme Court:

“A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States, in the highest or in any of its branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself: The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people….A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States, or from any other external authority, unless in the special instances when the general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself.”

[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419 (Dall.) (1793)]

This section will examine this rather flawed premise of the U.S. Supreme Court in extreme detail to very clearly prove beyond any doubt not only that citizenship is not and cannot be “voluntary” or “consensual”, but also that all the “political rights” that circumscribe how we exercise our citizenship are in fact compelled and involuntary. By proving this flawed premise of the U.S. Supreme Court incorrect, we open up the following intriguing possibilities:

1. Contrary to what the U.S. Supreme Court said above, those misguided individuals who do choose to become second class “U.S. citizens” do have a right to complain because their participation is coerced and involuntary.

2. We have a right to avoid government compulsion and compulsion from our fellow citizens by refusing to be “citizens” and refusing to exercise our civic duties.

3. If we choose to not participate as citizens in society, then the reward is not being subject to the laws of the government, which in most cases are dishonest and corrupt and covetous anyway. We are citizens of heaven and not of earth anyway (see Phil. 3:20). Once we are not subject to the laws of a society, it no longer matters what our fellow citizens do to the law to corrupt it for their own personal benefit, because we are sovereigns who are immune from government regulation for the most part. If we aren’t paying taxes and the government can’t do anything to control or regulate us, does it matter whether we have “taxation without representation”?

What is a “political right”? Below is the definition of that term from Black’s Law Dictionary:

Political rights. Those which may be exercised in the formation or administration of the government. Rights of citizens established or recognized by constitutions which give them the power to participate directly or indirectly in the establishment or administration of the government.

Political rights include such things as:

Table 4-27: Political rights

The concept of political rights and citizenship are tied together, and the reason they are tied together is that taxation and representation must be tied together in order to have a stable government. When taxation and representation are not tied together, governments become unstable and the people will eventually revolt. We therefore show in the above table the correlation between political rights on the left, and taxation and representation on the right. Remember that one of the main reasons for the American Revolution was to protest “taxation without representation”. The British colonies that comprised America at the time were paying taxes but had no say in their government in how those taxes were spent, and they didn’t like it so they started a revolution against Britain: the American Revolution! The representation part of political rights comes from voting, jury service, and serving in political office. The definition of “citizen” from the legal dictionary confirms the linkage between political rights and citizenship:

Citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.

“Citizens” are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

Note from above definition of “citizen” that when you become a citizen, you choose to subject yourself to the laws of the political community or jurisdiction of which you are part. This is very important. We speculate that the reasoning behind this requirement is that you can’t have the protection of laws that you yourself refuse to obey, because this would be hypocritical. In the case of federal statutes and “legislative jurisdiction” and “Acts of Congress”, of which the Internal Revenue Code is a part, however, you don’t need to be subject to them because for the most part, they only apply inside the federal zone anyway, and most Americans don’t live in the federal zone.

The other thing that the above definition of “citizen” helps us to understand is that our government has defined citizenship such that political rights depend on our citizenship status, while the rest of our rights depend on where we reside. Look at these excerpts from the definition of “citizen” again:

“In the matter of taxation, every privilege is an injustice.”

Voltaire

Here is “the rest of the story”, as Paul Harvey likes to say, that the government won’t tell you. Remember that from earlier discussions in sections 4.2 through 4.2.2, a right is not something the government can interfere with or take away or regulate or revoke or that is subject to their discretion or any aspect of our voluntary behavior. If the existence of our rights is conditional or based on any aspect of government discretion, then they aren’t rights, but privileges disguised as rights! The government can lawfully interfere with and regulate the exercise of privileges, but not with rights. Consequently, what our deceitful government calls “political rights” in the definition above really aren’t “rights” at all, but “privileges” which depend on the voluntary decision to accept statutory citizenship (which is a behavior) and the privileges that go with statutory citizenship. Consequently, our government has made both citizenship and political participation in the affairs of government into a statutory privilege and not a right.

The most important thing that we should have learned from this chapter is that whenever we receive a government privilege there will be strings attached that will destroy our rights. In this case, receipt of the “citizenship” privilege makes us subject to taxation and regulation and jurisdiction by the federal government, none of which we need or want, nor will such status protect or enhance our rights or liberties, but rather destroy them. We repeat the quote from the beginning of section 4.3.12 to make this point crystal clear:

“In the matter of taxation, every privilege is an injustice.”

Voltaire

Your covetous politicians are trying to fool you into thinking that it wasn’t a “privilege” you accepted by calling it “political rights”, but we have already established that it cannot be a right if it is conditioned on anything or on any aspect of your voluntary behavior, including the choice to become a “citizen”. Once again, our deceitful government has entrapped us with word games. If they are going to call it a “political right”, then they better treat it as right and remove the requirement to be a citizen in order to exercise that right, so that we really do have “rights” instead of “privileges” masquerading as “counterfeit rights”. As I like to say:

If you want people to swallow a piece of shit, you have to wrap it in a pretty package by coating it in chocolate and calling it a “Babe Ruth” candy bar.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

In this case, the “chocolate coating” for the “shit” you don’t want to swallow called “citizenship” is the word “right” in “political rights”! Please pardon our language, but we just couldn’t resist this very appropriate metaphor!

One of our readers, after reading the foregoing analysis of “citizenship” and “political rights”, responded by saying:

“But how are you going to keep foreigners from voting so they don’t commit treason and trash the country?”

The answer is that so long as people are born in United States of America, not United States the federal zone, and as long as they have allegiance to the United States of America, rather than the federal corporation called the United States, then they should be able to vote because they have the best interests of the country in mind when they have allegiance to it. The status of being both born in the United States of America and having allegiance to it, collectively, is called “U.S. nationality”, and not “U.S. citizenship”, and you will find out later in section 4.11.10 what being a “national” means, why that is the status you want to have, and why you don’t have to pay taxes or be in receipt of government privileges to have that status. You will also find out in that section that most states have colluded to deprive you of your rights by passing laws to force you to become a “U.S. citizen” in order to exercise political rights such as voting or serving on jury duty. The federal government has added to this injury by messing with the passport application forms to make it look like you have to be a privileged “U.S. citizen” in order to get a U.S. passport, but this also is not a lawful requirement.

The states and the federal government have conspired against your rights in this fashion because they want to:

- Force you to lie to them in saying that you are a “U.S. citizen”, in direct violation of the ten commandments, which says in Exodus 20:16 that we shall not bear false witness. Remember our analysis in section 4.11.7.1: to be a “U.S. citizen”, you must be born in the federal United States (federal zone) in an area subject to the sovereignty of the United States Government under Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. Most Americans are not born there and more properly are classified as “nationals” born outside the federal United States.
- Break down the separation of powers between the federal and state governments, and force you to serve two masters instead of one, in direct violation of the bible, Luke 16:13 (“…no man can serve two masters.”). The lie you committed by simultaneously declaring yourself to be both a U.S. and a state citizen also violates the rulings of the Supreme Court in U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995) and the intent of the constitution, which says:

  We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, “[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite.” The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 432, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted), “Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front.” Ibid.

Remember that by default, all federal legislation and “Acts of Congress” only apply inside the federal zone, and we will explain this matter in great detail in section 5.2 and subsections. But if the thieves and robbers who are our elected leaders can make you a “citizen” in receipt of “privileges”, then they can make you subject to their laws even if you don’t live on their property. By doing so, they can make you into property and a franchise of the United States government and treat you as though you occupy the federal zone anyway. Sneaky, huh? At that point, these covetous and arrogant thugs and murderers have succeeded in breaking down the wall of separation between the state and federal jurisdictions at great injury to your liberties. They have then forced you to serve two masters in direct violation of the bible in Luke 16:13. Ultimately, this leads to socialism, tyranny, and an oppression of and conspiracy against your constitutional rights, as we explain throughout this book.
- Once the government “thugs”, murderers, and thieves coax you into the federal zone, they can then legally deprive you of your constitutional rights and make you a slave of income taxes and not be held accountable by the courts or the law for their actions of trespass on your person, property, and liberty. The constitution and bill of rights, remember, do not apply in the federal zone. That is why we call the federal zone the “plunder and fraud” zone.

Justice Harlan of the Supreme Court warned us that this was going to happen in his dissenting opinion found in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901):

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

“The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.”

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

When are people going to wake up? We believe the foregoing analysis also explains why there is a long term trend toward reduced participation of the people in the political process. Most states require you to be a “U.S. citizens” to vote and they do it so they can use voting as a way to get jurisdiction to impose income taxes. If corrupt politicians and lawyers writing our state laws have forced the people to give up their constitutional rights and their sovereignty and be subject to unwanted socialist federal jurisdiction in order to participate in the political process and have “political rights”, is it any wonder that they no longer wish to participate? If our state governments sincerely want to fix the problem of low voter turnout and people being unwilling to serve on jury duty, then what they need to do is:

1. Admit in their election literature that most people are “nationals” and not “U.S. citizens”.
2. Remove the legal requirement to be a “U.S. citizen” in order to vote or serve on jury duty. Instead, make the requirement that they must be “nationals” instead, under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
3. Tell people that by serving on jury duty and participating in elections, they are defending their liberty and that if they don’t, the government and the laws will become corrupted. The state should remind people that keeping our government and the state laws honest and limited in power is everyone’s job.

Of course, if the states did this, most of them would lose their jurisdiction to impose state income taxes. Don’t hold your breath waiting for them to do the honorable thing documented above, because you will die of suffocation!

“The love of money is the root of all evil.”

[1 Tim. 6:10, Bible, NKJV]

In satisfying the goals of this section on the subject of political rights, we rely mainly upon the writings of Lysander Spooner and his brilliant essay entitled No Treason: The Constitution of No Authority available on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/SpoonerLysander/NoTreason.htm

In the above essay, Lysander Spooner uses reason and common sense alone to examine the two most important aspects of citizenship, that of voting and paying taxes, and concludes that the only reason people do these things is for selfish reasons and in defense of their personal liberties from what he aptly calls “bands of robbers, tyrants, and murderers” who he says inhabit “the government”. His analysis is so compelling and indisputable that we repeat it here for your benefit and edification. His essay is also so irreverent towards the government and public “servants” (tyrants) that it is funny!

What Lysander does is simply prove that the exercise of civic responsibility in the form of voting and payment of taxes are done under compulsion from the government and under the implied influence and duress and coercion by other of his fellow citizens within a competitive and dog-eat-dog, democracy, who will trample his natural rights if he isn’t politically involved and doesn’t defend those rights by vigilantly exercising all of his civic responsibilities.

We’ll start off the analysis in subsequent sections with a legal definition of the word “voluntary”:

“voluntary: Unconstrained by interference; unpimpelled by another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed.”

In the next few subsections, we’ll examine each aspect of political rights individually. However, before we start looking at the trees, consider the forest and the bigger picture. For instance, have you ever considered that our life and our existence itself is voluntary? We never asked to be here: our parents chose to put us here without our consent or involvement. Life was an involuntary gift from our parents to us and we couldn’t choose whether we wanted it or not before we received it.

Our very existence is involuntary and nonconsensual! Everything we do after we are born and come into existence in order to maintain and protect a life that we never asked for to begin with is involuntary, because our very life is involuntary. This life, in fact, is a “death sentence” by God Himself for the original sin of Adam and Eve documented in the bible in the book of Genesis in chapter 3. Because Adam and Eve sinned by disobeying God and eating the fruit, and because the “wages of sin is death” (Romans 6:23), then His sentence was a death sentence. Before that sentence, Adam and Eve were immortal.

In that context, God was the “judge” who administered His righteous death sentence according to His Laws. Recall also that the Fifth Amendment of our Constitution prohibits double jeopardy, which is two trials and two sentences for the same crime. If God already sentenced us to death for our sin, then the Fifth amendment is violated if the government tries to punish us a second time with direct taxes in the process of toiling to sustain and support a life we never asked for to begin with.

Remember the definition of “voluntary” above: “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence”. In this case, that unwanted influence came from a combination of our parents bringing us into existence, and God allowing them to do that. Every other argument about political rights derives from this higher argument and a product of reason and common sense, which are rare entities indeed in today’s society and especially among democratic candidates. We have an article on our Life web page of our website from the French Supreme Court where one individual born with birth defects sued his doctor for the right to NOT be born because it was suffering for him! See the article for yourself:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Citizenship/PoliticalRightsvCitizenshipByState.htm

Common sense also confirms the validity of this premise. For instance, many parents choose not to have children because they don’t want to force their children to undergo poverty or an unpleasant lifestyle in a corrupted or crowded society.

Note that word “force”. That argument applies to the author, for instance. Why would I want to bring more willing federal slaves and serfs to an illegal income tax into the world to serve a corrupted government unless and until our tax system is reformed?

As yet another example of why life is involuntary, the rate of teen suicide in America today is the highest it has ever been. Those teens who choose suicide have chosen to give back a gift from their parents that they apparently don’t appreciate or want. We would argue that the reason these teens are committing suicide is because our public/government schools have become antiseptic prison houses devoid of God or any spiritual training. They have become training camps to brainwash gullible youth into becoming federal serfs. Our public schools are fool factories where psychologists are making children into drug addicts and forcing them in unprecedented numbers to take mind altering drugs to make them submissive to authority. Nonconformity and questioning of authority is punished, not encouraged or developed as the product of an inquisitive and sovereign mind and person.

If you would like to look at what the citizenship requirements for various political rights are within your state, we have compiled a listing by state at the web address below:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Citizenship/PoliticalRightsvCitizenshipByState.htm

4.11.9.1 Voting

All the voting that has ever taken place under the Constitution, has been of such a kind that it not only did not pledge the whole people to support the Constitution, but it did not even pledge any one of them to do so, as the following considerations show.

1. In the very nature of things, the act of voting could bind nobody but the actual voters. But owing to the property qualifications required, it is probable that, during the first twenty or thirty years under the Constitution, not more than one-tenth, fifteenth, or perhaps twentieth of the whole population (black and white, men, women, and minors) were permitted to vote. Consequently, so far as voting was concerned, not more than one-tenth, fifteenth, or twentieth of those then existing, could have incurred any obligation to support the Constitution.

158 From an essay entitled No Treason: The Constitution of No Authority, by Lysander Spooner, part II.

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOOU) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
At the present time [1869], it is probable that not more than one-sixth of the whole population are permitted to vote. Consequently, so far as voting is concerned, the other five-sixths can have given no pledge that they will support the Constitution.

2. Of the one-sixth that are permitted to vote, probably not more than two-thirds (about one-ninth of the whole population) have usually voted. Many never vote at all. Many vote only once in two, three, five, or ten years, in periods of great excitement.

No one, by voting, can be said to pledge himself for any longer period than that for which he votes. If, for example, I vote for an officer who is to hold his office for only a year, I cannot be said to have thereby pledged myself to support the government beyond that term. Therefore, on the ground of actual voting, it probably cannot be said that more than one-ninth or one-eighth, of the whole population are usually under any pledge to support the Constitution. [In recent years, since 1940, the number of voters in elections has usually fluctuated between one-third and two-fifths of the populace.]

3. It cannot be said that, by voting, a man pledges himself to support the Constitution, unless the act of voting be a perfectly voluntary one on his part. Yet the act of voting cannot properly be called a voluntary one on the part of any very large number of those who do vote. It is rather a measure of necessity imposed upon them by others, than one of their own choice. On this point I repeat what was said in a former number, viz.:

"In truth, in the case of individuals, their actual voting is not to be taken as proof of consent, even for the time being. On the contrary, it is to be considered that, without his consent having even been asked a man finds himself environed by a government that he cannot resist; a government that forces him to pay money, render service, and forego the exercise of many of his natural rights, under peril of weighty punishments. He sees, too, that other men practice this tyranny over him by the use of the ballot. He sees farther, that, if he will but use the ballot himself, he has some chance of relieving himself from this tyranny of others, by subjecting them to his own. In short, he finds himself; without his consent, so situated that, if he use the ballot, he may become a master; if he does not use it, he must become a slave. And he has no other alternative than these two. In self-defence, he attempts the former. His case is analogous to that of a man who has been forced into battle, where he must either kill others, or be killed himself. Because, to save his own life in battle, a man takes the lives of his opponents, it is not to be inferred that the battle is one of his own choosing. Neither in contests with the ballot -- which is a mere substitute for a bullet -- because, as his only chance of self-preservation, a man uses a ballot, is it to be inferred that the contest is one into which he voluntarily entered; that he voluntarily set up all his own natural rights, as a stake against those of others, to be lost or won by the mere power of numbers. On the contrary, it is to be considered that, in an exigency into which he had been forced by others, and in which no other means of self-defence offered, he, as a matter of necessity, used the only one that was left to him."

"Doubtless the most miserable of men, under the most oppressive government in the world, if allowed the ballot, would use it, if they could see any chance of thereby meliorating their condition. But it would not, therefore, be a legitimate inference that the government itself, that crushes them, was one which they had voluntarily set up, or even consented to."

"Therefore, a man's voting under the Constitution of the United States, is not to be taken as evidence that he ever freely assented to the Constitution, even for the time being. Consequently we have no proof that any very large portion, even of the actual voters of the United States, ever really and voluntarily consented to the Constitution, EVEN FOR THE TIME BEING. Nor can we ever have such proof, until every man is left perfectly free to consent, or not, without thereby subjecting himself or his property to be disturbed or injured by others."

As we can have no legal knowledge as to who votes from choice, and who from the necessity thus forced upon him, we can have no legal knowledge, as to any particular individual, that he voted from choice; or, consequently, that by voting, he consented, or pledged himself, to support the government. Legally speaking, therefore, the act of voting utterly fails to pledge ANY ONE to support the government. It utterly fails to prove that the government rests upon the voluntary support of anybody. On general principles of law and reason, it cannot be said that the government has any voluntary supporters at all, until it can be distinctly shown who its voluntary supporters are.

4. As taxation is made compulsory on all, whether they vote or not, a large proportion of those who vote, no doubt do so to prevent their own money being used against themselves; when, in fact, they would have gladly abstained from voting, if they could thereby have saved themselves from taxation alone, to say nothing of being saved from all the other usurpations and tyrannies of the government. To take a man's property without his consent, and then to infer his consent because he attempts, by voting, to prevent that property from being used to his injury, is a very insufficient proof of his consent to support the Constitution. It is, in fact, no proof at all. And as we can have no legal knowledge as to who the particular individuals are, if there are any, who are willing to be taxed for the sake of voting, we can have no legal knowledge that any particular individual consents to be taxed for the sake of voting; or, consequently, consents to support the Constitution.
5. At nearly all elections, votes are given for various candidates for the same office. Those who vote for the unsuccessful candidates cannot properly be said to have voted to sustain the Constitution. They may, with more reason, be supposed to have voted, not to support the Constitution, but specially to prevent the tyranny which they anticipate the successful candidate intends to practice upon them under color of the Constitution; and therefore may reasonably be supposed to have voted against the Constitution itself. This supposition is the more reasonable, inasmuch as such voting is the only mode allowed to them of expressing their dissent to the Constitution.

6. Many votes are usually given for candidates who have no prospect of success. Those who give such votes may reasonably be supposed to have voted as they did, with a special intention, not to support, but to obstruct the execution of the Constitution; and, therefore, against the Constitution itself.

7. As all the different votes are given secretly (by secret ballot), there is no legal means of knowing, from the votes themselves, who votes for, and who votes against, the Constitution. Therefore, voting affords no legal evidence that any particular individual supports the Constitution. And where there can be no legal evidence that any particular individual supports the Constitution, it cannot legally be said that anybody supports it. It is clearly impossible to have any legal proof of the intentions of large numbers of men, where there can be no legal proof of the intentions of any particular one of them.

8. There being no legal proof of any man's intentions, in voting, we can only conjecture them. As a conjecture, it is probable, that a very large proportion of those who vote, do so on this principle, viz., that if, by voting, they could but get the government into their own hands (or that of their friends), and use its powers against their opponents, they would then willingly support the Constitution; but if their opponents are to have the power, and use it against them, then they would NOT willingly support the Constitution.

In short, men's voluntary support of the Constitution is doubtless, in most cases, wholly contingent upon the question whether, by means of the Constitution, they can make themselves masters, or are to be made slaves.

Such contingent consent as that is, in law and reason, no consent at all.

9. As everybody who supports the Constitution by voting (if there are any such) does so secretly (by secret ballot), and in a way to avoid all personal responsibility for the acts of his agents or representatives, it cannot legally or reasonably be said that anybody at all supports the Constitution by voting. No man can reasonably or legally be said to do such a thing as to the Constitution, unless he does it openly, and in a way to make himself personally responsible for the acts of his agents, so long as they act within the limits of the power he delegates to them.

10. As all voting is secret (by secret ballot), and as all secret governments are necessarily only secret bands of robbers, tyrants, and murderers, the general fact that our government is practically carried on by means of such voting, only proves that there is among us a secret band of robbers, tyrants, and murderers, whose purpose is to rob, enslave, and, so far as necessary to accomplish their purposes, murder, the rest of the people. The simple fact of the existence of such a band does nothing towards proving that "the people of the United States," or any one of them, voluntarily supports the Constitution.

For all the reasons that have now been given, voting furnishes no legal evidence as to who the particular individuals are (if there are any), who voluntarily support the Constitution. It therefore furnishes no legal evidence that anybody supports it voluntarily.

So far, therefore, as voting is concerned, the Constitution, legally speaking, has no supporters at all.

And, as a matter of fact, there is not the slightest probability that the Constitution has a single bona fide supporter in the country. That is to say, there is not the slightest probability that there is a single man in the country, who both understands what the Constitution really is, and sincerely supports it for what it really is.

The ostensible supporters of the Constitution, like the ostensible supporters of most other governments, are made up of three classes, viz.: 1. Knives, a numerous and active class, who see in the government an instrument which they can use for their own aggrandizement or wealth. 2. Dupes -- a large class, no doubt -- each of whom, because he is allowed one voice out of millions in deciding what he may do with his own person and his own property, and because he is permitted to have the same voice in robbing, enslaving, and murdering others, that others have in robbing, enslaving, and murdering himself, is stupid enough to imagine that he is a "free man," a "sovereign"; that this is "a free government"; "a government of equal... rights," "the best government on earth," and such like absurdities. 3. A class who have some appreciation of the evils of government, but either do not see how to get rid of them, or do not choose to so far sacrifice their private interests as to give themselves seriously and earnestly to the work of making a change.

Lastly, the Fifteenth and the Nineteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution collectively make it a right for "citizens of the United States" to vote which cannot be abridged on the basis of race, color, previous servitude, or sex. Since the "citizen" they are talking about is in the Constitution and the “United States” in the Constitution means the states of the Union, then that means they are referring to people born in states of the Union. Based on the definition of “national” in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), calling yourself a “national” under federal law is the equivalent of calling yourself a “citizen of the United States” in the Constitution. However, whenever you fill out any government form, if you are “citizen of the United States” under the Constitution, you should be careful to clarify that it means “national but not citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) in order to prevent confusion so they don’t misuse the form as evidence against you in court to suck you into their jurisdiction.

4.11.9.2 Paying taxes

The payment of taxes, being compulsory, of course furnishes no evidence that any one voluntarily supports the Constitution.

1. It is true that the THEORY of our Constitution is, that all taxes are paid voluntarily; that our government is a mutual insurance company, voluntarily entered into by the people with each other; that that each man makes a free and purely voluntary contract with all others who are parties to the Constitution, to pay so much money for so much protection, the same as he does with any other insurance company; and that he is just as free not to be protected, and not to pay tax, as he is to pay a tax, and be protected.

But this theory of our government is wholly different from the practical fact. The fact is that the government, like a highwayman, says to a man: "Your money, or your life." And many, if not most, taxes are paid under the compulsion of that threat.

The government does not, indeed, waylay a man in a lonely place, spring upon him from the roadside, and, holding a pistol to his head, proceed to rifle his pockets. But the robbery is none the less a robbery on that account; and it is far more dastardly and shameful.

The highwayman takes solely upon himself the responsibility, danger, and crime of his own act. He does not pretend that he has any rightful claim to your money, or that he intends to use it for your own benefit. He does not pretend to be anything but a robber. He has not acquired impudence enough to profess to be merely a "protector," and that he takes men's money against their will, merely to enable him to "protect" those infatuated travelers, who feel perfectly able to protect themselves, or do not appreciate his peculiar system of protection. He is too sensible a man to make such professions as these. Furthermore, having taken your money, he leaves you, as you wish him to do. He does not persist in following you on the road, against your will; assuming to be your rightful "sovereign," on account of the "protection" he affords you. He does not keep "protecting" you, by commanding you to bow down and serve him; by requiring you to do this, and forbidding you to do that; by robbing you of more money as often as he finds it for his interest or pleasure to do so; and by branding you as a rebel, a traitor, and an enemy to your country, and shooting you down without mercy, if you dispute his authority, or resist his demands. He is too much of a gentleman to be guilty of such impostures, and insults, and villainies as these. In short, he does not, in addition to robbing you, attempt to make you either his dupe or his slave.

The proceedings of those robbers and murderers, who call themselves "the government," are directly the opposite of these of the single highwayman.

In the first place, they do not, like him, make themselves individually known; or, consequently, take upon themselves personally the responsibility of their acts. On the contrary, they secretly (by secret ballot) designate some one of their number to commit the robbery in their behalf, while they keep themselves practically concealed. They say to the person thus designated:

159 Suppose it be "the best government on earth," does that prove its own goodness, or only the badness of all other governments?

Go to A____ B____, and say to him that "the government" has need of money to meet the expenses of protecting him and his property. If he presumes to say that he has never contracted with us to protect him, and that he wants none of our protection, say to him that that is our business, and not his; that we CHOOSE to protect him, whether he desires us to do so or not; and that we demand pay, too, for protecting him. If he dares to inquire who the individuals are, who have thus taken upon themselves the title of "the government," and who assume to protect him, and demand payment of him, without his having ever made any contract with them, say to him that that, too, is our business, and not his; that we do not CHOOSE to make ourselves INDIVIDUALLY known to him; that we have secretly (by secret ballot) appointed you our agent to give him notice of our demands, and, if he complies with them, to give him, in our name, a receipt that will protect him against any similar demand for the present year. If he refuses to comply, seize and sell enough of his property to pay not only our demands, but all your own expenses and trouble beside. If he resists the seizure of his property, call upon the bystanders to help you (doubtless some of them will prove to be members of our band.) If, in defending his property, he should kill any of our band who are assisting you, capture him at all hazards; charge him (in one of our courts) with murder; convict him, and hang him. If he should call upon his neighbors, or any others who, like him, may be disposed to resist our demands, and they should come in large numbers to his assistance, cry out that they are all rebels and traitors; that "our country" is in danger; call upon the commander of our hired murderers; tell him to quell the rebellion and "save the country," cost what it may. Tell him to kill all who resist, though they should be hundreds of thousands; and thus strike terror into all others similarly disposed. See that the work of murder is thoroughly done; that we may have no further trouble of this kind hereafter. When these traitors shall have thus been taught our strength and our determination, they will be good loyal citizens for many years, and pay their taxes without a why or a wherefore.

It is under such compulsion as this that taxes, so called, are paid. And how much proof the payment of taxes affords, that the people consent to "support the government," it needs no further argument to show.

2. Still another reason why the payment of taxes implies no consent, or pledge, to support the government, is that the taxpayer does not know, and has no means of knowing, who the particular individuals are who compose "the government." To him "the government" is a myth, an abstraction, an incorporeality, with which he can make no contract, and to which he can give no consent, and make no pledge. He knows it only through its pretended agents. "The government" itself he never sees. He knows indeed, by common report, that certain persons, of a certain age, are permitted to vote; and thus to make themselves parts of, or (if they choose) opponents of, the government, for the time being. But who of them do thus vote, and especially how each one votes (whether so as to aid or oppose the government), he does not know; the voting being all done secretly (by secret ballot). Who, therefore, practically compose "the government," for the time being, he has no means of knowing. Of course he can make no contract with them, give them no consent, and make them no pledge. Of necessity, therefore, his paying taxes to them implies, on his part, no contract, consent, or pledge to support them -- that is, to support "the government," or the Constitution.

3. Not knowing who the particular individuals are, who call themselves "the government," the taxpayer does not know whom he pays his taxes to. All he knows is that a man comes to him, representing himself to be the agent of "the government" -- that is, the agent of a secret band of robbers and murderers, who have taken to themselves the title of "the government," and have determined to kill everybody who refuses to give them whatever money they demand. To save his life, he gives up his money to this agent. But as this agent does not make his principals individually known to the taxpayer, the latter, after he has given up his money, knows no more who are "the government" -- that is, who were the robbers -- than he did before. To say, therefore, that by giving up his money to their agent, he entered into a voluntary contract with them, that he pledges himself to obey them, to support them, and to give them whatever money they should demand of him in the future, is simply ridiculous.

4. All political power, so called, rests practically upon this matter of money. Any number of scoundrels, having money enough to start with, can establish themselves as a "government"; because, with money, they can hire soldiers, and with soldiers extort more money; and also compel general obedience to their will. It is with government, as Caesar said it was in war, that money and soldiers mutually supported each other; that with money he could hire soldiers, and with soldiers extort money. So these villains, who call themselves governments, well understand that their power rests primarily upon money. With money they can hire soldiers, and with soldiers extort money. And, when their authority is denied, the first use they always make of money, is to hire soldiers to kill or subdue all who refuse them more money.

For this reason, whoever desires liberty, should understand these vital facts, viz.: 1. That every man who puts money into the hands of a "government" (so called), puts into its hands a sword which will be used against him, to extort more money from him, and also to keep him in subjection to its arbitrary will. 2. That those who will take his money, without his consent, in the first place, will use it for his further robbery and enslavement, if he presumes to resist their demands in the future. 3. That it is a perfect absurdity to suppose that any body of men would ever take a man's money without his consent, for any such object as they profess to take it for, viz., that of protecting him; for why should they wish to protect him, if he does not wish them to do so? To suppose that they would do so, is just as absurd as it would be to suppose that they would take his money without his consent, for the purpose of buying food or clothing for him, when he did not want it. 4. If a man wants "protection," he is competent to make his own bargains for it; and nobody has any occasion to rob him, in order to "protect" him against his will. 5. That the only security men can have for their political liberty, consists in their keeping their money in their own pockets, until they have assurances, perfectly satisfactory to themselves, that it will be used as they wish it to be used, for their benefit, and not for their injury. 6. That no government, so called, can reasonably be trusted for a moment, or reasonably be supposed to have honest purposes in view, any longer than it depends wholly upon voluntary support.

These facts are all so vital and so self-evident, that it cannot reasonably be supposed that any one will voluntarily pay money to a "government," for the purpose of securing its protection, unless he first make an explicit and purely voluntary contract with it for that purpose.

It is perfectly evident, therefore, that neither such voting, nor such payment of taxes, as actually takes place, proves anybody's consent, or obligation, to support the Constitution. Consequently we have no evidence at all that the Constitution is binding upon anybody, or that anybody is under any contract or obligation whatever to support it. And nobody is under any obligation to support it.

4.11.9.3 Jury Service

Jury service is similar to voting and is based on voting, so all the arguments used earlier by Spooner about voting apply equally to jury service. People involve themselves in jury service for the very same reasons as voting, which is to defend their liberties against encroachment by:

- The "band of tyrants, robbers, and murderers" in "the government"
- Fellow citizens who would want to violate the liberties and rights of others by using the government as their agent.

For instance, they might abuse their elective franchise or voting power to influence or authorize the state or government to plunder the property of others in order to guarantee their economic security and income.

Even before government existed, all men had a natural and God-given right to defend their person, their family, their liberty, and their property against encroachment by others, and they did so through force and using violence if necessary. Book I of The Law of Nations by Vattel, which our founding fathers used to write our Constitution and which appears on our website at:

The Law of Nations
http://famguardian.org/Publications/LawOfNations/vattel_01.htm also confirms the existence of this God-given right of self defense:

§ 18. A nation has a right to every thing necessary for its preservation.

Since then a nation is obliged to preserve itself, it has a right to every thing necessary for its preservation.

For the Law of Nature gives us a right to every thing without which we cannot fulfill our obligation; otherwise it would oblige us to do impossibilities, or rather would contradict itself in prescribing us a duty, and at the same time debarring us of the only means of fulfilling it. It will doubtless be here understood, that those means ought not to be unjust in themselves, or such as are absolutely forbidden by the Law of Nature.

As it is impossible that it should ever permit the use of such means, — if on a particular occasion no other present themselves for fulfilling a general obligation, the obligation must, in that particular instance, be looked on as impossible, and consequently void.

Even the Supreme Court agrees with the existence of the natural rights of self-protection:

"The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no duty to the state or to his neighbors to divest his business, or to open his doors to an investigation, so far as it may tend to criminate him. He owes no such duty to the state, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as are existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the state, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”
[Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

Within the early family unit, this role of defending one’s rights usually fell on the man. As mankind civilized, the function of defending personal liberty and property were delegated to the government, but the sovereignty remained with the people.
At first, the role of the government in defending its citizens was defined verbally, but mankind soon discovered that human nature being dishonest and covetous and untrustworthy, the people working for government became corrupted and abused their power for personal benefit. Consequently, the people then chose to correct this problem by defining the role of the government formally in writing using written constitutions, from which the government was authorized by the constitution to write statutes and regulations to carry out the sovereign powers delegated to them by the people. The constitution was like a written contract that could then be enforced in court against government agents who were charged with carrying it out. But once again, human depravity entered into the picture and the greedy lawyers and politicians writing the statutes and regulations devised a way to obfuscate and distort the law for their personal gain, and illegally expand their delegated authority by dolus. Hence, the jury was invented as a check and balance so that bad laws could be nullified by the sovereign people and so that this conflict of interest by the government could then be eliminated. The people then separated the Judiciary from the Executive branch of the government in order that this conflict of interest might be minimized and to make the judges controlling the trials more objective and less biased, but even that solution had defects.
The judges became corrupted because they got their pay and benefits from the tax monies that were illegally collected by the Executive branch, and the Executive branch used their tax collecting power to threaten, harass, and intimidate the judges into illegally enforcing the Internal Revenue Code. This made juries all the more important because they were there not only to nullify bad laws, but to counteract subtle and often hidden biases on the part of the judge. We talked about many of these biases and prejudices earlier in section 2.8.13. Thomas Jefferson hinted at these biases when he said:

"It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English liberty."[1]
[Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

The purpose of juries is therefore to protect us from corrupted and covetous government politicians and judges and to nullify bad laws that conflict with God’s laws. But the definition of “voluntary” at the beginning of this subsection said that “voluntary” meant:

"voluntary. Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed."[2]

Certainly, jury service cannot be said to be “unimpelled by another’s influence“ because the very reason we do it is because of the fear of specific bad people in government and the bad laws they write. Nothing that is done out of fear of a person or a bad law can be said to be “voluntary”. Here is a confirmation of that conclusion found in the definition of “consent” in Black’s Law Dictionary:

"Consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord.
Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake.

"Willingness in fact that an act or an invasion of an interest shall take place. Restatement, Second, Torts §10A.

As used in the law of rape ‘consent’ means consent of the will, and submission under the influence of fear or terror cannot amount to real consent. There must be an exercise of intelligence based on knowledge of its significance and moral quality and there must be a choice between resistance and assent. And if a woman resists to the point where further resistance would be useless or until her resistance is overcome by force or violence, submission thereafter is not 'consent'.”

Self defense cannot be voluntary unless we consented or volunteered to put ourselves into harms way to begin with, which no sane man would consider in the first place. Like voting, if we don’t serve on jury duty, then corrupted people in government will eventually write the laws in such a way as to make us into complete and total slaves. Here is how Thomas Jefferson describes this situation in the Declaration of Independence and what we should do about it:

“But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.”
[Declaration of Independence]

Jury service, like voting and the exercise of all other political rights, is defensive and done as a safeguard for our future security. The exercise of rights cannot be turned into taxable government privileges. Anything that is defensive is done for selfish and not altruistic or voluntary reasons. One could then say that by exercising our right to serve on jury duty (and voting in the process), we are in receipt of “consideration”, which is a fancy legal word for a “benefit”. That benefit is the absence of threats or coercion or corruption in our government. By exercising our right (not our privilege, but our right) to act as jurors, we are ensuring a peaceful, orderly society free of corruption and evil, which is probably the most important aspect of quality of life that we can personally experience in our lifetime. Consequently, the reason we serve on jury duty is to remain free of government compulsion and to protect our liberties, and for no other reason, and we do so for selfish reasons and not the magnanimous good of mankind. You could then say we are “compelled to avoid future compulsion and government corruption”.

It would be the grossest distortion for any government servant or judge to then commit fraud by saying that jury service is “voluntary”, and if it isn’t “voluntary” and “consensual”, then it can’t be a “privilege”. Here is what Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1198 says about “privilege” on p. 1197-1198:

“privilege. A particular and peculiar benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class, beyond the common advantages of other citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power or exemption. A peculiar right, advantage, exemption, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, not generally possessed by others.

“A privilege may be based upon: (a) the consent of the other affected by the actor’s conduct, or (b) the fact that its exercise is necessary for the protection of some interest of the actor or of the public which is of such importance as to justify the harm caused or threatened by its exercise, or (c) the fact that the actor is performing a function for the proper performance of which freedom of action is essential. Restatement, Second, Torts, §10.

Privileges may be divided into two general categories: (1) consent, and (2) privileges created by law irrespective of consent. In general, the latter arise where there is some important and overriding social value in sanctioning defendant’s conduct, despite the fact that it causes plaintiff harm.”

From the above, we must conclude that unless receipt of a “privilege” is consensual, then it cannot be a privilege. And something cannot be consensual unless it is “voluntary” and done “without valuable consideration” or personal benefit.

“consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord. Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake.”

So any way you want to look at it, jury service is a compelled necessity of the society we live in and it is involuntary and nonconsensual. It is a necessary evil at best because of the evil nature of mankind when serving in public office and in positions of power.
4.11.9.4 Citizenship

We have already established that the main and most important function of government is public protection, which is accomplished by preventing and punishing injustice. We established this fact in section 3.3, where we talked about the Purpose of Law. People in the government will tell you that the reason for becoming a citizen is to qualify for receipt of that public protection and to pay one’s fair share of the costs of supporting it. However, we established earlier in section 4.11.7 on Federal Citizenship that you do not have to be a “citizen” to have civil rights. The purpose of law is to protect rights and liberties. Therefore, one need not become a citizen to benefit from the protection afforded by government or the laws that it enacts. Compliance with all law must therefore be voluntary because citizenship itself ideally should be but seldom is voluntary. Here is an example court cite illustrating our point:

“When a change of government takes place, from a monarchial to a republican government, the old form is dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse their allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they had not entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to adopt. That the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It is not a rule upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those prescribed by nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent.”

[Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

As we stated at the beginning of this chapter and in section 4.8, your civil rights derive not from your citizenship status, but from where you were born and where you live. Furthermore, most of us will pay our fair share of the costs of supporting government without being citizens. In fact, very few taxes one might pay are dependent on their status as citizens. Furthermore, there are very few things we can do, citizen or not, that don’t compel us to pay some kind of tax.

Why, then, do people become citizens? It defies us. In the next section on “nationals”, you will learn that state governments commonly will deprive “nationals” the right to vote and serve on jury duty unless and until they become “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but we established in that section and earlier in section 4.11.9 that these are rights and not privileges. This is so because in our civil society, these mechanisms are the only means available for us to defend our rights, liberties, and property without resorting to violence and without being compelled to rely on a corrupt politician to do it for us. Being able to defend oneself from harm is a natural right that cannot be turned into a privilege that can then be taxed or regulated.

“A right common in every citizen such as the right to own property or to engage in business of a character not requiring regulation CANNOT, however, be taxed as a special franchise by first prohibiting its exercise and then permitting its enjoyment upon the payment of a certain sum of money.” [Stevens v. State, 2 Ark. 291, 35 Am. Dec. 72, Spring Val. Water Works v. Barber, 99 Cal. 36, 33 Pac. 735, 21 L.R.A. 416. Note 57 L.R.A. 416]

“The individual, unlike the corporation, cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing. The corporation is an artificial entity which owes its existence and charter power to the State, but the individual’s right to live and own property are natural rights for the enjoyment of which an excise cannot be imposed.”

The reason the individual can’t be taxed for the privilege of existing is because all privileges must be voluntarily accepted, and we never made the choice to exist. Life was a gift from God, not a choice or a government “privilege”. Why, then, do governments make voting and serving on jury duty (which incidentally are defensive rather than voluntary actions) into a “privilege” by forcing you to become a “U.S. citizen” subject to their corrupt jurisdiction? The reason, quite frankly, is because they want you to pull you into the “federal zone” so they can tax you and subject you to their jurisdiction! They do this because they want to pick your pocket and make you into a feudal government serf, and for no other reason. The federal statutory “U.S. citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 is simply a legal tool that they use to expand their authority and political power and jurisdiction over you. The government then adds insult to this injury by saying that receipt of “U.S. citizenship” is a “privilege” and is done “voluntarily”. Look again at Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment:

Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the [federal] United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States.

We ask you now:

"How can the exercise of a natural right as basic as self defense and the pursuit of self protection be turned into a privilege? How can the government force you to surrender your rights by becoming a second class 'U.S. citizen' in order to acquire the ability to defend those rights as a jurist or a voter?"

The answer is, they can’t, but they do it anyway, because the “sheep”, I mean people, don’t complain. Are you a sheep? Furthermore, can the acquisition of citizenship under such circumstances rightfully be called “voluntary” or “consensual”?

Let’s look at the definition again:

"voluntary: Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself.
Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration: gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed.”

And here is the definition of “consent” from Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition:

‘consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord. Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake.”

If the government has applied duress in forcing you to become a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 in order so you could have the opportunity to protect your God-given rights, which by the way is itself an involuntary function, and at the same time, has committed fraud by fooling or deceiving you into claiming an incorrect and mistaken status as a “U.S. citizen”, then clearly, based on the definition of “consensual” above, one cannot claim to have become a citizen by the requisite consent from a legal perspective.

The answer, then, to our previous question of whether the government can force you to become a statutory federal “U.S. citizen” is a resounding NO, because the government interfered and constrained and threatened the exercise of your natural, God-given rights if you didn’t provide your fully-informed consent to become a citizen. You were “under the influence” of government coercion and therefore were acting “involuntarily”. You became a citizen for selfish reasons and the “consideration” you received in exchange for your consent was government protection of your God-given rights that they couldn’t lawfully deny you to begin with. Ironically, the government coerced you into paying for something you didn’t need and that which you already had as a gift from God and nature rather than from your magistrate or Congressman. Once again, here is how Thomas Jefferson, author of our Declaration of Independence, describes it:

“A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature, and not as the gift of their chief magistrate.”

[Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134 ]

In effect, by exchanging your God-give “rights” for taxable government “privileges”, you sold your soul to Satan and a corrupted government because you didn’t trust God to protect you and wanted to put an end to government harassment and discrimination directed at you for not “volunteering” to become a “U.S. citizen”.

“But he who doubts [God’s protection?] is condemned if he eats, because he does not eat from faith; for whatever is not from faith [trust in God rather than government] is sin.”

[Rom. 14:23, Bible, NKJV]

At the point when you became a “U.S. citizen” under federal law found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, you sinned and fell from grace like Satan did and went to the bottom of the hierarchy of sovereignty that we explained at the beginning of this chapter in section 4.1. You sinned by volunteering to serve more than one master (the federal and the state governments and God) in violation of Jesus’ words in Luke 16:13. You became unequally yoked with Babylon, the Great Harlot, described in the book of Revelation. You sold out your soul and the Truth to Satan for 20 pieces of silver, like Judas did to Jesus. You also lied to the government about your true and legal citizenship status as a “national” because you ignorantly coveted government privileges and benefits and “protection” in violation of Exodus 20:16. The price for these sins, it turns out, is perpetual slavery to a corrupt government “god”, who you must then worship and pay homage and tribute to for the rest of your natural life, not out of choice or consent, but out of fear. Becoming a “U.S. citizen” demoted you from being a sovereign to a government whore and you had better bend over whenever the IRS comes knocking! Once you admitted you were a “U.S. citizen” and a government harlot, the burden of proving that you aren’t a prostitute fell on you, and any good lawyer knows that proving a negative is an impossibility, so you have to wear the “taxpayer” sign on you back for as long as you are a “U.S. citizen”. As long as you are wearing that sign, you may as well be standing on a street corner half-naked begging every government “John” who drives by to pick you up for free and enjoy your company all night, and it’s perfectly legal, because the “Johns” write the laws!

"For our citizenship is in heaven [not earth or “U.S. citizenship”], from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ."
[Philippians 3:20]

"Protection draws subjection."
[Steven Miller]

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty whereby Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage [to the government or the income tax]."
[Galatians 5:1, Bible, NKJV]

[Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

[Hebrews 11:13]

"Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul..."
[1 Peter 2:11]

4.11.10 “Nationals” and “U.S. Nationals”

An important and often overlooked condition of “nationals” of the US is that today all “state nationals” are “USA nationals”, but “USA nationals” who do not reside/domicile in a state of the Union are not “state nationals. A U.S. national is a person born in the outlying possessions of the Unites States. These types of people are referred to with any of the following synonymous names:

- American Citizens
- American Nationals
- Nonresident Aliens (under the Internal Revenue Code, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)).

Statutory “U.S. nationals” are defined under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452. “nationals” are defined under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). Both statutory “nationals” and statutory “U.S. nationals” existed under The Law of Nations and international law since long before the passage of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in 1868. There are two types of “nationals” or “U.S. nationals” under federal law, as we revealed earlier in section 4.11.7.1:
Table 4-28: Types of “nationals” under federal law

8 U.S.C. §1452 | “U.S. national” | The U.S. Supreme Court and the Constitution call these people “citizens of the United States”. See section 4.11.7.8 later for details. 2. Foreign country to parents who were born in a state of the Union. | 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21);
8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B);
8 U.S.C. §1452 | “national” or “state national” or “USA national” | The “national” or “state national” is not necessarily the same as the “U.S. national” above, because it includes people who born in states of the Union. It used to be called a “non-citizen national” in 8 U.S.C. §1452 but the Law Revision Counsel of the House of Representatives in 2003 renamed it so that it is improperly “assumed” to be equivalent to an 8 U.S.C. §1408 “U.S. national”. Notice that this term does not mention 8 U.S.C. §1408 citizenship nor confine itself only to citizenship by birth in the federal zone. Therefore, it also includes people born in states of the Union. |

A “state national” or simply “national” is one who derives his nationality and allegiance to the confederation of states of the Union called the “United States of America” by virtue of being born in a state of the Union and domiciled there. To avoid false presumption, these people should carefully avoid associating their citizenship status with the term “United States” or “U.S.”, which means the federal zone within Acts of Congress. Therefore, instead of calling themselves “U.S. nationals”, they call themselves either “non-citizen nationals” or “state nations” or “USA nationals”. In terms of protection of our rights, being a “state national” or a “U.S. national” are roughly equivalent. The “U.S. national” status, however, has several advantages that the “state national” status does not enjoy, as we explained earlier in section 4.11.4 of the Great IRS Hoax book:

1. May collect any Social Security benefits, because the Social Security Program Operations Manual (POM) section GN 00303.001 states that only “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. nationals” can collect benefits.

The key difference between a “state national” and a “U.S. national” is the citizenship status of your parents. Below is a table that summarizes the distinctions using all possible permutations of “state national” and “U.S. national” status for both you and your parents:

Very significant is the fact that 8 U.S.C. §1408, confines itself exclusively to citizenship by birth inside the federal zone and does not define all possible scenarios whereby a person may be a “U.S. national”. For instance, it does not define the condition where both parents are “U.S. nationals”, the birth occurred outside of the federal United States, and neither parent ever physically maintained a domicile inside the federal United States. Under item 7 above, The Law of Nations, Book I, section 215, says this condition always results in the child having the same citizenship as his/her father. The Law of Nations was one of the organic documents that the founding fathers used to write our original Constitution and Article I, Section 8, Clause 10 of that Constitution MANDATES that it be obeyed.

“Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10

“The Congress shall have Power…”

“To define and punish Piracies and Felonies committed on the high Seas, and Offences against the Law of Nations;”

As you read this section below from The Law of Nations that proves item 7 in the above table, keep in mind that states of the Union are considered “foreign countries” with respect to the federal government legislative jurisdiction and police powers (see http://famguardian.org/Publications/LawOfNations/vattel.htm).

It is asked whether the children born of citizens in a foreign country are citizens? The laws have decided this question in several countries, and their regulations must be followed. (59) By the law of nature alone, children follow the condition of their fathers, and enter into all their rights (§ 212); the place of birth produces no change in this particular, and cannot, of itself, furnish any reason for taking from a child what nature has given him; I say “of itself,” for, civil or political laws may, for particular reasons, ordain otherwise. But I suppose that the father has not entirely quit his country in order to settle elsewhere. If he has fixed his abode... in a foreign country, he is become a member of another society, at least as a perpetual inhabitant; and his children will be members of it also.

[The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 215, Vattel]

Here’s a U.S. Supreme Court ruling confirming these conclusions:

"Under statute, child born outside United States is not entitled to citizenship unless father has resided in United States before its birth."

[Weedin v. Chin Bow, 274 U.S. 657, 47 S.Ct. 772 (1927)]

There are very good legal reasons why 8 U.S.C. §1408 doesn’t mention this case or condition. There is also a reason why there is no federal statute anywhere that directly prescribes the citizenship status of persons based on birth within states of the Union. The reasons are because lawyers in Congress:

1. Know that this is the criteria that most Americans born inside states of the Union will meet.
2. Know that these people are “sovereign”. Even the U.S. Supreme Court said so:

“...at the Revolution, the sovereignty devolved on the people; and they are truly the sovereigns of the country, but they are sovereigns without subjects...with none to govern but themselves; the citizens of America are equal as fellow citizens, and as joint tenants in the sovereignty.”

[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 454, 1 L.Ed. 440, 455 @ DALL 1793 pp. 471-472]

"Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts."

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

"In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, and statutes employing the word are ordinarily construed to exclude it.

"Since in common usage the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, statutes employing that term are ordinarily construed to exclude it."

[U.S. v. Cooper, 312 U.S. 600, 604, 61 S.Ct. 742 (1941)]

"In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign and statutes employing it will ordinarily not be construed to do so."

4. Know that they cannot write a federal statute or act of Congress that prescribes any criteria for becoming a “national” based on birth and perpetual residence outside of federal legislative jurisdiction and within a state of the Union. That is why the circuit court said the following with respect to “U.S. nationals”:

5. Want to deceive most Americans to falsely believe or presume that they are “U.S. citizens” who are “subject to” federal statutes and jurisdiction, so they interfere in the determination of their true status as “nationals” and “state nationals”.

Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

8 U.S.C. §1452 is the authority for getting your status of being a “state national” formally recognized by the federal government, and it applies to people born in states of the Union, but those who administer it in the Department of State, in our experience, refuse to recognize its proper application because they don’t want the give the slaves the keys to their chains so they can leave the federal plantation.

How can you be sure you are a “national” or “state national” if the authority for being so isn’t found in federal statutes? There are lots of ways, but the easiest way is to consider that you as a person who was born in a state of the Union and outside the federal “United States” can legally “expatriate” your citizenship. All you need in order to do so is your original birth certificate and to follow the procedures prescribed in federal law which we explain later in sections 4.11.13 and 8.5.3.13. What exactly are you “expatriating”? The definition of expatriation clarifies this:

“Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance.”
[Perkins v. Elg, 397 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884; 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

You can’t abandon your “nationality” unless you had it in the first place, so you must be a “national” or a “state national”!

Here is the clincher:

8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

(a)(21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

The term “state” above can mean a state of the Union or it can mean a confederation of states called the “United States”. Sneaky, huh? You’ll never hear especially a federal lawyer agree with you on this because it destroys their jurisdiction to impose an income tax on you, but it’s true!

The rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court also reveal that “citizen of the United States” and “nationality” are equivalent in the context of the Constitution. Look at the ruling below and notice how they use “nationality” and “citizen of the United States” interchangeably:

“Whether it was also the rule at common law that the children of British subjects born abroad were themselves British subjects - nationality being attributed to parentage instead of locality - has been variously determined. If this were so, of course the statute of Edw. III. was declaratory, as was the subsequent legislation. But if not, then such children were aliens, and the statute of 7 Anne and subsequent statutes must be regarded as in some sort acts of naturalization. On the other hand, it seems to me that the rule, 'Partus sequitur patrem,' has always applied to children of our citizens born abroad, and that the acts of congress on this subject are clearly declaratory, passed out of abundant caution, to obviate misunderstandings which might arise from the prevalence of the contrary rule elsewhere.

Section 1993 of the Revised Statutes provides that children so born 'are declared to be citizens of the United States,' but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States. Thus a limitation is prescribed on the passage of citizenship by descent beyond the second generation if then surrendered by permanent nonresidence, and this limitation was contained in all the acts from 1790 down.

Section 2172 provides that such children shall 'be considered as citizens thereof.' ”
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

If after examining the chart above, you find that your present citizenship status does not meet your needs, you are perfectly entitled to change it and the government can’t stop you. We explain later in section 4.11.13 how to abandon any type of citizenship you may find undesirable in order to have the combination of rights and “privileges” that suit your fancy. If you are currently a “state-only” citizen but want to become a “national” or a “state national” so that you can qualify for Socialist Security Benefits or a military security clearance, then in most cases, the federal government is more than willing to cooperate with you in becoming one under 8 U.S.C. §1452.

In the following subsections we have an outline of the legal constraints applying to persons who are “nationals” or “state nationals” and who do not claim the status of “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes. The analysis that follows establishes that for “state nationals”, such persons may in some cases not be allowed to vote in elections without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. They are also not allowed to serve on jury duty without special efforts on their part to
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

4.11.10.1 Legal Foundations of “national” Status

We said in the previous section that all people born in states of the Union are technically “nationals” or “state nationals” or “U.S. nationals”, that is: “nationals of the United States of America”. One of the two types of “nationals” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408 and depends on a different definition of “U.S.” that means the federal zone instead of the “United States of America”. We don’t cite all of the components of the definition for this type of “national” below, but only that part that describes Americans born inside the 50 Union states on nonfederal land to parents who resided inside the federal zone prior to the birth of the child:

8 U.S.C. Sec. 1408. - Nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth

Unless otherwise provided in section 1401 of this title, the following shall be nationals, but not citizens, of the United States at birth:

... (2) A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents both of whom are nationals, but not citizens, of the United States, and have had a residence in the United States, or one of its outlying possessions prior to the birth of such person;

The key word above is the term “United States”. This term is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) as follows:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions
(a)(38) The term “United States”, except as otherwise specifically herein provided, when used in a geographical sense, means the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

First of all, this definition leaves much to be desired, because:

1. Doesn’t tell us whether this is the only definition of “United States” that is applicable.
2. Gives us no clue as to how to determine whether the term “United States” is being used in a “geographical sense” as described above or in some other undefined sense. The OTHER most frequent undefined sense, in fact, is the “United States” as a legal person rather than a geographical area.

The definition also doesn’t tell us which of the three definitions of “United States” is being referred to as defined by the Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945) and as explained earlier in section 4.6. Since we have to guess which one they mean, then the law is already vague and confusing, and possibly even “void for vagueness” as we will explain later in section 5.12. However, in the absence of a clear and unambiguous definition, we must assume that because this is a federal statute, then by default that the definition used implies only the property of the federal government situated within the federal zone as we explain later in section 5.2.2 and as the Supreme Court revealed in U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949).

The legal encyclopedia American Jurisprudence helps us define what is meant by “United States” in the context of citizenship under federal (not state) law:

3C Am.Jur.2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689, Who is born in United States and subject to United States jurisdiction
"A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country."

The key word in the above definition is “territory” in relationship to the sovereignty word. The only places which are “territories” of the United States government are listed in Title 48 of the United States Code. The states of the union are NOT territories!

'Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

A portion of the United States not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the President." [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473]

And the rulings of the Supreme Court confirm the above:

"A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States, in the highest or in any of its branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself: The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people... A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States, or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself."

[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419 (Dall.) (1793)]

There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States... In this country sovereignty resides in the people [living in the states of the Union, since the states created the United States government and they came before it], and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld.”

[Juilliard v. Greenman: 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

So what is really meant by “United States” for the three types of citizens found in federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452 is the “sovereignty of the United States”, which exists in its fullest, most exclusive, and most “general” form inside its “territories”, and in federal enclaves within the states, or more generally in what we call the “federal zone” in this book. The ONLY place where the exclusive sovereignty of the United States exists in the context of its “territories” is under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution on federal land. In the legal field, by the way, this type of exclusive jurisdiction is described as “plenary power”. Very few of us are born on federal land under such circumstances, and therefore very few of us technically qualify as “citizens of the United States”. By the way, the federal government does have a very limited sovereignty or “authority” inside the states of the union, but it does not exceed that of the states, nor is it absolute or unrestrained or exclusive like it is inside the “territories” of the United States listed in Title 48 of the United States Code.

Lets now see if we can confirm the above conclusions with the weasel words that the lawyers in Congress wrote into the statutes with the willful intent to deceive common people like you. The key phrase in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) above is “the continental United States”. The definition of this term is hidden in the regulations as follows:

[Code of Federal Regulations]
[Title 8, Volume 1]
[Revised as of January 1, 2002]
[From the U.S. Government Printing Office via GPO Access]
[CITE: 8CFR215]
TITLE 8--ALIENS AND NATIONALITY CHAPTER I--IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE PART 215--CONTROLS OF ALIENS DEPARTING FROM THE UNITED STATES

Section 215.1: Definitions

(f) The term continental United States means the District of Columbia and the several States, except Alaska and Hawaii.
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

The term “States”, which is suspiciously capitalized and is then also defined elsewhere in Title 8 as follows:

The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

Do you see the sovereign Union states in the above definition? They aren’t there. Note that there are several entities listed in the above definition of “State”, which collectively are called “several States”. But when Congress really wants to clearly state the 50 Union states that are “foreign states” relative to them, they have no trouble at all, because here is another definition of “State” found under an older version of Title 40 of the U.S. Code prior to 2005 which refers to easements on Union state property by the federal government:

TITLE 40 > CHAPTER 4 > Sec. 319c.

Sec. 319c. - Definitions for easement provisions

As used in sections 319 to 319c of this title -

(a) The term “State” means the States of the Union, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the possessions of the United States[].

The above section, after we found it in 2002 and documented it here, was REWRITTEN in 2005 and REMOVED from title 40 of the U.S. Code in order to cover up the distinctions we are trying to make here. Does that surprise you? In fact, this kind of “wordsmithing” by covetous lawyers is at the heart of how the separation of powers between the state and federal governments is being systematically destroyed, as documented below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm

Did you notice in the now repealed 40 U.S.C. §319c that they used the term “means” instead of “includes” and that they said “States of the Union” instead of “several States”? You can tell they are playing word games and trying to hide their limited jurisdiction whenever they throw in the word “includes” and do not use the word “Union” in their definition of “State”. As a matter of fact, section 5.6.15 of the Great IRS Hoax reveals that there is a big scandal surrounding the use of the word “includes”. That word is abused as a way to illegally expand the jurisdiction of the federal government beyond its clear Constitutional limits. The memorandum of law below thoroughly rebuts any lies or deception the government is likely to throw at you regarding the word “includes” and you might want to read it:

Meaning of the Words “includes” and “including”

Moving on, if we then substitute the definition of the term “State” from 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36) into the definition of “continental United States” in 8 CFR §215.1, we get:

8 CFR §215.1

The term continental United States means the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States, except Alaska and Hawaii.

We must then conclude that the “continental United States” means essentially the federal areas within the real (not legally defined) continental United States. We must also conclude based on the above analysis that:

1. The term “continental United States” is redundant and unnecessary within the definition of “United States” found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
2. The use of the term “continental United States” is introduced mainly to deceive and confuse the average American about his true citizenship status as a “national” or a “state national” and not a “U.S. national”.

The above analysis also leaves us with one last nagging question: why do Alaska and Hawaii appear in the definition of “United States” in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), since we showed that the other “States” mentioned as part of this “United States” are federal “States”? If our hypothesis is correct that the “United States” means “the federal zone” within federal statutes and regulations and “the states of the Union” collectively within the Constitution, then the definition from the regulation above can’t include any part of a Union state that is not a federal enclave. In the case of Alaska and Hawaii, they were only recently admitted as Union states (1950’s). The legislative notes for Title 8 of the U.S. Code (entitled “Aliens and Nationality”) reveal that the title is primarily derived from the immigration and Nationality Act of 1940, which was written BEFORE Alaska and Hawaii joined the Union. Before that, they were referred to as the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, which belonged to the “United States”. Note that 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) adds the phrase “of the United States” after the names of these two former territories and groups them together with other federal territories, which to us implies that they are referring to Alaska and Hawaii when they were territories rather than Union states. At the time they were federal territories, then they were federal “States”. These conclusions are confirmed by a rule of statutory construction known as “ejusdem generis”, which basically says that items of the same class or general type must be grouped together. The other items that Alaska and Hawaii are grouped with are federal territories in the list of enumerated items:

“Ejusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments, the “ejusdem generis rule” is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are to be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned. U.S. v. LaBreque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the context manifests a contrary intention.

Under "ejusdem generis" cannon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694, 696.”

Many freedom lovers allow themselves to be confused by the content of the Fourteenth Amendment so that they do not believe the distinctions we are trying to make here about the differences in meaning of the term “United States” between the Constitution and federal statutes. Here is what section 1 of that Amendment says:

United States Constitution
Fourteenth Amendment

The Supreme Court clarifies exactly what the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” above means. It means the “political jurisdiction” of the United States and NOT the “legislative jurisdiction”(!):

“[This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only: birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”

“Political jurisdiction” is NOT the same as “legislative jurisdiction”. “Political jurisdiction” was defined by the Supreme Court in Minor v. Happersett:

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

“For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and ‘citizen’ have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it [the word “citizen”] is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

“To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what were afterwards admitted to membership.”

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

Notice how the Supreme court used the phrase “and nothing more”, as if to emphasize that citizenship doesn’t imply legislative jurisdiction, but simply political membership. We described in detail the two political jurisdictions within our country earlier in section 4.7. “Political jurisdiction” implies only the following:

1. Membership in a political community (see Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874))
2. Right to vote.
3. Right to serve on jury duty.

“Legislative jurisdiction”, on the other hand, implies being “completely subject” and subservient to federal laws and all “Acts of Congress”, which only people in the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States can be. You can be “completely subject to the political jurisdiction” of the United States without being subject in any degree to a specific “Act of Congress” or the Internal Revenue Code, for instance. The final nail is put in the coffin on the subject of what “subject to the jurisdiction” means in the Fourteenth Amendment, when the Supreme Court further said in the above case:

“It is impossible to construe the words ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ in the opening sentence, as less comprehensive than the words ‘within its jurisdiction,’ in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons ‘within the jurisdiction’ of one of the states of the Union are not ‘subject to the jurisdiction of the United States’.

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

So “subject to the jurisdiction” means “subject to the [political] jurisdiction” of the United States, and the Fourteenth Amendment definitely describes only those people born in states of the Union. Another very interesting conclusion reveals itself from reading the following excerpt from the above case:

And Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court [legislating from the bench, in this case], in analyzing the first clause, observed that “the phrase ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof’ was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign states, born within the United States.

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

When we first read that, an intriguing question popped into our head:

Is “Heaven” a “foreign state” with respect to the United States government and are we God’s “ambassadors” and “ministers” of the Sovereign (“God”) in that “foreign state”?

Based on the way our deceitful and wicked public servants have been acting lately, we think so and here are the scriptures to back it up!

“For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ”
[Philippians 3:20]

“Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God.”
[Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

[Hebrews 11:13]

“Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul...”
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

Furthermore, if you read section 5.2.13 found later, you will also find that the 50 Union states are considered “foreign states” and “foreign countries” with respect to the U.S. government as far as Subtitle A income taxes are concerned:

Foreign government: “The government of the United States of America, as distinguished from the government of the several states.”

Foreign laws: “The laws of a foreign country or sister state.”

Foreign states: “Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
The term ‘foreign nations’,...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”

Another place you can look to find confirmation of our conclusions is the Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual, Section 7 FAM 1116.1-1, available on our website at:

and also available on the Dept. of State website at:

http://foia.state.gov/REGS/Search.asp which says in pertinent part:

“d. Prior to January 13, 1941, there was no statutory definition of “the United States” for citizenship purposes. Thus there were varying interpretations. Guidance should be sought from the Department (CA/OCS) when such issues arise.” [emphasis added]

If our own government hadn’t defined the meaning of the term “United States” up until 1941, then do you think there might have been some confusion over this and that this confusion might be viewed by a reasonable person as deliberate? Can you also see how the ruling in Wong Kim Ark might have been somewhat ambiguous to the average American without a statutory (legal) reference for the terms it was using? Once again, our government likes to confuse people about its jurisdiction in order to grab more of it. Here is how Thomas Jefferson explained it:

“Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before them, to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate.
[Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

“We all know that permanent judges acquire an esprit de corps; that, being known, they are liable to be tempted by bribery; that they are misled by favor, by relationship, by a spirit of party, by a devotion to the executive or legislative; that it is better to leave a cause to the decision of cross and pile than to that of a judge biased to one side; and that the opinion of twelve honest jurors gives still a better hope of right than cross and pile does.”
[Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283 ]

‘It is not enough that honest men are appointed judges. All know the influence of interest on the mind of man, and how unconsciously his judgment is warped by that influence. To this bias add that of the esprit de corps, of their peculiar maxim and creed that ‘it is the office of a good judge to enlarge his jurisdiction,’ and the absence of responsibility, and how can we expect impartial decision between the General government, of which they are themselves so eminent a part, and an individual state from which they have nothing to hope or fear?’
[Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121 ]

‘At the establishment of our Constitutions, the judiciary bodies were supposed to be the most helpless and harmless members of the government. Experience, however, soon showed in what way they were to become the most dangerous; that the insufficiency of the means provided for their removal gave them a freehold and irresponsibility in office; that their decisions, seeming to concern individual suitors only, pass silent and unheeded by the public at large; that these decisions nevertheless become law by precedent, sapping by little and little the foundations of the Constitution and working its change by construction before any one has perceived that that invisible and helpless worm has been busily employed in consuming its substance. In truth, man is not made to be trusted for life if secured against all liability to account.”
[Thomas Jefferson to A. Coray, 1823. ME 15:486 ]

“I do not charge the judges with wilful and ill-intentioned error; but honest error must be arrested where its tolerance leads to public ruin. As for the safety of society, we commit honest maniacs to Bedlam; so judges should be withdrawn from their bench whose erroneous biases are leading us to dissolution. It may, indeed, injure them in fame or in fortune; but it saves the republic, which is the first and supreme law.”
[Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:122 ]

“The original error [was in] establishing a judiciary independent of the nation, and which, from the citadel of the law, can turn its guns on those they were meant to defend, and control and fashion their proceedings to its own will.”
[Thomas Jefferson to John Wayles Eppes, 1807. FE 9:68 ]

“It is a misnomer to call a government republican in which a branch of the supreme power [the Federal Judiciary] is independent of the nation.”
[Thomas Jefferson to James Pleasants, 1821. FE 10:198 ]

“It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English liberty.
[Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283 ]

With respect to that last remark, keep in mind that NONE of the rulings of Supreme Court cases like Wong Kim Ark have juries, so what do you think the judges are going to try to do?:.. expand their power, duhwhhh! Another portion of that same document found in 7 FAM 1116.2-1 says:

“a. Simply stated, “subject to the jurisdiction” of the United States means subject to the laws of the United States.” [emphasis added]

So what does “subject to the laws of the United States” mean? It means subject to the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution, which only occurs within the federal zone.
It means subject to the U.S. Constitution but not most federal statutes or the Internal Revenue Code. We covered this earlier in section 4.8 and again later throughout chapter 5. Here is how we explain the confusion created by 7 FAM 1116.2-1 above in the note we attached to it inside the Acrobat file of it on our website:

This is a distortion. Wong Kim Ark also says: “To be ‘completely subject’ to the political jurisdiction of the United States is to be in no respect or degree subject to the political jurisdiction of any other government."

If you are subject to a Union state government, then you CANNOT meet the criteria above. That is why a "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as "a person owing permanent allegiance to a [Union] state" and why most natural persons are "nationals of the United States*” rather than "U.S. citizens"

Let’s now further explore what 7 FAM 1116.2-1 means when it says “subject to the laws of the United States”. In doing so, we will draw on a very interesting article on our website entitled Authorities on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts found on our website at:

http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/ChallJurisdiction/AuthoritiesArticle/AuthOnJurisdiction.htm

We start with a cite from Title 18 that helps explain the jurisdiction of “the laws of the United States”:

TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisons
(a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of Congress.

Building on this theme, we now add a corroborating citation from the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 26, Notes of Advisory Committee on Rules, paragraph 2, in the middle,
"On the other hand since all Federal crimes are statutory [see United States v. Hudson, 11 U.S. 32, 3 L.Ed. 259 (1812)] and all criminal prosecutions in the Federal courts are based on acts of Congress, . . ." [emphasis added]

We emphasize the phrase “Acts of Congress” above. In order to define the jurisdiction of the Federal courts to conduct criminal prosecutions and how they might apply “the laws of the United States” in any given situation, one would have to find out what the specific definition of “Act of Congress,” is. We find such a definition in Rule 54(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure prior to Dec. 2002, wherein “Act of Congress” is defined. Rule 54(c) states:

“Act of Congress” includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession.

If you want to examine this rule for yourself, here is the link:

http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/foliocgi.exe/frcrm/query=jump!3A!27district+court!27/doc/{@772}?

The $64 question is:

“ON WHICH OF THE FOUR LOCATIONS NAMED IN RULE 54(c) IS THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT ASSERTING JURISDICTION WHEN THE U.S. ATTORNEY HAULS YOUR ASS INTO COURT ON AN INCOME TAX CRIME?”

Hint: everyone knows what and where the District of Columbia is, and everyone knows where Puerto Rico is, and territories and insular possessions are defined in Title 48 United States Code, happy hunting!

The Supreme Court says the same thing about this situation as well:

“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.”

[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

Keep in mind that Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which establishes citizenship under federal law is federal “legislation”. I guess that means there is nothing in that title that can define or circumscribe our rights as people born within and living within a state of the Union, which is foreign to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction. In fact, that is exactly our status as a “national” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term “national” is defined in the title but the rights of such a person are not limited or circumscribed there because they can’t be under the Constitution. This, folks, is the essence of what it means to be truly “sovereign” with respect to the federal government, which is that you aren’t the subject of any federal law. Laws limit rights and take them away. Rights don’t come from laws, they come from God! America is “The land of the Kings”. Every one of you is a king or ruler over your public servants, and THEY, not you, should be “rendering to Caesar”, just as the Bible says in Matt. 22:15:22:

“The people of the state [not the federal government, but the state: IMPORTANT!], as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the king by his own prerogative.”

[Lansing v. Smith, (1829) 4 Wendell 9, (NY)]

“It will be admitted on all hands that with the exception of the powers granted to the states and the federal government, through the Constitutions, the people of the several states are unconditionally sovereign within their respective states.”

[Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L.Ed. 997 ]

“Sovereignty [that’s you!/] itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts.”

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

“nationals” and “state nationals” are also further defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101 as follows:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > § 1101
§ 1101. Definitions

(a) As used in this chapter—
The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

(A) a citizen of the United States, or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.

Note the suspect word "permanent" in the above definition. Below is the definition of "permanent" from the same title found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(31):

(a)(a) As used in this chapter—

(31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

For those of you who are Christians, you realize that this life is very temporary and that nothing on this earth can be permanent, and especially your life. The bible says that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23), and so there is nothing more certain than death, which means there can be nothing physical that is permanent on earth including our very short lives. The only thing permanent is our spirit and not our physical body, which will certainly deteriorate and die. Therefore, there can be no such thing as "permanent allegiance" on our part to anything but God for Christians.

When we bring up the above kinds of issues, some of our readers have said that they don’t even like being called "nationals" as they are defined above, and we agree with them. However, it is a practical reality that you cannot get a passport within our society without being either a "U.S. citizen" or a "national", because state governments simply won’t issue passports to those who are state nationals, which is what most of us are. That was not always true, but it is true now. The compromise we make in this sort of dilemma is to clarify on our passport application that the term “United States” as used on our passport application means the “United States of America” and not the federal United States or the federal corporation called the United States government.

Now we ask our esteemed readers:

"After all the crazy circuitous logic and wild goose chasing that results from listening to the propaganda of the government from its various branches on the definitions of 'U.S. citizenship' v. 'U.S. nationality', what should a reasonable man conclude about the meanings of these terms? We only have two choices:

1. 'United States' as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the federal zone and 'U.S. citizens' are born in the federal zone under all federal statutes and "acts of Congress". This implies that most Americans can only be 'U.S. nationals'.

2. 'United States' as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the entire country and political jurisdictions that are foreign to that of the federal government which are found in the states. This implies that most Americans can only be 'U.S. citizens'."

We believe the answer is that our system of jurisprudence is based on “innocence until proven guilty”. In this case, the fact in question is: "Are you a U.S. citizen", and being “not guilty” and having our rights and sovereignty respected by our deceitful government under these circumstances implies being a “national” or a “state national”. Therefore, at best, we should conclude that the above analysis is correct and clearly explains the foundations of what it means to be a “national” or a “state national” and why most Americans fit that description. At the very worst, our analysis clearly establishes that federal statutory and case law, at least insofar as “U.S. citizenship” is very vague and very ambiguous and needs further definition. The supreme Court has said that when laws are vague, then they are “void for vagueness”, null, and unenforceable. See the following cases for confirmation of this fact:

"A statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first essential of due process of law.”

[Connally vs. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385 (1926)]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

"It is a basic principle of due process that an enactment [435 U.S. 982, 986] is void for vagueness if its prohibitions are not clearly defined. Vague laws offend several important values. First, because we assume that man is free to steer between lawful and unlawful conduct, we insist that laws give the person of ordinary intelligence a reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited, so that he may act accordingly. Vague laws may trap the innocent by not providing fair warning. Second, if arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement is to be prevented, laws must provide explicit standards for those who apply them. A vague law impermissibly delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory application."

[Grayned v. City of Rockford, 408 U.S. 104, 108 (1972), emphasis added]

We refer you to the following additional rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court on "void for vagueness" as additional authorities:

- Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156 (1972)
- Cline v. Frink Dairy Co., 274 U.S. 445, 47 S. Ct. 681 (1927)

Here is the way one of our readers describes the irrational propaganda and laws the government writes:

"If it doesn’t make sense, it’s probably because politics is involved!"

Our conclusions then to the matters at our disposal are the following based on the above reasonable analysis:

- The “United States” defined in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment means the states of the Union while the “United States” appearing in federal statutes in most cases, means the federal zone. For instance, the definition of “United States” relating to citizenship and found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the federal zone, as we prove in questions 77 through 82 of our Tax Deposition Questions located at: http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section 14.htm.
- Most Americans are “nationals” or “state nationals” rather than “U.S. citizens” or “U.S. nationals” under all “acts of Congress” and federal statutes. The Internal Revenue code is an “act of Congress” and a federal statute.
- Our government has deliberately tried to confuse and obfuscate the laws on citizenship to fool the average American into incorrectly declaring that they are “U.S. citizens” in order to be subject to their laws and come under their jurisdiction. See section 4.11.14 for complete details on how they have done it.
- The courts have not lived up to their role in challenging unconstitutional exercises of power by the other branches of government or in protecting our Constitutional rights. They are on the take like everyone else who works in the federal government and have conspired with the other branches of government in illegally expanding federal jurisdiction.
- Once the feds used this ruse with words to get Americans under their corrupted jurisdiction as “U.S. citizens” and presumed “taxpayers”, our federal “servants” have then made themselves into the “masters” by subjecting sovereign Americans to their corrupted laws within the federal zone that can disregard the Constitution because the Constitution doesn’t apply in these areas. By so doing, they can illegally enforce the Internal Revenue Code and abuse their powers to plunder the assets, property, labor, and lives of most Americans in the covetous pursuit of money that the law and the Constitution did not otherwise entitle them to. This act to subvert the operation of the Constitution amounts to an act of war and treason on the sovereignty of Americans and the sovereign states that they live in, punishable under Article III, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution with death by execution.

Old (and bad) habits die hard. Even if you don’t want to believe any of the foregoing analysis or conclusions and you consequently still stubbornly cling to the false notion that you are a statutory “citizen of the United States” instead of a “national” or “state national”, the fact remains that all “nationals and citizens of the United States” are also defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 to include “national” status. That means that being a privileged statutory “citizen of the United States” under federal law is a dual citizenship status while being a statutory “national” is only a single status (U.S. nationality derived from state birth and citizenship):

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1401.

Sec. 1401. - Nationals and citizens of United States at birth

The following shall be nationals and citizens of the United States at birth:

(a) a person born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof;
This type of dual status is described in Black’s Law Dictionary as follows:

Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside.

You will learn later in section 4.11.14 that the term “citizenship” as used by the courts means “nationality”, so dual citizenship means “dual nationality and allegiance”.

What can we do to correct our citizenship status and protect our liberties? Well, since you are already a “national” as a dual national called a “citizen of the United States”, you can abandon half of your dual citizenship and we will show you how and why you should do this in section 4.11.13. The door is still therefore wide open for you to correct your status and liberate yourself from the government’s chains of slavery, and the law authorizes you to do this. The government also can’t stop you from doing this, because here is how one court explained legislation passed by Congress authorizing expatriation only days before the Fourteenth Amendment was ratified and which is still in force (stare decisis) today:

> “Almost a century ago, Congress declared that “the right of expatriation [including expatriation from the District of Columbia or “U.S. Inc”, the corporation] is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness,” and decreed that “...any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government.” 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. § 1999, 8 U.S.C. § 800 (1940). Although designed to apply especially to the rights of immigrants to shed their foreign nationalities, that Act of Congress “...is also broad enough to cover, and does cover, the corresponding natural and inherent right of American citizens to expatriate themselves.” Savorgnan v. United States, 1950, 338 U.S. 491, 498 note 11, 70 S.Ct. 292, 296, 94 L.Ed. 287. The Supreme Court has held that the Citizenship Act of 1907 and the Nationality Act of 1940 “...are to be read in the light of the declaration of policy favoring freedom of expatriation which stands unrepealed.” Id., 338 U.S. at pages 498-499, 70 S.Ct. at page 296. That same light, I think, illuminates 22 U.S.C.A. § 211a and 8 U.S.C.A. § 1185.” [Walter Briehl v. John Foster Dulles, 248 F.2d. 561, 583 (1957)]

You see, our politicians know that citizenship in any political jurisdiction can be regarded as an assault on our liberties, and that sometimes we have to renounce it in order to protect those liberties, so they provided a lawful way to do exactly that. Another reason they have to allow expatriation of any or all aspects of one’s citizenship is that if they didn’t, they could no longer call citizenship “voluntary”, now could they? And if it isn’t voluntary, then the whole country becomes one big DESPOTIC TOTALITARIAN SLAVE CAMP and the Declaration of Independence goes into the toilet! Remember what that Declaration said?

> That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. –That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.” [emphasis added]

How can you be “independent” and “sovereign” if you can’t even declare or determine your own citizenship status? Citizenship must therefore be voluntary and consensual or the enforcement of all laws based on it becomes unjust, and we made that point very clear earlier in section 4.11.9 when we talked about federal citizenship. If you are a “U.S. citizen” and you have a dual citizenship as we just defined earlier using 8 U.S.C. §1401 above, then we will clearly establish later in 4.11.13 that the government cannot unilaterally sever any aspect of your dual citizenship and that it is a permanent contract which only you [not the government] can revoke any aspect of either by dying or by voluntary choice in a process initiated by you. Every aspect of your citizenship status must be voluntary or it is unjust and if you want to eliminate or revoke the federal portion of your citizenship status only and retain the “national” or “state citizen” status that you already have as a “U.S. citizen”, then the government cannot lawfully stop you, and if they try to, your citizenship is no longer voluntary but compelled. Once it is compelled, your compliance with federal laws based on citizenship as a SOVERIEGN is no longer voluntary or consensual, but is based on duress, fraud, extortion, and amounts to slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment to the U.S Constitution! What are you waiting for and why haven’t you corrected your citizenship status yet?

4.11.0.2 Voting as a “national” or “state national”

The point of reference in the example given below is the California Republic (notice we didn’t say “State of California”, because that term means federal areas inside California!). The cite below doesn’t define “United States citizen” but it’s safe to conclude that it means a “national of the United States”, and you should specify this on your voter registration document to remove any possibility for false presumption.

CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION
ARTICLE 2 VOTING, INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM, AND RECALL

SEC. 2. A United States citizen 18 years of age and resident in this State may vote.

The situation may be different for other states. If you live in a state other than California, you will need to check the laws of your specific home state in order to determine whether the prohibition against voting applies to “nationals” or “state nationals” in your state. If authorities give you a bad time about trying to register to vote without being a federal “U.S. citizen”, then show them the Declaration of Independence, which says:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—

[Declaration of Independence]

Emphasize that it doesn’t say “endowed by their government” or “endowed by their federal citizenship” or “endowed by their registrar of voters”, but instead “endowed by their CREATOR”. The rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness certainly include suffrage and the right to own property. Suffrage is necessary in turn to protect personal property from encroachment by the government and socialistic fellow citizens. These are not “privileges” that result from federal citizenship. They are rights that result from birth! Thomas Jefferson said so:

“A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature, and not as the gift of their chief magistrate.”
[Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134]

“Can the liberties of a nation be thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis, a conviction in the minds of the people that these liberties are of the gift of God? That they are not to be violated but with His wrath?”
[Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XVIII, 1782. ME 2:227]

Below is a summary of our research relating to the right to vote as a “national” or “state national”:

1. Some states require that an elector be a "citizen of the United States" or “United States citizen”
   1.1. See voter registration form, available at Post Office
   1.2. This qualification can interfere with the right to vote by a U.S. national.
      1.2.1. Voter registration form exhibits a formal affidavit, signed under penalties of perjury, that voter is a “U.S. citizen”
         1.2.1.1. Such an affidavit is admissible evidence in any state or federal court
         1.2.1.2. Federal courts use this affidavit to establish court jurisdiction or “U.S. citizen” status.
         1.2.2. Perjury is punishable by 2 or 3 years in state prison (see warnings on registration form)
         1.2.3. Warnings are in CONSPICUOUS text, which prevents signer from saying he didn't see it
   1.3. To avoid establishing a false presumption that you are a “citizens of the United States” under federal statutes, you must clarify the status of your citizenship on their voter registration in order to perfect and maintain their sovereign status.
      1.3.1. Most registration forms were signed in ignorance of the 2 classes of citizenship in America
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

1.3.2 We must claim to be a “national” of the United States of America” but not a “citizen of the United States” (refer to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) through 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) and 8 U.S.C. §1408).

1.3.3. With this knowledge, “nationals” and “state nationals” elect to be treated as “U.S. citizens” under the internal revenue code by ignorantly and incorrectly claiming their citizenship. To avoid this trap, they should clarify their citizenship on their voter registration as outlined in section 3.6.6 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 entitled “Voter Registration Affidavit Attachment”.

2. Registering to vote produces material evidence that one is a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes who is, by definition, in receipt of federal privileges, whereas State Citizens are not.

2.1. State Citizens are protected by constitutional limits against direct taxation

2.1.1. Direct taxes must be apportioned per Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3

2.2. Federal citizens are not protected by these same constitutional limits

3. If you are a “national” and you live in a state that won’t allow you to register to vote without clarifying your status as a “national” on the application form, then you should take the following measures in order to avoid jeopardizing their Natural Born state Citizenship status:

3.1. Cancel your voter registration to perfect and maintain your sovereign status under the Law.

3.2. Litigate to regain your right to vote as a “national” rather than a “U.S. citizen”.

4. The Fifteenth and the Nineteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution only protect the right to vote for those who are “citizens of the United States”. They do NOT protect the right to vote for those persons who are “U.S. nationals”.

4.11.10.3 Serving on Jury Duty as a “national” or “state national”

Serving on jury service is not necessarily or exclusively a privilege arising from being a “citizen”. Your state may apply additional criteria to the qualifications.

“The to remove the cause of them; to obviate objections to the validity of legislation similar to that contained in the first section of the Civil Rights Act; to prevent the possibility of hostile and discriminating legislation in future by a State against any citizen of the United States, and the enforcement of any such legislation already had; and to [100 U.S. 339, 365] secure to all persons within the jurisdiction of the States the equal protection of the laws,-the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted. Its first clause declared who are citizens of the United States and of the States. It thus removed from discussion the question, which had previously been debated, and though decided, not settled, by the judgment in the Dred Scott Case, whether descendants of persons brought to this country and sold as slaves were citizens, within the meaning of the Constitution. It also recognized, if it did not create, a national citizenship, as contradistinguished from that of the States. But the privilege or the duty, whichever it may be called, of acting as a juror in the courts of the country, is not an incident of citizenship. Women are citizens; so are the aged above sixty, and children in their minority; yet they are not allowed in Virginia to act as jurors. Though some of these are in all respects qualified for such service, no one will pretend that their exclusion by law from the jury list impairs their rights as citizens.”

[Ex Parte State of Virginia, 100 U.S. 339 (1879)]

Below is a summary of our research relating to the right to serve on a jury as a “U.S. national”:

1. Some states and the federal government require that a person who wishes to serve on jury duty must be a “citizen of the United States”. This is especially true in federal courts.

1.1. The jury duty disqualification form says that you are disqualified if you are not a “citizen of the United States”.

Since state statutes don’t define the meaning of the term “citizen of the United States” or “U.S. citizen”, you can just say that you are and then simply define what you mean on the form itself.

1.2. The only way to overcome the built-in presumption that we are “citizens of the United States” on the jury summons is to file an affidavit in response to the summons claiming to be a “national of the United States of America” but not a “citizen of the United States” (refer to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) through 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) and 8 U.S.C. §1408).

2. Serving on jury duty produces material evidence useful to the state or federal government that one is a federal citizen who is in receipt of government privileges, whereas State Citizens are not in receipt of such privileges.

3. If you are a Natural Born state Citizens and you live in a state that whose laws won’t allow you to serve on jury duty without committing fraud on the jury summons by claiming that you are a “U.S. citizen”, you should take the following measures in order to avoid jeopardizing your Natural Born state Citizenship status:

3.1. Cancel your jury summons to perfect and maintain your sovereign status under the Law.

3.2. Litigate to regain your right to serve on a jury without being a “U.S. citizen” and instead being a “U.S. national”.

4.11.10.4 Summary of Constraints applying to “national” status
1. Right to vote:

1.1. “Nationals” and “state nationals” can register to vote under laws in most states but must be careful how they describe their status on the voter registration application.

1.2. Some state voter registration forms have a formal affidavit by which signer swears, under penalties of perjury, that s/he is a “citizen of the United States” or a “U.S. citizen”.

1.3. Such completed affidavits become admissible evidence and conclusive proof that signer is a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes, which is not the same thing as a “national” or “state national”.

2. Right to serve on jury duty:

2.1. “nationals” or “state nationals” can serve on jury duty under most state laws. If your state gives you trouble by not allowing you to serve on jury duty as a “national” or “state national”, you are admonished to litigate to regain their voting rights and change state law.

2.2. Some state jury summons forms have a section that allows persons to disqualify themselves from serving on jury duty if they do not claim to be “citizens of the United States”. We should return the summons form with an affidavit claiming that we want to serve on jury duty and are “nationals” rather than “citizens” of the United States. If they then disqualify us from serving on jury duty, we should litigate to regain our right to serve on juries.

3. The exercise of federal citizenship, including voting and serving on jury duty, is a statutory privilege which can be created, taxed, regulated and even revoked by Congress! Please reread section 4.3.12 about “Government instituted slavery using privileges” for clarification on what this means. In effect, the government, through operation of law, has transformed a right into a taxable privilege..

4. The exercise of national citizenship is an unalienable Right which Congress cannot tax, regulate or revoke under any circumstances.

5. Such a Right is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, which Congress cannot amend without the consent of three-fourths of the Union States.

4.11.10.5 Rebutted arguments against those who believe people born in the states of the Union are not “nationals”

A few people have disagreed with our position on the ‘national” and “state national” citizenship status of persons born in states of the Union. These people have sent us what might appear to be contradictory information from websites maintained by the federal government. We thank them for taking the time to do so and we will devote this section to rebutting all of their incorrect views. Below are some of the arguments against our position on “state national” citizenship that we have received and enumerated to facilitate rebuttal. We have boldfaced the relevant portions to make the information easier to spot.

   “2. Nationality and citizenship are not entirely synonymous; one can be a national of the United States and yet not a citizen. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). The distinction has little practical impact today, however, for the only remaining noncitizen nationals are residents of American Samoa and Swains Island. See T. Aleinikoff, D. Martin, & H. Motomura, Immigration: Process and Policy 974-975, n. 2 (3rd ed. 1995). The provision that a child born abroad out of wedlock to a United States citizen mother gains her nationality has been interpreted to mean that the child gains her citizenship as well; thus, if the mother is not just a United States national, but also a United States citizen, the child is a United States citizen. See 7 Gordon § 93.04[2][b], p. 93-42; id., § 93.04[2][d][viii], p. 93-49.”

   [Miller v. Albright, 523 U.S. 420 (1998)]

2. Volume 7 of the Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) section 1111.3 published by the Dept. of States at http://foia.state.gov/REGS/Search.asp says the following about nationals but not citizens of the United States:

   c. Historically, Congress, through statutes, granted U.S. nationality, but not citizenship, to persons born or inhabiting territory acquired by the United States through conquest or treaty. At one time or other natives and certain other residents of Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, the Philippines, Guam, and the Panama Canal Zone were U.S. non-citizen nationals.

   d. Under current law (the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, as amended through October 1994), only persons born in American Samoa and the Swains Islands are U.S. nationals (Secs. 101(a)(29) and 308(1) INA).

3. The Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS) at http://policy.ssa.gov/poms.nsf/poms says the following:
RS 02001.003 “U.S. Nationals”

Most of the agreements refer to “U.S. nationals.”

The term includes both U.S. citizens and persons who, though not citizens, owe permanent allegiance to the United States. As noted in RS 02640.005 D., the only persons who are nationals but not citizens are American Samoans and natives of Swains Island.

There are some immigrants who are immediately eligible for food stamps without having to meet other immigrant requirements, as long as they meet the normal food stamp requirements:

- Non-citizen nationals (people born in American Samoa or Swains Island).
- American Indians born in Canada.
- Members (born outside the U.S.) of Indian tribes under Section 450b(e) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.
- Members of Hmong or Highland Lao tribes that helped the U.S. military during the Vietnam era, and who are legally living in the U.S., and their spouses or surviving spouses and dependent children.

The defects that our detractors fail to realize about the above information are the following points:

2. All of the cites that our detractors quote come from federal statutes and “acts of Congress”. The federal government is not authorized under our Constitution or under international law to prescribe the citizenship status of persons who neither reside within nor were born within its territorial jurisdiction. The only thing that federal statutes can address are the status of persons who either reside in, were born in, or resided in the past within the territorial jurisdiction of the federal government. People born within states of the Union do not satisfy this requirement and their citizenship status resulting from that birth is determined only under state and not federal law. State jurisdiction is foreign to federal jurisdiction EXCEPT in federal areas within a state. The quote below confirms this, keeping in mind that Title 8 of the U.S. Code qualifies as “legislation”:

   “While states are not sovereign in true sense of term but only quasi sovereign, yet in respect of all powers reserved to them [under the Constitution] they are supreme and independent of federal government as that government within its sphere is independent of the states.”

   “It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.” [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

3. The only thing you need in order to obtain a USA passport is “allegiance”. 22 U.S.C. §212. If the federal government is willing to issue you a passport, then they regard you as a “national”, because the only type of citizenship that carries with it exclusively allegiance is that of a “national”. 8 U.S.C. §1101. See: http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Citizenship/ApplyingForAPassport.htm

4. USA passports indicate that you are a “citizen OR national”:

“citizen/national” = “citizen” OR “national”
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

5. The quotes of our detractors above recognize only one of the four different ways of becoming a “national but not citizen of the United States” described in 8 U.S.C. §1408. They also recognize only one of the three different definitions of “United States” that a person can be a “national” of, as revealed in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945). They also fail to recognize that an 8 U.S.C. §1452 “national but not citizen of the United States” is not necessarily the same as a “citizen but not national of the United States at birth”.

6. Information derived from informal publications or advice of employees of federal agencies are not admissible in a court of law as evidence upon which to base a good faith belief. The only basis for good-faith belief is a reading of the actual statute or regulation that implements it. The reason for this is that employees of the government are frequently wrong, and frequently not only say wrong things, but in many cases the people who said them had no lawful delegated authority to say such things. See http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/reliance.htm for an excellent treatise from an attorney on why this is.

7. People writing the contradictory information falsely “presume” that the term “citizen” in a general sense that most Americans use is the same as the term “citizen” as used in the definition of “citizens and nationals of the United States” found in 8 U.S.C. §1401. In fact, we conclusively prove later in section 5.2.14 that this is emphatically not the case. A “citizen” as used in the Internal Revenue Code and most federal statutes means a person born in a territory or possession of the United States, and not in a state of the Union. Americans born in states of the Union are a different type of “citizen”, and we show in section 5.2.14 that these types of people are “nationals” and “state nationals” but not “citizens” or “U.S. citizens” in the context of any federal statute.

We therefore challenge those who make this unwarranted presumption to provide law and evidence proving us wrong on this point. We request that you read section 4.11.14 before you prepare your rebuttal, because it clarifies several important definitions that you might otherwise be inclined to overlook that may result in misunderstanding.

8. Whatever citizenship we enjoy we are entitled to abandon. This is our right, as declared both by the Congress and the Supreme Court. See Revised Statutes, section 1999, page. 350, 1868 and section 4.11.13. “citizens and nationals of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 have two statuses: “citizen” and “national”. We are entitled to abandon either of these two. If we abandon nationality, then we automatically lose the “citizen” part, because nationality is where we obtain our allegiance. But if we abandon the “citizen” part, then we still retain our nationality under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). This is the approach we advocated earlier in section 4.11.10.1. Because all citizenship must be consensual, then the government must respect our ability to abandon those types of citizenship we find objectionable. Consequently, if either you or the government believe that you are a “citizen and national of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, then you are entitled by law to abandon only the “citizen” portion and retain the “national” portion, and 8 U.S.C. §1452 tells you how to have that choice recognized by the Department of State.

Item 2 above is important, because it establishes that the federal government has no authority to write law that prescribes the citizenship status of persons born outside of federal territorial jurisdiction and within the states of the Union. The U.S. Constitution in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 empowers Congress to write “an uniform Rule of Naturalization”, but “naturalization” is only one of two ways of acquiring citizenship. Birth is the other way, and the states have exclusive jurisdiction and legislative authority over the citizenship status of those people who acquire their state citizenship by virtue of birth within states of the Union. Here is what the Supreme Court said on this subject:

“The power of naturalization, vested in congress by the constitution, is a power to confer citizenship, not a power to take it away. ‘A naturalized citizen,’ said Chief Justice Marshall, ‘becomes a member of the society, possessing all the rights of a native citizen, and standing, in the view of the constitution, on the footing of a native. The constitution does not authorize congress to enlarge or abridge those rights. The simple power of the national legislature is to prescribe a uniform rule of naturalization, and the exercise of this power exhausts it, so far as respects the individual.’”

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]
Chapter 4: Know Your Citizenship Status and Rights!

“A naturalized citizen is indeed made a citizen under an act of Congress, but the act does not proceed to give, to regulate, or to prescribe his capacities. He becomes a member of the society, possessing all the rights of a native citizen, and standing, in the view of the constitution, on the footing of a native. The constitution does not authorize Congress to enlarge or abridge those rights. The simple power of the national Legislature, is to prescribe a uniform rule of naturalization, and the exercise of this power exhausts it, so far as respects the individual. The constitution then takes him up, and, among other rights, extends to him the capacity of suing in the Courts of the United States, precisely under the same circumstances under which a native might sue. He is “828 distinguishable in nothing from a native citizen, except so far as the constitution makes the distinction. The law makes none.”

The rules of comity prescribe whether or how this citizenship is recognized by the federal government, and by reading 8 U.S.C. §1408, it is evident that the federal government chose not directly recognize within Title 8 of the U.S.C. the citizenship status of persons born within states of the Union to parents neither of whom were “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and neither of whom “resided” inside the federal zone prior to the birth of the child. We suspect that this is because not only does the Constitution not give them this authority, but more importantly because doing so would spill the beans on the true citizenship of persons born in states of the Union and result in a mass exodus from the tax system by most Americans.

As we said, there are four ways identified in 8 U.S.C. §1408 that a person may be a “national but not citizen of the United States” at birth. We have highlighted the section that our detractors are ignoring, and which we quote frequently on our treatment of the subject of citizenship.

Unless otherwise provided in section 1401 of this title, the following shall be nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth:

1. A person born in an outlying possession of the United States on or after the date of formal acquisition of such possession;

2. A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents both of whom are nationals but not citizens, of the United States, and have had a residence in the United States, or one of its outlying possessions prior to the birth of such person;

3. A person of unknown parentage found in an outlying possession of the United States while under the age of five years, until shown, prior to his attaining the age of twenty-one years, not to have been born in such outlying possession; and

4. A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a national, but not a citizen, of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than seven years in any continuous period of ten years -
   (A) during which the national parent was not outside the United States or its outlying possessions for a continuous period of more than one year, and
   (B) at least five years of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years.

The proviso of section 1401(g) of this title shall apply to the national parent under this paragraph in the same manner as it applies to the citizen parent under that section.

Subsections (1), (3), and (4) above deal with persons who are born in outlying possessions of the United States, and Swains Island and American Samoa would certainly be included within these subsections. These people would be the people who are addressed by the information cited by our detractors from federal websites above. Subsection (2), however, deals with persons who are born outside of the federal United States (federal zone) to parents who are “nationals but not citizens of the United States” and who resided at one time in the federal United States. Anyone born overseas to American parents is a “non-citizen U.S. national” under this section and this status is one that is not recognized in any of the cites provided by our detractors but is recognized by the law itself. Since states of the Union are outside the federal United States and outside the “United States” used in Title 8, then parents born in states of the Union satisfy the requirement for “national but not citizen of the United States” status found in 8 U.S.C. §1408(2).

One of the complaints we get from our readers is something like the following:

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don’t Owe Income Tax, version 4.53
TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO) Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship http://famguardian.org/
“Let’s assume you’re right and that 8 U.S.C. §1408(2) prescribes the citizenship status of persons born in a state of the Union. The problem I have with that view is that ‘United States’ means the federal zone in that section, and subsection (2) requires that the parents must reside within the ‘United States’ prior to the birth of the child. This means they must have ‘resided’ in the federal zone before the child was born, and most people don’t satisfy that requirement.”

Let us explain why the above concern is unfounded. According to 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), the parents must also reside in the federal United States prior to the birth of the child. We assert that most people born in states of the Union do in fact meet this requirement and we will now explain why. They can meet this requirement by any one of the following ways:

1. Serving in the military or residing on a military base or occupied territory.
2. Filing an IRS form 1040 (not a 1040NR, but a 1040). The federal 1040 form says “U.S. individual” at the top left. A “U.S. individual” is defined in 26 CFR §1.1441-1(c )(3) as either an “alien” residing within the federal zone or a “nonresident alien” with income from within the federal zone. Since “nonresident aliens” file the 1040NR form, the only thing that a person who files a 1040 form can be is a “resident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b) and 26 CFR §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) or a “citizen” residing abroad who attaches a form 2555 to the 1040. See section 5.2.11 for further details on this if you are curious. Consequently, being a “resident alien” qualifies you as a “resident”. You are not, in fact a resident because you didn’t physically occupy the federal zone for the year covered by the tax return, but if the government is going to treat you as a “resident” by accepting and processing your tax return, then they have an obligation to treat either you or your parents as “residents” in all respects, including those related to citizenship. To do otherwise would be inconsistent and hypocritical.

3. Spending time in a military hospital.
4. Visiting federal property or a federal reservation within a state routinely as a contractor working for the federal government.
5. Working for the federal government on a military reservation or inside of a federal area.
7. Spending time in a federal courthouse.

The reason why items 3 through 7 above satisfy the requirement to be a “resident” of the federal United States is because the term “resident” is nowhere defined in Title 8 of the U.S. Code, and because of the definition of “resident” in Black’s Law Dictionary:

“Resident, Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory in nature.”

The key word in the above is “permanent”, which is defined as it pertains to citizenship in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(31) below:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(31) The term “permanent” means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

Since Title 8 does not define the term “lasting” or “ongoing” or “transitory”, we referred to the regular dictionary, which says:

“lasting: existing or continuing a long while: ENDURING."

“ongoing: 1. being actually in process 2: continuously moving forward: GROWING”

“transitory: 1: tending to pass away: not persistent 2: of brief duration: TEMPORARY syn see TRANSIENT.”

No period of time is specified in order to meet the criteria for “permanent”, so even if we lived there a day or a few hours, we were still there “permanently”. The Bible also says in Matt. 6:26-31 that we should not be anxious or presumptuous about tomorrow and take each day as a new day. The last verse in that sequence says:
"Therefore do not worry about tomorrow; for tomorrow will worry about its own trouble."
[Mat. 6:31, Bible, NKJV]

In fact, we are not allowed to be presumptuous at all, which means we aren’t allowed to assume or intend anything about the future. Our future is in the hands of a sovereign Lord, and we exist by His good graces alone.

"Come now, you who say, 'Today or tomorrow we will go to such and such a city, spend a year there, buy and sell, and make a profit'; whereas you do not know what will happen tomorrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapor that appears for a little time and then vanishes away. Instead you ought to say, 'If the Lord wills, we shall live and do this or that’’. But now you boast in your arrogance. All such boasting is evil.”
[James 4:13-16, Bible, NKJV]

"But the person who does anything presumptuously, whether he is native-born or a stranger, that one brings reproach on the Lord, and he shall be cut off from among his people."
[Numbers 15:30, Bible, NKJV]

Consequently, the Christian’s definition of “permanent” is anything that relates to what we intend for today only and does not include anything that might happen starting tomorrow or at any time in the future beyond tomorrow. Being presumptuous about the future is “boastful” and “evil”, according to the Bible! The future is uncertain and our lives are definitely not “permanent” in God’s unlimited sense of eternity. Therefore, wherever we are is where we “intend” to permanently reside as Christians.

Even if you don’t like the above analysis of why most Americans born in states of the Union are “nationals but not citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), we still explained above that you have the right to abandon only the “citizen” portion and retain the “national” portion of any imputed dual citizenship status under 8 U.S.C. §1401. We also show you how to have that choice formally recognized by the U.S. Department of State in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual. Form #10.005 under the authority of 8 U.S.C. §1452, and we know people who have successfully employed this strategy, so it must be valid.

Furthermore, even if you don’t believe that any of the preceding discussion is valid, we also explained that the federal government cannot directly prescribe the citizenship status of persons born within states of the Union under international law. To illustrate this fact, consider the following extension of a popular metaphor:

"If a tree fell in the forest, and Congress refused to pass a law recognizing that it fell and forced the agencies in the executive branch to refuse to acknowledge that it fell because doing so would mean an end to income tax revenues, then did it really fall?"

The answer to the above questions is emphatically “yes”. We said that the rules of comity prevail in that case the federal government recognizing the citizenship status of those born in states of the Union. But what indeed is their status under federal law? 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) defines a “national” as:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

If you were born in a state of the Union, you are a “national of the United States” because the “state” that you have allegiance to is the confederation of states called the “United States”. As further confirmation of this fact, if “naturalization” is defined as the process of conferring “nationality” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23), and “expatriation” is defined as the process of abandoning “nationality and allegiance” by the Supreme Court in Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939), then “nationality” is the key that determines citizenship status. What makes a person a “national” is “allegiance” to a state. The only type of citizenship which carries with it the notion of “allegiance” is that of “national”, as shown in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). You will not find “allegiance” mentioned anywhere in Title 8 in connection with those persons who claim to be “citizens and nationals of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a) (22) The term "national of the United States" means

(A) a citizen of the United States, or
People born in states of the Union can and most often do have allegiance to the confederation of states called the “United States” just as readily as people who were born on federal property, and the federal government under the rules of comity should be willing to recognize that allegiance without demanding that such persons surrender their sovereignty, become tax slaves, and come under the exclusive jurisdiction of federal statutes by pretending to be people who live in the federal zone. Not doing so would be an injury and oppression of their rights, and would be a criminal conspiracy against rights, because remember, people who live inside the federal zone have no rights, by the admission of the Supreme Court in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901):

It would certainly constitute a conspiracy against rights to force or compel a person to give up their true citizenship status in order to acquire any kind of citizenship recognition from a corrupted federal government. The following ruling by the Supreme Court plainly agrees with these conclusions:

“It would be a palpable incongruity to strike down an act of state legislation which, by words of express divestment, seeks to strip the citizen of rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution, but to uphold an act by which the same result is accomplished under the guise of a surrender of a right in exchange for a valuable privilege which the state threatens otherwise to withhold. It is not necessary to challenge the proposition that, as a general rule, the state, having power to deny a privilege altogether, may grant it upon such conditions as it sees fit to impose. But the power of the state in that respect is not unlimited, and one of the limitations is that it may not impose conditions which require the relinquishment of Constitutional rights. If the state may compel the surrender of one constitutional right as a condition of its favor, it may, in like manner, compel a surrender of all. It is inconceivable that guaranties embedded in the Constitution of the United States may thus be manipulated out or existence.”

[Frost v. Railroad Commission, 271 U.S. 583, 46 S.Ct. 605 (1926)]

Lastly, we will close this section with a list of questions aimed at those who still challenge our position on being a “national” of the United States. If you are going to lock horns with us or throw rocks, please start by answering the following questions or your inquiry will be ignored. Remember Abraham Lincoln’s famous saying: “He has a right to criticize who has a heart to help.”:

1. “Expatriation” is defined in Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939) as:

“Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance.”

[Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325; 59 S.Ct. 884; 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

How can you abandon your nationality as a “national” or “state national” with the Secretary of the State of the United States under 8 U.S.C. §1481 if you didn’t have it to begin with?

2. Naturalization is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23) as:

8 U.S.C. §1101

(a) Definitions

(23) The term “naturalization” means the conferring of nationality [NOT “citizenship” or “U.S. citizenship”, but “nationality”, which means “national”] of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever."
How can you say a person isn’t a “national” after they were naturalized, and if they are, what type of “national” do they become? As a “national” born outside of federal jurisdiction and the “United States”, do they meet the requirements of 8 U.S.C. §1452 and if not, why not?

3. If the Supreme Court declared the United States defined in the Constitution is not a "nation", but a "society" in Chisholm v. Georgia:

   “By that law the several States and Governments spread over our globe, are considered as forming a society, not a NATION. It has only been by a very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the Fourth Henry, that this last great idea has been even contemplated. 3rdly, and chiefly, I shall examine the important question before us, by the Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable instrument. “

   [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

...then what exactly does it mean to be a "national of the United States” within the meaning of the Constitution and not federal law?

4. If a "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) simply as a person who owes "allegiance" to the United States, then why can't a person who lives in a state of the union have allegiance to the confederation of states called the "United States", which the Supreme Court said above was a "society" and not a "nation". And what would you call that “society”, if it wasn't a a "nation"? The Supreme Court said in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt that there are three definitions of the term "United States" and one of those definitions includes the following, which is what I claim to be a “national” of:

   "It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations.”

   [Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)]

5. How come I can't have allegiance to the “society” called "United States" and define that “society” as being the country and not the OTHER two types of “United States” found in federal statutes, which are synonymous with the "federal zone" and not the country?

6. The federal government has exclusive jurisdiction over the following issues:

6.1. “naturalization”, under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution.

6.2. The citizenship status of persons born in its territories or possessions.

However, the federal government has no power to determine citizenship by birth of person born in states of the Union, because the Constitution does not confer upon them that power. All the cases and authorities that detractors of our position like to cite relate ONLY to the above subject matters, which are all governed exclusively by federal law, which does not apply within states of the Union for this subject matter. Please therefore show us a case that involves a person born in a state of the Union and not on a territory or possession in which the person claimed to be a “national”, and show us where the court said they weren’t. You absolutely won’t find such a case!

4.11.10.6 Sovereign Immunity of American Nationals

There are big legal advantages to being an “American national” or “state national” instead of a “U.S. citizen”. An “American national” or simply “national” born within and living within a state of the Union is technically the equivalent of an instrumentality of a “foreign state” under the federal Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA).

1332(c) and (d) nor created under the laws of any third country. An instrumentality of a foreign state includes a corporation, association, or other juridical person a majority of whose shares or other ownership interests are owned by the state, even when organized for profit.

[Department of State Website, http://travel.state.gov/law/info/judicial/judicial_693.html]

The FSIA itself defines “foreign state” as follows:

1. The statute above says in paragraph (b)(3) that a person cannot be an instrumentality of a “foreign state” if they are a “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which is exactly the description of a person who is a “national” or “state national” but not a “U.S. citizen”.

2. Under the FSIA, a “nation” is simply a group of people who have their own internal laws to govern themselves. A church, for instance, qualifies as a self-governing “nation”, if:

   1. It has its own rules and laws (God’s laws)
   2. Its own ecclesiastical courts to govern internal disputes.
   3. None of its members are “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

3. The ministers of such a church are “instrumentalities of a foreign state” within the meaning of the FSIA, and they are immune from federal suit or IRS collection actions pursued under the authority of federal law. Of course, they cannot be immune from federal law if they conduct “commerce” with “the Beast” by signing up for any social welfare benefit, because the FSIA says so:

   (a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—[. . .]

   (2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

4. However, so long as members of the church maintain complete economic separation from “the Beast”, they can maintain their status as a “foreign state” and the sovereign immunity that goes with it.

5. Likewise, a sovereign “American National” also qualifies as a “foreign state” because he participates in the government of a state of the Union, which is “foreign” with respect to the federal government, as you will learn in the next chapter. He is an instrumentality of the foreign state by virtue of his participation in it as:

   1. A jurist
   2. A voter
